THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 1. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, January 3, 1891. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

THE HANDWRITING ON THE WALL.

Notes and Clippings.

NEXT to Paris New York is the most Catholic city in the world. The total population is said to be 1,627,000 according to the late census. It is estimated that fully one-half of these are Catholics.

AMONG the bills introduced in the Vermont legislature is: "A bill prohibiting traveling on Sunday, except to church or on errands of humanity and charity." The Western Herald says the people of the whole United States ought to go to the expense of presenting a large leather medal to those Vermont Solons.

KING HUMBERT of Italy, the gallant defender of his country from the Vatican, is forty-two years old. His face, like Parnell's, has a fixed expression of melancholy. He is brave, courteous, and devoted to his only child, a boy of fourteen. The king speaks French as well as he does Italian, and is said to be a charming man to meet.

IN August last a wonderful occurrence happened in the house of a certain M. Floroff in Moscow. The image of the holy Virgin appeared there; sweet odors filled the house at her appearance. Crowds of people soon gathered in and around the house to see the apparition, and many of the devout deposited their gifts at the threshold. The secular and church authorities were informed of the great wonder. At the instance of the former investigations were made, and it was discovered that Mrs. Floroff herself had enacted the miracle. She was called to account for the deception, but she pleaded that her object was not to deceive the people, but to regain the affections of her husband, which had markedly cooled off toward her. On November 12th she was sentenced to imprisonment for three weeks, during which she will hav to practice religious penance.

"THE cranks," said a man who is dubbed as a crank, to a Sun reporter, "are now a very powerful body in the United States. We hav cranks in religion and in politics and in society and in finance and in everything else. Then we hav half cranks and partial cranks and men who are just a little bit cranky and others who seem to be cranky only on one subject. If you were to count us all in, we would look like a heavy force. I hold that we ought to organize, assert our rights, and stand our ground against the cheap ruck of commonplace nobodies, who are all just like each other, and who begin to shout crank whenever they see anybody who has a new idea or who has the spirit of manly self-assertion. I would rather liv in a world of cranks who kept each other a-thinking than in a world of wooden heads who spent their time like tiddlytoodles and hadn't a notion worth looking at!"

A MAN from the far West has favored the Sun with an elaborate account of a new city which, in his opinion, ought to be founded. Here are a few of the many provisions in the plan of its author: "Fine mansions of aluminium built along broad streets adorned with trees and flowers. Three rooms for each person, each of them covered with useful wall paper. No double bedsteads. Street cars propelled by compressed air. Air ships for the public service. A new language—full, regular, and easy to learn. The same dress for both sexes. No cooking in dwellings. No bad habits or selfishness or flirting or liquor drinking or gambling. No hot food, except griddle cakes. No money. Everybody to work according to his or her pleasure. Only truth-telling preachers and profound thinkers. All new inventions to be adopted. Pleasant schools for the children. Laundry work made easy through machinery for washing, drying, and mangling. Theaters. No false legislation. No love stories. No taxes. Improved newspapers."

A NEGRO called on Mayor Tone one day last week, says the Denison, Tex., Sunday Gazetteer, and made complaint that the officers had notified him that he must work on the streets. "Now," explained the sable citizen, "I think I'ze 'zempt," as he pulled a paper out of his pocket. "I'se a preacher of the gospel." The paper was a certificate from Sinkiller Griffin that the bearer had been called of the Lord to preach, and that he, as one of his agents, had authorized him to pursue the avocation of saving souls. "Are you a regular preacher?" asked the mayor, placing his eyeglasses back on the wing of his ear. "Yes, sah, that is I occasionally exhort the bretheren at Rev. Griffin's church." "But," continued Mr. Tone, "hav you a regular charge? The law requires that you must be the regular pastor of a church to be exempt from road work." "Well, no," responded the colored Bible-pounder, "I just sorter preaches round." "That won't exempt you, then," added Mr. Tone. Then the negro fumbled around in another pocket and drew forth a greasy document which he handed over, with evident pride and satisfaction, exclaiming, "I knows that will prove I'm not liable under the law; 'deed it does." The paper proved to be a certificate from the warden of the Texas penitentiary that he had been discharged from prison. The preacher and ex-convict was very much disappointed when Mayor Tone informed him that while serving a term in the penitentiary relieved him from the onerous duty of voting, it did not exempt him from doing his share toward maintaining the public highways.

A BALTIMORE dispatch says: Henry Wittaner, a Platt street merchant, has just learned of the whereabouts of a daughter who disappeared four years ago, and of a son who left home a year afterward. Miss Wittaner ardently wished to lead a strictly religious life. Her father, she knew, would protest against her secluding herself from the world in any degree, so she took her mother into her confidence. To her the daughter said she intended to leave Baltimore and enter some Roman Catholic order in another city. She enjoined her mother to secresy and soon afterward disappeared. Later she wrote home that she had become a sister of the order of St. Benedict in Chicago, and was very happy. She has been there ever since. A year after she had gone Benjamin, a son of Mr. Wittaner, dropped out of sight even more mysteriously than his sister. Armed with credentials from a priest in this city he went to St. Vincent's Seminary, Westmoreland county, Pa., where he began to study for the priesthood. A month or so ago Mrs. Wittaner received word from the seminary that her son was there, that his health was failing on account of overstudy, and that his mind was somewhat affected. The son was at once brought home and is receiving medical attention. The daughter remains in Chicago.

Communications.

Dividing Up, Christian and Otherwise.

The Twentieth Century, an organ of the Inchoate, modeled on the happy little family in Barnum's Museum, and which has a cage for Anarchism in its menagerie of cranky notions, deprecates the charge of dividing up, made by the Independent Pulpit, as showing an ignorance equal to that of Christian ministers. This ignorance is equally the art of ignoring. None so blind as those who choose not to see. Mr. Pentecost, in rebellion against his old master Henry George, pretends that the only reason why their old ideal, "single tax," would not bring in the millennium immediately, if not sooner, is that "it would be compulsory." Both alike ignore its falling first and heaviest on the least moneyed class, the working farmers. This way of dividing up secures to the Twentieth Century its single tax clients; and as Mr. Sullivan says, its most effectiv supporters. Mr. Pentecost may think that he hops clear out of dividing ups, by cutting Communism, but does he repudiate the Independent Pulpit's soft impeachment of regarding Jesus as the ideal Anarchist? Does not Jesus class with Communists, rather than with proprietary Anarchists? Was not the first Christian church at Jerusalem Communistic?

The Independent Pulpit's ignorance, sagaciously preferring the scattering shotgun to the rifle, hits Jesus, Mr. Pentecost, and the "International" or revolutionary Anarchists, represented by Prince Krapotkine's party in England, Elyseé Reclus in France, and the bomb-thrower's victims at Chicago. Let us inspect the target. Jesus said, "Sell all that thou hast and giv to the poor, else remain with thy camels outside the needle's eye gate. The Twentieth Century says, Keep no vacant land and stop monopolizing, so shall thy days be long in the Twentieth Century.

Revolutionary Anarchists, as well as those who like Mr. Pentecost, drop the Revolution, cut such used-up motivs as Heaven and Hell for our faithless age. Believers in the goods of this world, they generously tell the poor to help themselvs in the dividing up. But with characteristic consistency, Mr. Pentecost, non-resistant or "passiv," with Jesus, divides up his homages between or among the revolutionary Communist Anarchists of Chicago, and the bomb-thrower whose awkwardness they expiated by vicarious atonement, thus appeasing the eight manes of policemen. For this hero, "now in hiding," our non-resistant Anarchist predicts a "lineage of popular aristocracy" (whatever that may be) proud of their patronymic prestige!

Was not Judas one of the twelve apostles, and even the head workman in carrying out "the scheme of salvation" by vicarious atonement? If, as 11th November orators proclaim, the blood of the five martyrs is the seed of the Labor Church, and their death more eloquent than their living voices for emancipation of the toilers; then certainly the bomb-thrower and Judas are fit subjects for glorification. But why should the former keep shady? When Counselor Black offered to produce him, Governor Oglesby declined, and Prosecutor Grinnell said it could not matter. Had they not the men wanted, by the throat? Having served his purpose, the bomb-thrower can afford to dispense with a Twentieth Century blazon of nobility, in his share of the dividing up.

Our catholic formula carries to the rich, fear of loss; to the poor, hope of gain. But if Parsons, Alarming, told the poor to loot stores of the rich, the parsons of Christendom defend them while offering in exchange, heaven's treasures.

Governments divide another way, by taxes, salaries, and pensions. What cohesiv force of public plunder adds up by tariffs, banking privileges, and land grants, is subtracted from labor, and the four rules of arithmetic dance a chassez croisez in the conversion of forces between classes and masses.

The idea of dividing up divides the masses between ballots and bullets, in the question of priority; but men who fatten on agitation and hav families to feed, fight shy of revolution. Moral suasion dividends hav not the inconveniencies of martyrdom. Mr. Pentecost has the advantage over Jesus, who lacked prudential pulpit training in the art of roaring gently. Tirades against vacant land to the tune that the old cow died of, like Henry George's against landlordry, without resisting rent collectors, do not ruffle those who with title deeds and sheriffs at their back, can make "passiv resistance" rather costly to squatters.

The difference in flavor between moral suasion seasoned with hell, and this analeptic dish without red pepper, may not be appreciable to our faithless palates, but soul roasting was a fresh and lively motiv for the old Jews, whose ideas of penalty beyond the grave had been simply political or national, viz., the "being cut off from one's people," the local opportunism of denouncing private property in earth lots and booming it in heaven lots. What the church coveted, it cheapened, while extolling the value of what it hypothecated. To the same policy belong its traffic in indulgences and masses for the souls in purgatory.

As for Anarchism in a political sense, Hebrew theocracy included, how could it say, "Render unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's [tribute of almighty eagles like unto Uncle Sam's], and unto God those which are God's?" Jesus was perhaps sentimentalizing here; but Levites, like our Christian pastors, appraised sentiment in market values, and God's belongings by their tithes and tax exemptions. Cæsars were generally friends of the Gods, only keeping them from kicking up a row in the Pantheon, and but for Yahvah's prejudices against graven images, he might thus hav been throned—representativly—cheek by jowl with Jove and other divine respectabilities. Cæsar's tribute paid, priests of every god and goddess might keep superstition's toll gate; so that between the two renderings Jesus seems to hav made a distinction without much practical difference. The popes were soon after to combine God and the State in their own persons. Doctors of the Hebrew Law were perhaps less solicitous about its jots and tittles of fulfilment, than about their own titular monopoly in it. They were not afraid of hell, but the assumption of authority to prescribe that patent medicin offended them.

Ideal Anarchisms such as—"The son of man is lord also of the Sabbath"—might salt a roasting ear, but no more than Emerson's, Thoreau's, or Ibsen's would invoke police attention. Divide up or be damned, more or less politely, in the mouth of one who is neither a highwayman nor a tax collector, has a more revolutionary twang. Keeping rich folk out of hell might seem a sort of charity which their poor neighbors owed them, and the rich might be less afraid of being damned, than of being saved upon the terms prescribed. This view escapes our doctors of divinity, but one of the Supreme Court of Illinois reasserted Pilate's condemnation of Jesus.

M. T. Lazarus.

God, and Money.

Why should the institutions of the barbarous past still be permitted to occupy the ground belonging to the more enlightened and rational present?

In a recent lecture by Hugh O. Pentecost entitled, "A Troublesome God," he said: "I tell you that the idea of God, and the very word God, is what stands in the way of the emancipation of man, bodily, mentally, and morally, to-day, and always will so long as they continue to be used or hav any influence, and they must be rooted out of common use."

The popular notion about money, and the very term money. belong to the same category of misleading ideas. Both words, God and money, are the invention of an ignorant, cruel, and superstitious people, who lived in a barbarous age, when these institutions were to them a necessity.

But the curse under which we suffer to-day is, that although the barbarous age has passed the barbarous institutions still remain to crush and degrade the people of this so-called enlightened age.

Both terms, God and money, imply relativity. The first is equivalent to king, sovereign, or lord—the name of a title implying supreme power and authority which may be conferred upon some man, who by conquest or compact may become a ruler over other men, they becoming his subjects, both sovereign and subjects being interdependent upon each other. "The Lord is a man of war. The Lord is his name," says Ex. xv, 3 (Lord is his title).

The term money is equivalent to the word bondage or slavery, and the word tyrant is its correlativ.

Bible commentators and dictionary-makers hav often resorted to guessing or assuming, in cases where absolute knowledge of the origin of words and their meaning were wanting. I shall endeavor from the plain words of Hebrew history (believing this to be the oldest) to get what light I can as to how the word money originated. Gold and silver mining hav always been among the most important industries of the world. Anciently the mine-delvers were the lowest and most degraded class of men, and were always held in bondage. Mine-owners were also slave-owners, and the slaves of the mines were called minees. Silver was mined long before it was used as a medium of exchange, but when the merchants required current coin to use as pledges of security in the exchange of wealth, they chose silver only, and called it, for that purpose, mono (they were monometalists). Four thousand years ago, probably, the merchants in council decided that as bondmen, and silver, the products of slave labor, were equally chattels in the market, therefore one name should be applied to both. So they blended the two words minee and mono, and the result was the word money.

Between two and three thousand years ago, when Abraham bought a piece of land the silver with which he paid for it was called current money with the merchants (Gen. xxiii, 16).

Three hundred years thereafter, if a Hebrew slave-owner should smite his slave to death he would not be punished, if the slave lived a day or two, because he was his money (Ex. xxi, 21). Here we see that men held in bondage, and silver currency used in commerce, were both by ancient barbarians called money.

Though well adapted in character and name to their own necessities, they are entirely unadapted to ours. My ideas of the manner in which wealth should be produced and distributed within a nation of free people I giv as follows.

The world's wealth is created by the application of human labor, in the preparation of material things for human use, whether under a system of bondage or freedom. The responsible parties in the production of wealth should be the owners thereof, and under the ancient system of human bondage the laborers were recognized as chattels, receiving protection and support in common with the other domestic animals. But chattel slavery as concerns our country is an institution of the past, which may be readily understood by reading the preamble of the United States Constitution, upholding the doctrin of our Declaration of Independence.

In a state of freedom man owns himself, and therefore owns the products of his labor. But since the invention of machinery it is a waste of labor to attempt to work single-handed. Therefore economy demands coöperation in the production of wealth, and an equable distribution of it among the coöperators, who are its rightful owners.

I hav endeavored to show that the word money does not refer to any material thing. It is a relativ term, and signifies a state or condition of bondage or slavery, which would hav passed away long ago were it not for the fact that the institution of money, bondage, slavery (different terms for the same idea), had "outlived the age of development that gave it birth."

Human slavery in Europe and America is out of date, and the era of human freedom has potentially come. But because the old barbaric institution of money is still popular, we hav no proper medium through which the wealth created and justly owned by the people whose labor has produced it can be properly distributed among them.

I submit the following illustration of what I believe a medium for the distribution of wealth among the people should be. It has been found by investigation that among all classes of workers, the lowest average amount of wealth produced in one day by each man would be equal to about $5 in money; and I giv the name Daler to the check or certificate that represents one day's labor, and call it the unit, not of value, but the unit of cost in labor time. Upon this basis I construct the following table of equachecks, a paper coin to be used as a national currency for the distribution of wealth within the nation. The denominations are as follows:

10 milets.....1 cent.
10 cenets.....1 dime.
10 dimets.....1 daler.

This is a simple modification of our table of federal money, and should be based, not upon silver or gold alone in any form, but upon the whole common or undistributed wealth of the nation, of which every citizen born within the nation should be a proprietor on equal terms.

I am well aware that the views herein presented can neither be entertained nor actualized except by men who hav a rational conception of the rights of man, and who are also possessed of a moral sense that responds to their intellectual convictions.

Wm. U. Dame.

Brentwood, L. I., N. Y., Dec. 2, 1890.

The Bible and Salvation.

These two words are so joined together that no Bible religionist can put them asunder. As Adam and his entire race were lost in his fall, so by his creator's revelation are they to be saved. The entire book, more especially the New Testament, claims to be for reconstruction. As in Adam all die, so in Christ are all to be made alive. Since by their fruits we are to know them, should there in fact be no salvation the scheme and the book must be unworthy of trust. It becomes no more nor less than a stupendous failure. Out of the mouths of the Jews the Christians are condemned, and out of the mouths of the Christians are the Jews condemned. On Christ they do not, they cannot believe, and he that believeth not shall be damned. Moreover, the Lord covenanted with Abraham to be a father to him and his seed after him forever. They were to inherit Canaan throughout all generations. A prophet was to be raised up to redeem and save them from all their enemies. Notwithstanding the slaughters of Moses and Joshua to enforce this covenant, it has most signally failed and they are scattered and persecuted all over the face of God's earth.

And while the Christians claim to get their messiah (see Gal. iii) through Abraham, they charge his seed with the murder of this very prophet and their Lord's only son.

With yet more reason do the Jews retort that the entire system of Christianity is a silly myth. The conception of a child by a virgin fathered by a Holy Ghost, the third person in a triune God; his birth in a stable; the slaughter of all the children by Herod, that he might find and murder this divine child; his flight into Egypt; the numerous miracles attributed to him; unlettered himself, his calling the illiterate to follow him; his scourging, like a low grade slaveholder, the Jews from the temple; the scene, from the beginning to the end, of his crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension, are all so repugnant to common sense, experience, and reliable history that the Jews are compelled to reject the whole. No testimony on earth can equal that given by the Jews about the man called Christ. They above all others held and thoroughly learned the old scriptures according to which their redeemer was to come. They exclusivly inhabited Jerusalem, Bethlehem, and the entire land of Canaan. If there were such a betrothed couple as Joseph and Mary, they knew them. Impossible for Herod to hav butchered thousands or hundreds of their children unknown to them, and without its finding its way into history. Impossible for them to reject his ability and willingness to save them in the face of miracles demonstrating his divinity. Equally impossible for such a savior not to hav opened their eyes and convinced, converted, and saved them. Had there been a total eclipse of the sun, an awful earthquake, the graves opening, the saints (who must hav been Jews) coming to life and walking through the streets of the city, no power on earth could hav prevented the Jews from seeing, feeling, and believing. Even the learned commentator Clark concedes that the latter astounding miracle is hard to credit, suggesting that the quaking of the earth may hav exhumed the dead bodies. Talmage in like manner shuffles over the big fish and Jonah, saying as the throat was too small Jonah may hav taken a seat on the under jaw and ridden to shore.

Well indeed is it that the common sense of the Jews is leading them out of their Bible absurdities and into the Freethought work of their brains. They nor we are Infidels, since the word means the negation of fidelity—true and faithful as we all claim to be to our obligations and duties. But in the love of Truth we search for it in all creeds and books, and especially the sciences, built up from the closest observations and experience. As the Bible, and religion, the synonym of superstition, get out of the way, the progress of our race will accelerate until it shall come to pass that all, from the least to the greatest, shall know the laws of nature, which to know aright will make life worth living.

East Las Vegas, N. M. W. PERKINS.

More from Huxley on Booth.

But it is now time to take a more particular criticism of "Darkest England." At the outset of my examination of that work, I was startled to find that Mr. Booth had put forward his scheme with an almost incredibly imperfect knowledge of what had been done and is doing in the same direction. A simple reader might well imagin that the author of "Darkest England" posed as the Columbus, or at any rate the Cortez, of that region. "Go to Mudie's," he tells us, and you will be surprised to see how few books there are upon the social problem. That may or may not be correct; but if Mr. Booth had gone to a certain reading-room not far from Mudie's, I undertake to say that the well-informed and obliging staff of the national library in Bloomsbury would hav provided him with more books on this topic, in almost all European languages, than he would read in three months. Has Socialism no literature? And what is Socialism but an incarnation of the social question? Moreover, I am persuaded that even "Mudie's" resources could hav furnished Mr. Booth with the "Life of Lord Shaftesbury," and Carlyle's works. Mr. Booth seems to hav undertaken to instruct the world without having heard of "Past and Present," or of "Latter-Day Pamphlets;" though somewhat late in the day, a judicious friend called his attention to them. To those of my contemporaries on whom, as on myself, Carlyle's writings on this topic made an ineffaceable impression forty years ago, who know that all that time hundreds of able and devoted men, both clerical and lay, hav worked heart and soul for the permanent amendment of the condition of the poor, Mr. Booth's "Go to Mudie's" affords an apt measure of the depth of his preliminary studies. However, I am bound to admit that these earlier laborers in the field labored in such a different fashion that the originality of the plan started by Mr. Booth remains largely unaffected. For them no drums hav beat, no trombones brayed, no sanctified buffoonery, after the model of the oration of the friar in Wallenstein's camp, dear to the readers of Schiller, has tickled the ears of the groundlings on their behalf. Sadly behind the great age of rowdy self-advertisment in which their lot has fallen, they seem not to hav advanced one whit beyond John the Baptist and the apostles, eighteen hundred years ago, in their notions of the way in which the metanoia, the change of mind of the ill-doer, is to be brought about. Yet the new model was there, ready for the imitation of those ancient savers of souls. The panting and roaring mystagogs of some of the most venerable of Greek and Syrian cults also had their processions and banners, and their fifes and cymbals and holy chants, their hierarchy of officers to whom the art of making collections was not wholly unknown, and who, as freely as their modern imitators, promised an Elysian future to contributory converts. The success of these antique Salvation Armies was enormous. Simon Magus was quite as notorious a person, and probably had as strong a following, as Mr. Booth. Yet the apostles, with their old-fashioned ways, would not accept such success as a satisfactory sign of the divine sanction, nor depart from their own methods of leading the way to the higher life. I deem it unessential to verify Mr. Booth's statistics. The exact strength of the population of the realm of misery, be it one, two, or three millions, has nothing to do with the efficacy of any means proposed for the highly desirable end of reducing it to a minimum. The sole question for consideration at present is whether the scheme, keeping specially in view the spirit in which it is to be worked, is likely to do more good than harm.

Mr. Booth tells us with commendable frankness that "it is primarily and mainly for the sake of saving the soul that I seek the salvation of the body" (page 44), which language, being interpreted, means that the propagation of the special Salvationist creed comes first, and the promotion of the physical, intellectual, and purely moral welfare of mankind second in his estimation. Men are to be made sober and industrious mainly that, as washed, shorn, and docil sheep, they may be driven into the narrow theological fold which Mr. Booth patronizes. If they refuse to enter, for all their moral cleanliness, they will hav to take their place among the goats as sinners only less dirty than the rest.—London Times.

A Sample Roman Catholic Institution.

Dispatch from Detroit, Mich., to the Sun.

The House of the Good Shepherd on Fort street was established about six years ago. Since last April, when Sister Mary Xavier left it, the police hav ceased to regard the place as a reformatory.

The last sister to disappear was Sister Immaculate Heart, whose real name is Mary McQuade. She said to-day: "I hav not renounced the Catholic religion, neither do I declare the order of the Good Shepherd worthless. I simply rebel against the methods adopted by Sister Stanislaus, the mother superior of the Detroit branch. I hav seen her violate more rules than I had seen broken by all the sisters combined during all the years I was at Philadelphia. The House of the Good Shepherd is a cloistered order, but I hav repeatedly seen this mother superior, accompanied by a cloistered nun, leave the house and go for a drive about the city.

"Another rule forbids eating out of hours, but it is the habit of Sister Stanislaus to eat and drink many times during the day, and even to hav coffee brought into the chapel. I hav also known her to hav wine brought to her, which she would suck through a straw during the singing of mass. She has been exceedingly severe with the inmates. One of the first orders issued by her was that each girl should complete two and a half dozen overalls or shirts a day. This was an excessiv task, but she insisted that it was an ordinary day's work at St. Paul, where she had been before coming to Detroit. Any child who was unsuccessful in completing her task was severely beaten with a strap and compelled to finish her work before going to bed.

"Whipping for not doing work was a common occurrence, and was administered by the mother superior. It consisted of beating on the hands and legs with a strap about two feet long, cuffing, and holding the girls' heads under water in the bathroom until they were nearly suffocated.

"The food was horrible; you can scarcely imagin how poor it was, but, if ours was poor, that supplied the inmates was simply garbage. There were three grades of food furnished at the House. That supplied to the mother superior and her assistant was the best the market affords. Ours was the better class of that collected by the lay sisters, while the inmates had tainted meat, decaying vegetables, etc. The food naturally bred disease. I recall one instance where a girl was taken suddenly ill while partaking of this kind of food, and died. Dr. Chittick, one of the House physicians, was summoned and pronounced it a case of poisoning, but afterward gave it out that it was heart disease.

"The mother superior denounced the mother provincial, the head of the order in St. Louis, charging her with drunkenness and other irregularities. All these things I related to the mother provincial when she next came to Detroit. Sister Stanislaus relieved me from all class work, took my keys from me, and dismissed me with the remark that she would attend to me later. Early on September 12th I left. I hav since written to my mother at Philadelphia and informed her of my act. To-day I received her hearty approval. I hav been called upon repeatedly by Father Finnegan, who insists on my return to my old home in Philadelphia, but I prefer to remain in Detroit. During the latter days of my stay at the institution I never went into the confessional without telling Bishop Foley about the doings of Sister Stanislaus. He assured me on every occasion that he would attend to it, but he never did, so far as I know."

Sister Mary Xavier has been a member of the order from early childhood, and on the opening of the Detroit branch was transferred from St. Louis. She was accustomed to go from door to door begging for the institution. She is illiterate, having had no opportunity from childhood to gain the first rudiments of an education.

"I had not been satisfied with my treatment since the advent of the present mother superior," said she to-day. "Soon after her arrival at the House she ordered me to paint the outside of a detached house on the premises, and when procuring food for the private table of the mother superior and her assistant I was invariably ordered to procure the best of everything, even paying as high as forty-five cents a pound for coffee.

"The direct cause of my leaving, however, was my treatment by the mother superior for having formed an attachment for an inmate named Martha Johnson, who undertook to teach me to read and write. By some means unknown to me information was conveyed to the mother superior that I was being instructed, and the child was placed in the 'preservation' class, where communication with me was almost impossible.

"A few days later the mother superior detected me holding communication with Martha from one window to another across the court. The mother flew at me in a perfect rage, tore the silver heart from my habit, and cursed me in a very loud voice. She then sent for the girl and slapped her unmercifully, telling me that I should receive the same kind of treatment."

A girl was found in First street who had recently been an inmate of the House. She was sent to the institution about two years ago to receive instruction in study and music. She was known at the House as Maud. She says:

"The only lessons of any kind that I received were on a sewing machine eight hours a day making overalls and jumpers. We had to sleep in an old shanty back of the House. Bishop Foley knew nothing about it, for when he came the sewing machines were put out of the way and we were washed and cleanly dressed and seated in rows of chairs. We were often made to get on our knees and eat our food on the floor and to make the cross on the floor with our tongues Our food was of the worst, and nearly always stale, for it was what was begged. Our hash was made of tea leaves and such stuff, and the catsup often had cockroaches in it.

"I hav seen the sisters force the girls to eat the putrid meat they gave us. I hav seen the mother cuff the girls around terribly. I hav seen her slap the girls for almost nothing at all and put them in straitjackets, and hold their heads under water in the bathtub. Mattie Thomas, of Mt. Clemens, had nice bangs when she came. The sisters went to cut them off, and Mattie objected. But they cut them, and in the struggle cut her forehead so that she bore the scars for a long time. When I got out she sent a letter by me to her father, asking him for God's sake to come and take her away.

"A girl got out shortly after I did, but she has to wear glasses yet on account of her eyes being nearly ruined, and she has a sore on her leg which the doctor says is due to the poor food and harsh treatment she received there."

A number of similar cases are reported.

Roundsman Shoemaker says complaints hav been coming in for over two years. "The girls," he continued, "whose stories I hav heard unite in saying that the present mother superior is very sarcastic, and tells the girls that they are nothing but the scum of the gutters. The usefulness of the place, in my opinion, is destroyed unless it is put under proper supervision."

Another roundsman says the department will not send even the most dissolute characters to the Home.

WE are convinced that the Bible teaching, as to the present and future condition of the world, is utterly subversiv of progress, and that all improvement is made in spite of it. Christians do not generally believe it now, because it is so repugnant to modern intelligence; but there it is in the Bible. All Christians used to believe it, and some do still. Things are to wax worse and worse, so that Jesus asks, "When the son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" The world, and all that is therein, shall be burnt up. The early Christians, therefore, sought "a city that had foundations," and taught the despising and forsaking of this world. When this restraint is removed men will become better citizens; and, feeling that they are not working merely to feed the flames of judgment, they will show more enthusiasm about improving the world.—Robt. C. Adams.

SEP 11 '41
974731

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President, . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. MORRIS PEROT, Vice-President, . . . Philadelphia, Pa.
J. O. BENTLEY, Vice-President, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa

Secular Union Guarantee Fund of $5,000.

Amount pledged to Dec. 22, 1890	$581 00
J P. Slayton, Tecumseh, Mich. (paid)	25 00
Charles E. Pease, Clackamas, Ore.	1 00
E. Frost, Maynard, Ia. (paid)	5 00
Reuben Savage, Maynard, Ia. (paid)	1 00
L. Schlegel, University P. O, Cal.	5 00
H. G. Stillwell, Dryden, Tex.	5 00
Total amount of pledges to Dec. 29, 1890	$623 00

F. C. MENDE, Treasurer American Secular Union.
Philadelphia, Dec. 29, 1890.

It will be remembered that President Westbrook has offered to be one of twenty to contribute $100 each, which would make $2,000 in all. From three sources (Dr. E. B. Foote, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Odds, and Hon. Abram Schell) hav already come pledges of $100 each, making, with President Westbrook's pledge, $400 in all. Shall we not hope to hear from some others of the desired twenty at the opening of the new year?

Spurred by Dr Westbrook's offer to be one of twenty to raise $2,000, Seaborn Kitchens, Sr., of Gibson, Ga., offers to be one of six hundred Liberals to raise the remaining $3,000 at $5 each. He adds: "I hope that the brethren will respond freely throughout the country and let the American Secular Union move on with the great and good work." By reference to our treasurer's memorandum above, it will be seen that of the desired $3 000 $623 has been pledged to date and part of that paid. Let us hope that Mr. Kitchens's offer will be promptly seconded from all parts of the United States by fellow Liberals.

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec. A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Pa, Dec. 29, 1890.

Call to Liberal Societies.

At the recent Portsmouth Congress of the American Secular Union, the board of directors were instructed to invite all societies, Liberal and otherwise, who are in sympathy with our work of separating church and state, to join us. In accordance with these instructions we hereby extend a cordial invitation to all societies, no matter what their religious beliefs or disbeliefs, to become our auxiliaries, and to coöperate with us in our endeavors to separate church and state, as a means of securing religious liberty and freedom of thought for all.

Becoming our auxiliaries does not mean that such societies are to giv up their identity; nor are they expected to work exclusivly for our principles; nor do we assume any right to dictate to such societies in their local management. Our auxiliaries are absolutely independent of the national society, both in their local management and in their choice of principles to uphold, as long as they work for the Nine Demands of our constitution. The American Secular Union is a federation of local Unions and other societies, together with life and annual members, by means of a congress, a president, and the usual executiv and honorary officers, for the one general purpose of securing state secularization and the freedom of our institutions from ecclesiastical interference. All societies which agree in this one general purpose are invited to coöperate with us in this, no matter what other objects they may hav in view. For it is understood that no one, acting with us, is bound or compromised by the actions or expressions of any of the participants outside of this common purpose. At our congresses and elsewhere, therefore, we endeavor to cherish an intellectual hospitality which shall enable those of diverse views to speak freely, and yet to join in this common purpose of securing state secularization and freedom from ecclesiastical interference.

Upon application to the corresponding secretary, Ida C. Craddock, a blank will be furnished which, upon being filled up and forwarded to us with the charter fee of $5 will entitle the senders to a charter as an auxiliary to the American Secular Union.

We hope that this call will be heeded by all truly progressiv societies, whether they be Spiritualist or Materialist, Unitarian or Atheist, Socialist or Individualist, Christian or Infidel, the Woman's National Liberal Union or the National Religious Liberty Association. All societies in these respectiv groupings, if anywhere near abreast of the times, no matter what their differing beliefs, agree heartily in one desire—that religious liberty and the right to freedom of thought shall be upheld. As means to this end, they all recognize the necessity for a total separation of church and state. Why, then, should they not ally themselvs with the American Secular Union, which is working distinctly for this thing? It should be remembered that our society is the only society anywhere which possesses a constitution so elastic as to fit all other organizations and individuals, and yet leave them perfectly independent, apart from their pledge to coöperate in the work of separating church and state. All other societies which are pleading for religious liberty require their members, in addition, to sympathize with some special phase of religious, political, or philosophical belief or disbelief. The American Secular Union alone, among Liberal societies, welcomes to its ranks all those who work for total separation of church and state, whatever principles they may uphold in addition. For this reason it justly claims recognition from all Liberal societies, whether these be composed of churchmen or of Freethinkers, of Individualists or of state Socialists.

Friends of religious liberty everywhere! The American Secular Union urges you to accept this invitation to band together as brothers in one great army. Remember that, to do this, you will not hav to sacrifice a single principle or doctrin which your hearts hold sacred. You pledge yourselvs, as American Secular Unionists, only to stand by one another loyally in the fight against the God-in-the-Constitution party. Beyond that, you are free to help in any other cause you will.

It is, perhaps, natural that those of you who are already doing good work for religious liberty along your own lines should not look with favor on this invitation to become our auxiliaries. Your local and personal pride is touched—and very justly so—at a suggestion which may seem to relegate you to a subsidiary position. In reply, we again urge you to remember that your individuality, either as societies or as persons, is not interfered with in the least by your becoming auxiliary to the American Secular Union. You will be just as free as you ever were. But your uniting with us in fraternal fellowship will everywhere strengthen the cause of religious liberty and freedom of conscience, dear alike to you and to ourselvs. Every time that an organization joins hands with the American Secular Union, the dawning of mental and spiritual freedom is hastened for us all. "In union is strength." Must we repeat this old phrase over and over again, in order to emphasize the necessity for coöperation among us all?

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec. A. S. U.
By order of the Board of Directors.
Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 27, 1890.

Concerning Field Lecturers of the American Secular Union.

OPEN LETTER TO THE PRESIDENT.

MR. R. B. WESTBROOK President of the American Secular Union, Dear Sir: You will remember that at the meeting of the board of directors of the American Secular Union two weeks ago, we talked of field secretaries, but we discussed candidates and their fitness instead of principles, plans, or policies, and since that meeting it has occurred to me that our time would hav been better spent on the latter than the former. At the meeting of the board held in New York city about one year ago, when Mr. Remsburg was present as a member, he made some valuable suggestions that we cannot afford to forget, and I now write to recall them, and also to propose a plan of campaign which has occurred to me as less objectionable than the employment, at necessarily great expense, of any one person to act as field secretary. You may remember that Mr. Remsburg's idea was that if the board were to select any one person from the large list of those competent to act in that capacity the effect might be unfortunate in two ways: First, that it would naturally create jealousy amongst many of the equally competent persons not selected, and perhaps excite hostil feelings toward the American Secular Union (which is not merely a theory, since the condition did actually confront us at one time); and second, that to send out among local societies a paid missionary, wholly sustained by the American Secular Union, might, for obvious reasons, exert more of a paralyzing than an energizing influence on these local organizations, besides possibly indirectly injuring the business or opportunities of those lecturers who must depend entirely on their own efforts. We hav not yet devised a plan by which to interest the traveling lecturers in doing any regular, direct, or telling work to strengthen the American Secular Union and promote its objects, and this seems to be the one thing needed.

Now, therefore, my suggestion, offered for consideration, approval, or rejection, is that instead of trying to raise three, four, or five thousand dollars for the employment of one or two field secretaries, to be wholly supported by and at the service of the American Secular Union, we should hit upon a system of subsidizing half a dozen or more of the best available persons, and thus engaging a portion of their time, service, and energies to do the work of our field secretaries. The $2,500 which would probably pay salary and expense of one good man, might be divided into five parts and allotted to five field secretaries who are already more or less in the field, and who would be able to be far more activ and useful if assisted by an annual subsidy of $500 or pro rata according to the time actually employed in Liberal or Secular propaganda. Webster says, "A subsidy is paid to an ally for his services." That just fits the plan proposed herewith. How shall the allies be chosen? How better than by the votes of the actual supporters of the treasury of the American Secular Union? Let every one who contributes $1 send with it one vote for the man of his choice as field secretary. With $5 the subscriber could name five persons, or maybe vote for one name five times. There may be twenty or thirty candidates voted for, with the understanding that the board shall appoint the two, three, four, five, or more persons receiving the highest number of votes, according to the funds provided. It would of course be necessary to request that all contributions with votes be sent in at once, not strung out through the year. I should like to see this plan discussed in all the Liberal papers by all who hav anything to say for or against it, and if it should seem practicable and acceptable generally, we should be doing well enough this year if we could hav the appointments made in time to hav the field secretaries at work during the six months preceding the next Congress, and for the first experiment of half a year the subsidy for each need be only $250.

Respectfully submitted by yours truly,

E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-president.
New York, Dec. 28, 1890.

The Enemy Routed.

Several weeks ago an article from my pen, styled, "The War Is On," appeared. In it I described the enemy, our relativ positions, and the fighting tactics adopted by each. Since then several battles hav been fought, only one of which was won by the enemy. As it is, we are masters of the field. The killed and dying lie scattered about us in "rich profusion," and those that liv seem to love (?) us better now than their "father in heaven." The killed we are burying as fast as possible; to the dying we are singing,

> Hail Columbia, happy land,
> Theological cakes made out of sand;

and to the living we are administering the "milk of human kindness." Yes, the enemy is completely routed. As Colonel Ingersoll once put it, when asked by a friend how the war was waging, "My God! my God! We've got them on the run."

The first battle we fought was relativ to Grand Army Hall, the doors of which had been closed against us by the arbitrary action of Post-Commander Whitney and his adjutant, James P. Ricker. The matter was brought to the attention of the post by resolutions as publicly announced in print. The session was secret and was made up of fanatics in line with Whitney and Ricker. It might appropriately be said that the resolutions were given into the hands of "Whitney and his gang." No sooner were they presented than a fellow with a low, retreating, Methodist forehead mechanically arose and mechanically moved that they be laid on the table. The said Whitney called one of our Secular friends to the chair, thereby rendering him powerless to debate the question, and in a few wild sentences, adorned by "wooly and hard to curry" gestures, defended himself. He ended by favoring the table as the proper receptacle of the presented resolutions. A vote being taken, all voted for the motion save one brave, manly, and true blue citizen. Thus battle one was fought and won by the enemy.

On the same night the Sons of Veterans met. Having engaged their meeting-place after being locked out of Grand Army Hall, it was brought up at their session. A discussion sweet yet bitter followed. It waxed warm and continued until late at night. Finally a vote was taken, and by a good round majority it was decided to let the Secularists continue in the hall. The proceedings of the meeting came to our ears, and while we appreciated the decision arrived at, and the victory accorded us thereby, we were not given to allow dissension to nudge its way into the ranks of these soldiers' sons, if by any way we could prevent it. We held that if we continued in their hall, those among them who had so bitterly opposed us would then work harm and trouble in the ranks of their own order. For that reason we gave up the keys and are now holding forth in Giloon's Hall, one of the finest in the city. This second battle, don't you see, we won, and made it still more decisiv and cutting to our enemies by withdrawing with the sweets, as it were, and leaving them the husks.

The third battle was won by pursuing closely the old saying, "There are more ways to kill a cat than one." Commander Whitney fell in this battle by being knocked out of office on the night of the election of officers. He was succeeded by Professor Carl Huber. The professor is editor of the German paper and a strong friend to Secularism, publicly favoring our Nine Demands in the main. This was noised against him, but it did no harm—he got there just the same. He appoints the adjutant, and it can be safely stated that Ricker will be retired when his time is up. A new board of trustees were also elected, every member of which is friendly and who would vote for us to again take the hall. But we do not want it. We prefer not to "trouble the peaceful waters." We know "we are the people;" we know "we are bound to get there," and we know how to leave well enough alone.

Editor Valjean of the Blade scored one victory for us by introducing and advising the adoption of a "tenth Demand," whereby the "survival of the fittest" would occur; that is, that the knife be used on those bad by nature, the impure, and the consumptiv, that they be castrated and not allowed to reproduce their kind, When the enemy read that they wilted. Thay knew they would stand no show if that Demand was adopted and enforced. I met Whitney one day and I told him the American Secular Union had agreed to the "tenth Demand," and that the first subjects to be operated on in Portsmouth would be him and Ricker. He gave a "turtle-shell" laugh and hied away. I hav not seen him since.

Miss Craddock, national secretary, aided us materially in our battles. She routed a flank of the enemy completely by answering through the columns of the Blade certain questions propounded by Dr. J. B. Carter. Hon. Charles Watts also answered Carter, and challenged the ministers of the city to debate. They failed to accept, and to do that is to retreat. At one of our local meetings I analyzed a sermon of Rev. Mr. McElroy, entitled, "Christianity and Science, Friends or Foes?" and in answer to a published sermon of Rev. Dr. Tappan I addressed him an open letter through the Blade challenging him to engage in a friendly controversy. He has not as yet accepted, and the probability is he never will. In Portsmouth it is just as Ingersoll says, "My God! My God! We've got them on the run."

Portsmouth, O. WILL S. ANDRES.

Moujiks the Slaves of Priests.

Nothing need be said to American readers regarding the principles of monopoly applied to commerce. As consumers of articles produced, manipulated, and sold at artificially bloated prices, our familiarity with commercial monopoly leaves nothing to be desired. Personified and put in a popular American pantheon, monopoly would represent the evil one of commerce.

Though a familiar subject with us in the realms of commerce, we, happily, never hav occasion to consider it seriously in the character of custodian and purveyor of spiritual food to the consciences and souls of the people. Monopolies of this character were frequent enough in ante-Reformation times, but the sole remaining relic of that barbarous age is nowadays to be found in holy Russia.

The orthodox Greek church of the holy Russian empire is the most gigantic monopoly that exists on the face of the earth at the present day. It owns the exclusiv right to regulate the morals, direct the consciences, and warp the souls of one hundred million human beings. It has a patent, supported by the mighty power of the Russian government, granting to it the exclusiv right and title to the religious exploitation of a fourteenth part of the population of the earth and the power to punish severely the least infringement of its rights.

Monopoly may not always be a curse in commerce. Its defenders hav sometimes even been able to make out, owing to peculiar and exceptional conditions, cases where it may hav been a blessing in disguise. But there can be no manner of doubt as to the influence and the results of the monopoly in religion.

The blight of intolerance has smitten the priests with moral leprosy, that has left them without any resemblance to the same class in other countries. Russia is the only country in Christendom where the servants of the church and the wearers of the cassock and gown neither exercise, nor attempt to exercise, a good moral influence on their parishioners. Exceptions there are, of course, but they are exceedingly rare.

The Russian church is at one with the government in that it regards the people merely as a means for its own support and aggrandizement. The two are gigantic Siamese twins who wax fat and continue to grow in power at the expense of the toiling millions of peasantry, who liv harder and enjoy less comfort than any set of people whom the writer, who has been in twenty-four countries, can call to mind, unless it be a certain class of coolies in China. One loots them by means of the tax-gatherer and the police, the other by means of the priests, and by trading on their ignorance, which it encourages, and their superstitions, which it is too lazy and indifferent to root out. And while one forbids the victim to move out of his house into another without permission, or to escape through any channel whatever, the other has the monstrous power to imprison or send to Siberia anyone who presumes to assist him out of the slough of ignorance and superstition that keeps him helpless.

To convert a Russian peasant from the Greek church to any other branch of the Christian religion is a penal offense, punishable by a long term of hard labor in Siberia. If he is already a sectarian the peasant may remain so, subject to various humiliating restrictions. What the Russian Greek church demands of the people is that they "keep quiet" and do nothing. "Work and pay for masses and sacraments; giv money to enrich churches, and buy candles to burn before the icons of saints; but do not think; do not read; and, above all, make no move toward worshiping God according to the dictates of your own conscience, or you will be punished and imprisoned."

Secured in its monopolistic power and position by the strong arm of the government, the policy of the church has become that of the dog in the manger. Its intolerance of propaganda is only equaled by its lethargy. It will neither bestir itself to the betterment of the people, who hav been given into its power, nor permit others to do so. Like any other monopoly that has no fear of competition, it refuses to trouble itself about the quality of the goods it supplies, concerning itself solely with the question of warning off infringers of its prerogativ.

In southern Russia, however, notwithstanding the severe penalties enacted against apostasy, a very large proportion of the people are, either openly or covertly, dissenters. If born outside the province of the orthodox church, all well and good, there is no need of concealment; but if a convert from orthodoxy, peace and security from imprisonment is usually secured by bribing the priest to make out false certificates of communion, which are, so to speak, "religious passports." This the apostate has to get renewed every year, as every peasant does his civil passport from the police. Selling false eucharistical certificates to backsliders from the established church is said to double the income of many parish priests in southern Russia.

All dissenting sects are known as heretics. The more numerous are the Stundists and the Molokane, or milk-eaters, so called because they drink milk on fast days. In riding across the steppes of the Ukraine and the Crimea, I used to stumble upon the villages of these dissenters, as well as of German colonists. The most curious thing to me and the point I wish to explain is that you could tell a German or a sectarian colony as far as you could see it, on account of the vast difference between its surroundings and those of an orthodox moujik village.

Only a few miles across the steppe, on the same soil, and with no advantages or favors from nature, you reach a village that seems to belong to another country, or to an age centuries ahead of the one you hav just left. The houses are built with some pretense to architectural beauty; they are painted white and roofed with red tiles. The windows, which in the orthodox villages were broken, stuffed with rags or covered with dirt, are as clean as in an American house. Each house stands in a flower-garden, neatly fenced, and avenues of trees are along the streets. Here, too, if it is harvest time, you will find the peasants owning a threshing-machine and other modern appliances for saving time and labor. Hitherto, though you may hav ridden on horseback all the way from Moscow, you hav seen nothing but flails and rude stone rollers for threshing, and the grain has been winnowed by tossing it in the air on windy days.

The secret of this tremendous transformation is that you hav reached the colonies of the sectarians who hav pulled their necks out of the yoke of the monopolistic church. When I first reached one of these clean and prosperous villages, after several weeks' experience among the orthodox, my eyes were gladdened as at the sight of an oasis in the desert.

I was alone, a stranger and a foreigner, unable to speak the language beyond making known my wants. My companion and interpreter had returned to Moscow. As I expected, I was received with suspicion. For all they knew I might be a secret agent of the government coming among them for sinister reasons as spy. These sectarians dread an agent of the government more than the evil one himself.

I showed them my American passport, which puzzled them and seemed only to add to their suspicions. At length, however, I was taken in. The house was as scrupulously clean as a house in Holland. Shining brass candlesticks stood in the broad window-sills, and flower-pots full of plants gladdened the eyes and added to the cheerfulness of this model interior of a cottage. Everything that could be polished was bright, everything of linen as white as soap and elbow-grease would make it.

For supper I had white bread and fried eggs, cold milk, and the only eatable butter I had seen since leaving Moscow. In the province of Ekalerimollav there is a maxim applied to a careful housewife: "She is good, like a Molokani wife." At night I slept between clean, sweet sheets, a luxury that I had given up all hopes of ever enjoying in a Russian village. Though they treated me in this highly acceptable manner, the residents, however, never ceased to regard me with suspicion. They positivly declined to talk about themselvs, though it is fair to presume that I might hav had better success in drawing them out had I been equal to a less disjointed way of asking questions. They were Molokani—Russians, in no way different from their slovenly, ignorant orthodox brethren, except in the difference that had been brought about by their emancipation from the slavery of a medieval church. The contrast between the two was so striking and so sharply defined that the only night I spent in a sectarian village is among the most vivid impressions of the ride across Russia.

Every traveler in Russia has noticed this same difference between the sectarian communities and those of the orthodox peasantry. It admits only one explanation. The orthodox moujiks of Russia are at the present day, in spite of the vaunted emancipation of the serfs, the veriest slaves that were ever chained to the earth. No negro in the United States was ever owned and exploited as is the average orthodox peasant of Russia to-day. He is owned jointly by a pair of hard taskmasters of which one exploits his body and the other his soul. Of personal, political, or religious liberty he is as destitute as he was when he was a serf. If now and then one peasant of exceptional brains and energy manages to better his condition, thousands are materially worse off than they ever were before. The moujik has simply changed masters. The knout has been taken from the nobles and placed in the hands of the tax-collector. And the latter, having no personal interest in him beyond exacting Cæsar's tribute, often spares him less than his former master did.

His spiritual master, the orthodox church, instead of sending him a benevolent, religious gentleman for pastor, spiritual teacher, and guide, who would teach him temperance and morality, and cheer and encourage him in the hour of adversity, saddles him with a knavish servil, who encourages him to drink vodka, and bargains like a horse-dealer with him over the price of baptizing his children.

Ten chances to one if he ever had a copy of the scriptures in his hands in his life. And if he could read and was found by his pastor with a copy in his possession the precious gentleman would very likely cause him to be thrown into prison as a heretic and a dangerous person, or still more probable, would demand a bribe for omitting to do so.

If by some extraordinary freak of human nature the pastor should happen to take interest enough in his work to preach an occasional sermon, before he may deliver himself of a word of what he would say he has got to write out his sermon and submit it to the blagotchinny, a sort of ecclesiastical spy and censor. It is unnecessary to add that this worthy takes very good care that no light shall penetrate the darkness of the moujik's understanding by the channel that he controls.—Thomas Stevens in the World.

Lectures and Meetings.

"RATIONAL Anarchy," will be Mr. A. G. O'Shea's subject at the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East Fifteenth street, Friday evening, January 2d. January 9th, Miss Ada Campbell will occupy the platform.

MR. W. F. JAMIESON writes: "Our friends hav come to our rescue splendidly. We need no further loans; and I send this at once to notify Liberals to send me no more. Detailed report will be sent soon."

ON Sunday, January 4th, at 3 P.M., at Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South Second street, Brooklyn, E. D., before the Philosophical Association, Dr. L. G. Janes will dissect "Mr. T. B. Wakeman's Philosophy." The debate after the speech will be confined to the two gentlemen named. On the following Sunday Mr. John R. Charlesworth will speak at the same place.

J. E. REMSBURG has returned from his Western tour. He made a journey of over ten thousand miles, visiting Nebraska, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, Idaho, Wyoming, Texas, Arizona, California, Oregon, Washington, British Columbia, and Chihuahua. He delivered from one to five lectures in each of the following cities and towns: Victoria, B. C.; Portland, Ore.; Seattle, Wash.; Tacoma, Wash.; San Francisco, Cal.; Los Angeles, Cal.; San Diego, Cal.; Ogden, Utah; Albuquerque, N. M.; Aspen, Col; Glenwood Springs, Col; Albion, Ida.; Almy, Wyo.; San Bernardino, Cal.; Monterey, Cal.; Santa Rosa, Cal.; Colusa, Cal.; San Miguel, Cal; Merced, Cal; Snelling, Cal.; Tulare City, Cal.; Hornitos, Cal.; Michigan Bluff, Cal.; Lemoore, Cal.; Hanford, Cal.; Norwalk, Cal.; Santa Ana, Cal.; Forest Grove, Ore.; Silverton, Ore.; Coburg, Ore.; Buckley, Wash.; Slaughter, Wash.; Coalville, Utah; Kamas, Utah; Grand Junction, Col.; Canon City, Col.; Yuma, Col.; Boulder, Col.; Minden, Neb.; Gibbon, Neb.; Alexandria, Neb.; Humboldt, Neb.; Greenville, Ore; Logan, Utah.

The Picture Book, Cloth, $2.50; Boards, $2.

Many purchasers of the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" having expressed a desire for a cloth binding for it, we hav arranged to satisfy the demand, and for an additional fifty cents will send it in silk cloth, gold and black lettering. Illuminated board covers, $2. In either style of binding it is the cheapest book for the money among Freethought publications. It is also one of the very best.

No Evidence of the Supernatural.

The propensity to investigate source being endemic to the human race, it is obvious that from this small germ sprang all the precious fruits of reason and science.

Enlightenment, liberty, and morality, and their concomitant, happiness, in their respectiv stages of advancement were, and are, most highly developed where science has predominated over superstition and its train of ignorance, apathy, degradation, cruelty, and general inutility.

All knowledge is the result of observation and investigation, prompted by doubt or mental ambition.

Notwithstanding the fact that during two centuries of activ and profound research into all tangible forms of matter, both terrestrial and firmamental, not a vestige of evidence of the existence of hell or heaven, demon or divinity, or immortality has been discovered; and mythology, confuted by its own antinomies, has been doubly refuted by history and logic.

Although science has enlightened millions of the mentally oppressed, and greatly mitigated the barbaric rigor of all religions by exposing their fallacies, atrocities, extortions, usurpations, and universal despotism, there yet remain populous masses swayed and subjugated by the pernicious sophistry of that counterfeit science, theology.

Consecutiv government constitutes one of the many recent theological innovations in sophistical argument. From the fact that, in the animal kingdom, certain lower grades of creatures serve as prey to other genera in the ascendency, this latter order being likewise subservient to another, still superior, the successiv subordination extending to the climax, man, to whom all living beings are auxiliary in some respect, direct or remote—from this precedent some theologians endeavor to establish a continuity of government, by the absolute creation of a dominant agency, other than nature, still paramount to man.

However, in the chimerical attempt to demonstrate the subjection of man to an incorporeal power, conformably to this false theory of analogous dependence, they only manifest the incompatibility of the distorted rule by abruptly founding a limit to its perpetuity in the person of God. The subordination of vassal to master, subject to sovereign, is no criterion of analogous extension. In expanding the limit to a hypothetical being and there terminating that finite rule which they apply to the infinit, the sophist renounces his own sophistry.

If the theory of successiv option and control of nature be extended to the supernatural, it then becomes relevant and applicable to the supernatural factors; and it is equally as logical to infer that earth's dynasties of kings and subjects, lords and vassals, are duplicated among the aristocracy of heaven in an eternal line of Gods, co-eternal, yet ranking singly and consecutivly higher in authority.

Such is the plasticity of theological speculation that its identical principles may be applied to their own refutation; thus overthrowing theology with the very weapons of its defense.

Not in this instance alone are theological principles self-destructiv; but likewise in their perverted application of the theory of evolution do they limit that illimitable process by which they endeavor to establish an ideal soul and its intangible attributes. All who explicitly comprehend the theory of evolution recognize the impossibility of immortality. Not vegetable, animal, and human life alone, but worlds and systems of worlds are alternately composed and disintegrated by nature's ceaseless process of continual and gradual mutation. No scientist has yet discerned immortality of any substance in one phase of existence. Evolution implies successiv composition and decomposition, consecutiv life and death. But immortality signifies an existence wholly anomalous to, and independent of, this rule; therefore immortality would necessitate a direct violation of nature's cardinal and immutable law. "Consistency is a jewel"—indigenous neither to mythology nor theology.

The endeavor to revive the declining prestige of the Bible by the self refuting sophistry of spurious logic and science, is obviously heterodox, inasmuch as the sciences are strictly secular institutions, owing their origin and sustenance to Infidelity. The use of heretic means in defense of religion, and the adoption and application of Agnostic sciences to the enhancement of superstition, are a libel on honesty and consistency.

The modified precepts and corrupted dogmas of Christianity, its antiscriptural innovations, its reliance upon Materialistic and Atheistic sciences to effect its spiritual ends, its extension of the prohibited limits of toleration, its numberless infringements of orthodox canons, and other departures from the doctrins of Christ, its founder, prove modern Chrisianity to be Infidelity in disguise, or heresy in defiance.

Theology, i. e., the "science" of the unscientific, wherein is illustrated that marvelous mathematical problem, thrice one is one and once one is three, may be defined as a chaotic medley of orthodoxy and Infidelity, and, being divided against itself, can not endure.

What is so repulsiv to a sane mind as the dogma of self creation; which, analyzed, signifies that God begat, conceived, accouched, and nursed himself? Yet "believe or be damned," credulity or death! Long liv theology, that cherished "science" which soothes the sinner's anguish with the ecstatic consolation that non-performance of impossibility is rewarded by the torture of eternal agony!

The biblical character of God is hideous, more "infernal" than "divine." His theological attributes are incompatible, anomalous, and heterogeneous; and all the hypothetical phases of his existence hav proved inadequate to withstand the test either of science or unprejudiced common sense.

Eternity, infinity, omnific ability, omnipotence, omniscience, omnipresence, impeccability, magnanimity—these bewildering characteristics of the alleged God are not only, each and all, alternately affirmed and denied by the unholy scriptures, but are logically incapable of coeval existence in one individual being. The theological divinity is annihilated by the same code of theories by which he was invented. He alternately defends and criminates himself by his dictated documentary testimony; and human paralogy likewise subverts the very image which it essays to erect.

Conceding, for the purpose of antithesis, the infinity and omnipresence of God, the entire firmament, animals and man, angel and demon, heaven and hell, not only comprise his ubiquitous throne, but are component and inseparable elements of God—i.e., nature. Hence, mortals are likewise eternal, infinit, omnipotent, impeccable, etc., and in other and all respects co-equal and co-eternal with God. Otherwise God is neither infinit nor omnipresent, for omnipresence is absent from nothing and nowhere, and infinity includes every infinitesimal atom of substance and space. If God were immutable prior to the period of alleged creation, then at the inception thereof he forfeited that attribute, for creation entails action and action incurs change.

Concerning the Apologists and Reconcilers, if this immunity of transposing, distorting, and otherwise misinterpreting the numerous contradictory, ambiguous, and fulsome oracles of the sacred texts be accorded to theologians, cannot skeptics and dissenters utilize a similar system of hermeneutics in subversion of every creed and theory thus produced?

By the adoption of the theological ratiocination in secular matters, every falsehood and libel ever uttered by human lips could be similarly reconciled with absolute truth, to the utter extinction of discrimination between truth and error, morality and barbarity, justice and cruelty.

Should the advance and expansion of reason during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries be a plausible criterion of religious decadence, one-half century hence should record the epoch of dispersion of the last vestige of humanity's universal foe; of the deflection of annual billions of long-perverted revenue to legitimate channels; of the grand fruition of the noblest purposes of mankind, perfect peace and happiness.

M. L. SALTER.

Williams, Ariz.

Talmage's Folly.

Is De Witt Talmage insane or a natural-born fool, the offspring of a pair of fanatical cranks? He tells his congregation that they keep their religion hung up on the cloudy rafters of the sky. He makes no distinction—does not seem to hav any real saints that keep their religion here for every-day use as their master commanded them, feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, visiting the sick and imprisoned; but lumps them all together and accuses them all of keeping their religion hung up on the sky-rafters.

Is that the reason why poor widows put their children and themselvs to death to avoid the pangs of starvation? Is it the reason why sewing women in cellar and garret when a season of short work overtakes them are forced to resort to houses of ill-fame to eke out a miserable existence? It is not two years since a Philadelphia paper told us that in that city New York and Brooklyn women had become so short of work that they were flocking by scores to such places to avoid starvation.

Oh, if De Witt's congregation hav religion enough hung up on the rafters to purchase one five-cent loaf or a one-cent cracker, let them get it down at once, for there are scores of women and children in that city that are suffering the pangs of hunger every hour of their lives.

Until recently De Witt has held that God upheld the skies, but now he has relieved him of that tiresome duty and has got sky-rafters. Will he tell us all about those rafters? The other day I read of a stick of timber four hundred feet long and fifteen feet in diameter; and Mr. Reynolds, who is lecturing in the West, speaks in a late communication of seeing trees from five to twenty feet in diameter and three to four hundred feet high. This timber, large as it is, is less than a grain of mustard-seed beside the largest mountain, in comparison with what would be wanted for sky-rafters, provided rafters were necessary. Will De Witt tell us all about the rafters, giv us the dimensions of the timbers, where they grew, how he got them up there, and above all tell us what need there is of sky-rafters? Matter always existed and the planets are kept in their places or on their courses by attraction and repulsion among themselvs; and as there is no need of sky-rafters I would advise him to get them down as quickly as possible, and let the members of the Young Men's Christian Association saw and split them up for fuel for poor widows, instead of wasting so much time in playing ball and other sports, and then his hearers would hav nothing but imagination to hang their religion on.

In another sermon he says the weather-bureau has several times spoken of cyclones to come the next day; but when the day arrived the sun shone bright and all was pleasant with no appearance of cyclone. Why was that? Why, the cyclone struck a prayer and glanced off to punish a people that had not prayers enough to change its course. Think of that, reader! Of all the foolishness I hav heard or read from the pulpits, I hav found nothing more foolish than this. When a cyclone or fire destroys a theater, a museum, or other place of amusement, he calls it a judgment of God for their wickedness; but when his Tabernacle was burnt and his dupes began to talk about buying a larger lot and building a larger tabernacle, so that he could rake in more money, he called it a baptism of fire for the glory of God. De Witt has made a journey to the Holy Land and talks about the miserable, rocky, barren country as though he thought every stone was sacred enough to pave the streets of heaven. There is no end to his praise of that barren country. They say he brought home one of the stones to put in his Tabernacle. Why then should he preach any more against the heathen who worship stocks and stones? The heathen prove themselvs wiser than Talmage, for the stocks and stones that they worship will not harm them, while the God of Talmage is accused in his own book of pouring out his wrath and vengeance on his own children, and is going to punish a large portion of them with eternal torments because their great great grandmother ate one of his apples hundreds or thousands of years before they were born.

Reader, think of a cyclone striking a prayer and glancing off to some other place! Can all of the eighty thousand priests of the different sects in this country get up anything more foolish? If all the prayers that the human race has ever uttered to a supreme being were packed together, and if a musketo should strike the budget, instead of glancing off he would go through it without knowing it. No law of nature was ever yet suspended or turned aside by prayers, and never will be; and the sooner people stop praying to unknown Gods, and go to work to answer their own prayers by doing good, the better it will be for all.

J. HACKER.

Vineland, N. J., Dec. 16, 1890.

Taxation.

The American Secular Union is devoted, at least professedly, to the separation of church and state. Its headquarters and chief officers are in our Old Keystone state. Now is an opportunity for it to do some missionary work right at its own door. At the present time church property pays no taxes, and it is very probable that the next session of our legislature will revise our tax laws. And they need it badly enough. The committee on taxation made the report and drafted "Bill No. 1," "An act to provide for revenue for local purposes by taxation," etc. You will find in Section II, page 6, "Regular places of stated religious worship with the necessary curtilage appurtenant thereto, not exceeding five acres, and the furniture and musical instruments necessary for and used therein," shall be exempt from taxation.

Now is the time to work without delay if any good is to be accomplished. Petitions should be poured in upon our legislators, and proper literature sent to them to inform them properly upon this very important question. Many of our legislators take that paragraph as a matter of course without a thought, but if awakened at the proper time they would at least consider the matter. And even if the Secular Union cannot gain its object it will nevertheless open the eyes of many now blind and let some light unto the present benighted idolators. You will find in the same section as above, class 4, "Taxable: Horses and cattle, sheep and swine, wearing apparel, household furniture, and tools and implements used for the pursuit of a trade or calling," etc., shall be taxed. The rail-splitter shall hav his maul and wedges taxed. The woodchopper shall hav his ax taxed—yes, his pants and shirt and hat, and shoes if he doesn't go barefooted, shall be taxed, according to Bill No. 1. "But regular places of stated religious worship with" etc., with their millions upon millions, and steeples towering to the sky, with "all the curtilage appurtenant thereto," shall go without paying a cent of tax, so that the poor man may hav the more to pay—so that the prophecy may be fulfilled. Now is the time to act. Our legislature meets in a few weeks.

Mulberry, Pa. L. W. LIGHTY.

Poetry.

A Petition

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVS OF THE UNITED STATES.

Ye Senators who sit in state,
And make the laws to regulate
All sinners prone to desecrate
The Sabbath day,
We humbly ask in this petition,
To save such sinners from perdition,
You pass a law to force submission
To gospel sway.

(It may be well just here to mention,
The saints in solemn church convention
Resolved. decreed without dissension,
'Tis their belief,
That Sunday is a holy day,
When all should go to church and pray,
And drop a nickle in the tray
For their relief.)

The devil has stirred up of late,
In every hamlet, town, and state,
What may be termed a mortal hate
Of our class.
They do proclaim for gold we preach,
And disbelieve e'en what we teach,
Say "Every parson is a leech,"
Or else "an ass."

When Sunday comes (our holy "fake")
The ganders flock to field or lake,
The ducklings follow in their wake
For sport or play.
While vacant stand the empty pews,
The gospel's robbed of half its dues,
And ministers hav got the blues
For want of pay.

Now, what we want to right this wrong,
You make a law, and fence it strong,
Horse-high, pig-tight, also bull-strong,
'Twill be divine.
And if they seek to break the law
We'll make them feel the gospel claw,
And sell their beds, of husk or straw,
To pay the fine.

And having passed such resolution,
Engraft it on the Constitution,
And then apply the strong solution
To all complaint.
But still exempt the clergy class,
To field and flocks giv them a pass.
Put no stiff bridle on the ass
Or godly saint.

But let the donkey roam at large,
O'er all the herds giv him the charge;
Alone he'll steer the gospel barge
Through rocks of sin.
Giv him access to every fair,
For he might want to wander there,
His gospel gifts and grace to share
With those within.

Now all ye sinners, young and old,
Betake thee to the gospel fold,
And hear the sacred ass unfold
His holy brief.
How Adam, kicked from Eden's garden,
Without God's mercy, grace, or pardon,
With Madam Eve, her Dolly Varden
A single leaf,

Compelled to earn, by sweat of brow,
Their daily food, like horse or cow,
To either hold or draw the plow
To till the land,
And all because a wayward wife
Plucked apples from the tree of life,
Placed there to tempt and stir up strife
By God's command.

Ye "bunnies" skelping down the path,
Mind how you cut your Sunday swath,
Lest you incur God's awful wrath
Right then and there.
The gospel hawk is hovering round,
And soon he'll swoop along the ground,
And scalp thee like a hungry hound,
Leave hide nor hair.

Ye jumping squirrels on the tree
Mind how you take your Sabbath spree;
A gospel eye is watching thee
With direful threat.
He soon shall raise his gospel gun,
Spoil all your sacrilegious fun,
And Sabbath-breakers be less one,
Don't you forget.

Ye sheep and lambkins at your play,
You must not frisk on Sabbath day;
Get down upon your knees and pray,
Your fate bewail.
Go seek the shelter of some trees,
Get down upon your bony knees;
And if you cannot pray, just sneeze
And shake your tail.

Now, all ye songsters of the grove,
Ye bobolinks and cooing doves,
Leave off your Sabbath songs of love
And fly away.
Go seek some lone, secluded glade,
Where sunlight never enters shade,
And sulk like some neglected maid,
And spend the day.

Ye ducklings circling round the lake,
You must not light your thirst to slake,
Or make love to your favorit drake,
Or dive, or swim.
But hie thee to the gospel herd,
And hear extolled the holy word;
And, fluttering like a wounded bird,
Confess your sin.

Ye kine all browsing on the hill,
Or grazing by the gurgling rill,
'Tis Sabbath day. You must not fill
Your hungry maw,
But seek thee out some pile of stones,
Get down upon your marrow-bones
And spend the day in sighs and groans,
Such is the law.

And last, not least, that creature man,
Who dares our holy laws to scan,
And act out Mother Nature's plan,
Free as the air,
Bring him right swiftly to the cross,
Convince him that he hath a boss,
And make him feed the gospel hoss
A double share.

Thus shall the law the church sustain,
The church and law the priest maintain;
While all the land shall be aflame
With gospel light;
The state and church in one combine,
A holy trust, a pool divine,
While priests like rotten mack'rel shine
In moonlight night.

Washington, D. C. C. W.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the prices named.

"The Rich Man's Fool," is a thick paper-covered fifty-cent novel, by Robert C. Givens, published by Laird & Lee, Chicago. It is a wild effort of imagination, not unskilfully worked out, but padded to repletion with commonplace dialog and description. It may serve to amuse but has no real value.

The Dramatic Mirror publishes a Christmas number as pretty as colored inks and skilful presswork can make it. Portraits of some handsome actresses also appear therein, and many entertaining sketches by professional people, as those who amuse and instruct us on the stage are termed. Price, 25 cents.

The individualists will thank J. Madison Hook for putting their arguments into such compact and get-at-able shape as he has done in a little ten-cent pamphlet called "Human Rights," to which E. C. Walker, the publisher, has added a lucid Introduction. Mr. Hook has dug down to fundamental principles, and has produced a book which may be safely commended to the careful study of all who want to know what is right and why it is right.

"Shall the Bible be Read in Our Public Schools?" by Richard B. Westbrook, president of the American Secular Union, is the lecture he delivered at the Union's last congress at Portsmouth, Ohio. As we printed a large part of it in the report of the congress our readers know all about it. Dr. Westbrook has had it very neatly printed for the Union by the J. B. Lippincott Company, and we shall be glad to help circulate it over the country. Single copy 10 cents; per dozen, 60 cents.

"Agnosticism and Immortality," by Samuel Laing, and "Humanity and Dogma," by Amos Waters, are uncovered pamphlets issued by the London "Propagandist Press Committee" to spread the principles of Radicalism. The aim of the writers is to convert "by persuasivness rather than undue hostility toward the popular creeds." Both writers are gentlemen well known to English Radicals as scholarly contributors to the Agnostic Journal, and Watts's Agnostic Annual and Literary Guide, and their work is highly appreciated on the other side.

"Socialism vs. Individualism," is a report of a debate at Nottingham between Mrs. Annie Besant, Socialist, and Mr. Frederick Miller, of the Liberty and Property Defense League. The gentleman was placed in a difficult position, for there are few debaters so able as Mrs. Besant, but he seems to hav borne up well, though Mrs. Besant obtained the greater share of the applause. The debaters dwelt more upon the supposable effects of the two systems applied to England than upon their abstract principles, and the speeches therefore lose some of their interest to non-residents of England. The pamphlet is published by C. J. Welton, 42 Milton street, Nottingham, and would cost 10 cents sent here.

There was once a young man, of Congregational antecedents, who owned a yacht, but he found that yachting and church-membership were not compatible in calm weather; so he sold his yacht and bought a bicycle on which to ride to church. But so in love did he get with his Safety machine that he forgot the church, rode all over the town on Sundays, and finally started a bicycle store. We are reminded of this by receiving the Pope Manufacturing Company's Bicycle calendar for 1891, a very convenient calendar for the desk, adorned with texts showing the great advantages of owning a machine, either Ordinary or Safety. They can be had of the company at Boston. The name of the young man who was saved from the church by the purchase of the Safety is Smith, and his place of business is 1238 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn, where inquirers as to the fact of his conversion should apply. Conclusion: The Bicycle is a moral agent.

The story of American iron-making in the Popular Science Monthly is continued in the January number, with an account of the introduction of "Iron Mills and Puddling-Furnaces." Dr. Andrew D. White has one of his vigorous "Warfare of Science" chapters in this issue, entitled "From Babel to Comparativ Philology," in which the origin of the tower legend is given, and the history of the belief that Hebrew was the original language is traced. There is a paper on "The Peopling of America," by the eminent French authority, M. De Quatrefages. Garrett P. Serviss contributes one of his attractiv articles about the stars, describing "Star-Streams and Nebulæ," with an illustration. Professor Huxley writes on "The Aryan Question and Prehistoric Man," attacking the idea that the forefathers of the people of Europe and India must hav been one race, because they spoke one language. One of the Monthly's correspondents raises the question what basis science givs for moral conduct, and is answered in the "Editor's Table." Fifty cents a number, $5 a year.

Adam and Charles Black of Edinburgh, whose agents here are Macmillans, hav done a first-rate thing in projecting a series of small books on "Science in Plain Language." Two of these books now at hand are "Evolution: Antiquity of Man," and "Astronomy: Sun, Moon, Stars, etc." The books are what the name of the series implies, are written by eminent scholars, and will be found particularly useful to those who hav not access to voluminous text-books, yet desire to know what science says about so much of the universe as man can investigate. The two books named are by William Durham, F.R.S.E. The one on Evolution deals with Natural Selection—Origin of Species, antiquity of man, etc; Protoplasm—origin of life, etc.; Color—of flowers and animals; Movement—of plants. In this last division are some interesting data concerning carnivorous plants. The volume on astronomy contains papers on the Sun and Solar Energy; the Moon; Weighing the Sun and Moon; Size and Mass of the Earth; Planet Worlds and Suns; Fixed and Variable Stars; Star Clusters. Nebulæ, and Comets; Contents of Space; Formation of the Heavenly Bodies; Tides; Light; the Spectroscope. The price of each volume is 50 cents.

"Freethinking and Free Inquiry," a seventy-five-cent limp-cloth-bound book published by W. Stewart & Co., London, is the first part of a series of manuals to be devoted to sketching the outlines of a system of Rationalistic philosophy, as "Agnosco," the author, explains in the preface. Such a system, he says, will be based upon modern, scientific, and evolutionary principles, and may be regarded as a critical philosophy. Destructiv criticism has long been used with good effect in the cause of Rationalism, and, while the author admits the good work it has done and is doing, he believes that the time has come for Rationalism to make better use of constructiv criticism, for the purpose of building up society upon more reasonable lines than those of the past. It cannot be doubted that the application of scientific methods to the study of society and morals, and of evolutionary principles to psychology and sociology, and also to ethics, must hav a vast effect upon our ideas, not only of life and mind, but also of politics and morality; and the importance of a true method of criticism therein cannot be overlooked. This volume contains the analysis of Freethought per se, and of Freethought in science, politics, and religion. The synthesis is. Rationalism as a philosophy; the scope of Rationalism; Education. The summary of the work shows the author to be a disciple of Herbert Spencer.

Of the novel, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" Miss Susan H. Wixon writes: "This is the title of Helen Gardener's latest book. The matter is as meaty. interesting, and taking as its title. It is firm, strong, daring. It is unflinching for the truth. It is royal for the right. After one begins the reading of this book it is hard to lay it by until the last page is reached. It deals with facts as they are, in a firm, masterly manner. The idea that there is one code of morality for women and another totally different for men has long prevailed. Through the teachings of the Bible and the canon law, woman has been, and is still regarded, the slave and underling of man. Terribly has she suffered on this account. One by one the ecclesiastical chains are being sundered. This book of Miss Gardener's is one more ringing blow at the crumbling symbol of bondage.

"Many college boys will see themselvs in these pages. Fred Harmon and his scheming, but weak-minded mother, are types true to life. They are in every community. We shudder at Preston Mansfield's bestial father, yet his kind, in a degree, is far too common for the comfort and safety of women. As an offset to this class stands Harvey Ball, brave, honest, true—a self-poised, moral man. It is a relief to read his character.

"The book commends itself to the thoughtful attention of every intelligent person. It is prettily bound in paper covers, 257 pages, and the portrait of its bright and handsome author adds to its worth and finish. It sells at the low price of half a dollar."

"Roses and Rue" is the title of Saladin's latest volume, a handsomely printed and bound book of 256 pages, price $1.50. The title reveals the nature of the contents—the Roses are the sentiments of love and kindliness and good-will, clothed in words of beauty; the Rue the bitter, sarcastic, caustic arraignment of a false religion and hypocrisy which Saladin likes to indite. The book contains nearly forty "random notes and sketches," as the author calls them, but they are really word pictures. Saladin is a Scotchman and there is in all his writings a background of rugged mountains and inviting valleys—Scotch harshness with what he conceives to be error, and deep tenderness for loved friends and a loved cause. These pieces therefore express both sides of this character, to which is added a Carlyleian contempt for the thirty millions of England who bow before Mammon and a Ghost. Like Thoreau's "Week" and "Walden" it is a volume for the fireside and Sunday musing, to read again and again, and its resonant sentences will probably make the reader an unconscious plagiarist. The sketches hav no connection with each other, or anything else, yet a purpose runs through the book—the purpose to bring out the right and retire the wrong, to point out the follies of humanity and the feebleness of Christianity when brought into the court of common sense. They are sadly serious, contemptuously humorous, tenderly poetic, chivalrously passionate, and when Saladin goes upstairs to the golden bedroom prepared for such guests as he his biographer will find this volume a revelation of his character, and will hav little trouble in cataloging his virtues. Perhaps it is because these sketches "giv him away" so plainly that he selected them for a volume, for he is something of an Egoist, writing the letter I large, and like most pronounced geniuses gages the value of the world by its value to himself. His fellow-countryman, Carlyle, was a man of that sort, and it seems to be natural to Scotchmen, who are (it would be treason for us to deny it) of the salt of the earth. John Knox's God was but a vastly exaggerated Scotchman, a million times magnified image of himself, and he filled heaven completely.

The subjects of the sketches in "Roses and Rue" run from such weighty themes as "God in the Constitution"—American Constitution—to such topics as "Warts," and the man who can put them both into one volume and not become ridiculous may be pardoned much. And who but a man of genius could make an essay on Thomas Cats a pleasing, philosophical, and valuable contribution to the literature of science? Or giv to a king's mistress, "Fair Rosamond," a halo of purity compared to which the aureole about a messiah's head is impenetrable fog? Or pick a dying man of genius out of the gutter, and because he has sometimes written well put him into the pantheon dedicated to the gods? Nearly all of these sketches do marvelous things; they are masterpieces of art, and the common world will one day "discover" Saladin as it has discovered Thoreau. whose books no one read when he was alive, but are now in their double figure editions. We hav space for only a short extract, and choose a picture in Britain when feudal castles, crowded with collared slaves, brawling lords, and brutal men-at-arms, were English institutions, and wars with the Northmen were always on hand. Standing on the summit of Fairlie Castle, like an eagle on some isolated rock, this Scotchman dreamed back into the vanished past. "Gone were the lichens and the flaunting ragweeds and the great gnarled knees and elbows of ivy that clung to the gray stone and mortar of the time-defying walls, and round me were fire and gore; and banners tossed above me emblazoned with Scotland's ruddy Lion and Norway's sable Raven; the air was rent with yells, and the earth was riven with armed feet, and the sword filled with blood the furrows which battle had plowed in desperation and agony. Down went the Lion banner; my heart beat madly—I was a Scot and not a Dane, and over the gulf of ten centuries, swinging a battle-ax with the cry of 'Albanich! Albanich!—Scotland! Scotland!' I rushed single-handed against a forest of Norwegian spears. The clang and the grapple were over; the evening fell, and to feast on the dead the raven came from the field, the gull from the sea, and the wolf from the forest.

. . . . . .

"There was peace. In the sunlight the warder paced lazily to and fro on the battlements. Flagons jangled on the board, and hoarse voices sang of shipwrecks, and kisses, and swords. There was the whirr of the wheel as the women spun their lint, and the harsher whirr of the grindstone as the men sharpened their blades.

"I dreamed back to the olden days,
And knight and dame were there,
And the firelight of her father's halls,
On the curls of Fairlie Fair.

"And proudly Beauty's white breast heaved,
Nor valor toiled in vain,
And the glorious glow of the olden world
Lighted up the world again."

One can almost hear the minstrels singing the ballads, see the brutal old warriors draining their great tankards, and hear the rustle of the women's garments as they retire to permit the noble lords to drink themselvs under the big oak table. Taine has not done better.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - JANUARY 3, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ARTICLE ENTITLED

"ANENT SPOOKS: WHERE ARE THEY?"

By THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

What Kills the Leagues and Unions.

Recently we received a letter from the secretary of a "Liberal League," an unofficial and private letter which we are inclined to print as text for a little sermon, withholding the name of officer and town:

"Why do you not publish more books and pamphlets on economic subjects? Those are in great demand these days. 'God' is pretty well dead in the higher circles of reformers in this city and even in the churches, and now the aspirations of men religiously free are seeking physical liberty and justice. Only a year and a half ago I was highly conservativ, and studying for the ministry; to-day I am an honored member of the 'League' and working for full freedom.

"Affectionately, ——."

Accompanying this was the notice of a lecture to be given before the League (which we should hav printed had it arrived in time) upon a subject as foreign to the objects of the League as would be a discussion of the filioque clause of the Nicene creed before a tariff reform club.

In the first place, there will be found in THE TRUTH SEEKER bookstore about all the books and pamphlets on economic subjects that hav been issued by anybody, and the genial business manager will be happy to supply the secretary with any one of them at the regular price, with discounts suited to the quantity purchased. Human endeavor to reform the world politically is as laudable as any reform effort, and THE TRUTH SEEKER, so far as it can without neglecting its own cause, aids it, while not pronouncing for any particular reformatory scheme. Education on all subjects is our motto. We can furnish literature Socialistic, Anarchistic, Nationalistic; books on Land Reform, the Farmers' Alliance, Political Economics, or Malthusianism; on Free Trade and Protection, as well as essays on Physiology, Sexology, Hygiene, and Physical and Mental Training. We can furnish arguments for Prohibition, High License, and no License. In short, we are Reformers, with a big R, from the front door to the roof of the editorial sanctum, and ask that people investigate every subject under the sun, because by investigation of facts and by logical thinking thereon is the world shoved ahead, and civilization and happiness and justice promoted. The human race, averaging it up, means well; it is ignorance due to the low estate from whence it came that has got it into such a deep hole of misery.

But—and we hav said this a good many times—we believe the most vital point of reform is to free men's minds. Until that is done, nothing else can be done. Our correspondent's statement implies that until "God was pretty well dead" with him he did not attempt to do much reforming. Does he think he is the only one in the world in the same condition? Shall the work of Liberalism stop because he is no longer studying for the ministry? It occurs to us that there are a few hundred thousand people in his own state with whom God is not "pretty well dead," and who might be benefited by a perusal of the columns of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

As a matter of fact, however, is "God pretty well dead?" We wish we could think so, but the facts are the other way. Creeds are crumbling, churches are becoming liberalized in their tenets, people are thinking—there is no doubt of that, but what are they doing withal to achieve justice between man and man? Whatever it is, it is only that they may hold their congregations. If we were publishing only for the few with whom "God is pretty well dead" we might well devote more space to economic views; but we are still doing pioneer work in the mental field.

"Seeking physical liberty" are they, and so there is no use of killing superstition? But is there no room, no opportunity to labor for physical liberty in promoting Liberalism? Wait. Go back three or four years, go out twenty miles from where our correspondent writes, and there see a man on trial for denying the Christian religion and in danger of a dungeon. Is our correspondent's state so physically free for heretics that he can afford to fold his arms and do nothing to educate the people out of their superstition? Is even he free to do what he pleases now on Sundays? Can he afford to ignore religious tyranny when the church closes his city up one seventh of the time? What economic tyranny is there that does this?

We cannot see the wisdom of Liberal Leagues deserting their colors and flying off to "economics" till the battle is won—and it is not won by any means, and never will be won by lectures on the politics of foreign countries and the discussion of dreams. One victory, or half victory, over fanatics who try to imprison for heresy is of more value in achieving physical liberty than all of these. And generally it is because no practical work is undertaken that leads to splits in Liberal Leagues and Secular Unions. Doing nothing engaging all their energies, they find time to quarrel over theories impossible of realization. A case in point is a League in a neighboring city. For years it was devoted to lectures and discussion, discussion and lectures, discussion, discussion, discussion! Then it began on "economics," and the Economists had the floor; nothing but Socialism or its opposit was heard. The Freethinkers grew as tired of that as the Economists had of the discussions on Jonah and the whale. The League was divided; the Economists, who had not been able to maintain a separate organization, brought in their followers, and took possession. The Freethinkers formed a Secular Union, and there are two societies now, and the "schism" weakens both. Scores of Leagues hav been killed in just this way—too much discussion—no aggressiv work—indifference—death. If this League had grappled with the questions of "physical liberty" presented in its own city; if it had gone to work for some one—any one, or all—of the Nine Demands, there would hav been no opportunity for the clash of opinions which finally disrupted it. "Satan finds some evil work for idle hands to do," runs the saying. The devil in this case was Discord, but he would hav been killed had the League done instead of discussed.

With the Catholics overrunning our politics, the Protestants taking one day every week from the people, and both dipping their hands clear to the elbows in every state, county, and almost every municipal treasury in the land—with taxes on productiv property swollen by unjust exemptions—the Bible forced into almost every school in the land—heretics deprived of civil rights in our courts—men imprisoned for not observing the church's holy day—it seems to us a poor time for discussing "iridescent dreams." Work, and not economics, is needed; and the harder the Leagues and Unions work for the objects for which they were formed the less opportunity for division will there be.

But if they deliberately set out to propagate Socialism or Anarchism they should not call their organizations "Liberal Leagues" or "Secular Unions." The constitution of the American Secular Union and the Nine Demands of Liberalism do not provide for such propagandism.

Good Work—Push It, Texans!

The San Antonio, Tex., Secular Union has "buckled down to business," as the secretary puts it, and is endeavoring to repeal the Sunday laws of the state, so far as they require the observance of Sunday as a religious institution. Petitions hav been printed and sent to all the Freethinkers the Union knows, who are urged to obtain signatures, and thus show the lawmakers that Sunday laws are considered by a large number of Texans to be obnoxious and unjust. The following is the text of the petition:

"To the Honorable, the Twenty-Second Legislature of the State of Texas:

"Realizing the pernicious evils that hav blemished the history of the nations of the Old World, by the combining of church and state, and fully appreciating the sublime wisdom of the founders of our country in their unmistakable condemnation and inhibition of such an evil,

"Therefore, We, the undersigned citizens of Texas, would most respectfully represent that nothing is more obvious than that all Sunday laws contained in our statute books are infringements upon our liberties and natural rights, as defined by our fathers and clearly set forth by them in the Declaration of Independence and Constitution of the United States, and we would most respectfully petition your honorable body to repeal all laws requiring the observance of Sunday as a religious institution, or tending to that end."

The petition should be circulated for signatures, and then sent to the representativ in the legislature at Austin, of the district in which the signers reside, before the last day of February, 1891. Copies may be procured of the secretary of the Union, Otto Praeger, 262 East Commerce street, San Antonio. We unite with Mr. Praeger in asking that every Freethinker in Texas take an activ interest in this work.

No Bible and But Little Religion in Chicago Schools.

The Protestant women of Chicago some time ago inaugurated a movement to restore Bible reading in the public schools of that city, a practice discontinued because of Catholic opposition. They prepared petitions to the Board of Education, held public meetings, and used the Protestant churches to help along the movement, which a few weeks ago appeared formidable.

The board, however, has unanimously refused the prayer of the petitioners. The report on which the vote was based said simply that the committee on school management, after hearing the arguments advanced in favor of Bible reading, had carefully considered the subject, and decided that for the general welfare of the schools the petition ought not to be granted.

Chicago leads the large cities of the union in this reform. There are two puritanical notions which the Catholic church opposes practically—Bible reading in schools and a blue-law Sunday—for which Freethinkers can commend her. That she does it for selfish ends is true, but the result is more justice and freedom for the community.

But the exclusion of Bible reading is not all of Chicago's reform, if Professor Swing is accurate. In a recent sermon he lamented that from year to year the religious pages hav been eliminated from readers intended for use in the public schools. He makes this statement:

"Thirty-three years ago McGuffey's Reader contained one hundred and one pieces in prose and poetry, thirty-three of which were religious. In his sixth Reader, published recently, but seventeen of the one hundred and thirty-eight pieces pertain to religion, wit and humor taking its place. Children laugh more and muse less. This religious sentiment is lessened still further in a recent fifth Reader, which has only four religious pieces in one hundred, and in a popular fourth Reader there is not a religious piece. In an elegant fifth Reader of a great publishing house of to-day five out of ninety chapters are granted to religion."

Instead of complaining that religious pieces are omitted from the Readers, Professor Swing might devote himself to showing why there should be any religion in public school books. And instead of inveighing against "money-making men [meaning school-book publishers] who pander to the Materialism of the times," he should use his whip on the shoulders of those who seek to poison youthful minds with superstitious teaching, who use the schools as nurseries for their creeds, and who steal the public funds to pay for propagating falsehood. It is a burning shame that so necessary an institution as public schools should hav been so long perverted to the benefit of a religion which is neither reasonable in itself nor beneficial to its believers. Less religion and more morality; less theology and more humanity, are what children need to be taught.

Law and Religion.

A Christian prosecution, mention of which was made in these columns some time ago, has, we are glad to say, fallen through. It was in Missouri, and Seventh Day Adventists were the victims. The Fayette Banner, of that state, in its issue of December 3d, reports:

"William Fritz and Robert Gibb, members of the Seventh Day Adventist church, near Armstrong, this county, were indicted at the August term, 1890, of the Howard county circuit court, for what is called in the indictment Sabbath-breaking. Fritz was accused of plowing in his field, and Gibb with hauling a load of hay, on Sunday. The parties were arrested on the indictment, and put under bonds to appear for trial on Dec. 2, 1890, at our circuit court.

"On the first day of December, 1890, the parties by their attorney made the following plea to the indictment:

"'State of Missouri against Wm. Fritz:

"'Indictment for Sabbath-breaking.

"'In the circuit court of Howard county, November term, 1890.

"'Now comes the defendant by his attorney in the above entitled cause, and moves the court to quash the indictment against him for the reasons: Said indictment does not charge any offense or crime against the defendant under the laws of the state of Missouri. Said indictment fails to allege that defendant is not a member of a religious society by whom any other than the first day of the week is observed as a Sabbath, and that defendant does not observe and keep such other day as his Sabbath. Said indictment is based upon Section 3,852, revised statutes of Missouri, 1889, which section of law is religious legislation, and is, therefore, in conflict with Sections 5 and 7, Article ii, of the constitution and bill of rights of the state of Missouri, and violates the rights of conscience of defendant and of the people of this state.

"'Said section of the statutes of the state of Missouri, and said indictment are in conflict with the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and also with Section 2, Article iv, of the Constitution of the United States, which guarantee to all persons the equal protection of the laws. JAMES H. ROBERTSON,

"'Attorney for Defendant.'

"On Tuesday morning, December 2d, when the judge called the criminal docket, the prosecuting attorney arose and dismissed the cases against said Fritz and Gibb, so that they were not brought to trial."

The dismissal of the indictment was probably due to the fact, somehow overlooked by the procurers of the indictment, that the Missouri Sunday law exempts from penalty for Sunday breaking "any person who is a member of a religious society by whom any other than the first day of the week is observed as a Sabbath, so that he observes such Sabbath."

The Picture Book in Canada.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of November 29th it was related that the customs collector at Napanee, Ont., regarded the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" as of "immoral character," and had therefore seized two copies of the book directed to Mr. John Herring of that place. Mr. Herring's letter to the commissioner of customs at Ottawa, protesting against the seizure, was also printed.

The books were detained on November 3d, and it took the customs officer at Ottawa until December 12th to make up his mind as to the merits of the case. On that date he wrote to Mr. Herring as follows:

"CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT, OTTAWA, Dec. 12, 1890.

"SIR: Referring to the seizure of books made at Napanee, Ont., on the 31st day of Oct., 1890, as per my letter of notification to you of the 3d November.

"Having examined and weighed the evidence presented by you or on your behalf as per file No. 4,601, 1890, in rebuttal of the charge preferred against you in connection with said seizure, I hav reported thereupon to the Hon. the minister of customs as required by section 179 of the customs act. Upon such report the Hon. minister of customs has rendered his decision, in effect as follows, viz.:

"That the seizure be released on payment of the duty required by the tariff. Though he considers the officer was justified in making the seizure, which said decision is final as respects this department."

This is a sensible enough decision, but on what ground, if the books should not be detained, was the officer justified in making the seizure?

The Catholic Church.

We are glad to note that there is one religious editor who understands the methods and knows the objects of the Roman Catholic hierarchy, and at the same time realizes that his church is doing very little to oppose it. Jim Buckley, D.D., is no fool or fanatic, but a level-headed bigot who works all the time for Methodism and Mr. Buckley. In the last Advocate he quotes some advanced figures of the new religious census returns, furnished by a Seventh Day Baptist of Plainfield, N. J. There are, it appears, some one hundred and thirty-one distinct sects in the country, nearly all of some variety of Protestantism. Seventy-eight of them are included in this table:

	No. of Sects.	No. of Members.
Methodists	18	4 747.130
Baptists	15	3,974 589
Presbyterians	13	1,259 034
Lutherans	1	1,056 000
Congregationalists	1	475 608
Episcopalians	2	459.642
Reformed	3	277,732
Unionistic	2	270 000
Unitarians	7	206,500
Adventists	7	119 212
Mennonites	4	100,000
Quakers (Friends)	3	83,930
Universalists	1	38,780
Moravians	1	11,219
Total	78	13,079,576

The Catholics claim ten millions in addition to this, but Protestant statisticians allow them only 8,012,970, made up by counting all their constituency, including baptized infants. To this estimate Dr. Buckley adds these significant remarks:

"But when it is remembered that the Roman Catholic church forms one solid army, animated by a common purpose, subservient to leaders, usually delivered in a mass to whatever party will further the ends of the hierarchy—while Protestants are without organization and scatter their forces—it is clear that eternal vigilance is demanded as the price of liberty from priestly domination."

This is a true summary of the situation. The Roman Catholic church knows what it wants, knows how to get it, and is getting it. Money and power—money to use to get more power to get more money to get more power to get more money to get more power, and so on till the whole United States is in her clutch—these two things sum up her wants.

We wish all editors recognized this, and possessed the backbone to say it.

What Irish "Home Rule" Means.

In the struggle between Parnell's candidate for Parliament for Kilkenny and the church's candidate the conduct of the priests was such that the election may be vitiated. They marked ballots for voters and led them to the polls, having first made campaign speeches from their altars. They were overbearing, insolent, and tyrannical, and commanded their voters as the chief of a band of robbers would command his gang of thieves. They hav been utterly lawless and worked under the direction of their superior church officers. "It is difficult," says a report of the election, "for anybody who has not been in North Kilkenny to even imagin it. Aside from any political considerations their conduct has been a disgrace to any civilized country. It has surely hurt the Home Rule cause, for it shows what Home Rule would mean were the priests allowed any voice in public affairs."

This is just what might be expected, and just what we hav said for years. Home Rule means Rome rule, and a degradation for Ireland a hundred times more abject than now. She would belong to the church, body and soul, and be a nation of children.

An Object Lesson for Taxpayers.

A pretty good object lesson for the taxpayers of New York was the burning of St. Bernard's Roman Catholic church on West Fourteenth street last week. The parish is a big one, the church requires the services of four priests, and the building was heavily insured, as the bishop did not hav implicit faith in their Lord.

The interior of the church was burnt out, but by the efforts of the firemen the flames were stopped then, and the parsonage was saved. About a dozen engins were occupied nearly all day, costing the city hundreds if not thousands of dollars. The building cost $150,000; the lots are worth as much more, but the church never paid a cent into the treasury of the city which saved it. There it has stood for years; in prosperity a deadhead, in adversity a beggar for aid without which it would hav been entirely destroyed.

There are some hundreds of churches in this city just like it and thousands upon thousands throughout the country.

T. L. GRIGSBY, of Napa City, Cal., sends to Freethought a petition to open the World's Fair on Sundays containing five hundred names. Mrs. Sarah J. Metgter, of Ellsworth, Kan., sends one to THE TRUTH SEEKER with eight hundred and sixty signatures. Next week we will print her letter describing the fun she had in getting them.

ANOTHER messiah has come. This time he is a negro and his local habitation is South Carolina. Will not some Koch of comparativ religions turn his attention to discovering the bacillus of messiahship and also a remedy for the disease? It is becoming as epidemic as consumption, and about as fatal. Sitting Bull was one of its victims.

BY an advertisment in the Melbourne Liberator we learn that the Australian custom house authorities regard "An Open Letter to Jesus Christ," by D. M. Bennett, as too bad to be admitted to the sacred precincts of their country, and so hav "stolen and burnt" it. Mr. A. T. Wilson, however, has reprinted it and the people of Melbourne are being supplied with all the copies they want.

NEW YORK is a cosmopolitan city in religion, sometimes too cosmopolitan for the heretical American victim. "I can't get anything fit to eat to-day," complained a housekeeper who livs on the east side, one day in the latter end of the week; "Friday the neighborhood is Catholic, Saturday it's Jewish, and Sunday it's Protestant, and you can buy nothing. The storekeepers hav to govern themselvs accordingly, and you see what you get." And the family made a meal upon cold meat and fish and wilted salad.

THE supreme court of Illinois sits in Springfield January 6th, and some time during the term it is expected that a decision in the case of Foster North against the trustees of the University of Illinois will be rendered. THE TRUTH SEEKER of July 30, 1887, gave an account of the facts in the case. The questions at issue were: 1. Can the University of Illinois legally compel attendance of a student at a place of worship? 2. Can a student be required to giv any reason or excuse for his non-attendance? If the supreme court decides these questions in the negativ—that a student cannot be compelled to attend or to excuse absence from worship—then the Bible-in-the-school question will be indirectly settled in that state. Illinois has a compulsory education law, and if children are compelled to attend school by statute, and by the constitution cannot be compelled to attend Bible reading and prayer, the Bible and prayer will hav to be dropped. Geo. Hunt, the attorney-general of that state, appeared for the university at Ottawa last October when the case was tried and raised numerous technical questions, but they were of a very weak nature, and were promptly overruled by the court. His briefs were in no sense up to the standard of the regulation brief on the church side of the question in other cases of like nature.

WILLIAM HART, the author of the "Candle from Under the Bushel," has met with a disaster terrible in itself and appealing strongly to the sympathies of his Liberal friends. It occurred through fire on the 20th, and leaves Mr. Hart wounded, with a helpless and injured family to support and but little to do with. Mr. Hart kept a jewelry store in Kirksville, Mo., and a local journal describes the accident. A large building adjoining his store was on fire, and Mr. Hart and his family began moving out his stock. They had been at work but a short time when a portion of the wall of the building fell on the roof of his building, crushing it down, which in turn crushed through the second story, and the entire wreck fell to the first floor, burying William Hart, Volney Hart, Mrs. Bunker, Fred Swett, N. D. Smith, and W. M. Price. Volney Hart was killed outright. Swett, Smith, and Price extricated themselvs after some delay and were given such medical attendance as they needed. William Hart and his daughter, Mrs. Rose Bunker, were fastened down with timbers so that their rescue was almost hopeless, but brave men worked faithfully, but knowing that the three-story wall with its tons of brick was liable to fall and crush them any moment. After more than a half hour's labor and suspense, Mrs. Bunker was rescued much nearer dead than alive. All efforts were then concentrated on rescuing Mr. Hart, whose calls for help could be heard by the hundreds standing in the streets but who were powerless to assist. He was found and the timbers and rubbish were removed, but to the horror of all it was found that a heavy timber lay across one ankle and it seemed impossible to move it. Stout men almost gave up in despair and many thought he would be burnt alive, but when it became evident that the timbers could not be raised so as to let him out, an inch rope was secured and some one tied it around the pinioned ankle and about twenty men took hold and by main strength pulled the foot from under the timbers and thus saved his life, but crushed the ankle, breaking the bone in three places. A number of men rushed into the building to carry him out, and were just at the door when portions of the wall fell with terrible force and piled up in great heaps where only a few seconds before lay Mr. Hart fastened to the floor with a dozen men near him working to save his life. It was known that Volney Hart was still in the wreck, but as no calls for help could be heard it was taken as settled that he was killed. Work continued until 6 o'clock, when his lifeless body was taken out. It was found that the head was crushed, and the physicians gave it as their opinion that death was instantaneous. The body was removed to the residence of his parents, where his father, William Hart, and his sister, Mrs. Bunker, were struggling between life and death. A sadder sight, says the Kirksville paper, was never seen in Kirksville and seldom anywhere. Mr. Hart loses nearly all his stock, is terribly crippled, and has his own family and his widowed daughter-in-law with four children to support. We suggest that the Liberals of the country buy his book and thus help him out of the trouble. The volume is worth more than the fifty cents asked for it, and those who do this deed of kindness will never regret it. It may be ordered of William Hart, Kirksville, Mo., or at this office.

Letters from Friends.

WACO, TEX., Dec. 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Do not stop my paper, as I do not like to go withcut it. I hav been a reader of it since Mr. Bennett's trip around the world. JOE PHILLIPOWSKI.

DELAND, FLA., Dec. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav taken the paper since 1877 without interruption, and hav always been satisfied with the stand it has taken in everything, and so had no cause to wish it stopped. Yours fraternally, H. A. BOLEY.

PORTVILLE, ILL., Dec. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It is a good evidence that one is pleased with the paper and the way it is managed, that he has subscribed for it for the last fifteen years, as I hav done. In fact, I hav no advice to giv about the management of THE TRUTH SEEKER at all. It suits me well enough. With good wishes for your success and all concerned, I remain,

Yours truly, J. L. BROOKS.

HUNTINGTON, VA., Dec. 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" is certainly a gem of a book, and every Liberal's home is not complete until he has purchased this one piece of furniture. So now, Brother Freethinker, go and do likewise before it is too late.

A word to Brother John R. Charlesworth: If you find "God," hold him until the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER gets there, because he will write him up for us Freethinkers.

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty, FRANK EVANS.

ELM SPRINGS, ARK., Dec. 6, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav changed geographical location, but still enjoy the freedom of the TRUTH SEEKER family. I left Champlin, Minn., November 20th. The meeting of friends and relativs on the way whom I had never seen makes the social world seem grander. Here amid springs of purest water that form babbling brooks, fruit to satisfaction, and a warm climate, then, grandest of all, with friends who hav dropped the cruelty of imprisoned minds, I am content, to say the least. With hopes for our cause, C. E. BIRD.

CHICAGO, ILL., Dec. 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Again I find it my duty to renew my subscription to the invaluable paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER. I also send you a new subscriber, a member of the German Turner society and a gentleman in every respect. He at once appreciated the value of your paper, and with but few words handed me the yearly subscription. I hav taken your paper for about three years, but each and every copy is as new and interesting as the first. Let the people all express their ideas. It is the only way to truth. Wishing success to subscribers, Editor, cartoonist, and contributors of THE TRUTH SEEKER, I remain,

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty, JNO. C. SPRING.

FARMINGTON, UTAH, Dec. 14, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed $10—$5 on subscription to paper; $2 50 for the picture book, cloth binding; $2 for the American Secular Union; twenty-five cents for the "Agnostic Annual, 1891," by C. A. Watts; for the balance send leaflets as you may choose, suited to create a doubt in the Mormon's mind of his so-called divine church. The Mormons will read with eagerness the editorials in THE TRUTH SEEKER nowadays, touching religious liberty, as the political shoe is now pinching them to some extent. They seem to hav forgotten the day when they were the aggressors in the same business, that of religious persecution. They try to impress on the unacquainted mind that they hav always been consistent and just, while the truth is the Mormon church policy has not been an exception to all religious creeds to "rule or ruin" when in political power.

Yours for the divorce of church and state,

HECTOR W. HAIGHT.

ELLSWORTH, KAN., Dec. 2, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed $6.50 for subscription, a new subscriber, and books. I do hope the Liberals will organize a secret society. There are very many that probably would join a secret society who would not join an open society. We all know how fearful and timid very many people are about Liberalism. As for myself, it would not make the least difference, for I am accustomed to the jeers and gibes that are hurled against all who do not accept some sort of church creed. We hav had our full share of it here in Ellsworth, and I do not know but they might hav driven me into the church again if it had not been for the glorious TRUTH SEEKER, Freethought, the writings of John Peck and S. P. Putnam, and Heston's pictures. The choicest blessings of earth eternally and everlastingly follow them, is my fervent prayer. They are my companions, and I could choose no better. Those ennobling writings, how they hav cheered me in my lone old age!

SARAH S. METZLER.

DE SOTO, WIS., Dec. 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The report of the fourteenth annual congress of Freethinkers at Portsmouth, O., is worth all THE TRUTH SEEKER costs. It appears to me that if all of the human family could read and understand the objections formulated by the invulnerable Westbrook, why the Bible should not be read in our state schools, they would take the accursed conglomerate mass of putrefaction and old oriental mythology and dogmatism, and cast it into the flames—that it deals out to them. Read it for themselvs they will not and cannot—it being more popular to pay a fee to some authorized sky-pilot to tell and interpret it for them.

I find in all my travels a great many Liberals, a peculiar set of go-as-you-please fellows, who will not interest themselvs in anything but the almighty dollar. I hav given and loaned THE TRUTH SEEKER to many, hoping to find a subscriber for you, but no—they are too indifferent.

I want and must hav the "Pictorial Text-Book."

MARTIN FLEMING.

CAPRON, ILL., Dec. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $9 and credit it to Danforth Nettleton, as subscription for the grand old TRUTH SEEKER. Mr. Nettleton is nearly ninety years old, and quite feeble. He thinks Mr. Bennett one of the grandest men of his time. He was one of his Around the World subscribers. He thinks THE TRUTH SEEKER is the exponent of all truth, and takes great interest in its success. He is a very honest and large-hearted man, and very zealous for the spread of Liberalism. He says he wants THE TRUTH SEEKER just as long as he is able to read one, and he takes great pleasure in viewing the illustrations. He says that now he has paid you his arrearage on THE TRUTH SEEKER he has fulfilled every obligation he has pledged, and that he has outlived all usefulness, and desires to go on the retired list and take a long rest; that he does not fear God, man, or the devil, but can lie down and sleep in peace. He is thus another Infidel for whom death has no terror. W. I. FOX.

GRAFTON, WASH., Nov. 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5—$3 to apply on my paper that I commenced taking last February, and $2 for your "Pictorial Text-Book." I liv on the Stillagomish river, and in a new country. I stand almost alone with my Liberal views, and very close to a woman who belongs to the Salvation Army and who has told lies enough about me to sink her soul forever in her God's hell. I only say, "Poor, degraded, deluded woman, you demand my pity and not my anger." She has sunk to the lower level of falsehood in trying to injure my standing, and so far has failed. She is like all the rest of her kind—Believe as I do or I will ruin you if I can! But my life shall be above such filth and slums. Your paper I prize very much, for there is so much food for thought, and I shall continue to take it as long as I can raise $3. Wishing you success in your effort to raise humanity upon a liberal plane of kindness and justice to all humanity, Yours for light and liberty,

F. J. LILLIE.

MENEKAUNE, WIS., Dec. 3, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Each weekly issue increases my admiration for your valuable jewel casket of ideas, expressed with a spirit of freedom that lifts one's thoughts and feelings high above the conventional and hypocritical world round about us. "Truth is mighty and will prevail," and fears no investigation. Many friends who see your paper for the first time hardly know how to hold it, so scared are they of its Freethought expressions. The supernatural bogie has been held before their eyes so much that it has become part of their nature to believe anything, no matter how absurd, provided it has the sanction of the church behind it. Such papers as THE TRUTH SEEKER will soon cause the canting hypocrits to go to work and earn an honest living or starve.

I hav the pleasure to inclose $8 for subscription and the "Pictorial Text-Book" bound in cloth.

Do you exchange with our labor paper, the Voice of the People, Marinette? The editor has opened a free reading-room for our use, and I should like to see it on the table.

Wishing you every success, I remain,

Fraternally yours, WM. SMITH.

WAUMANDEE, Dec. 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I send you to-day a list of one hundred and fifty-seven names for having the World's Fair open on Sunday in 1893. I shall soon send more. Millions of names could be got if some one only would take time.

About the election in Wisconsin: It was not the Bennett law that made it Democrat, but the McKinley bill and tariff for protection. The Bennett law has not changed more than about five thousand votes. There are good points for and against. In the first place, there neither is nor was any necessity for a Bennett law, as the state of Wisconsin ranks among the first in education, and the school system was prospering before such a law. We hav a compulsory law, and if parents do not send their children to school under a compulsory law, they will nevertheless under a Bennett law. The English language is taught in all public and private schools, and the English language needs no protector. Another objection against the Bennett law is—if people hav a right to make laws to command us what we shall learn in schools, hav they not also a right to command us to read the Bible in the schools? This is one point that I should like to see met. The majority of people hav the power to pass laws, and the majority are bigoted Christians. Yours truly, WM. ULRICH.

WESTFORD, N. Y., Dec. 1, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please send me a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER of June 28th if you hav one. I left my paper on the counter in the store where I work, and a follower of Jesus tore it into bits as soon as he had discovered what it was. I had the satisfaction of agitating the saints three different times at Schenevus, my home. Mr. Washburn gave us two lectures, and Mr. Remsburg one at Schenevus and one at Worcester. I engaged these gentlemen and paid the greater part of the expenses incurred. The Remsburg lectures cost me over $25 out of my own pocket, including the pamphlets that I distributed after each lecture. The way I came to get in so deep was this: I made arrangements with Mr. Remsburg to giv us two lectures, one at Schenevus and one at Worcester, but God's people heard of the contemplated lectures and threatened a boycott on all who associated themselvs with the movement, and as they were all business men of Schenevus they "wilted" and wanted me to cancel the lecture, which I refused to do. Therefore I had to pay the bills. This town has four churches. All but one are struggling to keep on their legs. I am the only outspoken Liberal here, so you can imagin my position. I hav loaned and given away a good lot of "literature of the devil," which has made me quite notorious here among the nativs and caused many prayers to be offered up for the salvation of my soul. A salvation mill is going here now.

Yours truly, ORRA L. TIPPLE.

CULLMAN, ALA., Dec. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been a reader of your most welcome and valuable paper for quite a time, and I must say no better paper than yours ever found my attention. I am truly pleased with it, and every other sane man should take a copy of it. I hav had quite a number of arguments over religion, and I find most people to believe only part of what the Bible says and hardly anything the preacher says. But as to me, I do not believe what either one says. I am just like the girl's brother in the tale I am going to write you. The time this occurred was after a night meeting. A girl and her brother went there, and as church was over the preacher asked of the girl permission to escort her home, which she did not refuse, but said her brother was with her. "Well," he said, "Bud can ride my horse and we will walk." It was agreed, and the boy rode ahead. After getting quite a way ahead the boy thought he would stop to see what they were talking on, so he climbed a tree and waited. It happened to be when the loving couple arrived they both stopped under this tree, and there he hugged and kissed the girl. Now the girl took on over the sin, but the preacher said in a solemn tone, "The man above will fix all things." So the brother thought he was about to be implicated in the affair. He yells out loudly, "I won't hav a damned thing to do with it!"

Here is another good one: Why is a preacher like a mile-post? He shows the way but never goes there.

HENRY BETZ.

PORT HURON, MICH., Dec. 4, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: If your columns are not overtaxed with communications, we will beg space to giv the crank another turn upon the question of Freethinkers organizing. I favor a secret fraternal Liberal organization, which will bind Liberals together in a way nothing else will. I would favor both sexes being eligible to membership. Failing in a secret society for Liberals, I would like to see a society for Freethinkers organized on the plan of the Young Men's Christian Association, which society only admits to full fellowship members of evangelical churches. The Young Men's Christian Association has in most cities rooms containing parlors where one can while away an evening in pleasant company, with innocent games, a reading-room where most of the daily papers of the principal cities are kept on file as well as the leading magazines and reviews of the world, a gymnasium for healthful exercise, bathrooms, etc. A member belonging to any one local branch of the organization when away from home is received into the branch in the city where he is stopping and allowed as full privileges as he would enjoy where he is at home. I know numbers of young men who support that organization for the reading-room and bath privileges alone. I think if Liberals would establish such quarters they would be well patronized. They would strengthen the cause by making Liberals the world over acquainted with one another. Why should social and intellectual cheer, and conveniences for cleanliness, be monopolized by the churches? Besides, no Liberal literature is allowed in the Young Men's Christian Association rooms or in most public waiting rooms of our cities. If it was it would tend largely to cause many to be converted to our way of thinking. We ought to establish waiting-rooms where Liberal literature may be consulted, even for the missionary feature alone, to say nothing of the fraternal and social benefits we would derive from it. T. BALKWILL.

BLOOMDALE, O., Dec. 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I notice in THE TRUTH SEEKER of November 1st a letter from S. P. Benton, and in that of November 22d one from Wm. Allen, favoring the organizing of Freethinkers on the Independent Order of Odd Fellows' plan. Now, I will giv you my idea of that kind of an organization, as I hav been a member of the order for twenty-six years, and think I understand somewhat the workings of it. I will say that the original principles of it are good, and being carried out hav done much good in the world, notwithstanding the church denouncing it from every pulpit, which then made it necessarily a secret order. When it was first organized in the city of Baltimore, about seventy years ago, by Thomas Wildy, they had to hold their meetings in secret places, through fear of being annihilated by the church, but it marched bravely on, and when the church found that she could not break it down, but saw the good the order was doing, some of the sects began to speak favorably of it. But remember, at first it was called by the church an institution of the Devil, with a big D. Then some of the sects tried to work themselvs into the good graces of the order, so that their members, and especially the clergy, might join, and by so doing get in return some of the Odd Fellows to join the church. Their idea was to hav their church-members, and as often as possible their ministers, sent to the grand lodge and gradually work Christianity into the institution until it would become thoroughly Christian, and totally absorbed by the church. And the members of the order hav been too indifferent to see this point, so that the church has the order by the throat to-day. Now, I will say from past experience I am not in favor of a secret order for Free thinkers, for there is no place to draw the line for qualification to membership, therefore, as Harry Lee said, "Let the order go to thunder." The American Secular Union, and her Nine Demands carried out thoroughly, are sufficient so far as organization is concerned, but lecturers and literature should be encouraged and be scattered all over the world.

Yours, DAN WINELAND.

SOUTH OTSELIC, Dec. 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It is a source of regret that I cannot send $50 to help fight the battle against priestcraft, a battle that waxes warmer and warmer from day to day. I liv in a little town in a small district, where the people are rather more than half sectarian. Two churches rear their spires skyward, and over half the people—otherwise good—hav the ecclesiastical ring in their nose. The portion who are not orthodox in belief acquiesce with the churches just enough to make their Liberal views of no practical value. I am the only practical, outspoken heretic in our village of some four hundred inhabitants. I do not attend church. I pay neither obeisance nor money to the priest. I do not attend the monthly meetings of the Ladies' Aid Society for Foreign Missions. I do not allow my boy to attend, nor contribute to the schemes of the churches to get money for Christ's sake, nor facilitate in any way the various Baptist Jumbo shows that succeed each other rapidly from one month to another, to the end that some bellowing priest may liv on the people another term.

Our public school, which has two departments and over sixty pupils, is infested with the orthodox mummeries. My boy was marked tardy because he stood outside until the Bible readings and prayer were over, but was promptly at his desk to begin his secular day's work. I, as modestly as I could, resisted this impious injustice, by requesting the teacher to simply confine his management to the line the law prescribes, by not making attendance upon the Bible readings compulsory. Myself being a minority of one in this important step, I found in one hour that I had trod upon the tail of the ecclesiastical serpent, and there were more pious lies told for Christ's sake in twenty-four hours than you can imagin. I am patient, quiet, and composed, trusting that my little maneuver will be the means of waking the people up to the fact that non-believers hav been paying for two and a half hours each week of religious exercises by Protestant teachers in school, while if a Catholic or Infidel should undertake to promulgate his views he would be shut up and compelled to observe the law at once. I rejoice to see this matter of ruling such nonsense out of the public school so often discussed in THE TRUTH SEEKER. I shall enter my written protest next term in case the mummery is begun, and will try to fight it out alone; although I am no fighter, only intellectually and morally for the sake of a principle of justice.

MAY PECK.

ADRIAN, MICH., Dec. 9, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: With all the missionary efforts made to civilize the Indians by Catholic or Protestant, they are still looking for the Great Spirit to appear among them in the form of a buffalo, which utterly repudiates the white man's messiah. Had they not been tampered with by the priest, or orthodox fallacy of piety, the disaffection existing now would hav never occurred. They know no power but nature—their idea of a Great Spirit. They were content with her manifestations. The recent reception of a Catholic priest to their secret haunts precludes confidence in the priests as teachers of good. The fact that the messenger, a Catholic priest, was distrusted, and only admitted menaced by Winchester rifles in the hands of his former pupils, shows conclusivly lack of confidence in the white man and his messiah and in the sincerity of the preacher. They were bad enough before they knew the cussedness and machinations of these stake-burning frauds. The barbarity of the red or black heathen bears no comparison to that of the followers of the God of the Jews. Jesus, the son of that brute and lecherous man David who performed his lascivious evolutions in public on a house-top. The Indian has ample provision made for his maintenance. If the government will prohibit the pernicious missionary foolishness among the red devils, and disarm them, national troops will not be necessary except to keep out white disturbers. The murderous red devils had no business with Winchester guns. They are fed and cared for better than Uncle Sam's white paupers. The Indian, with all tutoring and trying to civilize him, is still a savage. No amount of palaver concerning his future estate will change his savage nature. He knows but two laws, nature, and the white man's arbitrary law of force or compelling obedience. The first is inherent; the latter is force made to operate immediately upon his actions. This he recognizes, but bucks against such handling with all his savage nature. You cannot Christianize or civilize him with any kind of success. He is far more worthy, however, than those trying to convert him to Catholicism or orthodoxy. Both doctrins are chimerical and originated in superstition and ignorance. There never existed such a messiah as is taught by the propaganda, nor can one be produced in any form. Poor Lo has just as much proof that a messiah appears in the form of a buffalo bull as there is proof that there will be a resurrection morn. There are some things poor Lo should be made to understand—that he will not be allowed to support his lazy carcass off the industry of his thrifty neighbor; that he will not be allowed to own or carry a Winchester rifle and shoot his fellow-mortals without sufficient provocation, but he may chastise a so-called spiritual adviser if he be found cheating him; finally, that if he does not reform his bloody instinct we will waft him to St. Peter's ranch. There let him caper, whoop, and dance, and hunt the buffalo.

O S. BARRETT.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' HOME, QUINCY, ILL., Dec. 10, E M. 290.

MR. EDITOR: In compliance with the solicitations of my friend Mr. Balaam Hull, I now attempt to write a few words of praise in reference to those valuable books he has received from the Truth Seeker Company. After having given them a careful perusal—he being kind enough to loan them to me—I think he was either very judicious or extremely fortunate in his selection, and I scarcely feel that my ability is commensurate to speak with appropriate encomiums on efforts so deserving as those of the authors of those noble publications. However, with this apology, that the Soldiers' Home is rather inert, I proceed to what I conceive to be my duty. "Men, Women, and Gods," by Helen H. Gardener, breathes the highest sentiments of moral courage, devotion to principle, love of truth, disdain for superstition, admiration of the present, hope of the future, displaying sledge-hammer logic and humor, with occasional flights of model satire and ridicule, with repartee scarce surpassed by Colonel Ingersoll himself. It is a monument to the lady, an ornament to her sex, and an honor to human nature itself. "The Ungodly Women of the Bible, by an Ungodly Woman"—I think the title could well and appropriately bear reversing. She has left no point unraised, no breach undiscovered, no vice unreproved, no virtue unapplauded. "The Age of Reason," though an old publication, in many respects has never been surpassed, and no Freethinker should fail to fortify himself with the soul-inspiring ideas of its heroic universal savior. "The Apocryphal New Testament" embraces a much wider range of detail, a more exaggerated account of miraculous intervention, and slightly more contradictory legendry, than the gospels claimed by orthodoxy. It is wonderful that they hav been voted out. Billings's (M. E.) "Crimes of Preachers in the United States" givs us a striking example of the consequences of the Christian religion. It is a solemn warning to villains and hypocrits. "The Eye Opener" is very appropriately named, being an extensiv research, showing the historical, chronological, astronomical, prophetic, geographical, and a few of the grammatical errors of the Bible, disclosing the erudition of the author and the ignorance of the so-called inspired writers. "Errors of the Bible," by Henry C. Wright. This is an elaborate, able, scathing contribution, proving conclusivly that the Bible is corrupt in its morals, false in its laws, cruel in its requirements, barbarous in its demands, and an outrage to human justice. "The Holy Bible Abridged" is a searching treatis, showing the barbarity of God's command, the cruelty of his chosen people, their lack of decency—a splendid legacy for the clergy. "John's Way," by E. D. Slenker, is a splendid romance, showing how a little courage, united with justice, benevolence, and intelligence, will overturn superstition. The Koran, the Mohammedan bible, although claimed to be a forgery, is certainly far more moral and decent than the Christian Bible. "Pro and Con of Supernatural Religion" is a most valuable work, written by an honest, able conservativ, who drives straight to the point, and consequently leaves the reader no ground of doubt.

EX-REV. JOSEPH N. MAXEY.

HOWICK JUNCTION, ME., Dec. 7, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Thirty-five years ago I left St. Chrysostome, six miles from here. Since that time I hav been all over the continent, working for my living, and occasionally moving wherever my services were required as station agent and telegraph operator; and after reaching the extreme limits of North America in all directions, here I am again within six miles of the place where I played marbles and where I was compelled to learn the Roman Catholic catechism—which took me nearly all this period of thirty-five years to unlearn again. So it took nearly all my life to become the free and intelligent man that, under proper circumstances, I should hav been at the age of twenty-five.

I hav not seen much of this place yet, but I do not think it has improved any since the day I left it. Financially the people are not extremely poor. So long as Taschereau, Mercier & Co. will hav a great surplus of land and timber to pilfer from and to stand as guarantee for the money they borrow, the people will sleep the slumber of peace. It remains to know what state they will find themselvs in when they wake up. Intellectually their state is appalling—I mean the Roman Catholics. The clergy can rob, abuse, and tyrannize over the people and make them say "Thank you." Two years ago a priest named Papin was accused of assaulting two women and a large number of young girls ten miles from here. He had been for years practicing these naughty tricks in the confession box, and might hav continued undisturbed to this day had he not tackled one little girl whose father was a Protestant. He moved against the priest, and then a large number of depositions followed. This man could not get a lawyer in the place to take the case nor a magistrate to issue a warrant. He had to go to Montreal. When the high constable came from Montreal the priest had disappeared. Three weeks later he was found in hiding at the rectory of Beauharnois and was arrested, but the case was dropped and the priest Papin simply removed to another parish. For proof of this I hav all the Protestant papers of Montreal, and my father, who was on the spot and saw it all, and yet I cannot find a Roman Catholic here to-day that ever heard anything about it.

Here I am surrounded by four men and two women, six all told, within a mile. One of the women keeps a hotel. Having no license, she breaks the law, but nobody objects. This lady having been too inquisitiv with me, I was obliged to reveal to her the horrible fact that I am not a Christian. She was thunderstruck. "I am sorry," she said, "but I hope God will hav mercy on you and bring you back to the fold. But," she added, "I wish you had not told me that. It hurts me. I know positivly there is a hell, and the fear of going there is wearing my life away." In fact, the poor woman is continually sick, and I believe this constant fear has very much to do with it. I tried to help her by trying to persuade her that God was much better than she imagined, and further said to her: "I know too well what pain is and how long is an eternity to run any risk of losing my soul if there was any danger of it. And further, if you knew all I know about religion, and understood as I do the policy of the religious order that stuffed you up with those falsehoods, your fear would soon vanish, your appetite and sleep would return, and you would soon get well again." "Oh," she exclaimed, "for God's sake, Mr. Laperche, don't speak another word about religion! You make me shudder! I don't know anything and don't want to know anything. It would not take much of this talk to kill me!" The husband of this wreck of superstition does not know a bit more than his better half, but is not so sensitiv. He told us what he considered the cause of his wife's great fear and consequent sickness. Four years ago a man went through this country exhibiting the picture of hell. My wife enjoyed a good laugh when this honest and simple fellow told with great demonstrations how Satan, with wings, horns, and tail, stands by the door of hell, which consists of a large number of big kettles all full of molten metal, and receives every damné (damned person) on the prongs of his big fork and pitches him into one of those big kettles. When my wife told him that the villain who exhibited this miserable picture ought to be arrested and severely punished, the poor fellow looked agape, and said this exhibition was given in the school-house and under the patronage of the priest.

Within a mile and a half of me there are five churches, one Catholic and four Protestant. With a population of about five hundred, one church might do for all the Protestants, but, as is usual with those good Christians, they want too much elbow-room to allow close packing.

One of the Protestant divines is in trouble. His son was arrested in Montreal last week for setting fire to the college where he was studying and destroying $40,000 worth of property, with the innocent view of hastening the Christmas vacation. This affords quite a merriment to the Roman Catholic portion of this community.

Yesterday afternoon the priest of Howick drove here with his housekeeper and another girl, and they all had a few drinks of gin at the hotel kept by the God and hell fearing woman aforementioned. I hold the information from a young man who had the honor of drinking with them. In the evening about 7 o'clock I was at this hotel, when up comes a team against the corner of the house, upsetting the sleigh over its occupants, who when picked up proved to be the same priest with the same two girls. They had found the hot gin very good, and cheap, as they paid nothing at all for it, and were coming for some more of it. There were six of us in the house when the priest entered with his fair companions. The good father, not suspecting the presence of a wicked Infidel, forthwith set to making hot slings for the ladies. When he turned to go and serve his fuming spirits, he looked surprised and somewhat alarmed on beholding a stranger. The hell-fearing landlady promptly advanced and presented Mr. Laperche, the station agent, to Father Papin. The reverend father expressed his great pleasure in forming the acquaintance, but the station agent had his doubts as to the reality of the great pleasure. Probably not favorably impressed by the attitude of a Freethinker, or not wishing to divide his pleasant opportunity with a newly made friend, he immediately retired to another room with his lady friends. Two services of hot gin had gone to that room when I retired. I did not hear how many times the sleigh upset on their way back. I would not criticise this priest were it not for the bad morals he teaches and the still worse influence of his conduct. I do not blame him for enjoying the good things of the world, but why not pay for his drinks as other folks do, and why not let his poor dupes enjoy likewise without suffering this continual pang of the damned? Why rob them of their money and their liberty and prevent them from prospering along with the rest of the world? Why make them the footstool of other people, for the selfish and dishonest purpose of fleecing them? The saving of their soul is a contemptible sham. There is not one priest in a hundred that believes in a soul. Their worldly conduct proves it. They know that to make the people intelligent and moral would destroy the priestly profession, the same as the lawyer knows that if the people were honest there would be no need of his profession and the doctor knows that the knowledge of hygiene would badly impair his.

The moral to be taken from the teachings of the Roman Catholic priest and from his conduct, is that the enjoyment of anything good is a sin, but that sin is inevitable, and that salvation depends on how much one does penance for what he enjoys, and especially how well he pays the priest. So the poor, wretched dupes never try to improve their principles, thinking it would be at least useless if not really impious to do so. And they never can enjoy peace of mind, not knowing if they hav sufficiently chastised themselvs, and paid the priest the full price of a ticket to that castle in the air, while they never lose sight of that fiery abode under them with doors agape and Satan's big fork ever ready to toss the latest arrival into one of those infernal vats.

The late Mr. Beecher said hell originated from a sour stomach. Mine must be getting sour, as I want a hell the worst way for the unprincipled hypocrits that do not balk at the ruination of a world when looking for the gratification of their own desires.

Yours for truth and justice, CHAS. LAPEROHE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The Family Clock Cracking Rhymes.

Lo! here I am, day in, day out,
Working with all my might.
Sometimes I feel as though I'd pout,
And die, as't were, outright.
And yet, if I am good to work,
All duties to fulfill,
At keeping time disdain to shirk,
Ah, then I fill the bill.
That is to say, I am "O. K."
My owner passeth me
And brags about me every day
For keeping time so free.
But if he fails to wind me up
And I refuse to go,
He says I am a "lazy pup,"
And blameth me, you know.
Although, in fact, it is his fault,
Forgetting me to wind,
I'm not to blame if I do halt
Or fractious seem inclined.
When all is right I tell the truth,
I loathe a wicked lie;
I gladly serve old age and youth
To time as it doth fly.
I never tire, by night or day,
But tick, tick, tick, I go.
Well done, indeed, methinks you say,
A dear good clock I know
To measure time each number'd hour
By striking on a bell,
Which thing to do I hav the power,
As I am glad to tell.
Sixty seconds in each minute
I'm bound to tick, you see.
Twenty-four hours a day hath in it,
And always so to be.
Sixty minutes each hour doth claim,
Fifty-two weeks a year;
And so it ever must remain,
I speak the truth sincere.

E. D. BLAKEMAN.

The Way Superstition is Perpetuated.

DEAR CHILDREN OF THE TRUTH SEEKER CORNER: I remember very well how some of the impressions made on my mind when I was a child remained with me for years. One time I was playing in the woods with a boy somewhat older than myself, and we turned some bark off an old log and uncovered a lot of snails. Said he, "Don't kill them; if you do, lightning will strike you." After that I always avoided hurting a snail, and the superstition lasted with me for years. I never see a snail now—and I am forty years old—but I think of that boy's foolish saying The same boy told me, if I killed a frog our cows would giv bloody milk. After that I always let frogs severely alone. In the same way I was told by my mother, and other older folks, if I did certain things the Badman (meaning the devil) would get me. So I was always careful not to do those certain things. I was told that the Badman was black, and was hidden in a dark hole in the ground, and had horns on his head. I remember how I thought he looked with hair all over his black sooty face. I could, at times, almost see his cloven foot and hear his chains rattle. That is the way the parents used to try to make their children good. Some people try that plan "even unto this day." So you see superstition is the first lesson that the average child gets at its mother's knee. And as impressions made on the mind of a child are the most lasting, so it is that superstition has such a strong hold on the grown-up people.

When I was a boy it was a favorit pas time for the older folks to collect at some neighbor's house in the country and spin long ghost stories, and tell what wonderful things the witches and wizards did in their young days. Of course the children were made to keep quiet and listen. When the story got interesting we crossed our feet, sat with open mouths, and gave our willing ears to those wonderful things done a long time ago. Were I to tell you one or two of those stories, you would laugh till you are sore. Just listen to it:

"I had a cow bewitched. The witch doctor told me to take some of her milk and put it into an iron stew-kettle and boil it on a fire outside the house. Well, I did, and as the kettle boiled it jumped full three feet high, but always came down on the fire right side up, until the kettle was boiled dry. I then took it off the fire and found it had a picture of a beautiful young woman in the bottom. I knew her the moment I saw the picture. I took the kettle and put it up against a tree and shot the picture with a silver bullet; the moment the bullet struck the picture that moment that woman fell dead."

Such was the character of the stories that children were entertained with in days gone by. Some were more laughable, but space forbids the telling of them.

I was advised to read the story of Samson as a very interesting tale for children, and one that would beget a love for reading the holy Bible—a thing much to be desired.

However, I soon lost all taste for the trashy affair. The story was too large.

And this is the way superstition is kept alive, by telling stories to the rising generations, from one to another, generation after generation. Not long ago I saw a book entitled, "The Story of the Bible." It was written especially for children, and read something like a fairy tale. I thought then how well the clergy of the country understood the art of keeping alive their gospel myths. Look at the jealous care they hav over their Sunday-schools. You will hear them talking of the seeds sown in the youthful minds. That is why they are crying so loud for sectarian schools. How well they know if their trash is kept out of the young minds that it will never get a hold on them after maturer years, when better judgment will be exercised in everything.

Yours for a happy life and Universal Mental Liberty, S. P. HERRON.

Gray, Ky.

Interesting Facts About Electricity.

The term electricity is derived from the Greek word electron, meaning "amber," because from amber the properties of what we call "electricity" were first discovered. Six hundred years before the Christian era Thales wrote concerning the attraction which amber when rubbed possessed for dry and light bodies. But it is to an Englishman named Gilbert that we owe the word "electricity," which he derived from the Greek, and in his works—about 1600 A.D.—he discusses the force of the so-called "fluid." Otto von Guerike, of air-pump celebrity, and many others after him, continued the investigation of the subject.

At the beginning of the last century great attention was paid to the electric machine.

The Leyden jar was, as its name indicates, discovered by Maschenbrock, of Leyden. Franklin made his first lightning discovery in 1769. Volta and Galvani, to whose invention we owe voltaic electricity and galvanism, and Faraday in more modern times, gave a great impetus to electrical science. The great part that electricity has been playing in the domestic history of the world since Faraday's death is probably known to the youngest of our readers. What the future of this agent may be we can only guess, for even now it may be said that electricity is in its infancy.

Composition of Coffee.

Coffee is the seed of the coffee plant, which is a shrub that will grow in any part of the world where the minimum yearly temperature never falls below 55° Fahrenheit. One pound of unroasted coffee beans or seeds contains: Of water, 1 ounce 407 grains; of sugar, 1 ounce 17 grains; of fat, 1 ounce 402 grains; of caseine (flesh-forming matter), 2 ounces 35 grains; of gum, 1 ounce 192 grains; of woody matter, 5 ounces 262 grains; of caffeine and caffeic acid (or stimulating principles), 400 grains; of aromatic or odoriferous oil, about 2 grains; and of mineral matters, about 1 ounce 32½ grains. The caffeine of coffee is exactly the same, both chemically and physically, as theine, the stimulating principle of tea. Both substances are alike composed of 10 parts of hydrogen combined with 16 parts of carbon, 4 parts of nitrogen, 4 parts of oxygen, and 2 parts of water.

The New Waiter.

"This coffee is so poor I can't drink it," said the guest.

"Just shut your eyes, put it out of sight, and don't say anything about it," was the reply of the new waiter, who was a humorist.

The guest did not make any reply, but when he came to pay he handed over to the proprietor of the establishment a solitary cent.

"Where's the rest of the money?"

"Just shut your eyes, put it out of sight, and don't say anything more about it. That is what your new waiter told me when I said the coffee was weak."

The new waiter tendered his resignation.

Correspondence.

BENJAMIN, UTAH, Dec. 5, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav heard mother and father read THE TRUTH SEEKER so much that I thought I would write a few lines to you. I hav been a Freethinker all my life. I think the Children's Corner is very nice to read. I go to school and read in the third reader. I study reading, arithmetic, language, spelling, writing, Child's Health Primer. My age is thirteen years. Please excuse my short letter, for this is the first letter I ever wrote.

Yours truly, LOUIE HONE.

[We hope this first letter of Louie's will be followed by many more. Tell us in the Corner all about the town, the climate, the kinds of trees, flowers, animals, etc., and why we should be kind, respectful, obliging, and affectionate toward one another.—ED. C. C.]

GRAY, TEX., Dec. 31, 1890.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: As I do not see any letter from this part of the state, I thought I would write one and see if it would be accepted. My papa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for about four years, and enjoys reading it and looking at the pictures very much. I liv about a mile and a half from Gray, where a post-office has been started.

Christmas will soon be here, and then everyone will enjoy themselvs, or I hope they will. I do not go to school now, but it is not because I am too large. I am not going to tell my age, but I am in my teens. Do any of the readers of the Corner like to ride horseback? If they do, come to see me and we will ride horseback together. As I am the only girl, and hav four brothers, I enjoy reading the Corner very much. I would like to exchange songs and crochet samples with some of the readers of the Corner. This is my first letter. If I see this in print I will write again. I would like to correspond with some of the girls and boys of the Corner.

Your friend, ROSA DINGLER.

[We hope to hear from Rosa again. Tell us about the town of Gray, the climate, scenery, people, schools, churches, and anything else that would be interesting.—ED. C. C.]

OAK MILLS, KAN., Nov. 15, E M. 290.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., Dear Friend: I again take pleasure in writing you a few lines, for I believe it is the best way that I can spend this dreary Sabbath day. It is Sunday, but the sun is not shining in this part of the "moral vineyard," as it has been raining all day.

I hav attended church several times lately, just for amusement. And it is amusement, too, sometimes, especially when the preacher is an "old hard-shell Baptist," or "a shouting Methodist," for some of them resemble monkeys very much, and a monkey can amuse anybody. It reminds me of a little story I heard not long ago. A lady took her little boy to church. He was a small boy and had never been to church before. All at once the organ began to play, and the little boy turned to his mother and inquired:

"What is that, mamma?"

"Hush, dear," said his mother; "it's the organ."

"An organ in church?" whispered the boy in a manner which showed he was somewhat astonished.

Presently the organ's notes fainted away, and a preacher, small of stature, stepped forward.

"Oh, look, mamma!" cried the boy in clear accents, "is that the monkey?"

I learned nothing new by attending church. It was the same old tale. The preacher put in his time teaching that the soul of man is immortal, and that a personal God is in existence. But he simply asserted, and that is all. He did not, and he cannot, prove his assertions. This is generally the way with these haughty "windbags," and there are hundreds of them standing in the pulpits of America to-day teaching the immortality of the soul and the existence of a personal God, and yet they cannot produce one iota of proof in support of their assertions. They prop their assertions on the Bible, but hav they proved that the Bible is true? No, they hav not, and they never will They are as utterly incapable of proving the divinity and inspiration of the Bible as they are of proving the immortality of the soul and the existence of a personal God. I wish they would all read Colonel Ingersoll's remarkable production on "The Gods."

I hav read Mrs. Colman's "Reminiscences," a beautiful little volume which we hav lately received from Mr. H. L Green, of the Freethinker's Magazine. It is a neat little book, clear print and extra good binding, and is well worth the price it is sold at. Every Freethinker should get a copy of it. Every page in it is exceedingly interesting. Mrs. Colman is a noble type of American womanhood, and we all should feel proud of her. I read your complimentary notice of the "Reminiscences" in the November number of the Freethinker's Magazine, and I heartily agree with you. In fact, I indorse all that has been said of this little work.

I read all your articles in the Freethought papers. They are all valuable and are worth reading. Keep on in the good work.

I am now a reader of Aunt Elmina's little paper, the Plaindealer. It is bright and interesting, and although it is not the largest and best paper published, yet it is splendid for its size. I advise all the young Freethinkers to send for it. I missed the Corner in the last TRUTH SEEKER very much. Wishing you unbounded success, I remain,

Your Freethought friend,
GEO. J. REMSBURG.

Miss Wixon's Works.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383pp., $1.25.

Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Giordano Bruno.

His Life, Works, Worth, Martyrdom, Portrait, and Monument.

With a complete list of the American subscribers to the fund for the erection of the monument.

BY

GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE, THOMAS DAVIDSON, THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN, KARL BLIND, LYDIA R. CHASE.

Single copies 15 cents; ten copies for a dollar.

LIFE OF Joshua Davidson:

MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,

As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.

BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,

Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

This book was suppressed by the first American publisher.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, - - $1.00.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE

UNIVERSE ANALYZED

BY JOHN R. KELSO, A.M.,

Author of "Deity Analyzed," "The Bible Analyzed," "The Real Blasphemers," "Spiritualism Sustained," etc., etc.

The latest and best work of an analytic thinker, who is gifted with those rare powers that render the subtlest conceptions the easy property of the ordinary mind. The book contains many ideas that will be new to the world and productiv of good in furnishing food for thought. We trust it will hav the immense distribution it so richly merits.—[The American Idea.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

How Can We be Saved?

Was Jesus Supernaturally Conceived, and Did He Rise from the Dead?

$100 Reward.

Paper, 10 cents. For Sale at This Office.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs by Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mas Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty.
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam Should Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Churches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportunity.
As the Clergy Desire Sunday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Our Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Church Institutions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Products of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religious Trap.
Sunday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
Encouragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Church's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Church.
The Church's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denounced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Church.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Drouth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Our Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janus-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Our Country, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conquest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Church of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Result of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Put their Sins.
Jesus Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for True Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxious Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occurrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Churchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossus of New York.
The Political Caliban and the ReligiousRogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Question.
The Churches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Trouble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Church, "Don't Hurt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Church True to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Church and State.

Some Allegories.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Outside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via. Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Surprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occupation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolution to Orthodoxy.
The Evolution of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crusade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams. D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths. A. Bierbower, M. Babcock. Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway. Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought. Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener. Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe. Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach. Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll. President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, Percy Bysshe Shelley. Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills. Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster, Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

TRUTH SEEKER LIBRARY.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. The Biographies of three hundred of the most distinguished teachers and philosophers (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. By D. M. BENNETT. 1,075 pages. 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4,00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. Biographical sketches of prominent Christians. A companion book to "The World's Sages," etc. By D. M. BENNETT. 8vo., 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Vol. I. givs a full account of all the gods the nations of the earth hav worshiped, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 835 pages, 8vo. Vol. II. describes fully all the religious systems of the world, including Judaism, Mohammedanism, and Christianity; the latter occupying 372 pages, going fully into its merits. 949 pages. By D. M. BENNETT. Written in prison at Albany. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

Supernatural Religion. An inquiry into the reality of divine revelation. Decidedly the most thorough and exhaustiv work on the claims of supernaturalism ever written. By F. W. NEWMAN, Emeritus Professor of the London University. 1,115 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $4.00; leather, $5.00; morocco, gilt edges, $5.50.

The Great Works of Thomas Paine. Including The Age of Reason, Examination of Prophecies, Reply to Bishop of Llandaff, Letters to Mr. Erskine, Essay on Dreams. Letter to Camille Jordan, The Religion of Deism, Common Sense, The Crisis, and The Rights of Man; the whole preceded by the Life of Paine, and a steel-plate portrait. 800 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco; gilt edges, $4.50.

Analysis of Religious Belief. An examination of the Creeds, Rites, and Sacred Writings of the world. By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY, son of the late Lord John Russell, twice Premier of England. Complete from the London edition. 745 pages, 8vo. In cloth, $3.00;

The foregoing volumes are called "The Truth Seeker Library." If all are ordered together and sent by express, one dollar will be deducted from the price of each.

B. F. UNDERWOOD'S WORKS.

FOR SALE AT THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE,

Essays and Lectures. Embracing Influence of Christianity on Civilization, Christianity and Materialism; What Liberalism offers in Place of Christianity Scientific Materialism; Woman; Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint; Paine the Political and Religious Reformer; Materialism and Crime; Will the Coming Man Worship God? Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity; the Authority of the Bible; Freethought Judged by its Fruits; Our Ideas of God. 300 pp., paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Influence of Christianity upon Civilization. 25 cents.

Christianity and Materialism. 15 cents.

What Liberalism Offers in Place of Christianity. 10 cents.

Scientific Materialism: Its Meaning and Tendency. 10 cents.

Spiritualism from a Materialistic Standpoint. 10 cents.

Paine the Political and Religious Reformer. 10 cents.

Woman: Her Past and Present: Her Rights and Wrongs. 10 cents.

Materialism and Crime. 10 cents.

Will the Coming Man Worship God? 10 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. 10 cents.

Twelve Tracts. Scientific and Theological. 20 cents.

Burgess-Underwood Debate. A four days' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. BURGESS, President of the Northwestern Christian University, Indianapolis, Ind. Accurately reported. 188 pp. Paper, 50 cents. Cloth, 80 cents.

Underwood-Marples Debate. A four nights' debate between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Rev. JOHN MARPLES. Fully reported. Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 60 cents.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds. 10 cents.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.

PRICE, TEN CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photographs of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By DR. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

THE

French Invasion of Ireland in '98.

Leaves of Unwritten History That Tell of a Heroic Endeavor and a Lost Opportunity to Throw Off England's Yoke.

By VALERIAN GRIBAYEDOFF.

With a map and numerous illustrations by well-known artists. Handsomely bound in silk cloth. Ink and gold side stamps. Price, $1.50.

The present volume is an effort to rescue from comparative oblivion one of the many extraordinary episodes of the great French revolutionary war. . . . It points a moral that amidst republican institutions like ours, will not fail to receive appreciation. It shows, on one hand, the elevating influence of newly acquired ambition, . . . and on the other the debasing effects of Religious and Political intolerance both on the tyrant and the victim. Contains a heretofore unpublished letter of Thomas Paine to the French Directory.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.

With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

RELIGION OF MAN

AND

ETHICS OF SCIENCE.

BY

HUDSON TUTTLE.

A Historical and Critical Review of the Religion of Man.

CONTENTS: What is Religion? Fetichism. Phallic Worship. Man's Moral Progress Dependent on His Intellectual Growth. The Great Theological Problem. Man's Fall, and the Christian Scheme for his Redemption. Man's Position, Fate, Free Will, Free Agency, Necessity. Responsibility of the Individual. Genesis and Evolution of Spirit. The Law of Moral Government. The Apostles. Selfish Propensities. Love. Wisdom. Charter of Rights. Duties and Obligations of the Individual. Duties and Obligations of Society. Rights of Government. Duties of Society to Criminals. Duty of Self Culture. Marriage. Cloth; price, $1.50.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS

OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

The Agnostic Annual

FOR 1891.

Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS.

An Agnostic View of the Bible.....Samuel Laing.
Fundamental Theses of Agnosticism.
R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
Agnosticism and the Church of England.
Amos Waters.
Avatar, Come! A Poem.
Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Instability of Faiths.Hon. C. K. Tuckerman.
The Iron Hand Under the Velvet Glove.
G. J. Holyoake.
Practical Religion.....Charles Watts.
The Cinerary Urn. A Sonnet.
Author of "Cæsar in Egypt."
The New Anglicanism.....B. Russell.
Androgynous Gods.
H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
Is Agnosticism Sound?.....Paul Carus.
"Is Agnosticism Sound?"
Saladin (W. Stewart Ross)
The Poems of Joseph Ellis.....Mirabeau Brown.

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I hav kept a SCRAP BOOK for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long too long to publish, some are short and good Rainy days I sit down and read them, and hav learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEX., Sept. 28, 1886.

To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four legged for six years. At last I hav traded off two of them to Bell—druggist—for four bottles of Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited, J. B. IVY.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

FESTIVAL OF ASHTAROTH.

A tale of Palestine, founded on the destruction of the Moabites by the Jews.

By A. C. MIDDLETON.

Price, ... 10 cents.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 1
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

MAGIC LANTERNS AND STEREOPTICONS afford the best and cheapest means of object teaching for Colleges, Schools and Sunday Schools. Our assortment of Views, illustrating art, science, history, religion and travel, is immense. For Home Amusement and Parlor Entertainment, etc., nothing can be found as instructive or amusing, while Church Entertainments, Public Exhibitions and Popular Illustrated Lectures— did Holiday present. PAY WELL. An instrument with a choice selection of Views makes a splendid We are the largest manufacturers and dealers, and ship to all parts of the world. If you wish to know how to order, how to conduct Parlor Entertainments for pleasure, or Public Exhibitions, etc., for MAKING MONEY, send us your name and address on a postal card (naming this paper), and we will mail you our 208 PAGE BOOK FREE.
McALLISTER, Manufact'g Optician, 49 Nassau St., N. Y. City.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

The downcast eyes of timid acquiescence hav paid to impudent authority the tribute of a thoughtless yes.—R. G. Ingersoll.

CONTENTS.

A Splendid Judge of a Woman.
The Lady of the Club.
Under Protest.
For the Prosecution.
A Rusty Link in the Chain.
The Boler House Mystery.
The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors.
Florence Campbell's Fate.
My Patient's Story.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

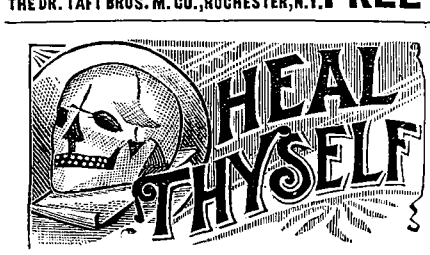
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

DROPSY Treated free. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases pronounced hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. TEN DAYS TREATMENT FURNISHED FREE by mail
DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, Atlanta, Ga.

WETTSTEIN'S

WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof. 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17 50; 15 jewels, $18.50: do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $ 5. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,



New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN. Rochelle, Ill.

ASTHMA—CURED DR. TAFT'S ASTHMALENE never fails; send us your address, we will mail trial BOTTLE
THE DR. TAFT BROS. M. CO., ROCHESTER, N.Y. FREE

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales, SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.
124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7.30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, COBA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J.F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union
Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.
FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society
Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Portsmouth, O., Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7 P.M. in Grand Army Hall Lectures, discussions, readings, poems, music and songs. A cordial invitation is extended to all; especially to friends from abroad. Correspondence solicited. J. L. TREUTHART, President. WILL S. ANDRES, Secretary.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

News of the Week.

RENEWAL of the Louisiana lottery charter for twenty-five years passed House and Senate but was vetoed by the governor. The House then passed it over his head, but the Senate refused. The point being raised that the governor could not veto a constitutional amendment, as this was, the case is now before the Supreme Court.

THE Brazilian government is refused recognition by Russia, Austria, and Germany.

GENERAL BOOTH of the Salvation Army has received $450,000 for reclaiming "Darkest England."

ELECTION of a cardinal as the next pope is at hand, and France is anxious that one friendly to the republic be elected.

CATHOLICS in Germany support the government in its heavy military expenditures, which are disapproved by Radicals, and the government in return tolerates religious orders.

ANN EAYNOR, of New Haven, Conn., on the morning after Christmas was found dead kneeling by her bed with hands raised, having been struck dead in prayer.

AN instance of the tendency of ecclesiastical rule to encroach on civil, appears in practices of Jewish rabbis of New York, now exposed. They hav been in the habit of selling divorces.

ON the 28th ult. Big Foot's band, of 120 braves and 250 women and children, surrendered near Wounded Knee Camp, but were unwilling to giv up their arms. At an attempt to disarm them they fired, and a conflict ensued in which Captain Wallace and several soldiers, and most of the Indians, were killed.

PASTEUR says he has himself discovered not merely a cure of tubercular diseases, but a preventiv, though it will be months or years before he can elaborate and publish it.

JOHN STOCKBRIDGE, of Raton, N. M., who strangled and beat his mother to death, says he was trying to get the evil spirits out of her and all his chastisements were for her good.

IN Italy there is much suffering, and even starvation, as a result of the high taxes necessary to maintain military forces sufficient to defend from other nations and the papacy.

PREMIER MERCIER of the province of Quebec has introduced in the legislativ assembly a bill conferring on all church organizations power to take possession of land for building purposes.

GERMAN Catholics deemed their sufferings ended with Bismarck's removal, but now Minister Van Gossler has introduced a bill to secularize all schools, not only in instruction but in administration.

ROMAN CATHOLICS in Italy propose the formation "of a Catholic Italian parliament as a counterpoise to the Masonic and foreign parliament," as they style the legitimate parliament of the nation.

IT is reported that the prime minister of Queensland has declared in favor of establishing an Australian nation, under an Australian parliament with all the powers now held by the British Parliament.

STANLEY is lecturing in the West. He lards his deliverances with Christian cant. He speaks ill of Emin Pasha because he suspects he is an Infidel. In writing of a dwarf race of Africa Stanley intimated disbelief in Darwinism.

AT Wichita recently, masked men, supposed to be Farmers' Alliance men, ejected three loan company's tenants from farms that had been sold by the sheriff in foreclosure, and reinstated the original owners. In some places loan companies apprehend a coming war.

FRANKLIN, Pa., is indignant at the whitewashing of Rev. Euclid Rogers by the Baptist church of Burlington, Ia., where he went on being dismissed from the former place. In Franklin he was charged with lying, financial crookedness, improper conduct with a young woman, engaging himself to marry another lady while living with one wife, and assaulting his wife.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3: leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Gems of Thought.

UNBENDINGNESS is an indication as frequently of unsoundness as of health.—Landor.

AN obstinate man does not hold opinions, but they hold him.—Pope.

SCIENCE enables man to answer his own prayers.—Ingersoll.

DAVID COMFORTETH BATHSHEBA.

And David comforted Bathsheba his wife.—2 Sam. xii, 24.

EACH disaster is a factor in man's education; and experience will, in future ages, lead to his triumph over evil. The loss of life in burning buildings, instead of leading us to implore God to avert such disasters in future, teaches us to use new precautions against fire and make improved exits. It is a great relief to feel that we are not under the disciplin of a ruler who is to be propitiated by our mental exercises, but to know that the forces that now control us are merely teaching us how to become their masters. —Robt C Adams.

IF you take this life to be simply what old religious folks pretend (I mean the effete, gone to seed in a drouth, mere human galls stung by the devil once), then all your joy and serenity is reduced to grinning and bearing it. The fact is, you hav got to take the world on your shoulders like Atlas, and put along with it. You will do this for an idea's sake and your success will be in proportion to your devotion to ideas. It may make your back ache occasionally, but you will hav the satisfaction of hanging it or twirling it to suit yourself. Cowards suffer, heroes enjoy. After a long day's walk with it, pitch it into a hollow place, sit down and eat your luncheon. Unexpectedly, by some immortal thoughts, you will be compensated. The bank whereon you sit will be a fragrant and flowery one, and your world in the hollow a sleek and light gazelle.—Thoreau.

WHIMPERING and truckling fold with powders for invalids, conformity goes to the fourth-remov'd,
I wear my hat as I please indoors or out.
Why should I pray? why should I venerate and be ceremonious?
Having pried through the strata, analyzed to a hair, counsel'd with doctors and calculated close,
I find no sweeter fat than sticks to my own bones.—Walt Whitman.

MATTER . . . is eternal and unending. The earth, the dust, every created thing indeed perishes; but we cannot say that that perishes out of which they are created. Substance abides eternally. A thing falls into dust, but out of the dust is developed another. The earth, as Pliny says, is a phenix and remains once for all. When it becomes old it burns itself to ashes, that out of them a young phenix may arise. the former, but rejuvenated.—Sebastian Frank.

WE submit the proposition that the universe in its entirety is eternal and self-existent.—Edgar C. Beall.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 2. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY. { New York, Saturday, January 10, 1891. } 28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

THE RUBBISH IN THE CHILDREN'S PATH.

Notes and Clippings.

THE superiority of the moral fiber of the feminin sex to that of the masculin is again shown by the report of the board of police justices of this city for last year. According to the report, the number of men (85,069) arrested for violations of law was more than three times as great as the number of women (19,091). The statistics printed by the board, says the Sun, are helpful to the formation of opinions upon several questions that are often brought under debate.

THE Christian Union says: "Our readers will recall Prof. Booker T. Washington's statement, in an article in the Christian Union some time since, declaring in general terms the ignorance and immorality of a large proportion of the colored preachers of the South. We now find in the New York Age a letter from Bishop Payne of the African Methodist Episcopal church. He says: 'I say emphatically that not more than one-third of the ministers, Baptist and Methodist, in the South are morally and intellectually qualified. I will stand by this statement, and can demonstrate the truthfulness by painful facts with regard to names, times, and places.'"

"WE will now," said the preacher, "take up our usual Christmas collection for the poor. I wish to remind the congregation that I am reliably informed the gamblers of this town hav boasted they will outdo the churches more than two to one in charity this year. At the gambling-house in the block below the sum of $250 was raised yesterday." The organist struck up a hymn, and when the collectors came back with the baskets after making the rounds of the pews it was found that the indignant board of trade men in the audience had contributed enough to bring the collection up to $500. The common gamblers in the block below were beaten out of sight.—Chicago Tribune.

INTELLIGENCE comes from Kentucky to the effect that Andrew Johnson, a member of one of the hill tribes in the eastern part of the state, who has killed in his time something like twenty men, has reformed and taken out license as an exhorter. He is now preaching with great vehemence and power in the mountain district. Johnson was once known as the "Pineville Terror." He is a man of nerve and a ready shot. There is every reason to believe, thinks the World, that the uncouth sinners of eastern Kentucky will accept salvation at Parson Johnson's hands without a murmur. Lorenzo Dow was an able exhorter and he was not above doing a little muscular reasoning in his early days, but he had no such record as Johnson.

"IT is to be hoped the messiah dancing craze may not become general among the colored people. With the red men and black men dancing, who knows but the white man might take it next?" Thus saith the Indianapolis Journal, ignoring a fact bigger than any mountain upon the face of the earth. There is no danger of the white man "taking it next." The white man has had it for centuries. The Christian religion has had the jim jams since the days of its first inception. And it is no respecter of colors. It imparts the jim jams alike to white, black, and red men. With the orgies of Sister Woodworth now raging right before its eyes the assertion of the Journal above quoted and fraudulently passed upon its readers as a witticism, betrays the utter barrenness of the religious editorial brain.—Ironclad Age.

THE Hamilton Herald says: "Not only has the Toronto council pronounced against the running of street-cars on Sundays, but has refused to allow the citizens to vote on the subject. The Toronto people, it appears, are still in leading strings, and are not old enough yet to be trusted to walk alone." Saturday Night has also a "palpable hit" at those who pretend to be pious just now because it pays them to "assume a virtue if they hav it not." Our contemporary observes: "Take for instance this Sunday street-car question. The preachers are trying to keep a corner on the Sunday, they are afraid if any other attraction is offered their place of worship will be deserted. If they, as ministers of the gospel, as vice-regents of the immortal king, cannot maintain their ascendency and fill their auditoriums while street-cars run, they are poor creatures and unworthy to be captains in the army of God."

IT is the women, not the men, who keep up the church, and they should boss the whole business, says the Denison Gazetteer. Let the men attend to civil affairs, to politics, and let the women run the religious business. That would be an equitable division of labor. Of course the preachers will kick vigorously, and we can hardly blame them. They do not like to divide the honors with the sisters. They prefer to strut around in broadcloth, white neckties, and plug hats, travel at half rates on the railroads, and monopolize the privilege of sporting the title of the deity in front of their names, while the women make their heads ache devising new attractions to draw money from the pockets of the wicked men to supply the exchequer with the necessary funds to support the dear pastors and make the church edifice respectable. But the clergy will hav to come off their exalted perch sooner or later, or at least let the good women share it with them.

HINDOO and Mohammedan superstitions hav met near Calcutta with such a clash that they were subsequently brought into court. A desirable piece of land lay waste because it was reputed to be haunted by a Hindoo goddess who objected to settlers. The Hindoos did all they could to propitiate her, setting apart a tree for her abode, under which they erected an idol in her honor, to which they made offerings of fruit and flowers. Still, the goddess continued implacable, and one man venturing to cultivate some of the land, he and his children died. Eventually, some Mohammedans, laughing at the Hindoo superstition, undertook to reclaim the land, but, somehow or other, the goddess manifested herself in a way to scare them off. That made the Mohammedans more determined and defiant than ever. So they took a sacred Hindoo beast, a cow, to the goddess's tree, and killed it there, placing parts of the carcass among the branches, and even smearing the idol with its blood. This so outraged the feelings of the Hindoos that they invoked the penal code, and five Mohammedans were sentenced to imprisonment for "outraging religious susceptibilities."

Communications.

Out of the Depths.

There never existed a happier family than that of John McLaren, mason. People envied them and wondered if they ever sorrowed or if their existence were wholly bathed in sunshine.

Nothing seemed to distract them. They had a kind word and smile for the most unfortunate in Comrie. There was Mrs. McLaren, with her laughing liquid-blue eyes, two dimples in her cheeks, and the prettiest little rosebud of a mouth perpetually wreathed in smiles; the baby, John McLaren, Jr., a crowning happy piece of innocence, and lastly honest John himself, the merry, twinkling-eyed head of the family, who had a habit, much to be deprecated in those degenerate days, of always looking upon the silver lining of the gloomy cloud and thus saving doctor's bills.

Ere John started for work in the morning he would imprint a hearty kiss on the laughing mouth of his wife, who smilingly would chide him with, "Behave, John;" make a face at the baby, who crowed in return until he got black in the face; then our merry mason set off to his work whistling as gaily as a lark.

No wonder people envied them. Even if the late Mr. Pope had known our John he would hav averred that a "happy man is the noblest work of God."

If it be true that "those whom the Gods love die young," then we wonder no longer how flowers grow so luxuriantly in a graveyard, for they are smiles resurrected perfuming the world again with their fragrance.

And then, one must remember that everything had gone well with the McLarens. John had always been in good employment on the Danfern estate, where he repaired stone dykes and gossiped with the old retainers. When he got married he had nstalled himself in a cosy, ivy-covered cottage, with a moss-grown roof, and a porch that in summer time was hid by the honeysuckle. Then there was a sundial of his own handiwork standing in the center of his well-kept garden, on which one could tell exactly the time of day.

So you see that it was no wonder that the McLarens were happy, for they possessed everything to render them so, even love. And there lies the secret. For where love is, faith, hope, and charity abide.

So the years rolled on, and John and his worthy spouse grew still happier and more loving, until one day the laird dying, "a most uncomfortable thing," as Sandy, the beadle, said, "the like of which has ne'er been heard o' i' the kintra side for mony a lang year," threw the whole of the tenants into the deepest dejection. Then the new laird, whose head was teeming with the latest improvements, came up from London, turning everything topsy-turvy on his arrival.

He discharged half of the servants, among whom was our friend John, because, he said, he was determined to conduct the estate on an economical basis. He evicted half of his small farmers, for he clearly showed that a stock farm was of more profit than an agricultural one. So that, in a little while, there was a dreary waste tenanted only by a solitary shepherd and his sheep, where formerly bloomed many a little holding and lived as many a happy family.

All was changed. The evicted of Comrie had gone, tearful and heart-broken, exiled from the hills their forefathers had crimsoned with their blood in order to preserve their liberty, and when such a cruel wrong as this done to them would hav sent the fiery cross speeding across the Highlands, and brought the vengeance of the clans on the head of the perpetrator, aye, even unto the third and fourth generation.

But tempora mutantur, only the ruined huts remained calling down the vengeance of heaven on the tread of the desolator. The people had departed assisted by the government, who upheld the landlord in his right to take the bread out of the mouths of hundreds of people and send them into exile. It was his land, his legal property—at least now it was, but we all know how his light-fingered ancestors came by it—and he could do as he pleased.

That is what the British government said, and they ought to know what givs legal right to land, for they are themselvs the chief of land-stealers in the world. John McLaren, having lost his situation, determined to go to London, where work was plenty, he believed, and nobody wanted.

On a bright May morning the McLarens stood upon the deck of the steamer Swallow watching the rock-bound coast of Scotland growing dim before their eyes. Then, when it appeared like a blue mist lying low upon the horizon, John turned to his wife, while the tears welled from his eyes, exclaiming, "Wae's me, hinny, we're gaen noo," whereat his two children set up a howl and his wife threw herself upon his neck, sobbing as if her heart would break. Sorrow had touched the hearts of the worthy couple for the first time. They could stoically see their cottage dismantled and given over to the flames; hear the wild, shrill lament played heart-brokenly by Hamish McTavish as the exiled left their homes. They could see all this, albeit with aching hearts, but outwardly unmoved, but now when that country which they loved so well, and which rears her queenly head so high amidst the nations of the world, had flown from their gaze, the floodgates of their hearts opened. They wept, as Rachel weeping for her children but they were not. At last after a weary voyage, in which the passengers suffered all the horrors of the mal de mer, they steamed up the Thames and discharged their freight at Hermitage wharf.

The McLarens were now in their El Dorado, in this city of the world, London.

For some days they were almost deafened with the noise of the drays that continually rumbled along the streets and the hum of the multitude which seemed to be flowing onward, no one knew whither. No matter what time of night they opened their eyes they could still hear the throbbing of London's great heart. Sometimes they heard a shriek, then the quick patter of feet, the blowing of policemen's whistles, angry oaths, than the echo of footsteps dying away, and then they would cower under the bedclothes trying to keep out the noise, and wonder what on earth ever tempted them to stray away from their quiet purply hills to this bedlam.

After many applications John at last succeeded in obtaining some work, and for two years they lived pretty comfortably. But, then, toward the end of the year 18— men were being gradually thrown out of employment; pale, hungry-looking fellows were now often seen standing around the street corners, glowering at the rich people as they rolled past in their carriages, or listening to one of themselvs orating on unionism.

London was beginning to feel uneasy; the heart did not beat with its wonted regularity, but rather spasmodically; rumors were rife of workmen banding together to sack the city, and the policemen looked graver as they tightened their belts before sallying forth to their beats. The demon hunger had cast its black shadow over the city, pinching the faces of the children and slowly driving the workmen to the wall. Out of the darkness of this night arose the cry of "Bread! bread! or we perish," but the cry was unheeded; men dropped exhausted in the streets; women and children passed away in the gloom with the cry of bread upon their lips; men stole so that they might be imprisoned and liv, and a gaunt-looking corpse was found floating in the Thames, while aristocrats whirled in their business traps along the Row careless of the rumble of hunger's revolution.

"We asked for bread and they gave us stones." Yea, worse, for when in our time of need we besought them, for love of that God whom they adore, to bestow on us in alms a portion of that wealth we helped to create, that our families may liv, they drove us back with bayonets wielded in the hands of those whom we pay by labor's sweat—pay them so that the throne may hav a greater weapon wherewith to crush the multitude. O people! will ye ever learn your power—who it is that really reigns? Look, look ahead, yonder is Canaan; now find your Joshua!

The employees of the factory, in which John was employed, had struck for higher wages. The men had presented a petition to their employer to urge the necessity of paying one cent per hour more, as it was almost impossible to liv upon their present earnings.

Their employer, a gouty, bloated-looking gentleman (sic), gruffly told them "that if they could not liv upon their present earnings, they could, at least, decently die upon them."

The men, with sullen looks and low muttered threats, retired to their benches where, swinging their tool baskets over their shoulders, they left the factory.

That night a lurid glare shot skyward and, ere the fire department had arrived, Thomson's factory was burnt to the ground.

Weeks rolled into months, yet John McLaren was still "out," and the money he had saved had gone, as also had most of his household effects, to keep the wolf from the door. From three meals they came down to two, and latterly John had contracted the habit of staying out all day, ostensibly seeking work, but in reality to giv his loved ones a larger dinner.

Then famin's companion, death, crept up the alleys laying his finger upon the children of the poor. John heard his footsteps and offered himself up to his clammy embrace if his child might be saved.

Death smiled and rocked their child to sleep, saying, "I am culling the flowers, giv me time and I will lay the forest low."

Notwithstanding the sorrow she felt Mrs. McLaren tried ever to keep a smile upon her pale, careworn face. Her love for her husband was still as great as of yore, though John himself had grown sullen and depressed of late.

As he sat by the black fireplace of an evening, "with hunger gnawing at his vitals," great furrows appeared upon his lowering brow, his lips would tightly compress, his hands twitch as if he fain would grabble an enemy. One morning they arose and found famin in the room. "Jeanie, dear," said John, and his voice was as low and soft as when he courted her in Methven woods, "we cannot let our boy die, we must get food."

"Oh, John," returned his wife, "do nothing rash, rather let us die honest than liv criminal. We hav been provided for until now and surely God won't let us starve at this time."

"Aye, aye, wife, God provides for us as long as we hav an income, but let fortune turn its back upon us then God seemingly sets his face against us; I suppose it is because we sinned in becoming poor. But heaven helps those who help themselvs, and rather than see you and the bairnie die, I'll help myself!"

"Oh, John, ma ain love, dinna dae anything wrang," cried his wife, relapsing into her sweet mother tongue in her anguish, "God will help us, only wait!"

"Well, well, Jeanie," returned John as he buttoned up his threadbare overcoat, "we'll see what God will do." "But," he added as he left the house, "I'll hav food in the meantime."

The alley in which the McLarens lived ran into Whitechapel, so that John had not very far to go ere he came to a store where he knew goods lay very near the door.

But, as luck would hav it, he had walked but a couple of rods when he spied a baker's basket resting in front of a house with two very nice loaves in it.

Here was his opportunity, so quickly availing himself of the loaves he turned and darted along the street.

Somebody saw him and raised the cry of "stop thief."

Fear of being captured with the booty lent wings to John. He flew along Whitechapel, his eyes bloodshot, his face pale, while flecks of foam flew from his mouth as if from that of a madman. "Stop thief" again echoed in his ears, and men, women, and children took up the chase.

There is nothing so exciting as a man-hunt. Where man is the hare, and men the hounds, there exists a strange fascination.

It is queer. But man is naturally a bloodthirsty animal.

John at length distanced his pursuers, and winding in and out of the alleys, then doubling back upon his track, he at length reached his home.

To his wife he evaded the question of how he got the bread, saying, "We'll hav some more tomorrow."

They had nearly finished the loaves, and the good woman in her innocence was thanking God for the meal, when the door opened, two policemen entered and laid their hands upon John.

Jeanie was thunderstruck, but John smiled grimly. "All right, I'm ready," said he to the policemen.

"Never fear, ma ain, it wull a' be richt i' the end," he whispered to his wife, who remained yet speechless; "it canna be much o' a sin to steal in order to liv. Keep your heart up and wait for me." Then stooping down he imprinted a kiss upon his wife's cold forehead, pressed his boy to his heart, and was about to go, when his wife arose.

Her face was firmly set, her eyes stern. It seemed as though a cloud had passed o'er her, leaving its black trace upon her features.

Her right arm slowly extended; the policemen halted, turning half round, and looked at the woman with some fear as she stood there like an ancient sibyl about to utter a prophecy.

"You hav taken my husband and ruined our lives because we wanted to liv," she commenced; then her voice rose higher and there was a peculiar hiss in it as she said, "Take him, but may the curse of a dying woman follow you and the law that assists you in crushing us; may the face of God be ever set against you; may hell open——"

She stopped, pressed her hand to her side, looked wildly around the room as if seeking an escape, tottered, and fell heavily upon the floor, while a crimsoned froth oozed from her lips.

John flew to his wife's side, calling her by all endearing names, but she heard not.

The son knelt by his mother's side, patting her hands, and praying her to open her eyes once more, but she was deaf to all, for death had entered the forest and was laying it low.

"Come, my man," said one of the policemen, "we can't wait 'ere hall day."

"Won't you let me remain by my dead wife's side a little longer?" pleaded John.

"No," returned the man of law, "the city 'ull look arter 'er, but the laur vants you."

So he was led away, while his dead wife lay on the floor, gazing blindly at the ceiling with her eyes wide open, and his son sat cowering and sobbing in a corner.

And all that the law may be vindicated.

Owing to the miserliness of one man, hundreds are driven into exile; others, because of a similar cause, are made criminals; women are forced upon the street so that they may liv.

Yet some wonder why men strike work! They do so to save themselvs and wives from entering upon a vicious life to which the greed of the masters tends to drive them.

How is it possible for women to remain untainted in this country on $1 50 to $2 50 per week? Many are not obtaining that sum. Do you not think, gentlemen, that this greed of the capitalist is putting a premium on prostitution? I think so. Ask any of those eighty thousand street-walkers who throng the London streets what made them adopt that life. In the majority of cases the answer will be, insufficiency of wages.

Hunger drives men and women to evil courses, makes possible revolutions that deluge a country in blood.

Giv the people reasonable wages and hours of labor; throw open the museums and art galleries on Sundays so that the people can feast their eyes on the beauties, and fill their heads with a portion of the knowledge, contained therein, and crime, I think, would greatly diminish, the labor problem would be solved, the social evil would lessen, and the people would be rendered more contented.

John was brought before a magistrate and charged with "purloining two loaves of bread," pleaded guilty, and was ordered to be confined for four calendar weeks with hard labor.

John asked the magistrate for God's sake to hav his wife decently interred and his boy taken care of.

The magistrate, a well-meaning gentleman no doubt, who thought that all thieves were of the same class and criminality, blandly told John that "he ought to hav thought of his family before committing the crime." Then John was led away.

Four weeks elapsed, the prison gate was flung open and John McLaren stepped out into freedom. His son met him at the prison gate. They walked quickly away from the gloomy jail, determined to leave London and seek their fortunes in the country.

"If we could get home to Comrie, father," said the boy, gazing wistfully at his father's changed countenance.

"We'll try, laddie," was the father's only response.

They had just reached the head of the street on which stood the prison, when they heard a confused babel, and looking in the direction they saw some hundreds of people being charged by the military.

Slowly but surely the people were being forced back by their more disciplined brothers. Now they would halt, stones would fly, and some soldiers be struck to earth.

Then the military would cheer and rush upon the people with their rifles at the charge like bloodhounds eager for their prey.

At last the mob halted close to where John and his son stood, beside a pile of stones that some causeway layers were using in repairing the street.

The McLarens moved a little toward the crowd as the latter were busy arming themselvs with stones and shouting defiance to the soldiers who had likewise halted.

Some of the rioters were hatless, their hair streaming in the breeze; others coatless, with shirt-necks open, displaying a hirsute brawny neck, their sleeves rolled up, and faces red with passion, yet all grasping stones ready to hurl in the faces of the government hirelings.

At last, a pompous-looking magistrate rode to the front and commenced to read the riot act. He just got to the words "in the name of Victoria" when a shower of stones, hurtling around his head, caused him to retire in a manner more hasty than dignified.

"Captain, do your duty," he yelled to the officer in charge of the infantry company, "and kill the hounds," he added, as he tried to persuade his head to come out of the silk hat that had been forced almost over his eyes.

"Attention!" commanded the captain. "Carry arms. With ball cartridge—load," and the stillness of the street was disturbed by the click of the lever as the breech-block fell.

Then the soldier, out of love for his fellow-man, raised his hand, saying, "Men, for God's sake, retire ere it be too late."

But the magistrate was not of a peaceful disposition seemingly, for he angrily yelled to the officer, "Why don't you fire upon the dogs and disperse them?"

The latter, less bloodthirsty than the former, who took good care to remain well in the rear, turned to him, exclaiming, "You, as one of the people, ought to be the last to urge such a proceeding."

Then more stones were flung, a soldier dropped with an ugly gash in his head, and his comrades murmured. Quick and sharp then came the command, "Aim, fire!" and ere the rattle of the musketry had died away the order was given, "Charge!" Down upon the people came the soldiery with wild cheers and leveled bayonets. The mob stood for a moment, then broke and fled, leaving their dead and dying upon the street.

Kneeling by the side of his son was John McLaren, with a look of indescribable anguish upon his face as he tried to stanch the life's blood that spurted from the side of his boy.

"Open your een, ma ain wee laddie," he whispered through his tears, "ou'll gang awa' tae Comrie; heesstye, get up ma doo', it's your ain fayther wha's speakin'. Oh, Johnny, wull ye no speak!" and he passionately kissed the beaded forehead of the boy.

His son slowly raised his leaden eyelids and as slowly closed them again, murmuring, "I'm sleepy, fayther," then heaving a gentle sigh, his young life crept away from the street, far above the London tumult, into the unknown.

Raising his eyes to heaven, the poor distracted father exclaimed, "Oh, God, what hav I done that I should liv while others die!" Then he sank by the side of his boy in a swoon.

. . . . . .

A week after a body was found floating in the Thames, on which was found a book bearing the name of "John McLaren, Comrie." At last he had found that death which had evaded him so long—that eternal slumber which is nature's royal gift to those whom death plucks out of the depths.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON.

The Bells Are Chiming.

There is just as much science in the proper ringing of a bell as there is in the construction of a wonder, mysterious and weird.

Professional bell-ringers, adepts in the art, can produce from bells, ranging in size from the tiny one that adorns Bossy's neck up to the monster in the steeple high, the sweetest tunes—tunes that carry the aged back to childhood's merry days, that thrill the young, and fill the air with happy melody. How well do I remember the Swiss Bell-ringers! Oh, the music they did make! And on simply common bells.

I hav always wished that I could "play" a bell. But I never shall know how to do this most proper thing, unless I study and master the science of the art. I hav made several attempts at bell-ringing, and my last attempt was a dismal failure. The "Bell" I strove to play upon kicked back and knocked from my effort all the tune and melody it did possess. I refer to that great big Bell that chimes throughout the West, among the Rockies and on ocean slope. Unlike most bells, this particular big fellow can talk and write and speak. He does all this with vim, with vigor, and with might. In one of his sweeping vibrations he by print advises me "to change front," and all because I had referred to lecturers' "gilt-edged" prices. I pleaded for reductions somewhat—to take the rounds sometimes for "glory and bare living." And by the way, in looking over old letters in regard to lectures I find one or two from Bell, the "chiming" lines of which announce prices twice as high as those given by other representativs of the world of talk and thought. As to changing front, I don't think I'll do it. I am doing splendidly the way I am faced at present. He says "I hav never been in the lecture business." That is true, and others who are in it would perhaps do better outside of it. Of course this is intended as no reflection on my chiming friend Bell. He is a good lecturer; at least, he has that reputation. I wish him joy.

Another bell is labeled Voss. He rings forth his appeal from Los Angeles, Cal., in the interest of the Assembly of Progress. He recently took issue with me on the word "white," which as used in a section of the Assembly's constitution and by-laws draws the color line tightly and completely. To use it thus is in a manner saying amen to and sanctioning the cruel treatment imposed upon the colored race before the war and since the war by orthodox fanatics who believed and still believe the Bible a divine command from an unknown God. Voss has my respect and admiration for the good he does, but for the bad, never.

Local bells are salvo chiming. Those in charge of church and priest hav a cracked sort of a sound. Their clappers I am told are worn, and eaten by theological rust. At any rate, they don't hav that drawing sound they seemed to possess before our late congress. The bells in the hands of the Secularists are, on the other hand, ringing sweetly and merrily. Their tones are charming, and the people are heeding.

The Portsmouth auxiliary hav started in upon their second six months of existence equipped as they never hav been at any other time since their organization. The officers they hav elected are as follows: President, J. L. Treuthart (prominent Mason and business man); first vice-president, Henry Nagleisen (young and prominent business man); second vice-president, Ed. Woodrow (young and popular); secretary, Lillian Andres (my wife); assistant secretary, Miss Alice Treuthart (the eldest daughter of the president); treasurer, Benj. Woods (leading newsdealer). The committees appointed are: lecture committee, Will S. Andres, Henry Nagleisen, Ed. Woodrow; public work, John Welty, Wash Cross, Jas. H. Feurt; ways and means, G. W. L. Mitchell, E. H. De Witt, Will S. Andres. The lecture committee purpose to pursue a different line of policy from that of the last six months. They intend to hav the best of speeches, debates, lectures, essays, and readings, and on subjects in line with the Nine Demands. In this way it is expected to enrol a big membership, including the high and the low, the rich and the poor, the white and the black.

The local organization feels deeply interested in the other auxiliaries scattered over the country. We would like to see them arise from the sleep they seem to be in and get down to good solid work. The plan of Miss Craddock to hav all auxiliaries forward to national headquarters a report of each month's work, is a step in the right direction. She in turn can publish reports in bulk and thereby every auxiliary will know exactly what is being done by its neighbors both close around and far away. It is a capital idea, and auxiliaries should take hold and promptly respond. WILL S. ANDRES.

Portsmouth, O.

Pitch Into the Christian Religion.

From the Investigator.

It seems to us that whatever progress has been made toward a realization of any of the Nine Demands, is wholly due to the surrender of some theological position. The enemy of the American Secular Union is the Christian theology, and the obstruction in the way to a complete victory for our Secular principles is the faith in this theology. Does anyone contend that the Christian church, as an organized body, could logically adopt and defend the "Nine Demands of Secularism?" Does not everyone admit that these "Demands," more or less, imply what is anti-Christian, anti-theological, and anti-religious?

The "Nine Demands" cannot be reconciled with the position and purpose of the Christian church. Men and women who accept the Christian theology, the Christian faith, and who belong to the Christian church, cannot be counted upon to advocate, and work for the success of, the principles of Secularism as formulated in the "Nine Demands." The work which has been done thus far for the secularization of the state has not been done by those who are regarded as religious. It has been done by those who are outside the church, who, for the most part, reject Christianity, and who hav no faith in theological dogmas.

If we hav correctly stated the facts, then it seems to us that the way to secure the separation of church and state in this country is to boldly attack the power by and through which a union of church and state is maintained, viz., the Christian church. Ecclesiastical property is exempted from taxation because such exemption is defended by the Christian church. Sunday is declared a sacred day by the state because such a declaration was inspired by the Christian church. The Bible is read in the public schools because the Christian church has placed it there.

We do not see how a person can show up the evils of the union of church and state, and fitly characterize the power which sustains this union, without condemning the Christian theology and the Christian religion. We therefore are in favor of an aggressiv policy which will condemn the false, the wrong, and the evil in Christianity, and we do not believe that any other course on the part of the Liberals of the United States will help further the cause of Secularism.

While we would not needlessly offend by our language, we hold that the foolish theology of the Christian church should be shown up in all its ridiculousness. If Christianity is true, it ought to be accepted by everybody; if it is false, it ought to be rejected by everybody. We regard Christianity as false, and we think all Secularists and Liberals regard it in the same way. We do not believe in personalities, however, and although strongly denouncing a system or organization we do not necessarily attack men and women.

Until Christians ask to hav their church property taxed; until Christians ask to hav all Sunday laws repealed; until Christians ask to hav their Bible removed from the schools; until Christians ask that no more chaplains be employed in Congress and institutions supported by public money; until Christians ask that the oath be abolished in the courts and all departments of the government—those who are in favor of political reforms on such lines will be justified in claiming that the evils, which the American Secular Union was organized to remove, depend upon the existence of the Christian theology, the Christian religion, and the Christian faith.

BRAIN of the New World, what a task is thine,
To formulate the Modern—out of the peerless grandeur of the modern,
Out of thyself comprising science, to recast poems, churches, art,
(Recast, may-be discard them, end them—may-be their work is done, who knows?)
By vision, hand, conception, on the background of the mighty past, the dead,
To limn with absolute faith the mighty living present.

—Walt Whitman.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President. . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. MORRIS PEBOT, Vice-President, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
J. O. BENTLEY, Vice-President, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa

The Secular Union's Monthly Report.

CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED DECEMBER, 1890.

Thomas Hindle, Jamestown, N. Y.	$ 1
Michael Collins, Salt Lake City, Utah	2
W. F. Lerich, Houtzdale, Pa. ($1 annual membership; $10 Guarantee Fund)	11
A. K. and M. J. Olds, McMinnville, Ore	5
Charles Otto Mackert, Philadelphia (new)	3
Anton J. Kraft, Grantfork, Ill. (Guarantee Fund)	5
P. B. Mackey, Bridgeport, Conn. (new)	1
Clemens Vonnegut, Indianapolis, Ind	2
John Turner, Philadelphia	10
S. Pabst, Highland, Ill	10
John Wolf, Mount Morris, Ill. (Guarantee Fund)	5
Anton J. Craft, Grantfork, Ill. (for pamphlet "Shall the Bible be Read in our Public Schools?")	1
W. W. Wilson, Spiceland, Ind. (balance life membership)	5
Lucy C. Wilson, Spiceland, Ind. (new member)	1
Mattie M. Wilson, Spiceland, Ind. (new member)	1
Will H. Baker, El Monte, Cal. (through Freethought) (new member)	1
E. Frost, Maynard, Ia	5
Reuben Savage, Maynard, Ia. (through E. Frost) (new member)	1
J. P. Slayton, Tecumseh, Mich. (Guarantee Fund) life member (new)	5
John Corbet, Minneapolis, Minn	7
P. F. Spencer, Evansville, Wis. (Guarantee Fund)	2
Total	$104

F. C. MENDE, Treasurer American Secular Union.
Philadelphia, Jan. 5, 1890.

Practical Work for Secularization.

We frequently receive letters which say: "I am isolated from other members, but would like to do some practical work for the cause. How shall I set about it?" To all such, of course, we send pamphlets, and say: "Circulate these wherever you can, especially among mild conservativs and Protestant church people, where you will find you can use 'Church Taxation' as an entering wedge for other more radical pamphlets." A large number of these pamphlets, indeed, hav already been circulated by Protestant Christians and by Jews in Maryland and other states. In Idaho and Oregon, through the enterprise of two individuals, a copy of "Church Taxation" has been placed in the hands of every member of the legislature. This ought to be done in every state and territory of the Union, so as to bring the injustice of church exemption before the eyes of our legislators.

Then, again, we hav President Westbrook's admirable pamphlet on: "Shall the Bible be Read in Our Public Schools?" This ought to be circulated widely in such states as Wisconsin and elsewhere, where public opinion, from sheer ignorance of the merits of the case, is setting in favor of religious instruction of some sort in the public schools. But to do this requires money—more money than the present financial condition of our treasury warrants us in expending. We are nearly out of the first edition of this most valuable pamphlet; nevertheless we hav been able to send it to but few of our members as yet (as has been our custom hitherto with each new pamphlet issued by us) owing to the calls for it by those who are not members. Of course, we desire to sow a good seed wherever we can; and, with the exception of the few copies which we hav sent on sale to THE TRUTH SEEKER, the Investigator, Freethought, and the Progressiv Thinker, we hav distributed these pamphlets individually, and only where we hav thought they would be of use. The need for a new edition is pressing; but we hav not the money to expend upon it.

A third pamphlet (an eight-page circular) is now ready for printing. It is got up in an exceedingly novel and attractiv style, and appeals to the patriotism of those into whose hands it may fall. If this be circulated as it should be, our cause will be advertised to the general public as never before, and there is every reason to hope that the accessions to our membership will be numerous, especially from business men of position and influence throughout the country. This is not merely a self-congratulatory statement on the part of the executiv committee, but the result of opinions expressed by several prominent Freethinkers who are unanimous in approving the novel plan of this circular. But, dear friends, to print this circular will require money, and we hav not the wherewithal in our treasury.

We had hoped ere this to announce the appointment of a field secretary. But we hav been hindered by the lack of agreement in the board upon the proper person to appoint; and at this present writing, it seems as though we shall hav to dispense with such appointee for this year. The gentleman recommended at the Portsmouth congress it has not seemed, to the majority of the board, advisable to appoint, for several reasons, principally because of his avowed opposition to the constitution of the society; while another gentleman, selected by the majority of the board, has been objected to by two of the directors, not from personal reasons, as he stands in the front ranks of able Freethought speakers, but from questions of policy, and also because of their preference for the person suggested at the Portsmouth congress. In the management of our society, peace and harmony must always be the first consideration; and the majority of the board will probably agree to yield to the objections of the minority so far as to table the question of a field secretary indefinitly. Upon the other questions of management we are so far united; and it is to be hoped that, even if we cannot hav a field secretary at present, we may make a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together for that circulation of missionary pamphlets which stands second only to field work in its importance.

The question now before us is, Shall we carry out the plan of work outlined above to a successful issue, or shall we potter along on a two-penny plan as we hav done in the past, merely raising enough to just keep the thing alive, but hardly kicking?

Already the correspondence alone is growing beyond the ability of the secretary to deal with as she should. The time is not far distant when she is likely to need a clerical assistant in order to do it justice, and keep her end up. For the present, however, she is doing her best as the solitary correspondent for the widespread interest of our society.

The pledges to the $5,000 Guarantee Fund come in slowly—more slowly than they should. Up to date, the amount pledged is $630. Of this, $73 has been prepaid. It is easy to see that something must be done by Liberals throughout the country, if they would make the American Secular Union a success for this coming year. We need at least $3,000 for this year; and we need it soon, if we are to carry on the work as outlined above.

My Liberal friend, you who are reading this appeal, let us hav some practical evidence of your sympathy with the cause of freedom of thought. Help the American Secular Union and you help every other agency of Freethought in which you are interested. For we welcome all Liberals, no matter what their beliefs, to our platform, provided they work for the Nine Demands.

Shall the American Secular Union fail, or shall it succeed? Upon everyone who reads this question, falls a share of the responsibility for either its ultimate failure or its ultimate success. Which will you individually help it to be?

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec. A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 3, 1891.

President Westbrook's Reply to Vice-President Foote's Open Letter.

DEAR SIR: It is true that at a recent meeting of the board (all the members being present) the subject of the appointment of a person who had been nominated at the recent Portsmouth congress as a field secretary did come up, and after discussion the motion to appoint was respectfully laid on the table, the members standing five to two. It can be called up at any time.

Yes, I do remember the meeting of the board held a little more than a year ago in New York. I remember the position taken by Mr. Remsburg, and I hav less faith in it now than I had then. I do not believe that the few public lecturers in the field are made of such narrow and mean stuff as to be "jealous" because one or more field secretaries hav been appointed by a great national society to advance its great work. I do not believe that one of them is as foolish and wicked as Messrs. Foote and Remsburg seem to think they are. They (the accusers) may hav to confront these lecturers on this grave charge. Most of them are on the Pacific slope; and lecturers might be appointed for twenty or thirty states where there are no lecturers, and yet never come within two or three thousand miles of those now in the field.

Moreover, if the person nominated at the congress had been appointed at the recent meeting of our board, as two directors desired, would not the public lecturers all hav been "jealous" of him? Would they not, by Dr. Foote's reasoning, hav proceeded at once to take revenge on the American Secular Union?

Then, if the board should "subsidize" one or more lecturers already in the field, would not all the others not so "subsidized" be "jealous," and bring back the dynamite days? Did not the American Secular Union make an effort to "subsidize" the lecturers by giving to each who would accept it a large printed commission to lecture and collect money for the society, allowing them, I think, fifty per cent commission? This was continued up to the Philadelphia congress, in 1889; but if they ever collected and paid over a dollar, it has never come to my knowledge, by record or otherwise. I believe that the plan was a prodigious failure; and yet Dr. Foote desires us to try it again! Allow me here to say that I do not like the word "subsidize" as used by Dr. Foote. It does mean what Webster says; but, in these modern, degenerate times, the usus loquendi makes it mean a bribe; and the great majority of "operators," and "promoters," so understand it. I do not believe that our lecturers desire a bribe. They do not desire any such dickering as has been proposed. If I do not mistake, they hate the word "subsidy."

The plan of Dr. Foote for electing field secretaries by the votes of subscribers seems to me so impracticable that I can hardly reply with becoming self-respect. It seems to amount to this: If a man contributes $1, let him cast one vote as to whom he desires for field secretary; and if he givs $5, let him cast five votes—all for one man, or divided among five men. This seems to me to be "ballot reform" with a vengeance. Besides making the American Secular Union a moneyed aristocracy, it would pave the way for endless bribery and corruption. Let us see, too, how it might work. Some man who is anxious to be a field secretary induces his friends to subscribe $5, $50, or $100, and this secures him as many votes. Another man, fully as worthy, does not dragoon his friends to giv money that shall count for votes, and so is not appointed. Moreover, the board would be bound to incidentally consider the intelligence and qualifications of the voters, and would be also sacredly bound to scrutinize the character and qualifications of the person voted for. Is he intelligent, and has he presence and address? Has he sufficient talent and learning to creditably represent the society? Does he accept the constitution and general principles and policy of the American Secular Union, and will he work harmoniously with the executiv officers and the board, and not breed discord and dissension? Has he discretion and self-control? Above all, is he a man of good moral character, pure and chaste, and a man whom we can safely send into our families?

Then, Dr. Foote seems to forget that we hav a constitution and a board of directors, the latter regularly elected, and that the powers of the board are not to be assumed by individual contributors. These contributors voted, or had a right to vote, for the officers and members of the board, and they must trust the board and abide by their decision, assuming that the board hav a better opportunity to judge what should be done, than a few scattered individual contributors can possibly hav. The government of the American Secular Union is strictly a delegated government. While it should always respect individual contributors, it should not be influenced by them against its own judgment, and this is the general understanding of our contributors.

In conclusion, let me say that, so far as I know, the board is disposed to consider the recommendation, so summarily passed without debate at the recent congress, and they may feel bound to accept that recommendation; but if they do not, they will, doubtless, giv the next congress good reasons for their declinature. The board are considering the question of appointing as general field secretary one of the foremost of our Liberal lecturers, a distinguished orator and scholar, an able debater, and one who can well represent the American Secular Union anywhere. Such a gentleman is very much needed. We hav frequent calls for such lectures, and can find constant work for such a man. We shall move slowly and cautiously. We believe that there is no difficulty about money matters; and I solemnly protest against anticipating and embarrassing the action of the board by an appeal to the newspapers. I consider the Open Letter of Dr. Foote as very injudicious and untimely, and quite unexpected from one generally so fair. "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau" (Gen. xxvii, 22). There seems to be a very huge cat in the meal-tub; but it is not worth while to set fire to the house to show the cat. I presume the board will act according to their best judgment, and with self-respecting firmness.

R. B. WESTBROOK, Pres. A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 5, 1891.

The California State Convention.

The California State Liberal Union will hold its annual convention at San Francisco, on Thursday, Jan. 29, 1891, beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning with a business meeting and an opening address by Samuel P. Putnam, president, on "The Dangers Ahead." Particular attention will be paid to the Sabbath legislation now threatened in this state and in Congress. In the afternoon and evening addresses will be made by the best speakers, and the convention will close with a musical and sociable festival in honor of Thomas Paine's birthday.

Liberals from all parts of the state are invited and expected to be present at this reunion; and the coöperation of those of other states is desired.

SAMUEL P. PUTNAM, President.
EMIL S. LEMME, Secretary.

Jesus and His Apostles—When Did They Liv?

A reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER wants to know how "Antichrist" knows that Paul was preaching sixty-two years before the Christian era.

The facts hav been presented in THE TRUTH SEEKER many times during the last dozen years.

In April, 1878, we found and translated an old Hebrew document. Our translation was printed in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and republished in a pamphlet by Mr. Bennett with the following title:

Sepher Toldoth Jeschu: Book of the Generation of Jesus. First English translation of the ancient Jewish story of Jesus, who was born at Bethlehem about the year 106 B.C., being the son of a betrothed maiden named Miriam (Mary), by Joseph Pandera. By the power of a charm stolen from the holy of holies, he cured lepers, raised the dead, and wrought other miracles. Wherefore he was arrested by the elders of Jerusalem, scourged, crowned with thorns, and by order of the Sanhedrin stoned to death and hanged on the day before the Passover and the Sabbath, in the reign of Queen Alexandra, about the year 75 B.C.

Death of Simon Kepha on a tower in the city of the Nazarenes about 39 B.C. How and why the Romans changed "Kepha" to "Petros."

Startling evidence that Paul flourished before the middle of the first century B.C., contemporary with the aforesaid Kepha.

It was also republished in "Revelations of Antichrist," with full notes, in 1879. And in 1887 it reappeared in a pamphlet in England entitled, "The Jewish Life of Christ," with notes by G. W. Foote and J. M. Wheeler.

The suspicion that Paul flourished a century before the time assigned to him in the book of Acts was never, we believe, entertained by anyone but ourself; nor did we even dream of it until we found in that Hebrew document a Simon Kepha dying on a tower about 39 B.C. Then we turned to Paul's epistles to see if we could there discover any clue to dates, when lo! we found in 2 Cor. xi, 32, this:

In Damascus the governor under Aretas the king kept the city of the Damascenes with a garrison, desirous to apprehend me.

Now, we know, from Josephus and other sources, that Aretas, king of Arabia Petrea, held Damascus for many years prior to 63 B.C., when all Syria, Damascus included, became a part of the Roman empire. And though there were later kings of Arabia Petrea named Aretas—one even as late as A.D. 37, who fought and defeated his son-in-law Herod, tetrarch of Galilee and Perea—yet it does not appear that the last-named Aretas ever acquired any part of the Roman territory. Nor indeed was it possible for such a petty king to hav marched an army two hundred and fifty miles and taken the strong city of Damascus out of the hands of the Romans.

For further information on this subject read the appendix to "Antichrist," pages 357–421.

But since the publication of that book we hav written a "Life of Peter and of Paul." The "Life of Simon Kepha" (falsely called Peter) was printed in a series of articles written for the Boston Investigator, in 1880–1, and the "Life of Paul" in a series written for THE TRUTH SEEKER in 1882–4. These we hoped to embody in vol. ii of "Antichrist," but as our first book has not yet paid expense of publication we are loth to sink several hundred dollars in another volume.

We hav been unable to discover a single fact incompatible with the existence of Jesus and his chief disciples a hundred years before the time assigned to them in the gospels and book of Acts.

The historical characters mentioned in the book of Acts, and known to hav lived in the first half of the first century, are: Judas of Galilee; Annas, Caiaphas, and Ananias, high priests; Gamaliel, lawyer; Theudas, rebel; Herod Agrippa I.; Herod Agrippa II.; Claudius Cæsar, emperor; Pilate, Felix, and Festus, governors of Judea; Drusilla and Bernice, sisters of Agrippa II.

There is not a scintilla of historical evidence to connect a single one of these persons with Paul or with any apostle or contemporary disciple of Jesus, the adored messiah, much less with Jesus himself. But on the other hand we claim to hav discovered with more or less certainty in the works of Josephus traces of the following persons named in the book of Acts, all of whom lived and most of whom died before the Christian era:

Paul (Pollio the Pharisee); Manaen of Acts xiii, 1, Vulgate Manahen (Manahem the Essene); Stephen (Onias the martyr, B.C. 66); Herod (the Great), friend of Pollio and Manahem; Bernice, his niece; Agrippa (M.V.), chief minister of Augustus Cæsar; Gamaliel (Hillel?), preceptor of Paul; Sopater or Sosipater, embassador of high priest Hyrcanus; Silas (Silvanus), pretor of Ephesus; Tyrannus of Ephesus; Secundus of Thessalonica (Jucundus?); Tertullus the orator (Nicolaus of Damascus); Augustus Cæsar, Roman emperor, B.C. 31 to A.D. 14.

Who but the first emperor was ever designated as Augustus Cæsar? See Acts xxv, 21, 25, 26, and xxvii, 1. Compare Greek and Syriac.

There are also two probable identifications of persons named in the fourth gospel, to wit: Malchus (Malichus), an attaché of the high priest Hyrcanus, B.C. 79–40; and Nicodemus a minister of King Aristobulus, B.C. 64.

The nucleus of all the gospel stories antedates the Christian era. But the text has been corrupted and enlarged so as to describe a mythical Jesus crucified under Pontius Pilate. ANTICHRIST.

The Banner Paper.

For nearly ten years THE TRUTH SEEKER has been formost of all papers in America, secular or religious, in carrying aloft the banner of spelling reform. Many other journals hav given occasional blasts on their bugles, indicativ of cheer and good will toward the movement; but THE TRUTH SEEKER has quietly, yet persistently, presented "hav, giv, liv," and numerous other words which commonly terminate in useless e's, shorn of that appendage; and "activ, promis, definit," etc., are now recognized as familiar and lawful spellings by its thousands of readers. When these shorter spellings become prevalent, as they assuredly will within a few years, it will be vain for any periodical to try to steal this honor from THE TRUTH SEEKER.

There is promis, however, that the old "invincible" will soon hav a goodly band of followers. On the introduction of the Lawler resolution for short spellings into the House of Representativs last January, great activity began among the spelling reformers. Numerous petitions for its passage were circulated, signed, and sent to members of Congress. The resolution was referred to the committee on printing, and the commissioner of education, Hon. W. T. Harris, with several prominent professors of colleges, appeared before it, and presented reasons for the resolution being favorably reported. The tariff and other bills, however, so absorbed the attention of the House, that the resolution for short spellings was not brought up; but Mr. Lawler intends to get a hearing during the present session.

One result of the agitation has been that many prominent journals and numerous smaller papers hav given space to articles and notices upon the subject of spelling reform, and it was brought prominently before the National Editorial Convention at Boston last June. Without waiting for the authority of dictionaries, conventions, or Congress, several independent papers hav lately appeared with the short spellings. Intelligence, a school journal of Chicago, and the Leader, a free lance paper, published at Wichita, Kan., are examples.

An association of activ workers named the Leag for Short Spellings—L. S. S.—has lately been formed. The members promis to spell "hav, giv, liv," and use such other short spellings as commend themselvs to their judgment, whenever practicable. Also to aid the movement by circulating tracts, and otherwise presenting the claims of the reform, and especially by having articles in its favor inserted in their local newspapers. The headquarters of the Leag for Short Spellings is 24 Clinton place, New York. All persons are invited to send their names as members, or to inclose stamp for information.

ELIZA B. BURNZ.

At the Brooklyn Philosophical Association.

The large room of the Philosophical Association was filled to overflowing on Sunday, the 4th, to listen to a debate between Dr. L. G. Janes and one of the vice-presidents of the American Secular Union, Mr. T. B. Wakeman. The subject was Mr. Wakeman's philosophy. Before the debate began a lady treated the audience to very fine music on the piano, after which the presiding officer, Mr. C. Monholland, introduced Dr. Janes.

Dr. Janes, who used manuscript, began his address by complimenting Mr. Wakeman and by giving reasons for the debate. This being done, he turned his attention to the subject proper, which presented itself under the aspect of the origin, nature, and manifestations of mind, and said in substance as follows.

There can be but one science of psychology, and to this, which is bounded on one side by Spiritualism, on the other by the still lower Materialism, we hav to look for information as to mental phenomena at large. According to Mr. Wakeman, the universe is as we perceive it, and there is in it no room for supernatural beings of any kind; there is nothing besides reality—no God, ghost, or spook. This will no doubt to the minds of many appear as simple Materialism, yet it is not. Mr. Wakeman is not a Materialist; he is a Positivistic Monist. That is to say, he has from the pantheism of Goethe, the Positivism of Comte, and the monism of Hæckel, constructed a new philosophy.

The relativity of our knowledge has been admitted both by Spencer and by Haeckel, and it follows that we as finite beings can conceive of the finite only—an infinit being is required to conceive of the infinit. And while we, the followers of Spencer's philosophy, do not admit anything supernatural, we can but, as a result of the limitedness of our sense perception, recognize the fact that beyond the visible universe is another, a greater and more perfect, an Unknowable. Mr. Wakeman's philosophy as regards the cosmos is idealistic pantheism, but this, as demonstrated by the science of psychology, is unscientific.

Mr. Wakeman in reply said: The explanation as given by Dr. Janes is but the old theological solution modified, for to assume an outside cause, what is that but to say that what we perceive through our senses is a mere show, that the reality lies outside our power of conception? A philosophy which refuses to bridge the chasm between man and his environments, near and remote—between the subjectiv and the objectiv—is a failure. Spencer fails to do this in his Synthetic Philosophy, which leaves room for spooks and ghosts, and is therefore unscientific. Science does not recognize any "great Unknowable." It deals in facts; and for this very reason its office has been to reverse almost every conception held by past ages. I need only remind you of the changes wrought by it in the fields of astronomy, physics, chemistry, biology. We hav accepted all its conclusions in these branches, but when modern psychology said there was nothing unknowable, nothing supernatural, in and about man himself, the majority rose up and exclaimed, "We hav a spook in our head; we are veritable spooks." It does not surprise me. On scientific questions fools are and hav always been in the majority. Laws of nature are but the equivalences and correlativs of changes in matter. Mind is a collectivity of changes in matter. It is the outcome of the ego and the impingements of the external world; the strain we are subjected to when these come into contact, causes what we call consciousness. It is well enough to assert the existence of a spook, but so long as such a being, independent of physical causes, has not been produced, so long we cannot recognize the assertions of its existence.

I know that to many minds there is comfort in the idea of immortality, but I tell you there is no wisdom except in truth, and as Goethe says, "Better bitter truth than blessed error, for truth always heals the wounds that error inflicts." Immortality is a terrible curse when you cannot control the conditions. No, not immortality for man, the immortality of the race, let us hav. The human race is the flower of the universe. Human progress is Christ, human happiness the Holy Ghost. Let us direct our attention, our energies, to this visible, real world; let us rise to this our duty, for this duty is the mother of happiness.

Lectures and Meetings.

W. S. BELL will come East in the spring, and is now making engagements to lecture on his way here. His address is Box 109, Oakland, Cal.

W. F. JAMIESON gave two lectures in Chicago for the Secular Union before good audiences on both occasions. He is under engagement to deliver lectures in Woodbury county, Ia. Address all inquiries for lectures to Des Moines, Ia.

MISS ADA CAMPBELL is fortunately making a good recovery from her severe cold contracted in her December tour, and will renew her lecture engagements at once, beginning Friday, January 9th, at the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 E. 15th street, New York, on "Heredity."

ON Sunday afternoon, January 11th, at 3 o'clock, Miss Ida C. Craddock, corresponding secretary of the American Secular Union, will lecture on, "How to Make Freethinkers of the Young," before the Newark Liberal League, 177 Halsey street, corner of Market, Newark, N. J.

Brotherhood of Moralists.

Report of the Propaganda Committee of the Brotherhood of Moralists, at Hannibal, Mo., for December, 1890.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

During the month twenty-nine membership certificates were issued, making the whole number enrolled 1,267. The new members are from Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Texas, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, and England. Brother John R. Fleming, of American Falls, Idaho, enlisted fifteen new members this month. If half our members will make an effort our number can be doubled during the coming year.

F. H. RAU, Sec.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from last report		$69 95
Received from Wm. B. Young, Kansas		1 00
" J. R. Fleming, Idaho		50
" G. D. Dadisman, Virginia		2 00
Total		$ 73 45
Mailing constitutions	$3 95
Boston Investigator	1 55
Ironclad Age	1 30
	6 80	6 80
Balance		$66 65

Hannibal, Mo. A. R. AYRES, Treasurer.

A CARD OF THANKS.

Every member of the Brotherhood of Moralists should appreciate any favor shown to the propaganda committee, hence it givs me pleasure to make public acknowledgment of our obligation to the New York TRUTH SEEKER, Boston Investigator, Ironclad Age, of Indianapolis, Ind., Secular Thought, of Toronto, Ont., and Freethought, of San Francisco, Cal., for the gratuitous publication of our monthly reports, and also for occasional favorable notices of our order.

A. R. AYRES,
F. H. RAU,
WM. GATTS. } Committee.

Communications.

The Relations of the Sexes in the Age of Reason.

THE TRUTH SEEKER'S review of Helen H. Gardener's book calls up some very important, even fundamental, questions. We are, plainly, entering upon the Age of Reason. What are to be the principles upon which society is to act in it? The remains of the customs of primeval man that survive among us are numerous, but known as such by few. Rationalists know and recognize many among religious rites that those blinded by superstition do not see. But among the so-called Freethinkers, how many hav turned their eyes inward and discovered primeval customs that we hav taken no special stand for rooting up? We hav the high authority of Spencer for believing that there co-existed among primeval societies at least three forms of marriage or relations between the sexes; to wit, promiscuity, polygamy, and polyandry, and possibly also monogamy. But how many recognize the fact that we hav not yet grown out of that stage? At a rough guess one might be safe in saying that seventy-five per cent of the men are polygamous or promiscuous, fifteen per cent of the women promiscuous, and ten per cent polyandrous. It is not open and avowed as in primeval societies, but it exists. The important question is, What will be society's attitude toward these relations when the Age of Reason shall hav been fully ushered in?

Evolution is a progress from the homogeneous to the heterogeneous. Hence, to go from promiscuity to monogamy, is to traverse the whole circle of evolution in that department of life.

We know now that a particle of matter, scarcely visible to the unarmed eye, may grow in the human body, when once introduced, till it destroys the normal tissues, or so changes them that the man is a raving maniac. Another, of another kind, grows till it is a being of the same kind as its parent. The almost infinit divisibility of a grain of musk shows, too, the potency of infinitesimal particles of matter. Is it safe to deny that, in marriage, whether monogamous, polygamous, polyandrous, or promiscuous, the parties to it become and remain physically and materially a part and parcel of each other? Let each one reflect on the particulars himself or herself, for whilst it would not be improper to go into particulars here, it might exclude the paper from the mails. But it will go to prove that, in promiscuous relations, the tendency is to turn our bodies back to homogeneity, much as the various substances on land are washed into the sea and mixed into homogeneity.

It seems undeniable that mental growth proceeds best among the monogamously related. Brain development, as shown by Galton, is slightly antagonistic to fecundity. Carried to a destructiv extreme as in Newton's case, mental growth, or brain power, destroys generativ force. The same is true of muscular growth. I took lessons all one winter in "the manly art of self-defense," and my master's trainers told me that when they put him in training for a prize-fight, the first step was to take him away from his wife. Each person has just so much energy. It may be exerted in one direction to excess, but it will not be there to exert in another.

The races of northern Europe hav given us Reason, and were the first to evolve out of superstition. Their religions were rational as compared with the mythical religions of the races that surround the Mediterranean. So, too, their relations hav been more nearly monogamous than in the southern and oriental races.

The conclusions seem to me to be inevitable that, if the race is to gain in cerebral power, it must come to strictly monogamous relations. There is a world of history in the word Ehe in high German, that means marriage now, and is akin to the Greek word con, the root meaning being "forever."

Suppose we take for granted that liberty should govern in this matter; that the monogamously inclined follow out their wishes, the polygamous hav as many wives as they can get, the polyandrous woman be no longer required to enjoy secretly the society of all but one of her husbands, and the promiscuous wives of the public be accorded protection and recognition instead of being, as now, outlawed. If evolution is to act in the future as in the past, must not the principle slowly, and in a long time, put the monogamous ahead of all the others in brain and muscle power? If monogamy is and leads to differentiation and heterogeneity, and if promiscuity is the back track toward homogeneity, is there any doubt of what line of conduct Rationalists should lay out?

The fathers hav eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge. Boys and girls inherit the passions of their parents. But if the cerebral caliber of the race is to increase, it seems that the waste must not go on in another direction. It is my ambition to write some day a large book on "The Rational Conduct of Life." In it I should indicate that the force or energy of young people must be governed and directed. A man said to me once, "Look at this community of virtuous farmers; they plow and delve from sun to sun and get so damned tired that they sleep solidly the night through and there is no time nor energy left to be expended in vices." Certain it is that boys can be made to so aspire to round and beautiful muscles covered with pink and ruddy skin that they will prefer chastity that aids it rather than promiscuity that works against it.

I do not believe that segregation of the sexes will aid this end; rather a frank mingling, all having been informed on the ends, aims, and purposes of nature, so to speak, and striving toward the rational life from thorough knowledge.

From our earliest and best sources of information we learn that the fair, northern races of Europe were chaste in youth and mainly monogamous in marriage. Out of them has come all that is highest and best in the world of society.

The first step of a woman into promiscuity often seems a rise rather than a fall. She is perhaps a servant, a cook, chambermaid, or scrub-girl. The words of sympathy that come to her are few indeed. So much easier is she led away by the counterfeits when they reach her ears. The consequences seem at first an improvement, for she wears silks and jewels and associates with gentlemen and receives admiring glances. She seems to hav risen instead of to hav fallen. Yet most of them perish as miserable, diseased drunkards.

In a little French song a mother looks at her baby's hand and says, "I wonder if these little coral tapering fingers will one day be horny hands wielding a hammer to break stones on the highway." The victims of promiscuity had their babyhood, when their fingers were coral and tapering, the blood in their veins pure as the water that falls from the clouds, and their breath as sweet as new milk. These women might in many a case hav run those fingers through the hair of a stanch, true husband or wound their lithe arms around his neck whilst speaking words of love and comfort. But they hav come to poison the race and to poison the air with foul odors of alcohol and tobacco and foul words.

It is a fact that promiscuity degrades women worse than it does men. Once therein women often lose whatever moral sense they ever had, but some of the most honorable men in all business relations are notorious promiscuists.

The question before Rationalists is whether in the Age of Reason men shall still demand the vast sacrifice of womanhood that is now demanded. Or shall we grow into monogamy in the true sense of the word, growing at the same time into beauty of form and strength of muscle such as was possessed by those virtuous barbarians who with large, muscular, and gleaming bodies, long, waving blonde hair, and "fiercely blue eyes," rushed naked upon the famous legions of Varus and made Herrmann's battlefield the wonder of all ages?

In the way of reforming promiscuists much cannot be expected. The vast mass of them will not change. But wherever one does, whether man or woman, he or she should be encouraged and put as on his or her original footing. The power of superstition is shown no more in any one thing than in that men will marry widows who will not marry girls who hav taken but one false step.

I hav not read Miss Gardener's novel, a busy life not yet permitting it, and hav to content myself with reading the review of it. But clearly it seems to me she puts before us men the question, Gentlemen, let us in the light of Reason look coolly and judiciously on the women sacrificed to promiscuity and ask ourselvs if in the Age of Reason it is to be the same. Shall passion devour forever? Or shall the excess of its force be turned into useful channels, and Justice and Humanity rule, in the Age of Reason?

GEORGE WILSON.

Lexington, Mo., Dec. 23, 1890.

Talmage.

Mr. Talmage, the preacher, is delivering, as everybody is supposed to know, a course of sermons or addresses on his recent visit to the Holy Land. I went to hear him last Sunday morning. His fame and popularity as an orthodox divine led me to expect something out of the ordinary routine of church service. I was disappointed but interested. This may sound paradoxical but it is true all the same. I was disappointed in the matter of the sermon and in the manner of the man, and interested to know how the flabby self-conceits of the divine could satisfy the intellectual and moral requirements of such a vast audience.

Talmage has enormous imagination. "He sees a little, presumes a great deal, and jumps to a conclusion." He describes a thing fairly well, but he is eloquent when he is describing something which neither he nor anyone else has seen. He has a good memory for names, dates, and places, but he cannot remember the component parts of his discourse. It is a disconnected, abrupt, illogical, and incoherent [illegible], has been sentenced to nine years' imprisonment tial jumble of phrases. His manner is like his creed—hard, cruel, and repulsiv. He gave us one or two autobiographical hints which led me to the conclusion that I was listening to the highest developed Christian.

He said, "When I was a young man at Mount Pleasant, one Sunday afternoon during my reading of Doddridge's 'Progress of the Soul' a few scales fell from my eyes. When I had been in the ministry about a year and was reading to my people a passage from the Bible a few more fell, and last Sunday evening, whilst preparing for my New York sermon, I picked up a book lying on my library table on 'Consecration,' more scales fell, and now I can see God in all his glory."

Damascus was the theme of the discourse, but there was not much of Damascus in it.

It was a grand old city founded by the grandsons of Noah. It had a street which was called straight; it was watered by two rivers and surrounded by opulent gardens. The population was composed of thirty thousand Christians and one hundred and fifty thousand Mohammedans. This led up to a general denunciation of Mohammedanism. He declared it to be "the greatest error which had cursed the world." It had one or two redeeming features, however. First. Everyone must wash before attending prayers; and as these were offered five times a day. the people were clean. Second. It was a religion of sobriety. Third. The people were not ashamed of their religion. I understood these things in the nature of contrasts, but I may be mistaken. The polygamy practiced by these people came in for well-deserved condemnation. "Any religion," said the preacher, "which lowers woman one thousandth part of an inch below the level of man is an accursed religion and ought to be destroyed." This was a truly manly utterance and I began to think that the thoughtful world had misunderstood Talmagian philosophy; but when he referred to Saul on his way to Damascus and to Paul the apostle of Jesus Christ, I began mentally to examin the teaching of Paul concerning woman and to test it by the standard previously raised. Did Paul lower the level of woman? I asked myself. The answer came, 'he debased and degraded her.' Then Paul preached an accursed religion. I remembered reading that Paul wrote, "Man is the head of woman." Man must not cover his head because it is the image and glory of God, but woman must cover her head. Also, 'Let woman be instructed in silence and in all submission. I do not permit women to teach nor to hav authority over man, but I order her to keep silence." I remembered also what Christ is reported to hav said about his mother, and I remembered, also, that at the second council of Mâcon held in the year 585 it was then decided that woman belonged to humanity because the mother of Jesus was a woman.

I did not want to hear any more. Out of his own mouth the Brooklyn divine had been convicted of preaching and propagating an "accursed religion."

HENRY ROWLEY.

Items of Foreign Freethought News.

Since Miss Craddock at the Portsmouth congress advocated the adoption of the pansy as a Freethought symbol, Belgium, Spain, and Sweden hav adopted it.

Indictments for blasphemy are very common in Germany, Dr. Peus, of Berlin, Mr. Aug. Kruhl, of Hirshberg, and Dr. Voelkel being the latest victims. The latter has at present five indictments against him—two in Berlin, one in Halle, one in Mühlhausen in Thüringen, and one in Bernburg.

The Freethought society of North Stockholm, Sweden, has excluded Henry Berghell from its meetings. Captain Thomson writes that the conduct of Berghell has been a serious obstacle in the way of the growth of Freethought in Sweden, and that it will prevent many from joining the society as soon as otherwise would be the case. Captain Thomson on behalf of the society asks us to say "Happy New Year" to the Swedish Freethinkers in America.

During the last few months Freethought has suffered by the death of Louise Ackermann, the poetess; Alphonse Karr, the novelist, and Louis Jacolliot, the traveler and author of "The Bible in India." These three individuals hav, each in his or her own line, rendered important services to Freethought by embodying its maxims in works read by the public at large. Though their existence has come to an end, their spirit livs yet in the works they hav produced and the influence they hav exercised, and they did not liv in vain.

It is a well-attested historical fact that the Roman Catholic church has an excellent digestiv apparatus for all kinds of worldly property, yet it is comparatively rare to find a priest stealing from his church. But Domenica Maggio, canonicus of Catavia cathedral, has been sentenced to nine years' imprisonment at hard labor for stealing two massiv gold monstrances belonging to the church, valued at $125,000. The pious thief sold his booty and spent the money on the demi-monde of Naples.

G. M. Boman's Funeral.

From the Seattle, Wash., Post-Intelligencer.

The funeral ceremonies of the late George M. Boman were held at the chamber of commerce yesterday afternoon, and were remarkable in many particulars. They were marked by a total absence of what is popularly termed religion, and yet there was a solemnity about the proceedings fully equal to that which characterizes a Christian ceremony. There were no prayers, no readings of scripture, no words of solemn warning and exhortation from a preacher, but the words of the speakers were marked by great elevation of thought, as they held up the good qualities of the dead man as worthy of imitation.

The friends of the family and the pall-bearers went in carriages to Mr. Boman's former residence at Fremont at 1 o'clock, and escorted the remains and Mr. Boman's family to the chamber of commerce, where the body was placed in the reception room, surrounded by a number of floral wreaths and other tributes. There about two hundred former friends of Mr. Boman had assembled, a majority of them being fellow-members of the Washington Secular Union, of which he was a director and treasurer. All the rooms on the ground floor, as well as the entrance hall, were crowded.

The ceremony opened with a solo selected from several hymns and beautifully rendered by Miss Houghton. The funeral oration was then delivered by C. B. Reynolds, secretary of the Washington Secular Union, who spoke with much feeling, his voice often betraying deep emotion. He said:

In the presence of death how beliefs and dogmas wither and decay. Character alone survives; goodness never dies; love only is immortal.

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
Half willing, half reluctant to be led,
And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
Nor wholly reassured and comforted
By promises of others in their stead,
Which though more splendid may not please him more,
So nature deals with us, and takes away
Our playthings, one by one, and by the hand
Leads us to rest so gently that we go
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or stay—
Being too full of sleep to understand
How far the unknown transcends
The what we know.

Death is a wonderful equalizer. Saint or sinner, Infidel or Christian, death enters all homes.

We do not much wonder when our neighbor's house is made desolate. But when death enters our own home we stand appalled. Then, indeed, we realize we are all travelers on the same journey of life, and, oh! how much we need each other's love and sympathy. When the grim messenger lays his remorseless hands upon our loved ones our hearts are saddened, numbed with grief, the tendrils of affection are ruthlessly torn asunder and our hearts bleed. In our weak humanity we moan and sob, and tears blind our eyes. It seems to us the sun of our life is darkened forever, the sky of memory enshrouded in the dark pall of night, the stars of peace blotted from the firmament of our future.

Yet we know the whitest foam dances upon the darkest billows, and the stars shine brightest when surrounded by the blackest thunder-clouds. Joy and sorrow make up the lot of our natural existence. To day the clouds of doubt may skirt the horizon and obscure the meridian of our fond anticipations. Adverse winds may blow and the storms of misfortune rage.

But soon the angel of light and loveliness, Hope, will twine the sweetest roses round our sorrow-bowed, aching heads, and dress up for us a bower of future happiness, festooning it with the choicest of elysian flowers. The dark cell of despairing grief has always at least one tiny pinhole to let the glory of hope shine in.

It is wonderful to the mourner how the soul, at first sullenly repelling the light of gladness, admits the first one little ray of hope unconsciously, and is so soon beguiled into a blessed state of calm resignation to the inevitable.

Joy and sorrow are the beautiful forms of sympathy in which hope appears as a gracious angel hovering over the sorrowful of earth.

Death is the inevitable law of nature. Let us calmly realize it, and go forward in hope and perseverance, relying on our own indomitable will and energy, and we shall find long, broad, beautiful pieces of comfort among the shreds strewn in life's pathway. Only let us be sure to gather them as we go; pass them not by, or we lose them forever. There is no retracing our steps in the journey of life. We pass over the road but once. Oh! let us be careful, watchful, to do all the good we can, help others all we can, so that at the end of the journey our hearts shall not be burdened with regrets for opportunities neglected.

Life and death are essential conditions. On every side we see life and death, organization and decomposition, formation and decay, following each other as regularly as day and night, spring, summer, autumn, and winter. But for errors of our education we should look calmly on death as a simple condition of nature, neither to be feared, desired, or dreaded.

When our loved ones die we weep and mourn. We do so pity them. Yet is not much of our sorrow selfish? Not for those at peace, calmly sleeping, sweetly resting, their labor o'er, their work accomplished, need we weep.

Our brother lived a most useful life, his work well and faithfully done. To-day he is at rest—sleeps the eternal sleep of peace. Yet our hearts are sad. Tears fill our eyes; we are bereaved. The dear companionship, the wise counsel, the true sympathy, the ready help, his loving ministrations, are lost to us. But for our dead, all is well with them. In the language of Eliza Cook:

'Tis a long, 'tis a last, 'tis a beautiful rest,
When all sorrow is passed from the brow and the breast;
And the lone spirit truly and wisely may crave
The sleep that is dreamless, the sleep of the grave.

Dead—resolved back into the elements from whence we came—we shall not utterly cease to exist, for we survive in the love and fond affection of those near and dear to us. We liv in the memory of those our lives hav benefited. If we hav done justly, loved mercy, sought to promote the welfare and happiness of our fellow-creatures, we shall liv, our influence be felt and our memory cherished by those we hav by generous act, or utterance of ennobling thought, or brave example, cheered or inspired to nobler, happier, more useful lives. There is real peace and joy, true comfort, in the last hour of life, if we know that we hav done well and that the good accomplished will exert its influence for all time. No noble act, no generous impulse of the breast, has ever perished.

Superstition has taught us to fear death. In health the thought of the grave to many is horrible. But when age or disease hav brought decrepitude, when there is naught but severe pain and suffering, then, oh, so weary, you long for rest, for peace, the end; for sleep—the calm, peaceful, eternal sleep of the grave that knows no awakening; trouble, pain, sorrow, ended forever.

We are assembled to do honor to the memory of a true, brave heart. His constant aim was to promote others' happiness. In the cause of humanity, the advancement of universal mental liberty, the defense of the wronged, in behalf of the principles of right, our brother had the courage of a lion. For those who sorrowed or suffered he had a heart as kind and sympathetic as that of the most gentle woman.

George M. Boman was born at Hutchinson's Ferry, Hamilton county, near Chattanooga, Tenn., May 22, 1844. His relativs, all his friends, were devoted to the cause of the South. His father, loyal to the Union, had, just before his death, exacted a promis from each of his boys that they would never take up arms against the Union. All his relativs, on the outbreak of the Rebellion, sided with the South. His brothers joined the Confederate army and tried every means first to persuade, then to coerce. But his loyalty to his father, his respect for his plighted word, his sense of justice, his tender pity for the oppressed induced him to forsake home, fortune, kindred, friends, and enter the ranks of the Union army to do battle for justice and liberty. He enlisted February, 1862, in the Fourth Tennessee Infantry, was a brave and faithful soldier, and was honorably discharged June, 1865.

He came to Washington October, 1875, without friends or capital, save his own indomitable energy, industry, and integrity. Never afraid or ashamed of honest toil, he worked hard, practiced economy, invested his savings in real estate, and from the very smallest of judicious investments, by his keen foresight, integrity, and liberality, he amassed a competence. Wealth only gave opportunity to gratify his benevolence. The wealthy respected, the poor dearly loved him.

You all knew his life. The very worst that can be said of him is, he dared to think for himself and giv utterance to his honest convictions. He worshiped at the shrine of truth; his god was nature; his church all humanity; his creed justice—justice tempered with mercy; his motto, Put yourself in his place; his constant endeavor to make all around him happy. He read, studied, thought for himself. He rejoiced in the glorious freedom and ennobling truths of Liberalism, but scorned the empty professions of faith, the bigotry, the intolerance, and the fanaticism of the church. He had only contemptuous scorn for the false claims of divinity, but the tenderest compassion, the most willing, liberal help, for the needs of suffering humanity.

He was an Infidel and had the courage to avow it.

Infidel is a term of reproach applied to those who venture to step aside from the popular current of belief and dare to think for themselvs. Our brother believed, and his life justified his belief, that a life of uprightness actuated by a desire to do good to our fellow-creatures was sure of happy results. Dare any here deny that a life of love, mercy, and benevolence is the best possible preparation for any heaven of the future, if any such there be? Our brother believed it to be our duty to endeavor to lead the erring from vice to the practice of virtue by loving admonitions and good example. He feared no truth, but accepted without hesitation whatever he proved was true and rejected only what he proved to be false.

Then weep no more, dear Christian friends, because of our brother's lack of faith in creeds, since you all well know he lived a life of loving deeds.

Let us endeavor, like him, to make secondary metaphysical disputations in regard to an ideal world beyond the clouds in which we may liv, and devote our best intelligence to practical questions pertaining to this present world in which we do now liv. Seek to improve mankind with love of right, love of truth, love to each other, and with a spirit of fidelity to duty. Learn what is right and do it. Realize our duty is here and now to do all we can to make all around us joyous and happy—to soothe the sorrows of the afflicted, and help the needy by affording them means of employment for the body and cultivation for the mind. Liv lives of love instead of making professions of faith.

Practice justice and mercy in lieu of idle rites and ceremonies. And above all, constantly ourselvs do all to help the needy, soothe the sorrowing, comfort the afflicted, instead of idly praying to a God to do it for us.

To the dear loved and loving wife, the remembrance of how his life has blessed hers, how each promoted the other's happiness, and the melancholy comfort that, as time passes, shall ever cheer, that her self-sacrificing devotion, her tender, careful nursing and loving ministrations alleviated his sufferings and soothed and comforted him through his weary sickness. He fell asleep, to sweet eternal rest, rejoicing in her love and dear affection. Men may come and men may go, flowers fade, hearts wither, generations go down into the sepulcher of the ages, but none of the glorious attributes of humanity shall ever cease to be. All that is good and noble is secure from the moldering touch of time, for no disinterested deed, no generous impulse of the human heart, but shall survive the stars.

And in this assurance we bid our dear brother farewell, and proceed to consign him to the bosom of mother earth, in the hope that his good and useful life may lead honest hearts to earnest thoughts that shall umpire better, kindlier, more useful, happier lives. Let the virtue of our brother be held in sacred remembrance as an impetus, an inspiration, to those who remain behind, so soon to follow after.

Mrs. S. A. C. Rochester then sang in sweet tones, full of expression, the song, "The Long, Long, Weary Day."

Judge Junius Rochester was then called upon to speak, and, though his grief at the loss of his best friend hardly allowed him to preserve his composure, he said a few appropriate words, as follows:

Friends, a good man has fallen. George M. Boman is gone. Words were a poor balm to the widowed heart and little consolation for the feelings of those who loved him. To them I bring the sympathy of a wounded heart.

But to you, friends, you men of business, you who knew him in his daily walks of life as the honest, upright, successful business man, I would speak a word. From the life of George M. Boman there are many lessons to learn. To none, perhaps, except the widowed heart, was it given to know him so well as I knew him. He was my friend, "faithful and just to me," as he was faithful and just to all with whom he came in contact. With the courage of his convictions he dared to liv up to his pretensions. Of how few, alas! can this be said.

Friendship, love, and truth—these were his mottoes, these were his life. Friendship, love, and truth—these three. But the greatest of these is love. His love, founded, as all true love is, in his devotion for his wife, included love for his friends and love for his country. Nor did it stop there, but love for all mankind, love for nature, love for the universe. With this broad affection he lived not for himself, but for others. His highest pleasure was the happiness of others. Universal freedom was his hope; universal happiness was his religion. It is well on occasions like this to lay aside our business cares and ordinary considerations and learn these lessons, lessons which cannot be learned from books, but only from human life; learn that real happiness consists in seeing others happy and making others happy; that true friendship requires: "As you would that men should do unto you do ye even so to them." Truth is as broad as the universe, is confined to no time and no place. A priceless gem, it is the heritage of all mankind, a treasure to be prized wherever found. Let us take these lessons to our hearts. Let them enter in our lives. Let them become of us a part. Let us learn to

So liv that when our summons comes
To join the innumerable caravan
That journey to that mysterious realm
Where each shall take his chamber
In the silent halls of death,
We go not like the quarry slave at night,
Scourged to his dungeon,
But, sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust,
Approach our graves
Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him,
And lies down to pleasant dreams.

Those present then passed around the remains and looked their last on the dead man's face, Mrs. Rochester playing low, soft music as they did so, the airs selected being such favorits as "Home, Sweet Home," and "Far Away."

The procession then went to the Odd Fellows cemetery, where the Grand Army funeral service was read by S. F. Street, commander of Stevens post, of which Mr. Boman was a member. L. A. Treen, W. L. Ames, and M. M. Holmes, the department commander, saying the solemn words of commitment. The service was adapted for the funeral of a man of Mr. Boman's Liberal views, but was not for that reason lacking in beauty. The symbols of the order—the laurel of the soldier and the white rose of purity—were laid on the casket and then the body was lowered to its last resting-place, which looks down on Lake Union and Fremont, the town which Mr. Boman, largely by his own efforts, saw grow out of the midst of a dense forest.

The pall-bearers were E. F. Wittler, Andrew Jackson, Percy W. Rochester, Judge Junius Rochester, C. F. Bauntge, Judge John P. Hoyt, and W. D. Wood. There were besides the following honorary pall-bearers: Chamber of Commerce: J. B. Metcalf and Griffith Davies; Masons: L. S. Rowe and —— Anderson; Grand Army: C. F. Treat and Lyman Wood; Washington Secular Union: R. S. Wilson and Richard Winsor. The members of Mr. Boman's family who were present were his wife, his son Ralph, his wife's father, John D. Selleck, and her brother, Edwin Selleck.

In the Night.

Lying asleep between the sheets of night,
I hear a sound arise beside my bed,
Faint first, but swelling as I lift my head;
And growing fiercer till I strike a light.
It issues from a mouth not made to bite
Nor yet articulate, but small and red,
With voice imperativ, which spoke and said
I wist not what, save something to incite
Me to a livelier motion, and I haste,
Without formality of donning shoes
Or coat or vest, or any other clothes,
To warm a quart of milk, in toilet chaste,
Which in a bottle quickly I infuse,
And thrust—THE SAME—BENEATH THAT—INFANT'S NOSE!!!

—George Macdonald in Freethought.

CHURCH taxation seems to be a subject arousing considerable attention of late in church circles. Two of the most influential religious journals, the Christian Union and the Independent, hav lately declared in favor of the taxation of church property, just as other property is taxed, and last Monday the Baptist Preachers' Association of Baltimore, after a discussion of the subject, voted in favor of it. The agitation in favor of such taxation has heretofore come as a rule from outside ecclesiastical circles. If now it is to be started within such circles, the movement will be, as Carlyle would say, "significant of much." If it is to be successful, we should infinitly prefer to see the initiativ come from the churches themselvs than from their enemies.—The Voice.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - JANUARY 10, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN

ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE

By MISS ADA CAMPBELL,

ENTITLED

Side Lights on South Sea Missions.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

Hav the Mormons Abandoned Polygamy?

The fanatics of the Christian church, ostensibly in the interest of morality, but really in opposition to Mormonism as a religion, are asking for further anti-Mormon legislation. Whether or not it should be granted is considered at some length by the Sun of this city, which arrives at the conclusion that it should not, because "civilization has conquered, and the last of avowedly polygamous marriages has already occurred." Its reasons for so thinking are worthy the attention of those Christian church-members who itch to persecute Mormonism as their ancestors persecuted other heretical sects; for if they make more laws against the Utah sect, let it be done boldly so that the world can see the true animus of their acts.

Last year, as a result of the anti-Mormon legislation, President Woodruff issued a manifesto in which he said:

"Inasmuch as laws hav been enacted by Congress forbidding plural marriages, which laws hav been pronounced constitutional by the court of last resort, I do hereby declare my intention to submit to those laws, and to use all my influence with the members of the church over which I preside to hav them do likewise. There is nothing in my teachings to the church or in those of my associates, during the time specified, which can reasonably be construed to inculcate or encourage polygamy, and when any elder of the church has used language which appeared to convey such teaching he has been promptly reproved; and I now publicly declare that my advice to the Latter Day Saints is to refrain from contracting any marriage forbidden by the laws of the land."

At a semi-annual conference of the Mormon church this manifesto was unanimously indorsed as binding. Governor Thomas declared that this action of the Mormons had "the force of a new revelation," and that polygamy "has been buried never to be resurrected." Judge Zane publicly announced that he held the manifesto of President Woodruff and its ratification by the conference to be authoritativ, and that "Mormons must hereafter regard plural or polygamous marriages as a violation of the creed and doctrins of the church." He admitted a Mormon to citizenship, and declared that membership of the Mormon church should not henceforth be a bar to naturalization.

The only ground upon which new legislation can be asked is that the Mormons were not sincere in their abandonment of polygamy, and this position the Sun shows cannot be maintained. It points out that even though fanaticism demanded a new revelation to supersede the old, it has the equivalent of one already in the "revelation" of Joseph Smith made in 1841, of which the forty-ninth paragraph reads:

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, that when I giv a commandment to any of the sons of men to do a work unto my name, and those sons of men go with all their might, and with all they hav, to perform that work, and cease not their diligence, and their enemies come upon them, and hinder them from performing that work, behold, it behooveth me to require that work no more at the hands of those sons of men, but to accept of their offerings."

Now, after nearly fifty years, this item of revelation has come into great prominence. The Hon. George Q. Cannon, the former delegate from Utah, quoted it at the October conference as the basis of Woodruff's manifesto, and argued that it furnished a complete sanction for abandoning plural marriages. President Woodruff himself pursued the same line of thought in his address to that conference:

"The Lord has required at our hands many things that we hav not done, many things that we were prevented from doing. The Lord required us to build a temple in Jackson county. We were prevented by violence from doing it. He required us to build a temple in the far West, which we hav not been able to do. A great many things hav been required of us, and we hav not been able to do them, because of those that surrounded us in the world. When our nation passes laws, as they hav done, in regard to this principle which we hav presented to the conference, it is not wisdom for us to make war upon sixty-five millions of people. It is not wisdom for us to go forth and carry out this principle against the laws of the nation and receive the consequences."

And Mr. Cannon, in his speech at the conference, also implied that President Woodruff spoke with authority, and that his manifesto was practically a new revelation:

"We hav waited for the Lord to move in the matter; and on the 24th of September, President Woodruff made up his mind that he would write something, and he had the spirit of it. He had prayed about it and had besought God repeatedly to show him what to do. At that time the spirit came upon him, and the document that has been read in your hearing was the result. I know that it was right, much as it has gone against the grain with me in many respects, because many of you know the contest we hav had upon this point. But when God speaks, and when God makes known his mind and will, I hope that I and all Latter Day Saints will bow in submission to it."

The fair conclusion, thinks the Sun, is that "the old dispensation of plural marriages, for which Joseph Smith is said to hav received a revelation on the 12th of July, 1843, although it was generally made public only about ten years later, has passed away; and if so, the progressiv legislation of Congress against Mormon polygamy, which began in 1862, may also call a halt. There is no ground for pushing it further merely in order to giv the Liberal or Gentile party in Utah an advantage over the People's or Mormon party."

And the same authority might also hav added that there is no further need of "progressiv legislation" merely to aid one branch of the church to get the better of another branch by confiscating its property and imprisoning its members. With polygamy abandoned Mormonism has the same right that Protestantism has—no more, no less—and legislation to suppress it is contrary to the principles upon which this republic is founded.

Mother and Daughter.

In a recent contribution to an English periodical Mr. Gladstone quoted the canon law of the Roman Catholic church, which says: "We do not count them to be homicides to whom it may hav happened, through their burning zeal for mother church against the excommunicated, to put any of these to death."

Referring to this the Christian Advocate says: "It is impossible without a knowledge of history to realize the depth of unchristian malignity to which the Roman Catholic church sank. Protestants for a long time afterward, polluted by the source whence they sprang, were also guilty of crimes from which the moral sense of the present age revolts. But the original germs of such atrocities are in the bosom of the Roman church, and only the general progress of mankind and the ascendency of Protestantism in the first powers of the globe prevents them from bursting forth into malignant efforts to destroy heretics."

Un-Christian malignity is good! Supposing the Infidels had committed the almost innumerable monstrous crimes of which organized Christianity has been guilty—would the Advocate say that Infidelity was not responsible for it? If so, why do they charge the excesses of the infuriated Christians during the French Revolution upon Infidelity because a few leaders of that revolt were heretics?

Protestantism has been, to the extent of its power, equally guilty with Romanism. Who can forget the bloody contests of the rival churches in Great Britain and on the continent, or the cruelties practiced upon heretics by the orthodox Protestants of New England? The "general progress of mankind" has had more to do than to repress the brutality of Romanism; it has also had to keep down the disposition of the Protestants to imitate the older church. The original germs in the bosom of the Roman church hav fructified and flourished famously in the breast of its daughter, and she has herself made not a few "malignant efforts to destroy heretics."

But we will giv the "general progress of mankind" credit for having reformed Protestantism so that a paragraph which appeared in a Madrid newspaper within a short time would not be printed in a Protestant paper. Even the Presbyterian Observer would hesitate to say: "Thank God, we are returning to those times when heretics were severely punished. The establishment of a tribunal of the Inquisition will be set up again ere long. Its action will be more startling and more fruitful of results than formerly. What a festival it will be for us when we see our adversaries writhing in the flames of the Inquisition!"

But we recollect that it was Protestant Jonathan Edwards who exclaimed, "Tolerate Atheism! Sir, there is nothing outside of hell I would not sooner tolerate!"

What did he mean by that?

The Breckinridge Sunday Rest Bill.

Mr. Louis Wolfes, of Martinsburg, West Virginia, believes in doing what he can to help secure freedom to exist, and so he wrote to his servants in Congress protesting against their having anything to do with enacting the Breckinridge Sunday Rest bill into law. That he did well in doing this is shown by the replies. Senator Charles J. Faulkner said:

"The legal views you present in reference to the matter especially demand considerable consideration, and I assure you I will do nothing touching this bill until I hav carefully considered all the views suggested by you."

William L. Wilson, in the House of Representativs, sent Mr. Wolfes the cheering information that the Sabbatarians are unlikely to get the bill before the House this session. He writes:

"There is, I think, not the slightest prospect of the Breckinridge Sunday Rest bill being taken up for consideration. I hav not examined the bill, as there is little time to look after matters that hav no promis of being considered; but I hav very decided views as to the impolicy of legislation of that kind by the federal government."

That is good news Mr. Wilson sends, and we trust he is right about it. But it will do no harm for all the Senators and Representativs to be told that a large number of their constituents are opposed to all such measures. They can put the information away to be used when occasion requires.

Queer Statistics.

The Democratic Standard, of Leavenworth, Kan., publishes a personal record of the prisoners received at the penitentiary during the past year. A friend sends it on with the remark that it is worth putting on record, and we agree with him.

It will be seen from these figures that in these cases at least some old-fashioned notions concerning the incentiv to crime and the prevention thereof are poked away. It used to be thought by the self-complacent pharisees of the churches that religious parents would rear children in a moral manner from which they would not depart, but the figures of Warden Case hardly bear this out. His report shows:

"Parents church-members? Yes, 500; no, 175; don't know, 69. Denominations: Catholic, 69; Methodist, 175; Baptist, 125; Presbyterian, 30; United Presbyterian, 2; Cumberland Presbyterian, 10; Christian, 30; United Brethren, 8; Lutheran, 20; Episcopal, 7; Congregational, 8; Dunkard, 1; Advent, 4; Quaker, 1; don't know, 10."

It used also to be supposed that the mere fact of belonging to a church prevented crime, but among these prisoners there are more church-members than non-church-members, and as two-thirds of the non-church-members are still religious, it is very plain that the Christians form a good proportion of penitentiary inmates:

"Hav you been a church-member? Yes, 374; no, 370. Denominations: Catholic, 59; Methodist, 79; Baptist, 57; Presbyterian, 45; Christian, 60; United Brethren, 23; Lutheran, 30; Episcopal, 8; Congregational, 8; Quaker, 1."

More than two to one of these criminals were also Sunday-school scholars:

"Hav you attended Sunday-school regularly? Yes, 500; no, 244."

Other questions, with answers upsetting some usually accepted theories, were these:

"Did your parents use liquor as a beverage? Yes, 200; no, 500; don't know, 44.

"Hav you used liquor as a beverage? Yes, 524; no, 220.

"Average age at which prisoners began to drink, 18.

"Were you led into crime through drink? Yes, 350; no, 394.

"Motivs which led to commission of crime: Gain, 200; effects of drink, 350; revenge, 25; lust, 1; self-defense, 50; not guilty, 118.

"Prisoners whose ancestry were criminals, 10.

"Politics of parents: Democrats, 150; Republicans, 500; Union Labor, 34; don't know, 60.

"Politics of prisoners: Democrats, 250; Republicans, 300; not of age, don't vote, 194.

"Character of reading before imprisonment: Miscellaneous, 500; historical, 50; religious, 69; legal, 50; scientific, 75.

"Prisoner's boyhood homes: City, 250; town, 150; country, 344.

"Do you use profane language? Yes, 444; no, 300.

"Hav you previously been in penitentiary? Yes, 40; no, 704.

"Average number years of schooling: 3¼; number of graduates, 9.

"Character of associates before imprisonment: Good, 500; bad, 50.

"Character of associates before imprisonment: Mixed, 194.

"Places where prisoners spent evenings: At home, 450; about town, 294.

"Average age when leaving home, 17.

"Causes for leaving home: To enlist in the army, 20; to come to America, 25; to earn their own support, 400; to see the world, 80; difficulty with stepmother or stepfather, 50; death of parents, 100; marriage, 60; ran away, 9.

"Prisoners who desire to reform, 744; don't want to reform, 2.

"Disposition as to place or locality: Stable, 454; roving, 290."

It will be seen from these answers that temperance parents furnished more criminal children than drinking parents; that only a very few of the criminals were such through heredity; that the country breeds criminals faster than the city, while the towns make boys comparativly moral; that but very few could trace their downfall to bad associates; and that most of the prisoners had usually spent their evenings at home.

All these things are so different from the prevalent idea that a study of them will incline one to question either the value of statistics or of a "simple Christian life."

The Rev. O. R. Beebe.

Who is the Rev. O. R. Beebe?

The question is asked because in the Nebraska Christian Advocate a writer signing that name tells about "The Failure of Secularism," and crowds so much misinformation into two columns that we hail him as a genius and desire to know more about him. He ought not to be buried under sage-brush. Read this:

"The Secularists headed a demand a few years ago that the United States mails should be used for the purpose of carrying vicious, obscene, and vulgar literature, immoral pictures, and other instruments of vice throughout the land."

And this:

"The Paine memorial building of Boston was sold under the sheriff's hammer years ago, and if half the churches in the land were given them to-morrow, they would all be sold out by the sheriff inside of five years."

And this:

"Who is not familiar with the cheerless history of Liberal, Mo., or of Ingersoll, Kan.? With every possible factor to warrant success, these places became dull, wicked, and forbidding, shunned by the outside world, and deserted by their inhabitants as rats desert a sinking ship. And this went on until the minister of religion came and urged them to accept the simple law of Christian progress."

Where is Ingersoll, Kansas?

The remainder of the article is as accurate in statement as these paragraphs. The Rev. O. R. Beebe seems to be about the worst possible person to write a review of Secularism. Like the people who composed the Pentateuch, he knows nothing at all of what he is talking about.

An Orthodox Christian View.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of week before last we reprinted from the Independent an editorial condemning the use of the Bible and the teaching of religion in the public schools. In that journal since appears a letter from a doctor of divinity residing in Albany asking the editor some pertinent questions on kindred subjects, to which questions, however, the Independent editor shirks a direct reply, not daring to follow his own logic to its legitimate conclusion. The argument of the paper for the exclusion of religion from the schools was that it was a matter of justice to Jews and Infidels—an eminently proper and correct position to take. But this Albany doctor objects to doing justice, for he says that if the Independent's position be sound, then "we hav no right to mention with reverence there the name of Christ, on account of the children of the tax-paying Jews. We hav no right to pray, even silently, there, because the tax-paying Infidel would not hav his child's mind perverted by Deism. . . . On the same ground Christian teachers should be excluded; for it is undoubtedly a grievous wrong to the Jew and the Infidel to compel him to place his children under a teacher who can no more restrain his Christian influence, if he be a true child of God, than he can restrain his breathing." This objector to doing justice also goes further and puts the Independent in an awkward place—awkward because the Independent is afraid to be logical—by asking a lot of questions which the Nine Demands of Liberalism alone can adequately answer. He says:

"If our public schools must be godless in justice to unbelieving tax-payers so must all other public institutions supported by the taxes of the people. Our entire system of chaplains in prisons and reformatories, in military schools, in the army and navy, in state legislatures, and in the national Congress, involves the same injustice. What right hav we to tax the Catholic, the Jew, the Infidel, to support our military schools, then compel his boy to come under the influence of a Christian Protestant chaplain who not only reads the Bible to him, but prays before him and for him, and, if possible, with him; who preaches to him in public and labors with him in private, striving by all means to make a Christian man of him? What right hav we to tax the Catholic, the Jew, the Infidel, to support the state legislature, elect him to that body, then compel him every morning to submit to the praying of a Christian Protestant? I hav spent the eighteen years of my ministry in two capital cities, and hav never yet known either a Catholic, or Jew, or Infidel to be invited to officiate as chaplain. What right hav we to open our great presidential conventions with prayer, our world's fairs, in short, every great and serious undertaking? What right hav our executiv officers to issue thanksgiving and fast-day proclamations? What right hav they to take the oath of office? What right has our government to stamp upon our very dollars with which we pay our taxes the words 'In God we trust?' What right hav we to compel the Infidel to handle such money? When we know it is supposed to burn his pockets, and harrow up his soul to be in possession of such poisonous stuff. He has a right to the clean, cold silver.

"This argument in behalf of the unbelieving tax-payer would also demand a revision of our Christian statute books. What place is there for Sunday legislation? Consider what a burden we put upon the Jew. We practically compel him to observe two days in the week as rest days. His religious scruples hold him to the seventh day, our Christian statutes hold him to the first. Even if some slight concessions are made for his conscience sake, the result is practically the same, for no man can work when all the world is resting, neither can he rest much when all the world is at work, as every minister in the land, with his miserable half-and-half Mondays, can testify. Such a burden has this become that the Jews are agitating the question of adopting the Christian Sunday.

"Then, too, what right hav we tax the Infidel to sustain our vast and complicated police machinery throughout the state, and then on Sunday convert the whole system to our Christian use, to obtain a quiet, orderly day in which the Christians may read a book and worship a God in whom the Infidel tax-payer does not believe? He and his Infidel brethren tax-payers

"'Cannot work and cannot play,
On this the Christian's holy day.'

"Our Christian churches and institutions are exempt from taxation, the Jew and Infidel are compelled to shoulder their proportion of this burden. In fact, this little proposition to render the public school godless for the sake of the unbelieving Jew and Infidel is like the genius escaping from the bottle—it rises and rises till it fills the heavens like a cloud. It is a proposition to render the entire state and national government godless to accommodate that same Jew and Infidel."

The obvious answer to all these questions is that the state has no right to do any of these things, but the Independent dare not say so, and calls these inevitable conclusions "extreme," and thinks it has answered Dr. Ecob by saying that "what applies to public schools in free society does not apply to people locked up in barracks and asylums and prisons," though it forgot to explain how taxing the Infidel and Jew to pay for chaplains for these folks is not precisely as unjust as to tax them to pay for religious services in public schools—free society.

The Albany doctor is right—there can be no halfway work in this matter, and there are only two answers to be made to his questions. One of these is made by the Liberals in the Nine Demands. The other is made by himself, and here it is, though it will be received with astonishment when its full significance is comprehended:

"Would not the Independent hav a more hopeful task on hand to undertake to persuade our Jew and Infidel to be humble and thankful that they can hav all the benefits of a Christian state for the infinitesimal tax of two or three mills on a dollar?"

In other words, let the religious journals preach to the Jew and Infidel that they ought to be glad to be allowed to liv among Christians without asking to be placed on an equality with them! The Rev. J. H. Ecob, D.D., of Albany, N. Y., is certainly a meek and modest man!

Religion in a Jury Room.

Religion has been the cause of a great deal of coercion from first to last in the history of the human race, and caused a great deal of unhappiness and suffering. It has been forced upon men of all sorts and conditions, to accomplish purposes in themselvs good, bad, and indifferent. But Judge Balderson, of Wichita, Kan., has found the most novel use for it since Puritan times, as a means of compelling a jury to agree.

A jury was out in a murder case, but at 3 o'clock in the morning had failed to see alike. The judge then ordered the bailiff to bring in a minister. The reverend gentleman began regular religious services, the jury joining in singing the opening hymn. After prayer, the Rev. Mr. Harmon delivered a discourse, an hour long, on the immortality of the soul. He then made a closing prayer, and the jury reached a verdict of "guilty" on the first ballot after the benediction.

It is probable that the judge cannot obtain a patent on his invention, for it is alleged that the verdict will be set aside on the ground of undue influence, as it ought to be. The account of this affair reads like a yarn of some imaginativ reporter, but it seems to hav really transpired, and is but another instance of the unfitness of violent Christians to hold any office requiring the exercise of fairness and common sense. Nearly the same thing once happened in Westchester county in this state.

Editorial Notes.

ALL will learn with regret that Col. J. R. Kelso is very ill at his home in Longmont, Col.

THE village of South Pass, Ill., sends one hundred and forty-six names on a petition for opening the World's Fair on Sunday, but the collector was too modest to reveal his name. J. L. Gardiner, of Allegan, Mich., forwards a few hundred names—the petition is eleven feet long—and will gather another list in the same place. It will probably surprise the Sabbatarian fanatics to find that the memorials opposing their attempt to close the Fair outnumber their own, but we hope that such will be the case.

THE latest sensation in Spiritualist circles in this city is the placing of Mrs. Harriet E. Beach in the insane asylum. Mrs. Beach became enamored of the Diss Debar woman, who convinced her, as she is a wealthy woman, that it was her duty to carry out the work Luther Marsh failed in doing, and establish a home for indigent mediums. Mrs. Beach's friends, however, interfered, and when she was announced to lecture at Adelphi Hall under the tutelage of the Diss Debar took activ steps to get her away from the influence of the celebrated painter of spirit pictures. They consulted two eminent doctors, who pronounced her to be a victim of hallucinations of sight and hearing, and subject also to exalted delusions. They certified that she was insane. Upon this presentation of facts she was committed to the asylum. Mrs. Beach's delusion that she has visited distant parts of the material and spiritual universe is firmly fixed in her mind. She is thoroughly sincere in her belief that she has been transported in trance to all parts of the earth and to other planets. She describes to her friends in glowing language a visit of twenty-four hours to Uranus, which she declares is a planet vastly more beautiful and highly civilized than this. Heaven she has had a glimpse of, and hell she has viewed in detail. Mrs. Beach, it is said, announced about two weeks ago that she had held communication with Olympian Jove, and that he had told her that her husband was soon to die a violent death and that she was to hav all the property, excepting what it would cost to erect a monument to his memory. Twenty years ago Mrs. Beach was confined in the insane asylum at Hartford, but was shortly discharged as cured.

Letters from Friends.

WELLSVILLE, KAN., Dec. 12, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you a list of names in favor of a Sunday Exposition; so you can see how Liberal the people are, although there is but one copy of your paper that comes to this place, and it is for,

Yours respectfully, JOHN PETTIBONE.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., Dec. 20, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: In my TRUTH SEEKER of Dec. 13, 1890, you ask information from your readers, if the courts in Massachusetts open with prayer. Yes, and invariably all over the state. I hav asked a well-known lawyer, Hon. E. L. Barney, who has had practice in all but two of the counties in this state. ORVILLE V. SWIFT.

LIVERPOOL, ENG., Dec. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It has been advocated several times lately in THE TRUTH SEEKER by persons writing as friends to make the Secular organization a secret one. In my opinion it would be very unwise policy. We want more light and more diffusion of the principles of Secularism. Do not try to hide it. I hav been without supernaturalism sixty years, and the progress made in matters pertaining to free opinions is very great, and all we hav to do is to keep going forward.

CHARLES STOCKER.

DALLAS, TEX., Dec. 23, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I received the book, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" by Helen H. Gardener. It is of the higher order of genius. So true is nature in her creations and to her creatures that she errs only when diverted by selfish ignorance. In the portraits of policy and principle, the prime movers of all human action, one may search long and deep for a parallel. And in the final tragedy nature or fate is kind in obliterating an existence which, if continued, would be nought but extreme suffering and desolation. J. V. MULKS.

CRESSON, Dec. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I failed to receive my paper of the 6th inst. This has happened several times during the past half-year. Has Mr. Wanamaker placed THE TRUTH SEEKER on his Index Expurgatorius? I am greatly pleased with W. W. Walker's letter in your present issue. To a slight knowledge of astronomy more than to any other individual aid do I owe my emancipation from the bonds of theology and superstition. Putting aside the immensity of the universe there is nothing like a knowledge of the laws which govern our own planetary system for causing one to think and reason. With best wishes for your success and prosperity,

Yours very truly, ANNIE M. COYLE.

VALLEY CITY, DAK., Dec. 13, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $5, for which forward the "Pictorial Text-Book," and apply the balance to my subscription. I am well pleased with THE TRUTH SEEKER, and regard it as one of the most potent powers of the day for the diffusion of those great truths that, perhaps but slowly yet surely, are undermining the temples of superstition and rearing honest, noble, thoughtful men and women to dwell in peace and happiness where their ancestors prayed or fought through fear or hate. Little by little the car of progress rolls onward, and THE TRUTH SEEKER'S genius artist and able corps of contributors are entitled to a large share of the credit. J. JEFF DOBBIN.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Dec. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: It has occurred to me that it would be a good plan for the Liberals to select a time during the World's Fair at Chicago for a general meeting of the Liberals In all reasonable probability there will be a greater number of Liberals at the World's Fair than would be likely to be assembled together at any time or place in the near future, and why not take advantage of this opportunity and hav a general international convocation of the Freethinkers? Here the Liberals could be represented from all parts of the civilized world. Here all the various Freethinkers' societies and organizations could be present, at least by representation. Here many of the great writers, speakers, and leading Liberals of the world could hold an intellectual feast, and discuss the best ways and means of advancing the Liberal thought. I am of opinion that a meeting of this character would be productiv of great good, and hope the Freethinkers generally will giv the matter attention. J. M. VOSS.

GRANTFORK, ILL., Dec. 25, 290.

MR. EDITOR: A friend gave me a religious book to read. The author stated that there was, or used to exist, a society called the Orange County Infidel Society. "They held that it was right to indulge in lasciviousness, and that it was right to regulate their conduct as their propensities and appetites should dictate," and these principles were carried into practical operation by some families belonging to the society. And the author stated further that they all died some strange or unnatural death. Some drowned, others got shot or committed suicide or died of a terrible sickness. Now, I do not believe that there were any Infidels who held such views, nor do I believe what that book says as to there ever being such a society, because it said so many untrue things about Infidels that I knew were not so. Please publish this letter; perhaps some of your kind readers will know whether it is true or not. They can answer through THE TRUTH SEEKER so all may see. The book did not me tion in what state the county was. NICK KRAFT.

FOND DU LAC, WIS., Dec 23, 1890

MR. EDITOR: I see by the papers that the trouble with the Indians is closing. Now I would suggest that Congress be petitioned to ascertain, through the commission to be appointed to extract the bullets from Sitting Bull, the cost of the suppression of this Christian war, and the number of preachers sent as Indian agents, school-teachers, and missionaries, and their salaries. Then foot up the gross amount and ask Congress to make a law to assess the amount upon the church property of this country that is exempt from taxation and collect the amount, or confiscate the property, and dismiss all that class of heathen from that business. And then disband every Indian tribe, build each family a home, and necessary school-houses, and furnish all education and teach them the art of working and making a living.

And then again, amend the (Mormon) Edmunds bill by disfranchising every man who has or supports more than one wife, whether Mormon or not. DE-W. C. PRIEST.

MISSOULA, MONT., Dec. 20, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed you will find four names of new subscribers. I think much of the paper, also the pictures. I took the book around with me when trying to get some subscribers. It was amusing to see some of them open their eyes. One said, "Fine business that for a preacher's son! But then, they are always devils." It is a good way to show them what the paper is doing by the pictures. If some one that was acquainted here should see all the Liberals he could get several to take the paper. I got the four names after a rustle of every evening for a week. This is such a Catholic nest here! The old Jesuit priests came over forty years ago, and hav helped many a good Catholic here since. Nearly all of the Indians belong to that faith. We had the trouble of stretching four of their pious necks yesterday for murder. A priest stood each side of them, crucifix in hand, canting piously as they went—a disgrace on the manhood of the age. Wishing you success in the battle for the rights of thinkers, I am,

Yours truly, A. M. STEVENS.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Dec. 16, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $8 50 for subscription and one copy of the "Freethinker's Text-Book." We do not propose to deprive ourselvs of THE TRUTH SEEKER, which has become one of the family which we look for every week. I am not going to giv up trying to get you some subscribers. Everyone, nearly, likes the paper. Even church people hav to laugh at the pictures. I can assure you that I thoroughly enjoy the whole paper, notwithstanding I am a graduate from the Congregational church of this place, which kindly dropped my name after I had been a member of the First Society of Spiritualists for five years. I shall not quarrel with them. They are welcome to their faith. I would not exchange knowledge, ever so little, for all the faith in the world. I never could accept the doctrin of foreordination and free moral agency as they teach and believe it. I must confess I find it hard not to believe in the devil when I see how some people, even good Christians, act, and I think he will be quite as apt to hav a majority from the ranks of the church-going people as from those who do not go to church. I wish you every success in your fight for truth and Liberal principles, and a merry Christmas and many of them.

Yours very sincerely, JANE H. MONTGOMERY.

WILKESBARRE, PA., Dec. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Permit me to thank you for the kind indulgence extended to Mr. J. A. Tuttle, of Brooklyn, who so persistently sticks to his accusations against me for what he is pleased to call "quibbling." I hav read his last carefully to see if he had one word or thought that should interest the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and hav been unable to find it. He has not attempted to say a word about science in defense of his theories of matter, nor given me the least chance to combat anything in it, although his illustrations are somewhat amusing. He is evidently anxious to hav the last word, and no doubt feels that if he can strut upon his own dung-hill and hav the last crow and flop his wings a bit, he would feel that he had attained a great victory. He says: "I indulged a hope that he had some self-respect and would find it expedient to let go and drop off; but I now think it doubtful if a mule can kick hard enough to kick him off." This is a most singular though appropriate statement, when he thus compares himself to a kicking mule, for indeed he has been kicking very hard at some imaginary fly which he fancies I am, but in truth he has been kicking to see if he could not attract attention to the velocity of his flying heels and thus divert the readers from his absurd statements about spooks and sciences, etc. Now, my amiable Tuttle, do not kick so hard; it is straining to the muscles. Besides, you never can hope to kick hard enough or high enough to hit a fly sitting upon your back; all that you can do is to create mirth for the fly. If you will promis to quiet down a bit and be contented, the fly will leave you to feed on the newest things which your imagination can bring forth.

Yours, etc., J. R. PERRY.

BENTON, PA., Dec. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I here send you $2 for the "Pictorial Text-Book." I want it for a sample copy. Please send at once before the great state of Pennsylvania passes any more Blue laws. The state passed a law so late as 1868 making it a penal offense to speak loosely of the Holy Ghost, and it is a wonder that that buffle-headed assembly didn't pass a close time making it a penal offense to shoot ghosts during the breeding season. However, there is a story going the rounds here of a ghost being killed in the southern part of this state. A darkey chopped wood for a farmer one day. He was very religious, cowardly, and superstitious. At the supper table they all told ghost stories, and the darkey had to go home after night through the woods. One of the company at the table went ahead of the darkey on the sly and hid himself in the woods, and when the darkey passed by with an ax on his shoulder the man stepped out of the woods slyly with a white cloth on and walked along softly several yards before the darkey saw him, and when the darkey saw him he was so frightened that he let fly with the ax and split Mr. Ghost from the top of the head to the shoulders, and the ghost fell dead in the road. The darkey, being frightened, struck a gait at the rate of 2.21. The people came to the conclusion that it was but a foolish accident, and no one had a disposition to follow him. But the darkey was not to be found for a while. By and by a man came across him in Orleans, but found that he was deranged and believed from the bottom of his heart that he once killed a ghost and that it was the daddy of Jesus. Poor darkey, he didn't know that that ghost story was written by Joseph's mother-in-law to make fair weather for Mary. GEO. R. HESS.

Dec. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Being fair and unbiased as a Liberal, I like to hear the other side, and having been to a "child's sermon," it being "children's day" at a Congregational church, accompanied by my son of eight years, where we heard of Satan going about as a roaring lion tempting boys and girls in ways various and subtle, upon our return home I placed the picture of his Satanic majesty in view and the following conversation occurred:

Q. What is that, pa? A. That is the devil.

Q. What, the same that Rev. Mr. B. told about to-day at church? A. The very one.

Q. Well! he—is—a—devil—of—a—devil? isn't he? A. That is what?

Q. (After some study, with eyes flashing and indignation rising). I'll tell you what I'd do. If I had him down here I'd kill him in a minute. (A short pause, and then the second thought of self-preservation crept in.) But if I could not kill him I would be mighty careful that he did not get me. I would be good if I saw him coming, you bet! (Here other things attracted me, and for some time nothing was said; finally he said:)

Q. Pa, what good is a devil, anyhow? Why do people want him? They don't hav to hav him, do they? A. Not if they don't believe in him.

Q Well, he will not come around me, such a looking thing as that! You don't believe there is such a thing, do you, pa? A. No, to be honest, I do not (smiling).

Q. Ah, you're laughing! I thought it was taffy just as soon as you laughed.

Almost any child will reason out of the orthodox schemes if he is not compelled or frightened into belief. The whole thing is repugnant to childish nature. And how cruel it is to learn them such debasing things! UNCLE JACK.

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Dec. 23, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $2 for which you will please send me the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book." I hav been a subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER for many years, and should hardly know how to get along without it now, for I consider it the best of any of the Liberal papers now published, and that is saying a good deal. I hav been living in this city for about six years, formerly living in Wisconsin and Massachusetts. This is a beautiful city, and rather a historical one; and the climate is everything I could wish. The people are generally very sociable and hospitable, and, I think, rather partial to people from the North. All seem very anxious to hav Northern people come here and settle. But there is one great drawback to this Southern country. It is immensely priestridden. And that is a curse to any country. Not but that we hav a Liberal element here, but it is greatly in the minority. I notice it is here as in all other places, ignorance, superstition, and religion go hand in hand. That is, I find people religious just so far as they are ignorant. The darkies here largely predominate, and as a mass are intensely superstitious and ignorant, and yet as a people they hav got more of the old genuin primitiv religion than any people I ever saw or heard of. But in a moral point of view they are the most corrupt, licentious, thieving set of vagabonds you could scare up anywhere. But I hav noticed that if you educate the darkey it produces the same effect upon him as it does on the white man. It takes away his religion. The fact is, if you giv anyone, black or white, a scientific education, his religion will spill out of him as sure as whisky out of a barrel when the head is knocked in.

We had Sam Jones here a few weeks ago, and he got up quite a stir for a while, but the excitement died out soon. I consider him the biggest infernal liar, slanderer, and blackguard that I ever saw; and yet he is cunning and smart, and a wonderful success financially. He got about $1,500 for nine blackguard speeches. Success to THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Truly yours, D. S. WOODWORTH.

ORILLIA, ONT., Dec. 25, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me space to describe lectures of Rev. Dr. Sexton here last week. His first was on the folly of Infidelity, and the last on Darwin's Origin of Species. He handled the case well, and proved to the good Methodists whose house he occupied that there was a God who was from the beginning, who created all things and governs the universe. We then began to ask him questions:

1. What power created God? Answer. God was always and everlasting.

2. Was Christ a God? Answer. Christ was not a God, but he was God really and truly—good.

3. Was Christ really put to death? Answer. Yes.

We then had the Rev. Mr. Sexton in a hole, for if the world was made and run by God, and Christ was God and the Jews killed him, God was dead for three days and three nights; then while there was no God at all everything moved on just the same, with the exception of a few dead people, who seeing their opportunity jumped up out of their graves and ran up to the city. When they saw God was dead they came to life at once. It did look as if they had conspired for the last year or two to make a break for liberty as soon as a good opportunity presented itself. However, they must hav been good, law-abiding people, for they did not get arrested in the city, neither were they killed and put back in their graves again, and for all we know they are alive and well to this day. The reverend gentleman tried hard to get God up out of the grave, but we jumped on and kept him down. We claimed that if God was dead and he was the only God in the world, a dead God could not raise up a dead God and we would not let him up without a cause; and Mr. Sexton had no cause on hand to raise him, so he is there yet, although the speaker said that if we would buy a book it would explain all. And he went his way a sadder and a wiser man.

Another reverend gentleman of this town has since made the assertion here that Mr. Sexton is the best debater in the world and Mr. Ingersoll refused to meet him after being challenged several times. Kindly let me know if this is true. T. W. MOFFATT.

[Dr. Sexton is too small potatoes for Colonel Ingersoll, we should imagin, though we know nothing of the alleged challenges. Dr. Sexton is a renegade Secularist from England, well known to all English Secularists, and particularly to Mr. Watts, who has had several debates with him, easily flooring him every time. Mr. Sexton recently had a church in Dunkirk, N. Y., in which town information concerning him may be obtained.—ED. T. S.]

HOLLOWAY, LA., Dec. 20, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: The undersigned heartily seconds the move to convert the American Secular Union into a close corporation or into a brotherhood with a brief code, obligations, secret work, etc.

Most other organizations, whether antagonistic, neutral, or friendly to us, pay dues, hav their signs, pass-words, grips, badges, and fraternal obligations. By this means they are generally a well-known quantity to themselvs and easily preserve their autonomy; work with unanimity, save and school their proselytes, and generally push ahead as one solid phalanx, thus proving by their vigor and success the truth of the hoary maxim, In union there is strength.

It need not entail on Freethinkers a grievous expense to maintain in the field a few efficient lecturers "sowing seed and binding the sheaves."

Regarding the future, the first cause on the political docket to be tried and disposed of is the fierce conflict now beginning to rage hotly, along both horizontal and perpendicular lines, between the plutocrats and their mercenaries on the one side, and the great, long-suffering industrial masses on the other side. To meet this great national emergency, a new and third political party is in process of formation as if by spontaneous and unseen influences. All hail, third party!

"First come, first served," is a stale but favorit adage. Taking rather an optimistic view of the future, we will say that, next to the overthrow of the monopolies of natural wea'th and artificial privileges which we here term an economic fight, will come in its logical order by reason of its more prominent development, the social fight, to wit, temperance, free suffrage, educational reform, etc.

When the antimonopolist and the social reformer shall hav fought their good fight, accomplished their mission, and achieved glory enough for one generation, then the irrepressible conflict between the priest and his minions on the one side and a liberty-loving and philosophic people on the other side will be inevitable.

Then, if not before, will the value of a Secular Union of a crystallized and known quantity be better understood and more fully realized.

The Farmers' Alliance, Knights of Labor, and other kindred organizations are the best schools ever devised for developing a better manhood, a freer thought, and a contempt for bossism, either in society, in church, or in the state. These previous ordeals, with their trying and refining fires, will greatly fit and prepare our honest and sturdy yeomanry for the impending crisis which will surely come and try every man's soul. GEO. B. BROWN.

ST. JOSEPH, MO., Dec. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose for your perusal an article clipped from the St. Joseph Herald of this date:

French doctors hav been led of late by their investigations into hypnotism to go to Lourdes, where the wonderful miracle cures hav been made under Roman Catholic ministrations. A very large number of the most famous physicians of France hav been in attendance during the pilgrimages and processions. They selected no cases for their observation but those of lesions or wounds or lung consumption in the last stages, all certified as discharged from eminent hospitals as incurable. And what do they report? These former unbelieving, scoffing, hard-headed doctors—what do they report? Here is the language used in their report:

"We saw consumptivs cured; patients who were the bearers of the most explicit attestations from the medical men who had attended them. On these we could scarcely discover the traces of a congestion all but perfectly obliterated. Lungs in which tubercles and bacilli had been in full evolution for months and years were not yet quite perfectly permeable to the air, and still gave out now and then a slight hissing sound. But all morbid action seemed arrested, and the patients declared that their organs were as well as ever, and they felt as they had not felt for a very long time. Are these results to be lasting? We cannot reply affirmativly at present. But such as they are, they are surely most important. There can be no illusion in what has taken place. The facts are too numerous and too overwhelming. Such profound modifications as I hav described are not the effect of nervous commotion or of imagination. Try in a hospital to make fifteen or twenty such consumptivs get up from their beds; stop the fever, expectorations, sweats, and all the phenomena of organic decomposition; restore to all these sufferers their strength, their healthy color, their joyousness; fill up these cavernous voids in their lungs, the progress of which you daily followed with your ear. Put healthy tissue in the place of these ulcers, of these mortified tissues, just as you close up a wound by covering it over with sound flesh. Do all this in an instant, in a single second of time, and then tell me if you hav in this only done a thing of no account, and undeserving of serious attention. There exists, therefore, outside of us, beyond the sphere of all human resources, an agent who intervenes and leaves behind him the undeniable impress of his manifestations. This is what we shall see with still further evidence, when we enter on the detail of the facts submitted to our investigation."

The report is very long and minute. Truly we liv in a wondrous age.

The Herald is a very fair and Liberal paper on religious subjects, and givs all sides a chance at its columns. Many of our Freethought citizens hav availed themselvs of the privilege, and occasionally an article is inserted which makes narrow-minded orthodox folks open their eyes, and calls forth their criticisms. This clipping bears the earmarks of being placed in the Herald's columns by a Roman Catholic. If the statement it contains is false, it ought to be exposed. If true, I, in common no doubt with many of your subscribers, would like to hear your comments, as we believe the age of miracles is past, if it ever did exist.

Respectfully, ***

[The famous physicians are humbugs; the cures are humbugs; the report is a humbug. Why should Europe go crazy over Koch's lymph if a journey to Lourdes would cure consumption?—ED. T. S.]

CULLMAN, ALA., Dec. 8, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hereby send you a genuin hypocritical and dangerous notification:

MR. WILLIAM RICHTER, City: Convinced of the baneful effects of keeping open saloons on the Sabbath and of the indiscriminate sale of liquors to minors and to persons of known intemperate habits, and knowing that there is a disposition on the part of some of the saloonkeepers of our town to observe the law when assured that the others will do likewise, we respectfully notify you as we hav all the others that prosecutions will be instituted and vigorously followed up against all persons violating the law regulating the sale of liquors in the future. We hav no disposition to prosecute for former offenses any person who faithfully observes the law in the future, but those who do not will be prosecuted for past as well as future violations of the law. Your attention is called to Section 1320 of the code, Vol. I, and to 3910, Vol. II. Approved this 17th dav of Nov., 1890.

G. W. HANLIN, Chairman.
W. H. JONES, Secretary.

J. GARRISON,
W. L. MAUGUIRE,
CHAS. M. BROWN,
M. F. JOHNSON, } Committee.

Cullman was organized by Germans some sixteen years ago. I keep hotel in one house and saloon in the adjoining house. My customers like drinks while eating their meals. My saloon is always closed on the so-called Sabbath. About five years ago some hypocrits built a house for the Lord (he never told them to build him a house). I paid part of it as subscription. They always go to the saloonkeeper with the subscription list. Now they come and say, "Keep your door closed on the Sabbath." Who made the Sabbath? I pay the license for privilege to sell three hundred and sixty-five days. I pay the state of Alabama for selling three hundred and sixty-five days. I pay the county of Cullman for selling three hundred and sixty-five days. I pay to the city of Cullman for selling three hundred and sixty-five days. They say nothing in the license to the effect that I shall not keep open doors on their Sabbath.

Money! oh, money! thy praise I sing!
Thou art my savior, my god, and my king!
'Tis for thee that I preach, and for thee that I pray,
And make a collection twice each Sabbath day.

(The church has its door wide open on the Sabbath day, for the purpose shown in the above four lines.)

Money, that's the real trinity—
Three in one and one in three.
Priests may call thee filthy trash,
Yet I know they preach for cash.

(The citizen's door shall be closed on the Sabbath; the church has its door wide open.)

Bishops make a heavy pile,
Knowing well that all the while
They are gathering coals to swell
Their own fires in blazing hell.

Yours, WM. RICHTER.

[It seems to us that Mr. Richter would hav done well not to help build that church, as from a business point of view he made a bad investment.—ED. T. S.]

COLUMBUS, KAN., Dec. 26, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I will say a word on the true and perverted functions of faith, hope, and love. The errors and darkness of metaphysical and theological teachings fled from me fifty-five years ago, when from observation and comparison I learned that the brain is the organ of the mind—of all thought, feelings, emotions, motivs, impressions. How anyone can believe this and be orthodox is, to me, strange; yet I hav known many orthodox phrenological preachers. I saw, forty-seven years ago, poor, deluded women ravingly insane when Millerism excited to abnormal action the region of faith, hope, and love; and Millerism sent fifty such persons to the New York lunatic asylum. I told a young man whose head was hot in this region of faith, and who believed he had committed "the unpardonable sin," to keep away from religious meetings; but he did not, and was sent to the asylum and died there. The world is full of facts, constantly occurring, showing the false and perverted action of faith, hope, and love, by which our lunatic asylums are kept full, and suicide and murder committed.

It is most infernal, the climax of priestly wickedness, to excite to action, insane action, this region of the brain, under the delusion of saving the imaginary soul from the wrath of an imaginary God, in an imaginary future existence.

My deluded and credulous parents, fifty to seventy years ago, used to sing,

A charge to keep I hav,
A God to glorify,
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky.

Also:

Gird on the heavenly armor
Of faith and hope and love;
And, when your race is ended,
You'll reign with him above.

My dear mother's head was extremely full in the region of these three inspiring emotions, and to hear her pray would melt the hardest heart.

In their normal action, in relation to this life, these spiritual forces uplifted and sustained her in the great trials and afflictions which she endured with surprising fortitude and sublime faith. I hav always noticed that persons largely developed in this cerebral region were thereby greatly inspired and sustained in the cares, burdens, and business of this life. It has been contended by some phrenologists that this region of the brain proves and relates to a future world of spirits. In my present mental status I am impressed that this might be added to Remsburg's "False Claims." I see no proof that any part of the brain, or any power, force, or faculty of the human mind, has any legitimate, natural, and normal relation to a future spirit land.

For the enjoyment, inspiration, and purposes of this life a good degree of faith, hope, and love are necessary, as well as all the higher sentiments of the upper brain. They should be led and enlightened by the facts, science, and reason of the front brain, the lighthouse of the mind. If church and state permit natural cerebral growth, humanity will come by evolution out of the perverted action of all human forces to a healthful and happy life, here in this life. Oh, how we all are, more or less, cheated out of life by false views and actions. J. H. COOK.

ELLSWORTH, ELLSWORTH COUNTY, KAN., Dec. 2, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: For the past week I hav been circulatin the petition cut from your paper to keep open the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893 on Sundays. I hav secured eight hundred and sixty names. I could not very well confine myself to the city, and thought it just as well to take all the names I could get and head the petition Ellsworth county instead of city. I hav spent eight days at as hard labor as I ever did in my life; but feel well paid for my time, although I got many bitter sneers and some that I called insults. The Rev. Mr. Bull, Methodist, said my zeal was worthy of a better cause; that the cause I represented emanated from saloon men and the devil. I told him it was false; that he did not know where it emanated from and I did, and it was a fact with me and he was guessing at it from his standpoint. I asked a lady to sign the petition. She answered: "No, I won't. I hav heard enough about you and your old paper." Another reverend, Mr. Orwig, Methodist, has stolen lumber at one of our yards and was caught by the owner of the lumber. He made him pay for it, and when the reverend asked for a receipt it was written in this wise: "Received $5 from J. B. Orwig, for lumber that he stole." He demurred, but could get no other receipt. I went to a law office to get the lawyer's name. He and his wife signed, and several others. This Rev. Mr. Orwig was in the crowd. When I was half-way down the steps he came rushing wildly after me and said, "I want to sign that petition." I gave him the pencil. "Now," says he, "this is to keep the Fair closed on Sunday." I said, "No, it is to keep it open each and every Sunday of its continuance." He exclaimed, "You wicked woman, I should think you would be ashamed to carry such a paper in the streets!" I quietly said, "That is only a difference of opinion," and walked away. But from the more thoughtful I received many glorious words of good cheer, and it did me a large amount of good. One German said he was never more surprised than to see an American woman carrying a petition for opening anything on Sunday. All he had seen them interested in was closing everything but churches. His name is Voit Sander. He livs at Wilson, this county. The chat I had with him did me much good, and lightened the burden. I was cheered by many other Germans, and some of our own nationality spoke many words of cheer to this weary pilgrim as she tramped the streets, not of the New Jerusalem, but of dusty Ellsworth. One old German amused me very much when I asked him if he would sign the petition. He said: "No, sir, me no sign dot. If mine wife bees sick mit a baby on de Sunday I can no get de doctor til de Monday." I said: "Oh, no, that is not the kind of a paper this is. I don't belong to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union nor the National Sabbath Union." There was another German there that could read in English. He explained to him what it was for, and told him he knew me and it was all right. So he signed the petition. And when I was coming home in the evening I met the old German. He said to me, "How many names did you get this afternoon?" I replied, "About forty." "Ah," he said, "if I had been wit you you would hav more nor hundred." I told him I believed it. On the petition are nearly all the business men of this place, lawyers all but one, doctors all but two, merchants all but three dry-goods men and grocers, lumbermen all but one, blacksmiths all but one, all the hotel men—of which there are four—nearly all the mechanics. The professors and teachers nearly all hav signed the petition. And I am glad to send you so many names that I think would vote for separation of church and state. I could get more signers but cannot spare the time now, it is so near Christmas. Wishing you and THE TRUTH SEEKER success, MRS. SARAH J. METGTER.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Fragrant Fields of Corn.

I walked alone one summer morn
Along the fragrant fields of corn,
And rye, and wheat in waves between
Where millet spread its carpet green,
Contrasting with the darker woods
Where farmers plant the solitudes
On hill, and vale, and upland plain,
Whose whispering leaves, like song of rain,
Sang low to me that lovely morn
Whose fragrance came from fields of corn.

The buckwheat made a foamy sea,
So white its scented blossoms be,
And every lark upon the wing
With orioles came by to sing;
While bees of ours had yellow gold,
And almost more than they could hold
Or carry home, such clumsy flight
They made upon their waves of white.
For weeks the sun so fierce came down
The blackbirds' coats were turned to brown
Like any sad veil of a nun,
And yet I loved them, every one,
So joyous on that harvest morn
They sang above the fragrant corn.

In prairie-lanes, whose willow walls
Are green as ivied waterfalls,
The children rest in shadows cool
Upon their morning way to school.
Green walls found north, nor east, nor south,
But in the west where rosy mouth
Of singing boy, or whistling bird,
The leaves with song hav round us stirred;
And bird with wing of blue or brown,
Bird, red or black, from farm and town,
Sang songs that hid the roses' thorn
Along the fields of rustling corn.

Oh! wind-blown fields, how like the wave
Of ocean o'er a brother's grave!
And how like monument of his
Your every shining tassel is;
When his last bed is marked by reeds
And slender leaves 'mid ocean weeds,
Where golden sunlight shimmers through
The pointed spires and billows blue.

How many slumbering races sleep
Below these furrows long and deep!
Beyond the reach of hunters' horn,
And low, sweet song of tasseled corn.
Each russet row beneath these shades
Has felt the shock of warrior blades,
A legion battles, aye, and more,
Fought out upon this sanded floor;
Fields lost and won, and won and lost,
Upon the tide of centuries tossed,
Where man and beast, and beast and man,
Hav filled the universal plan,
To dig and delve and burrow where
Some prior owner held his lair;
Some insect, fish, or savage crew,
"Survival of the fittest" grew,
And yet, to me, what songs are borne
Upon these fields of fragrant corn!

Clearwater, Neb. MARY BAIRD FINCH.

Jefferson's Views of Religion.

[The following extracts are from a letter of Thomas Jefferson to his nephew, Peter Carr, while the latter was in college in 1787.]

Religion.—In the first place divest yourself of all bias in favor of novelty or singularity of opinion. Indulge them on any other subject than on that of religion.

On the other hand, shake off all the fears and servil prejudices under which weak minds are servilly crouched.

Fix reason firmly in her seat, and call to her tribunal every fact, every opinion.

Question with boldness even the existence of a God; because if there be one, he must more approve the homage of reason than of blindfold fear.

You will naturally examin, first, the religion of your own country. Read the Bible, then, as you would Livy or Tacitus. For example, in the book of Joshua we are told the sun stood still for several hours.

Were we to read that in Livy or Tacitus, we should class it with their showers of blood, speaking of their statues, beasts, etc.

But it is said that the writer of that book was inspired. Examin, therefore, candidly, what evidence there is of his having been inspired. The pretension is entitled to your inquiry, because millions believe it. On the other hand, you are astronomer enough to know how contrary it is to the law of nature. You will next read the New Testament. It is the history of a person called Jesus. Keep in your eye the opposit pretensions: First, of those who say he was begotten by God, born of a virgin, suspended and reversed the laws of nature at will, and ascended bodily into heaven; and second, of those who say he was of illegitimate birth, of a benevolent heart, enthusiastic mind, who set out with pretensions to divinity, ended in believing them, and was punished capitally for sedition, by being gibbeted, according to the Roman law, which punished the first commission of that offense by whipping, and the second by exile, or death (See this law in Digest, lib. 48, tit. 19, ¶ 28, 3, and Lipsius, lib. 2, De Cruce, cap. 2).

Do not be frightened from this inquiry by any fear of its consequences. If it ends in a belief that there is no God you will find incitements to virtue in the comfort and pleasantness you feel in its exercise and the love of others which it will procure you. If you find reason to believe there is a God, a consciousness that you are acting under his eye and that he approves you, will be a vast additional incitement. If that Jesus was also God, you will be comforted by a belief of his aid and love. Your own reason is the only oracle given you by heaven; and you are answerable not for the rightness, but uprightness of the decision.

In another letter to the same nephew he said: "Giv up money, giv up fame, giv up science, giv up the earth itself and all it contains, rather than do an immoral act. And never suppose that in any possible situation or any circumstance it is best for you to do a dishonorable thing."

Correspondence.

CLEARWATER, NEB., Nov. 27, 290.

MY DEAR MISS WIXON: I inclose a poem for the Children's Corner, but am fearful that it should prove too lengthy. If so, cast it aside and I shall not complain. The Corner is improving. The "Corner Gospel" is very entertaining and instructiv. Everyone can learn from such "preaching."

Wishing you success, I am,
Yours for humanity, MARY B. FINCH.

VERSAILLES, IND., Nov. 4, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As we are enjoying a day of vacation from school on account of the election, I hav voted to write to the Corner.

I studied the high school course last year, but this year I thought I would be more benefited by making a complete review of English history, algebra, and the common branches. The study of United States history is intensely interesting to me, as I hav a great many chances of giving my opinion to our Christian professor as to the trouble religion has caused the United States. As you are all aware, the name of Thomas Paine is never mentioned in the histories of the common school. Yet I never, when the opportunity occurs, fail to giv this great man the honor due him, much to the disgust of my more Christian schoolmates. I hope all of my young friends will do the same. Let us always stand up for the right.

Every four weeks we hav literary exercises, including a debate. The subject of the last debate was, "Resolved, that education is more beneficial to mankind than wealth." The argument on both sides was very good; but the affirmativ side ruled. One young man in particular, who professes to be a Liberal, declared that the Bible advocates education—that it is the grandest book, the book of life, the book of inspiration, the book of all books. I took the opportunity of asking him while he stood with a crowd of companions discussing the late debate if he was sincere in everything he said in his argument. He took the hint directly, or rather he understood instantly to what part of his debate I referred, but he seemed to desire that I should say nothing more about it. Turning to his companions he said he would "lie any time to gain a point." I intend to try to persuade him that it is wrong to act the hypocrit. He is well educated and is very energetic, and I think he would be a valuable Liberal if he could only see that it is unmanly to act the hypocrit. Now, my young friends, I hope none of you will ever do as this young man has done. Rather be nothing than pretend to be both Christian and Liberal, for as the saying is, "between two stools you will fall to the ground."

I also was on the affirmativ side, and in the argument mentioned that saying in the Bible, "A rich man can no more enter the kingdom of heaven than a camel can pass through a needle's eye." At the close of the debate our professor said he would giv us a bit of information; that needle's eye was the name of a gate through which no camel could pass; that at night a traveler would unload his camel and take his goods into the city, leaving his camel outside. Now, Miss Wixon, I would like to know from good authority if this is true. I would also like to know if Jefferson ever was thoroughly Christian before he died. A minister was our teacher a few years ago, and once, in a grammar lesson, inquired if the word God was always capitalized. I told him I thought it not always the case; that some writers write the word with a small letter, signifying their disbelief in such a being. He said that was so: that Jefferson always wrote the word with a small letter. "But," he said, turning a significant look upon me, "I hav reason to believe that he changed his views before his death." I was very indignant at this remark, and failing to find anything concerning it in either our books or the books of the town library, I thought, perhaps, you could giv me the desired information.

I hav never been able to find a good account of his life. This is the reason why I should like to hav it answered.

This same minister, when asked by me to explain the sentence in one of the notes of Hutchinson's "Physiology," "Health keeps the Atheist in the dark," said that when a person is in good health he feels independent of everyone, and is therefore an Infidel; when he is in bad health, he feels that he is dependent upon some one greater than himself, and is therefore a Christian.

From this I concluded that all the Christians are diseased in body, and no doubt in mind also. But I do not believe what he said, for I know a great many stanch Liberals who are very sickly.

I am fifteen years old, and would like to hav some girl of about my own age to correspond with me.

In the hopes that my letter will not find a place in the waste-basket, I remain,
Your friend, EMMA STOCKINGER.

[REMARKS.—Some Bible commentaries contain statements as given by the professor mentioned above. So we hav been told, but how well authenticated those statements may be we hav no means of knowing. The "word of God" should be more explicit. In either case, whether is meant a narrow gateway or the eye of an ordinary sewing needle, the difficulty of getting a rich man into heaven would seem to be about the same. There is no authority, to our knowledge, that the great Jefferson changed his theological views before his death. He died as he lived, a pronounced Liberal, hating all forms of tyranny over the human mind. He spoke of orthodoxy as "the incomprehensible jargon of the trinitarian arithmetic that three are one and one is three." After he was eighty years of age he was still more confirmed in his Liberal ideas. In another column we giv Jefferson's views on religion as addressed to his nephew.—ED. C. C.]

Mary and Her Little Lamb.

Perhaps the majority of boys and girls when they grow up to be men and women come to the conclusion that Mary and her lamb were both fictions, as much as the old woman who lived in a shoe, or Cinderella; but strange to say, there was a Mary and also a lamb, and the world-famous ditty was founded on fact, as Golden Days recently explained. The author was Sarah J. Hale, who died in Philadelphia some years ago at the age of eighty-six. The lamb, as previously remarked, must hav died long ago, and on Dec. 10, 1889, the heroin of the poem breathed her last. Her name was Mary F. Sawyer. She was born in Sterling, Mass., in 1806, and in that town the lamb episode is said to hav occurred.

It does not appear that Mary otherwise distinguished herself than in owning the lamb, but the poem givs us the assurance that she was a very kind-hearted girl, and in that respect she maintained her reputation until the day of her death. Her married name was Tyler, and as Aunt Mary Tyler she was known by all and esteemed by all. Thus the famous trio disappear from the earth, Mary and her lamb and the woman who made them both renowned. The poem itself is one of those imperishable things like the "Iliad," which generations yet to come will read with undiminished pleasure. There is no use speculating as to the cause of its popularity—it has come to stay.

For Adoption.

A gentleman living near Allegan, Mich., relates an interesting story of feline sagacity. Some person owning a cat with three kittens, and desiring to be rid of them, took them in a bag to a wood near the gentleman's house, and dropped them.

In a short time the mother cat was seen to approach the house with a kitten in her mouth. Reaching the door she dropped the kitten and retreated to the woods, from whence she soon returned with another kitten; but instead of leaving it where the first was left, she took it to a neighboring house, then returning to the woods brought out the third and last kitten, and left it at still another neighbor's.

The old cat then disappeared, and was not seen again until it was time for the kittens to be fed, when she visited each house, nursed the kittens, and then disappeared again.

This course of procedure she followed until the kittens were weaned, when she disappeared, and has not been seen since. Was it reason or instinct that caused the mother cat to distribute the kittens to different homes, so that all might be adopted and the lives of all be spared?—Youth's Companion.

THE
French Invasion of Ireland in '98.

Leaves of Unwritten History That Tell of a Heroic Endeavor and a Lost Opportunity to Throw Off England's Yoke.

By VALERIAN GRIBAYEDOFF.

With a map and numerous illustrations by well-known artists. Handsomely bound in silk cloth. Ink and gold side stamps. Price, $1.50.

The present volume is an effort to rescue from comparative oblivion one of the many extraordinary episodes of the great French revolutionary war. . . . It points a moral that amidst republican institutions like ours, will not fail to receive appreciation. It shows, on one hand, the elevating influence of newly acquired ambition, . . . and on the other the debasing effects of Religious and Political intolerance both on the tyrant and the victim. Contains a heretofore unpublished letter of Thomas Paine to the French Directory.

LOOKING BACKWARD

By Edward Bellamy,

Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.

The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.

A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.

12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

FESTIVAL OF ASHTAROTH.

A tale of Palestine, founded on the destruction of the Moabites by the Jews.

By A. C. MIDDLETON.

Price, ... 10 cents.

RELIGION OFMAN
AND
ETHICS OF SCIENCE.
BY
HUDSON TUTTLE.

A Historical and Critical Review of the Religion of Man.

CONTENTS: What is Religion? Fetichism. Phallic Worship. Man's Moral Progress Dependent on His Intellectual Growth. The Great Theological Problem. Man's Fall, and the Christian Scheme for his Redemption. Man's Position, Fate, Free Will, Free Agency, Necessity. Responsibility of the Individual. Genesis and Evolution of Spirit. The Law of Moral Government. The Apostles. Selfish Propensities. Love. Wisdom. Charter of Rights. Duties and Obligations of the Individual. Duties and Obligations of Society. Rights of Government. Duties of Society to Criminals. Duty of Self Culture. Marriage. Cloth; price, $1.50.

The Agnostic Annual
FOR 1891.
Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS.

An Agnostic View of the Bible.....Samuel Laing.
Fundamental Theses of Agnosticism.
R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
Agnosticism and the Church of England.
Amos Waters.
Avatar, Come! A Poem.
Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Instability of Faiths. Hon. C. K. Tuckerman.
The Iron Hand Under the Velvet Glove.
G. J. Holyoake.
Practical Religion.....Charles Watts.
The Cinerary Urn. A Sonnet.
Author of "Cæsar in Egypt."
The New Anglicanism.....B. Russell.
Androgynous Gods.
H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
Is Agnosticism Sound?.....Paul Carus.
"Is Agnosticism Sound?"
Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Poems of Joseph Ellis.....Mirabeau Brown.

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs by Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam Should Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Churches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportunity.
As the Clergy Desire Sunday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Our Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Church Institutions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Products of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religious Trap.
Sunday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
Encouragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Church's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Church.
The Church's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot.
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denounced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Church.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Drouth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Our Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janus-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Our Country, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conquest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Church of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Result of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Put their Sins.
Jesus Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for True Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxious Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occurrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Churchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossus of New York.
The Political Caliban and the ReligiousRogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Question.
The Churches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Trouble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Church, "Don't Hurt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Church True to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Church and State.

Some Allegories.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Outside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via. Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Surprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occupation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolution to Orthodoxy.
The Evolution of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crusade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams, D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths, A. Bierbower, M. Babcock, Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway, Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought, Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A. Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe, Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach, Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages, Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll, President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, Percy Bysshe Shelley, Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills, Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster, Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New Yor City.

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

ALABAMA.
Star News Depot, 2,003 2d ave., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter. 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco. [cisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Fran-

CANADA.
T.C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N.S.
Mrs. W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

COLORADO.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 314 S. State st, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.

KANSAS.
E. D. Sharpnack, Galena, Kan.

LOUISIANA.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MAINE.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 332 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
J. I. Freuhauf, Omaha.

NEW JERSEY.
C. Schmidt, 69 Pacific st., Newark.
J. G. Hunter, 66 Wickliff st., Newark.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.
Casimir Davis, Woodstown.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., "
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., "
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sidney.
W. Smith, 329 Superior st., Cleveland.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe street, Portsmouth. [Cleveland.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st.,

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J.H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk, Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave, Pittsburgh.

RHODE ISLAND.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
J. Jackson, Dallas.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
Geo. Funk, 909 Pacific ave., Tacoma.
C. B. Reynolds, 21046th st., Seattle.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Chas. H. Bamford, 190 Little Collins st., East Melbourne, Victoria.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany. N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.

PRICE, TEN CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER.

Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photographs of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I hav kept a SCRAP BOOK for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long too long to publish, some are short and good Rainy days I sit down and read them, and hav learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEX., Sept. 28, 1886.

To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four legged for six years. At last I hav traded off two of them to Bell—druggist—for four bottles of Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours. gratefully and unsolicited, J. B. IVY.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.

tf

The Humboldt Library of Science.

In this series are well represented the writings of DARWIN, SPENCER, HUXLEY, TYNDALL, PROCTOR, CLIFFORD and other leaders of thought in our time, at 50 to 75 per cent. lower than usual prices.

We have the Library bound in Complete Sets, as follows:

OLD STYLE.—In this style the volumes average 640 pages 8vo, and are arranged thus:

Vol. I.	Nos. 1-12	Vol. VI.	Nos. 60-70.
" II.	" 13-24	" VII.	" 71-80.
" III.	" 25-36.	" VIII.	" 81-91.
" IV.	" 37 48	" IX.	" 92-103.
" V.	" 49-59.	" X.	" 104-111.

Cloth, plain edges, $2 vol. (Separately or in sets.)
Half seal, marble edges, $2.75 vol. (In sets only.)

NEW STYLE.—Nos. 1 to 111 inclusive, are bound in 18 vols., averaging 492 pages each, 8vo, thus:

Cloth, extra, red edges, $1.75 per vol.	$22 75 per set.
Half seal, plain edges, 2.25	"	29 25 "
Half seal, marble edges, 2 50	"	32.50 "
Hlf Mor., marble edges, 2.75	"	33 75 "

In sets only.

All of the following are octavo, cloth:

WORKS BY PROFESSOR HUXLEY.

Man's Place in Nature. Numerous ill.; &
The Origin of Species. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Physical Basis of Life & other Essays.
Lectures on Evolution. Illustrated. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
Animal Automatism, and other Essays.
Technical Education, and other Essays. 2 books in 1 vol. .75

WORKS BY CHARLES DARWIN.

Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection; or, the Preservation of Favored Races in the Struggle for Life. New edition from the latest Eng. edition, with additions and corrections. 1.25
Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. With illustrations. New edition revised and augmented. 1.50
Formation of Vegetable Mold Through the Action of Worms, with Observations on their Habits. With illustrations. .75

Charles Darwin: His Life and Work. By Grant Allen. .75

SELECT WORKS BY GRANT ALLEN.

The Evolutionist at Large;
Vignettes from Nature; and
Force and Energy: A Theory of Dynamics. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

WATER, ELECTRICITY, AND LIGHT. BY PROFESSOR TYNDALL.

Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. 19 illustrations.
Lessons in Electricity. 60 illustrations.
Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

WORKS BY HERBERT SPENCER.

The Data of Ethics. .60
Education: Intellectual, Moral, and Physical; and Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other Disquisitions. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Genesis of Science.
The Factors of Organic Evolution. 2 books in 1 vol. .75

SELECT WORKS OF RICHARD A. PROCTOR, F.R.A.S.

Light Science for Leisure Hours.
Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects.
Hereditary Traits, and other Essays.
Miscellaneous Essays.
Illusions of the Senses, and other Essays.
Notes on Earthquakes, with 14 miscellaneous Essays. 6 books in 1 vol. 1.50

SELECT WORKS OF WM. KINGDON CLIFFORD, F.R.A.S.

Seeing and Thinking.
The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays.
Conditions of Mental Development, and other Essays.
The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences.
Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science. 5 books in 1 vol. 1.25

SELECT WORKS OF EDW. CLODD, F.R.A.S.

The Childhood of Religion.
The Birth and Growth of Myth.
The Childhood of the World. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

SELECT WORKS OF TH. RIBOT,

Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

The Diseases of Memory.
The Diseases of the Will.
The Diseases of Personality. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

THE MILKY WAY.

The Wonders of the Heavens. 32 Illus. By Camille Flammarion.
The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.
The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Nathan T. Carr, LL.D. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

POLITICAL SCIENCE.

Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The Eng. Constitution," and
History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock. 2 books in 1 vol. .75

THE LAND QUESTION.

The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.; and Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birbeck, M.A. 2 books in 1 vol. .75

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Mystery of Matter, and The Philosophy of Ignorance; and
The Essential Nature of Religion. By J. Allanson Picton. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
Science and Crime; and
Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E. 2 books in 1 vol. .71

[Continued in next column.]

HUMBOLDT LIBRARY (Continued).

Current Discussions in Science; and Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Black Death. An Account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century; and The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker. M.D. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Naturalist on the River Amazon. A Record of Adventures, Habits of Animals, Sketches of Brazilian and Indian Life and Aspects of Nature Under the Equator, during Eleven Years of Travel, by Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S., Assis. Sec. to the Royal Geographical Society of England. .75
The Rise and Early Constitution of Universities, with a Survey of Medieval Education. By S. S. Laurie, LL.D., Professor of the Institutes and History of Education in the University of Edinburgh. .75
The Religions of the Ancient World, including Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia, Persia, India, Phœnicia, Etruria, Greece, Rome. By George Rawlinson, M.A., Camden Professor of Ancient History, Oxford, and Canon of Canterbury, author of "The Origin of Nations," "The Five Great Monarchies," etc. .75
Fetichism; A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze. Translated from the German by J. Fitzgerald, M.A. .75
Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Logic and Political Economy in the Owens College, Manchester. .75
On the Study of Words. By Richard Chenevix Trench, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. .75
The Dawn of History: An Introduction to Pre-Historic Study. Edited by C. F. Keary, M.A., of the British Museum. .75
Geological Sketches at Home and Abroad. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., Director-General of the Geological Surveys of Great Britain and Ireland. .75
Illusions: A Psychological Study. By James Sully, Author of "Sensation and Intuition," "Pessimism," etc. .75
The Pleasures of Life. (Parts I. and II.) By Sir John Lubbock, Bart. 2 parts in 1. .75
English Past and Present. (Parts I. and II.) By Richard Chenevix Trench. 2 parts in 1. Complete. .75
The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S. Over 80 Illus. .75

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL

Price, 25 Cents.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No. 2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American, Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.

A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.

Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.

For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

The downcast eyes of timid acquiescence hav paid to impudent authority the tribute of a thoughtless yes.—R. G. Ingersoll.

CONTENTS.

A Splendid Judge of a Woman.
The Lady of the Club.
Under Protest.
For the Prosecution.
A Rusty Link in the Chain.
The Boler House Mystery.
The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors.
Florence Campbell's Fate.
My Patient's Story.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

NOW READY.

A VOLUME OF THE WRITINGS OF

HORACE SEAVER.

COMPILED BY

L. K. WASHBURN.

This volume comprises some of the ablest and best editorials written by Mr. Seaver during the past forty-five years. It is neatly printed on cream-white paper, bound in cloth, and contains a fine likeness of the venerable editor of the Investigator. Every Liberal should hav this book in his home. It is now ready for delivery.

Price, $1.00.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WETTSTEIN'S WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $25. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.

With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS FREE. make 100 PER CENT. profit, on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Samples Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhatian Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.

124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7 30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,

Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union

Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.

FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society

Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7 30 P M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Portsmouth, O., Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7 P M. in Grand Army Hall. Lectures, discussions, readings, poems, music and songs. A cordial invitation is extended to all; especially to friends from abroad. Correspondence solicited. J. L. TREUTHART, President. WILL S. ANDRES, Secretary.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

News of the Week.

SKIRMISHES with Indians hav occurred since the battle of Wounded Knee creek. Pine Ridge agency has been strongly fortified by General Miles. The hostils hav consumed the last of the stolen government herd. The greatest battle of Indian history seems impending, but perhaps a treaty may be effected.

THE Church of England has finally instituted provisions for monastic orders.

PROTESTANTS in Germany are petitioning against readmission of Jesuits.

POLES are flocking to Brazil despite deterrent efforts of the Russian government.

AN exodus of Russian and Russo-Polish Jews to North and South America is beginning.

A CONVENT at Pistoja, Italy, has been broken up by the authorities for refusing to admit government inspectors.

THE Farmers' Alliance and the Knights of Labor will join to form a political party which they say will regenerate the nation.

SAN FRANCISCO Jews will raise $250,000 to buy 1,000,000 acres in Mexico and send there the Hebrews persecuted in Russia.

SECOND Adventist Sanctificationists and Faith Curers of Ohio are holding a state convention. They cite scripture to prove that the end of the world is at hand.

THE Catholics of Germany hav formed, under Dr. Windthorst and other recognized Catholic leaders, an anti-Socialist league, "to combat revolutionary errors and tendencies on social questions and to defend Christian social order."

INFLUENTIAL Catholics in Italy favor suspension of the injunction against voting, and organization of a papal political party. But the pope has not signified concurrence.

CATHOLICS decry the sectarian bigotry of Protestant Toronto in forbidding Sunday street-cars, while it "tolerates ruffianly attacks on convents and religious processions, by Orange ruffians."

CATHOLICS report that they are nearly one-fifth in Maine, one-third in New Hampshire, one-fourth in Vermont, two-fifths in Massachusetts, over two-fifths in Rhode Island, and one-third in Connecticut.

THE pope has instituted an order of chivalry, having chevaliers, commanders, and grand crosses, to reward services to himself and the church. It will be called the Order of the Servants of St. Peter.

CATHOLICISM in Australia has increased thus since 1876: members, 450,000 to 750,000; clergy, 350 to 620; convents, 70 to 270; nuns, 560 to 2,100; churches and chapels, 620 to 880; schools, 350 to 700.

KNUT HAMSUN, a Norwegian, has returned home from this country and written that American liberty is a myth. "Everything above or below George Washington's simple mind," he says, "is punished."

HUXLEY'S dispraise of the Salvation Army's "Darkest England" scheme has blighted it. "The sneer of the spiritual paralytic," complains a Christian organ, "has had tremendous effect. Booth is not likely to recover from its force."

OF the debates on Socialism in which Catholic clergy hav been instructed to engage, one of the most notable was recently held at Liege, the abbe Pottier maintaining against leading Socialists that their scheme is ill, and that all good has proceeded from Catholicism.

WITHIN the last year the navy department has established altars and sacristies on a number of its ships, notably on the receiving ship Vermont and the warship Philadelphia. At gala occasions on the Philadelphia the national flag is unfurled behind the altar. On the Vermont a confessional has been erected.

JUSTIN PETTIGREW, of Sioux Falls, S. D., brother of the Senator, has been dangerously ill, and his wife, who is a believer in Faith Cure, has been treating him with the methods of that faith, aided by a professional faith healer from Kansas City. His relativs hav at last interposed and enforced regular medical treatment.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

HOW TO SELL BIBLES—A SUGGESTION TO THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

Gems of Thought.

MATTER as such is indestructible, it cannot be annihilated; no grain of dust in the universe can vanish from, and none can enter it. It is the greatest service rendered to us by chemistry that for the last hundred years it has taught us this indubitable fact, that the unceasing changes and transformations of phenomena, which pass daily before our eyes, the formation and destruction of organic and inorganic forms and figures, do not consist of the formation of matter previously non-existent, nor of the destruction of matter then present, as was generally thought in earlier times, but that this change consists in nothing save in a continual and unbroken rotation of the same substance, of which the mass and the quality remain unalterable and identical for all ages.—Büchner.

INSTEAD of ascribing the wonderful phenomena of nature to a cause even more inexplicable than the phenomena themselvs, we regard the universe as the self-contained cause of its activities, in the same general sense that theologians imagin God as the self-contained cause of his operations. We hold that this is the only reasonable view, from the fact that every form of argument indicating the necessity of an antecedent or creativ cause of nature, would also imply the necessity of an antecedent cause of that creator. We are, therefore, logically driven to the conclusion that matter contains within itself the potency to produce all the effects which we behold. . . . We recognize no such thing as absolutely dead matter.—Edgar C. Beall.

BEGINNING my studies the first step pleas'd me so much,
The mere fact consciousness, these forms, the power of motion,
The least insect or animal, the senses, eyesight, love,
The first step I say awed me and pleas'd me so much,
I hav hardly gone and hardly wish'd to go any farther,
But stop and loiter all the time to sing it in ecstatic songs. —Walt Whitman.

THOREAU'S habitual thought makes all his poetry a hymn to the Cause of causes, the Spirit which vivifies and controls his own:

"I hearing get, who had but ears,
And sight, who had but eyes before;
I moments liv, who lived but years,
And truth discern, who knew but learning's lore."

And still more in these religious lines:

"Now chiefly is my natal hour,
And only now my prime of life;
I will not doubt the love untold,
Which not my worth or want hath bought,
Which moved me young, and moves me old,
And to this evening hath me brought."

—Emerson.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 3. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, January 17, 1891. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

HOW THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS DOLE OUT RUBBISH INSTEAD OF BREAD.

Notes and Clippings.

THERE are untaxed churches in Brooklyn, N. Y., to the amount of $12,000,000, and property owned by religious institutions to the amount of several millions more. And the taxpayers grin and bear it.

THE Mohammedans of Bombay hav petitioned the English authorities to prohibit a projected play entitled, "Mohammed," in preparation for the stage of that city. Why not? The Christians in this city once petitioned the authorities to stop a production of the Passion Play, and the authorities did it.

THE Sun says of the proposed reform in New York's divorce laws that "Roman Catholic sentiment is too powerful to make the change possible, especially as it would be backed by the efforts of Protestant churches, more especially the Episcopalian and Presbyterian." And yet the same journal has repeatedly said that church and state are separate in this country!

THE Rev. Mr. Yates, of Bonham, Tex., says Freethought, will doubtless hav less faith hereafter in the literal validity of scriptural promises than he had a few weeks ago. He read in Mark xiv, 18, that if a believer drank any deadly thing it should not hurt him, and to prove that the Bible meant what it said, and that he was a true believer, he took ten grains of strychnin. A physician, assisted by a stomach pump, saved his life, but he is now willing to concede that the last part of the gospel of Mark is a wicked and fraudulent interpolation, whose author he would be pleased to interview.

THE census bureau list of religious sects discloses one hundred and forty. In the list are the General-Six-Principle Baptists, the Schwerkfeldians, the Theosophical Society, the Life and Advent Union, and others which to a majority of people will be entirely new. With a hundred and forty creeds formally adopted, and "many independent organizations" with their own notions besides, the task of those who favor church union, thinks the Providence Journal, is difficult indeed.

THE Tagblatt says that the German government has taken the initiativ toward calling a conference to consider the establishment of an international system of protection against Anarchist outrages. Among the subjects mentioned for the consideration of the conference, says the Tagblatt, are extradition for political murders and the limitation of the present rights of asylum. An order has also been issued forbidding the soldiers garrisoned in Berlin from patronizing or visiting ninety-seven specified restaurants because they are conducted by Socialists.

DR. MONROE is president, and Miss Baby Monroe is secretary, of the North American Confederation of Atheists. The platform of the society is this declaration: "Jehovah wasn't God. Jesus Christ wasn't God. Jesus Christ isn't our savior. He never was. He never will be. Mary wasn't the mother of God. Mary wasn't a virgin to any considerable extent, at any time. God didn't make the world in six days. God didn't make it at all. There is no God." A Supplementary Declaration sets forth these self-evident truths: "The gospel is founded on fable, falsehood, and fraud. Ministers and priests are propagators of exploded humbugs. They are the drones in the industrial hive. They consume but do not contribute. Investing wealth in church edifices while want pervades every city is wickedness."

THIS is the sort of "news" that Mr. P. Donan sends from Fargo, North Dakota, to this blizzard-swept and frozen-up city: "Fargo, Jan. 4th. Here, the sun shines resplendently as it has ever shone since its luminous rays first gilded the tree-tops of primeval paradise, with light fresh from the throne of God. Here, the skies are as blue as the turquoise arch that spans the fairy isles of the far Caribbean sea. Here, the soda fountains and ice-cream foundries are in full blast. Here, the whole air is full of the perfume of magnolia, jessamin, and orange blooms; the mocking-birds and gorgeous paroquets and cockatoos warble musical challenges to each other amid the rich foliage of the sweet bay and mango trees; the banana plants and pine-apples swap luscious jokes on the weather with the fig trees, the olivs and limes; while the tall palms wave their feathery plumes in triumphant jubilation over a land that knows no ill."

AT the annual Sabbath Reform convention of the Western Pennsylvania Sabbath Association, held in Pittsburgh, November 18th, Mr. Crafts said: "New England ought to be near the head of the class in Sunday observance, but it is nearer the other end. The puritanical spirit has left it and is now springing up in the West. The Rocky mountain Sabbath is improving, while the New England Sabbath is retrograding. Through the Sabbath Association we hav secured good observance of the law in Boston and other cities. But there they run Sunday trains to carry milk to the babies and newspaper trains to carry scandals to the men. We hav reason for encouragement in the enforcement of law in New York, Brooklyn, Baltimore, and all the large cities of the country. Pennsylvania observes Sunday the best of any state, and Pittsburgh and Philadelphia the best of any cities, but there is room for improvement. Only three states are now without Sunday laws, and they are California, Idaho, and Wyoming. In these states we are making war and will force the issue."

A NEW and interesting point of view, says Unity, is revealed in an article by Miss M. F. Cusack (the Nun of Kenmare) in the Independent, on Parnell and Ireland. She calls attention to the long-continued strife between the national school party and that of ecclesiastical education, and tells the story of Parnell's refusal to submit to the dictates of Cardinal McCabe, whom she describes as having no love for his country, being "Roman by education, by prejudice, and by inclination." The educational question is one that is continually coming up in Parliament in some form, and one on which the Home Rule party is divided. Miss Cusack relates how, during one of these controversial periods, Mr. Parnell received a letter of instructions from his ecclesiastical superior, which, in a rage over such interference, he threw to the ground with a word of denunciation for "these papist rats." The story is characteristic, whether authentic or not, and the charges in certain quarters against Mr. Parnell as a Freethinker and Infidel doubtless serve their part in the present sad embroilment, though we incline to think them an incidental rather than a leading feature in the case.

Communications.

Who Made God?

In a former article it was shown how primitiv man and animals, in using their vocal organs to convey to one another their states of consciousness, evolved from the sounds indicated by the vowels o and u the rudiments of language. That it was through the control the will has over the actions of the glottis, the human family hav advanced in development and acquired the capacity for civilization. That without language man would ever hav remained a dumb animal.

That all the influences and forces which made life happy originally were expressed by words that contained the vowels o and u, and were called gute, gutt, or good, or in some of the numerous methods of spelling or writing the symbol. That the priesthood, or spiritual guides of the people, had made theological capital out of the sentiment and sound conveyed by the word good, gute, or chod by deifying it, making it a demon or divinity, giving it a personality; enthroning it as an invisible power—a creator; endowing it with attributes, motivs, and designs of the individual man, yet of an infinit character, and used it as a means to gain control over the fears, affections, and persons of the people.

In the earlier civilizations, as notably among the Brahmans and Greeks, the tendency of their reasonings and speculations was deductiv or backward; and with their limited knowledge of science and of the world of physics, without the ability to trace effects to causes; from their lack of a knowledge of the operation of the fixed laws of nature, every unfamiliar occurrence or unaccountable phenomenon, everything startling, sudden, or unusual, where a proximate physical cause was not obvious, was assigned to the unseen forces or powers, which were individualized or personified into demons or disembodied souls or spirits of the departed, yet activ in their midst.

In our experience with human nature to-day, even with our superior enlightenment, we cannot fail to see how natural and easy it would be for the more shrewd, favored, and priestly element in society to make capital of this, to increase its stock in trade in furtherance of the craft of living on the credulity of the people. In order to keep in favor and to shield ourselvs from danger of these celestial or aerial divinities, we are told by our spiritual guides that we must treat them with a deference not known in our conduct toward men. We must honor them by day and night in our homes; we must meet periodically in public, fall on our knees, beg, pray, petition, sing, shout, groan, and confess our sins and general unworthiness for life or death.

It was a stroke of policy and indicativ of clerical shrewdness on the part of the early priesthood when they conceived the idea of making a demon, a divinity, out of all the good or gute things of life, grouped into one grand central personality, and bestowing upon it the expressiv and designating appellation, "God."

Who could refuse to accept such a euphonious and ubiquitous divinity installed as the author and dispenser of all that is good?

But in India, and afterward in Egypt, a revolution came.

It was the output of the ethics, the theology or religion, taught in the lessons promulgated in the fable of creation as exemplified in the garden of Eden.

It was illustrated by the picture of innocence that could be preserved only through ignorance. That it was a fatal error for men to partake of a fruit that would develop the intellect and enable them to discriminate between gute or good and evil. This fable has swept over and devastated the civilized and Christian world like a cyclone. When men were told that the personified demon called God, the representativ genius, the creator and dispenser of all goodness to man, decreed in the councils of his own infinit wisdom, before the worlds were created, that man to liv in peace and in harmony with his creator, must liv in absolute ignorance, it produced a revulsion among the fanatical devotees of the Bible.

We see what religious fanaticism is doing to day; it did much more in ancient times. To know good from evil then was to forfeit all right to divine favor. To be found selecting and appropriating the good and rejecting the evil was the self condemnation and conviction of a man being a sinner. In the fourth and fifth centuries A D., after Christianity became established as a state religion, and to determin or settle what was precisely the Christian faith, fanatics and enthusiasts had little to do but speculate about the fall of man, original sin, and salvation by Christ, and to carry out their theories in practice. Thousands of them renounced the world with all its allurements and good things. St. Jerome and his era, the fourth and fifth centuries, gave to Christianity many of the crudities, absurdities, and contradictions, that even our modern Christian solons find it hard to wrestle with.

Jerome was preëminently the oracle and spokesman of that period. He was the greatest Christian scholar since Origen. The Greek Bible had been haggled, corrupted, and debased by illiterate, bigoted partisan adherents of the various opposing Christian sects to favor and support their respectiv creeds; and a multitude of conflicting copies was distracting and destroying the faith. To save the holy word from infamy Damasus, the archbishop of Rome, urged Jerome to make a pious effort to save it.

We will let the rabid fanatic define his position and giv the evidence of his qualification to rescue the Bible from the ignominy and desecration with which it had already been ruined; also to convince us that he was the victim of the horrors and hallucinations of his age, and that he was destitute of every capacity that inspires men to honor or honesty. While crazed with his self-inflicted exile for years in solitude he exclaims: "Oh, how often in the desert, in that vast solitude, parched by the sultry sun, did I fancy myself in the midst of luxurious Rome! Plunged in an abyss of bitterness, I hav thrown myself on the floor of my solitary cell. My limbs were rough with the friction of coarse haircloth; my skin, dried and blackened in the sun, was like that of an Ethiopian, and my complexion was livid as a corpse. I groaned and wept throughout the day; and if in spite of my resistance drowsiness overcame me at night, my bones, which scarcely held together, clashed on the naked earth. I say nothing of my food. In the deserts, even those who are ill never permit themselvs to drink anything but water. If they took anything that required the aid of fire in its preparation, they would accuse themselvs of sensuality. Yet even I, who, from the fear of hell, had condemned myself to this dungeon, with no other companion than scorpions and wild beasts, often imagined myself in the midst of dancing girls. Fires boiled up in this body prematurely dead. Criminal remembrances, desires, and regrets overwhelmed me. I shrunk from my very cell, seeming to dread its walls as the accomplices of my thoughts. I penetrated to the inmost recesses of the desert, or wandered on the summits of mountains, or hid myself in the cavities of rocks. I went and came, not knowing where to seek refuge from myself, until at last I threw myself at the foot of the cross, bathing it with my tears, that flowed in rivers, and which I wiped with my hair. I strove to subdue my rebellious nature by fasting a whole week. I frequently passed entire nights uttering loud cries, until the Lord himself dispersed the tempests that raged within me and restored peace to my soul."

His religious insanity took a savage turn and he was violent in his curses and anathemas, and treatment of those who were less insane. An armed force surrounded his monastery to secure him, but he fled and was obliged to hide himself for two years, and soon after died from physical exhaustion and a continual nervous excitement, A D 420.

This was the mental and moral state of the man who literally made for us our present Bible. For everyone in those days who translated put himself, his own state of mind, his own morbid idiosyncrasies and chronic lunacies, with the fiendish horrors that haunted him day and night as a part of his religion, into the text of his translation, and made the philosophy or theology of it but a transcript of the visions, the terrors, and ideals that were distracting and inflaming with an infernal fury his own imagination. Yet Jerome was the chosen man above all others, from his learning, his orthodox piety, and great prominence in the church, to whom could be entrusted the solemnly momentous task of preparing a Bible in Latin, as a divine revelation for the world. Of course the translation of such a man was received as might be expected.

"A bishop of one of the churches in Africa tried to introduce it, but was forced to lay it aside, for fear all his people would desert him. Though Jerome's version found many advocates among the learned, it was not received into general use for two centuries." And good reasons why!

This translation was not corrupted merely by the deep coloring of Jerome's agonizing faith and religious experiences, as depicted by himself, but it was paganized by the heathen mythological literature of the age.

For as Dr. Draper frankly says, "The influence of the heathen classics, which that austere anchorite had in early life admired, but had vainly attempted to free himself from by unremitting nocturnal flagellations, appears in this great version. It came in a critical moment for the West. The Vulgate was all the times required." And the times hav ever since accepted it as the basis of all subsequent translations.

Such was the state of religion at that time that pious lunacy was meritorious and a passport to ecclesiastical eminence.

His insanity was his glory and he has always been venerated by ecclesiastics as one of the greatest lights of the ancient church.

Jerome's translation of the Bible has been considered by scholars as an able one.

It has been the guide and basis for our present English or King James's version.

This accounts for the incongruities and absurdities so obvious and numerous in the text. What can we expect of a Bible sifted through centuries of lunacy; and what can we expect of the ideas of religion and of gutt, good, or God, of men crazed with starvation and physical and mental prostration, in their desperate efforts to return to man's supposed ignorant innocence as at the beginning, and as God declared was the only proper state, in the fable of his creation?

And to establish their faith in the doctrin that innocence and ignorance were alone compatible they wandered off into solitude, where they could learn nothing and know nothing, in pursuance of convictions as taught in the Bible by God himself. It was at this period that the Bible assumed an importance as the foundation of the faith that it never had before. In order to aid believers to a knowledge of its contents Jerome, the devout monk and learned bishop, undertook its translation into Latin. This task added to its significance and value as a guide and authority for believers. The fable of creation was taken as literal history and a record of facts for the saints to implicitly obey.

Profoundly impressed with the belief that evil came into the world through gratifications of the flesh—the animal—in the good things of life, many thousands left their homes, society, and every earthly joy and physical gute or good. They believed the command of the good or God in the fable to deny themselvs every human comfort in the solitude of mountains and deserts in order that they might liv in the primeval ignorance and innocence that Adam enjoyed before he ate of the forbidden fruit, and fell.

The love of gute or good things of this world became a snare, an evil they must war against.

Their devotion to the fable was so great and their determination to realize its blessings and promises so fixed, that multitudes of them in their nakedness and the delirium of starvation died, and their bones were left bleaching in the deserts. Not a few of them were arrested by their less infatuated brethren and taken to the monasteries which were converted into hospitals to giv the wayward saints a shelter and treatment for their recovery from the tortures and agony self-inflicted at the commands of the God which the Bible had revealed to that age—it having just been brought into prominence as a sacred book by the civil and ecclesiastical authorities, a record of the will and ways of God to his creature man.

These anchorites could no longer worship the God that was the author of these good material things.

They feared this God or these good things he created, lest through them they might fall from that ascetic, spiritual eminence to which abstinence, starvation, self-denial, and suffering had elevated them.

From that period till now religion has consisted in the fear of gute or good, as much, if not more than, in the love of gute, gutt, or God. The Christian world, through Christian literature founded on that fable, is swayed and governed by the fear more than by the love of God.

When on reflection we can trace to the monkery of the Dark Ages and to reverence for the fable of creation, the foundation of much of our religious belief, to wit, "The fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom," we see what a tremendous superstructure of faith can be built on a fable, a legend copied from the Sanscrit of our Aryan ancestors, the Brahmans of India, who invented and used it many thousand years before Moses was born, or the patriarch, a Brahman (Abraham), took it with him from "Ur of the Chaldees," when he migrated west of Jordan to form a colony and establish a religion among the Bedoin savages, whose nomadic tribes peopled that region and whose descendants in three generations constituted the Jewish nation, called the children of Israel.

These solitaries or anchorites, which Jerome said in his day numbered one hundred and three thousand in Africa alone, living as near as they could in that state of naked innocence and ignorance that Adam occupied before the fall, with the fable to back up their claims, dictated the policy of emperors, creeds to the church, and the terms of salvation to sinners.

The old, old theory of worshiping a personification or divinity representing all forms of gude or good, expressed in sounds or words containing the vowels o and u, through the influence this fable has had on the minds of the religious, has been changed to conform to the fabulous stories of the ancients as copied into our Bible.

The clergy often tell us of the powerful influence of the Bible in our civilization. Who can doubt it when the evidence at hand is so forcible that a fable which had found its way there has given faith to hundreds of millions of people, changed the long-established ideas of the conception of God made from deified goodness into a God of battles; a God of victories and triumphs; a God who has inspired all the Christian armies of the civilized world to invasion, to aggression, to conquest, to the extermination of his heathen enemies, and to estabishing his banner, the cross, on the ruins of conquered and desolated nations? Yes, the Bible and our Christianity, by their influence and by these methods, seem doomed, and threaten, to overrun and to Christianize the whole world.

After all our temporal goods, or the objects and influences that contribute to our joy and comforts, as we express them by vocal utterances in these vowels, were by priestly orders grouped into one catagory and deified as the dispensations of a demon among the invisible genii, there was but one step to be taken in order to add to it, or him, the attributes common to these imaginary creations.

Given the existence of a demon, and he must necessarily possess all the elements and the constituents requisit to perform his functions and duties as a sovreign over the destinies of all inferior earthly intelligences.

T. E. LONGSHORE.

(TO BE CONCLUDED.)

Vacant Land Ownership.

It is but recently that the above phrase has been employed in the discussion of social and economic subjects. It was intended to express that feature of our land system which results in the exclusion of the willing workers from the soil they need to cultivate and the homes they require, except as they acknowledge the sovereignty of the legal holder and render tribute to his monarchical power. Mr. Hugh O. Pentecost has made the phrase conspicuous in the Twentieth Century, and it has been quite generally accepted by the advocates of "free land," as convenient in distinguishing the principles for which they contend from the Socialistic demand, that all private ownership of land should be replaced by ownership of the state.

Freedom of access to place and raw material, necessary to the employment of one's labor, by no means conflicts with any moderate claim men may make to the domain they occupy and use in the production of social, or exchangeable wealth. Such freedom would apply only to land which is held merely by legal forms and fictions, for no other purpose than to enforce involuntary idleness, and to starve into submission, or the rendering of tribute from, such labor, as may be desired by the usurper.

It may be admitted, however, that in the discussion thus far great facility has been shown for confusing the question with ill-defined terms, and for suggesting empirical means for remedying the evils, not clearly defined or comprehended. What is vacant land? This can only be determined by careful investigation; not by an arbitrary fiat of the owner of the paper title; nor yet by the first man who thinks he can put a certain allotment to a better use than its legal claimant.

One might imagin a section of open prairie, without fence, habitation, or any show of human industry for miles around, to be vacant land. But a cattle company may hav inclosed it, nevertheless, with a barbed wire fence for purpose of pasturage. In some respects, then, it might be removed from that category; and it is not readily seen why even such land appropriated, legally or otherwise, to such use, must be termed vacant land, or necessarily affect unfavorably the industrious and toiling members of society. The phrase, economically applied, has a much broader significance. It means that whenever title to land, whether worked or unworked, places the worker under relations which make him a slave or a serf through inability to employ himself, the land he tills is "vacant land," in the sense that it is unoccupied and unused by the titled owner. If, however, some land at the same time is available, which the worker will not occupy and work, but voluntarily prefers to work for a master or a landlord, then, as regards this man and the lot he works, there is no vacant land.

Ownership without limit beyond personal occupation is dominion. Vacant land, then, must be defined to cover all land, the productions of which are held from the real producer, unless under equal freedom and opportunity he voluntarily sells his labor to the holder of the land. Then he would be only a machine or beast of burden, and the director of his labor would be the producer. The land question has no direct importance to such worker.

Mr. Pentecost seems to think that each holder of land should hav the determining of what is and what is not vacant land. This would place the rights of the disinherited in the keeping of those who happen to hold fictitious titles. But this seems like lifting the foot and putting it down in the same place, and is not an advance. If this is the only hope of the landless it is not encouraging. They hav now access to all the land the legal holders are willing to treat as vacant. Were there no disposition to take the advantage which the law intends to giv, there would hav been no call for the law, and no need now of agitation to repeal it. It is purely because those who own no land can be hired to aid in collecting rent and in ejecting those whose refuse to pay it, or are not longer wanted on the land, that any land is held out of use, or that tribute is forced from those who work it.

It is not wholly the tyranny of the czar which makes the Russian people mild and inoffensiv, nor entirely the peaceful nature of the people which begets the tyranny of the czar, nor yet are the two things unrelated social phenomena. They are complemental—one could not exist without the other. So it is equally true that landlords and tenants, money lenders and borrowers, are but the complemental products of our agrarian, industrial, and finance legislation, enacted at the behests of one class and practically approved by the other. It is not a question whether Mr. Pentecost or the wealth producers generally will hold or cease to hold vacant land against those who need—they are not likely to get any for either purpose—but simply this: whether they will shoulder muskets and charge bayonets, or use policemen's clubs to assist in collecting rent and ejecting men, women, and children from their homes at the command of those who refuse to see or admit that any land is vacant. Not whether they will themselvs be man-starvers, but whether they will help enforce man-starving by others.

The same is true as to interest. It is a trifling matter whether the borrowing class will lend money at interest or without interest, to others who are able and willing to pay it; but not trifling whether they will stand guard, for a consideration, over the sponging machines of the misers and financial gamblers, and join in the still-hunt for bankrupted borrowers, and to compel payment of interest from those who are neither able nor willing to pay. Forty years ago the issue with antislavery people was, not so much whether they would hold slaves, but whether they should be compelled to aid others to hold them, and assist in hunting and returning them to their masters when they fled from bondage.

The laws which extend dominion over the homes and work-places of men, enforce collection of rent, interest, etc., must be abolished or rendered void by a refusal of the people to assist in their execution. This may transpire as the result (1) of aggressiv revolution, (2) of defensiv resistance (3), of passiv resistance; leaving political action and intrigue out of the question. The first could only be successful when public opinion was in its favor, and it had, therefore, become unnecessary. The second can only serve in bringing the merits of the issue to public attention. The last is the only certain means of abating injustice. The tyrant can do nothing without the slave. The landlord can work no bill of ejectment or of "distress for rent" without the aid of the disinherited, who are willing to do such work for hire.

As to whether we should hold the land question in abeyance till more superficial issues are determined, each person must answer for himself. I shall endeavor to point out such issues as appear to me to be tending, not in the direction of progress, but of still more despotic rule. All measures looking to more legislativ interference with economic law, all imbecil or corrupt attempts "to secure proper legislation" or to tamper with the "powers of taxation," must be regarded as incompetent. I hav no faith that any measures of that kind will help to "abolish poverty," or make the position of productiv labor more independent, or afford it anything more than a temporary relief.

I regard the "vacant land" issue as by no means the simple problem which some of its friends and most of its opposers deem it. It is fundamental to any practical application of social science, and is vital to all industrial cooperation and exchange. No public or private effort can achieve any determinate result which does not proceed in accord with it, nor escape but by sheer possibility untoward ends.

While we hold responsible for this state of our industrial and social life the exploiting rich alone, we shall accomplish little. Appeal to moral sense will hav no effect while inverted economic conditions are allowed to exert undisturbed sway over the rapacious schemer and time serving and truckling toiler. No single class are in the wrong alone. When a respectable minority shall decline to hold land out of use, or to assist in the enforcement of the claims of those who do, such holding will come to an end, peacefully and of course. Only a military despotism, or an insane, premature revolution could prevent it.

Glenora, N. Y. J. K. INGALLS.

Woman and the Church.

The advanced, thoughtful women of to-day are putting forth every effort for the further emancipation of their sex; but every worker in this line has found an insuperable barrier in the influence which the church exerts over its members. Thousands of women are spending their lives, and worse than wasting their talents, in getting up church fairs and festivals, for the purpose of raising money to support foreign missions, for the amelioration of the condition of their sex in the so-called heathen lands; and they will, with tearful eyes, relate the sorrows and wrongs of those intellectually benighted and poverty-degraded sisters, whom they are endeavoring to raise from the bondage of ignorance and superstition of one kind, only to plunge them into the bondage of a superstition equally as oppressiv to an enlightened intellect.

While these women are thus spending their time and money, their prayers and tears, they seem to entirely forget the sisters who are writhing in bondage in this land whose laws are made by those who hav had the benefit of this enlightening (?) Christian religion all their lives. "Why," exclaims one, "if it were not for Christianity we women would be in the same condition as the women in heathen lands," an assertion which every thinking woman can safely deny, and can furthermore assert that the advancement of woman has been retarded in every possible way by the church. The verdict that issues from our courts of justice to day, and is repeated by the lips of the leaders in social life, "Stone the woman, but let the man go free," is but the echo that has been ringing through the ages since the immaculate and most consistent Judah pronounced the sentence of death on his partner in guilt; and it was thought worthy of record on the pages of "holy writ," with many more equally just, to be a guide for all future law-makers, and a precedent for all good believers in the divine origin of that most immoral book.

Those who hav made the history of the church a study, and hav learned something of the condition of women previous to the advent of Christianity, can not fail to perceive that the church has been a detriment to woman. Motherhood, which was the crowning glory of the Greek and Roman matron, lost its prestige through the customs of the church, which imposed upon the mother certain penalties for having given birth to a child, until not only she, but others, were made to feel that this highest prerogativ of her sex was no longer an honor, but a degradation.

The early church condemned women to silence, and how effectually it succeeded in keeping them silent will easily be seen by the fact that for centuries no woman's name appears on the literary annals. Previous to this time women had stood high as writers and teachers of philosophy, but Christianity most completely snuffed out the flame of feminin erudition, and forbade her to light it again, even at the sacred altars of the church; and so late as the beginning of this century a woman could best succeed in getting an article from her pen published when she adopted a male nom de plume. Christian customs, upheld by Christian people, and strengthened by Christian laws, closed the doors of all the professions against her. Every exertion made outside of the church to better her condition, was frowned upon by both laymen and clergy. To protect the women within the church from any innovation that might be introduced by the so-called strong-minded females outside, they built a bulwark whose foundation-stones were the teachings of St. Paul, and whose framework was church disciplin; and from behind this they hav fired their arrows of weak ridicule and hurled their darts of opprobrious epithets at those noble women who hav valiantly dared all these, and demanded for their sex a higher education, a broader culture, and an opportunity with man to gain a livelihood or to mount the ladder of fame through the doorway of the professions; and all that has been gained for woman has been gained through the instrumentality of those broad-minded and Freethinking women; for it is a notable fact that the pioneers in this work were women untrammeled by church superstition. Humanity was their religion, and all womanhood their sisters.

This wave of progress set in motion over fifty years ago, has crept by insidious degrees to the very steps of the church, and a few of those who are noble and better than their religion, are trying to weaken the wall of prejudice built by the church and let this wave of progression sweep through and carry with it the dust and cobwebs of superstition, which dim the eyesight and clog the brain of the average church-member. But these are individual efforts; the church as an institution is still a drawback to woman's advancement. It deprives her of the time which should be given to reading and thought, leaving her often lamentably ignorant of the current events of the time. It holds her, through its disciplin, to old worn-out theories and exploded fallacies, and it clips the wings of her highest aspirations so that she may never ascend to a greater hight than the church spire. And thus retarded and confined they lose all interest in outside efforts, and as the years roll on and the narrowing process continues one fails to recognize in the church devotee the once noble, intelligent, and wholesome woman. Men, with their greater independence and less amount of reverence, do not so readily come under the dominion of the church, and as the age of reason and science develops itself, religion will lose its control more and more over the minds of men, and the church will be left to the control of women by force of circumstances, for I predict that in twenty years not a truly intellectual man will ever unite himself to a church. It is a fact that even now most of the male members are those who were brought into the church before they were old enough to discriminate between reason and superstition, and who hav not the moral courage to giv voice to their later convictions, or who find it politic to attend church on Sunday and appear devout, so that the remainder of the week under the guise of Christianity they can go about like wolves in sheep's clothing, seeking whom they may devour. Men of this kind are only worthy our contempt, but to the woman bound to her church by cords of a blind love and reverence—her nobler nature crushed—her best desires cramped, we can only extend our pity, and with willing hands help to make the wave of human progress that is beating at the church door so irresistibly strong that it will tear down the structure and let those within the cloistered shadows emerge into the glorious sunlight of intellectual freedom. E. H. LAWRENCE.

2122 Virginia ave., Los Angeles, Cal.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President. . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. MORRIS PEROT, Vice-President, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
J. O. BENTLEY, Vice-President, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The American Secular Union's Policy.

Several persons hav recently written upon the true policy of our society—notably, three of our most gifted editors. It is not my purpose to reply to these gentlemen; but, like the mythical person in the book of Job, I say, "Hearken unto me, I also will show mine opinion."

Now, the "Nine Demands of Liberalism," so comprehensivly formulated by Francis E. Abbott, are, with a slight modification, fully incorporated into the constitution of the American Secular Union; and I know of no other way to ascertain what the society stands for than to study the constitution. The old Liberal League and the American Secular Union had substantially, and hav, the same organic law. I respectfully submit that our constitution stands for state secularization, and for nothing else. There is not a line in it to which Atheists, Agnostics, Jews, or Christians can object. When advocating its principles, it is not, in my judgment, necessary to say one single word about theology or religion.

When first elected president, I accepted the office provisionally; and no objection was made to the conditions. It was in these words:

Regarding the American Secular Union as an organization for the protection and promotion of the principle implied in its name, and not for the advancement of any dogma of religious belief or disbelief, I cordially accept the presidency unanimously tendered me, and publicly pledge myself to resist the encroachments of sacerdotalism, whether papal or Puritan.

This was sent by telegraph to Pittsburgh; and subsequently I wrote and "promised the utmost firmness and diligence in maintaining the Demands of Liberalism, and an honest conformity to the secular principle upon which our government was founded."

Finding, during my first year, that certain persons were disposed to consider that we were bound to add to our creed certain principles of Secular Philosophy (so-called), and in order to settle this question, I prepared and published in all our Liberal papers for more than thirty days previous to the Philadelphia congress, an amendment to the constitution. This proposed amendment the Philadelphia congress still further amended, and unanimously adopted. It is as follows:

ARTICLE IV.—Non-partisan.

The American Secular Union is strictly un-sectarian and non-partisan in both religion and politics, but will use any and all honorable means to secure its objects, as above stated. It is not either publicly or privately committed to the advancement of any system of religious belief or disbelief, but honestly welcomes all persons of whatever faith or party to its membership, on the basis of "no union of church and state." The word "secular" is here used in the broadest sense, as applied to the state, and not to any system of religion or philosophy.

Some few—very few—persons afterward objected to this article; but no effort was made to amend or repeal it at the Portsmouth congress. I am satisfied that four-fifths, if not nine-tenths, of the members of our society are in favor of it. However this may be, my duty is clear. I must support the constitution or resign; and I do not intend to resign at present. Three unanimous elections to the presidency (with the exception of a solitary vote cast at the Philadelphia congress) make it imperativ for me to stand to my post, even at great personal inconvenience.

In securing a complete separation of church and state, a large number of persons of every creed, and of no creed, can work, and are working, with great energy. I now hav before me a large list of patriotic Secular and religious societies mostly pledged to work for state secularization. Some of these organizations are a hundred times larger, and hav done proportionately more work than we hav ever done. By many of these organizations the American Secular Union is invited to coöperate and to send delegates to their conventions. Scarcely a day passes that letters do not come asking for our publications.

The same is true regarding individuals who are members of orthodox churches. We do not expect to win the churches as organized bodies; but they are full of individuals who are anxious to coöperate with us for state secularization. Moreover, many churches in their organized form hav taken action for the taxation of church property and the prohibition of reading the Bible in the public schools. We need the assistance of these people; and we cannot secure the legislation we desire, without their help. Shall we be so narrow, sectarian, and bigoted as to drive them away from us? The American Secular Union has only one public meeting a year (although it ought to hav many more). Can we not hold back our peculiar views for the sake of harmony and efficiency during this one meeting? The largest liberty is allowed to local societies.

Here is a saving clause which affords a safety-valve for extremists. Article xii of our constitution says:

Auxiliary societies should adopt constitutions substantially similar to this constitution, but adapted to local wants. Local auxiliary societies shall be absolutely independent in the administration of their affairs. The effect of their charters shall be simply to unite them in cordial fellowship and efficient coöperation of the freest kind with the American Secular Union and with other local societies. Neither shall the national society be responsible for the acts or utterances of local auxiliaries.

Now, in these local societies more radical views may be advocated, with the distinct understanding that the national society shall not be responsible for the acts or utterances of local societies. This ought to be satisfactory to the most radical persons. Yet I giv it as my opinion that if there were less of extravagance, less of bitter denunciation, and more of kindness and charity—less of the knock-down-and-drag-out business, and more of the "sweet reasonableness" that seeks to win by persuasion, better results would follow. I know that the Friendship Liberal League of Philadelphia meets twice a day, fifty-two Sundays in the year, and while the most extreme Radicalism is freely taught, there is scarcely a meeting in which orthodox Christians and Spiritualists are not heard. The attendance is very large; I doubt whether there is a Liberal League or Secular Union in the United States that can boast of such a society.

In my lecture before the congress at Portsmouth, showing why, in my opinion, the Bible should not be read in our public schools, there is not one word regarding theology or the claims which the church makes for the Bible. It simply shows why the Bible is not a suitable book to be read to children.

But what is this Secular philosophy of which we hear so much? It is nothing less than Materialism, pure and simple, nothing more. It is opposition to the supernatural and the spiritual. It affirms that there is no God and no future state of being for mortals. All this may be true; but intelligent Freethinkers generally say that they do not know. Like Huxley and Ingersoll, they are Agnostics. Those who believe in spirit are thought to outnumber Materialists a hundred to one, and perhaps more; and they point to learned men not a few who support their views. Theists are also very numerous; and distinguished Secular philosophers hav distinctly acknowledged that both Theists and Spiritualists may be good and consistent Secularists. Why, then, should we not seek their coöperation in working for state secularization? We need their help. We can never succeed without them, as our success in securing state secularization depends upon numbers. Now, then, if believers in the Secular philosophy—that is, Materialism—see fit to organize to propagate their particular views, they hav a perfect right to do so; but they hav no right to force it upon a society which has for its main, nay, only object, the complete separation of church and state.

If the American Secular Union is indeed a society for the promotion of certain forms of Secular philosophy, then let us say so in so many words. Let us throw off all disguises and appear in our true character, and not attempt to masquerade under the disguise of state secularization. This common honesty requires; and nothing less will satisfy intelligent and honest friends of truth. Moreover, if the great and increasing numbers of Liberals and the uncounted numbers who call themselvs by no particular name, cannot be enrolled in our ranks on the basis of state secularization, then are we reckoning without our host. We should at once take our position as a band of Materialists, haul down the flag of "no union of church and state" as our special ensign, and show our true colors. For my part, I am not willing to be a party to any deceit. We are not all believers in the Secular philosophy so called, though through the mistaken zeal of some who hav spoken at our annual meetings we are naturally considered such, and at one of our meetings, at least (Pittsburgh), the police authorities were directed to look out for the blasphemers! We cannot unite a material philosophy with our one avowed object of state secularization under our constitution, and, in my judgment, to attempt it is neither honest nor honorable. R. B. WESTBROOK.

More About American Secular Union Plans.

I will try not to trespass on much of the space so kindly allotted to American Secular Union matters in THE TRUTH SEEKER, and write now mainly to say that I am sorry Mr. Westbrook is not disposed to discuss important matters of our policies without acerbity or imputing hidden motivs. I really hav no ax to grind for myself or any other one or more members of the American Secular Union. I hav been an observant member and somewhat of a contributor and worker for it long enough to know that we hav found some plans failures; some mistakes ought not to be repeated; and we should study to devise other plans with the hope of finding some new and effectiv ones. I could with "becoming self-respect" rebut Mr. Westbrook's criticism, but would prefer that the space be devoted to what others may hav to say of the plan. Many steady and heavy contributors do not get a chance to express themselvs at congresses. The Liberal press cannot be expected to find room for all they might wish to say, but it would be well if they would write freely to the officers to help them gage the trend of Liberal opinions. It has lately been suggested that available funds could be employed to pay Liberal workers "by the job" for carrying on special fights in courts or legislatures, wherever contests arise involving any of the Nine Demands. Practical work such as Mr. Reynolds has been giving us an illustration of in the Northwest may be a more effectiv plan even for familiarizing the public with our objects than scattered lectures, however eloquent. A constitution molded, a law repealed or enacted, a favorable precedent established in court, nails down a point gained. But I hav no favorit scheme, and no wishes other than to avoid known pitfalls and to discover plans of action that shall commend themselvs to our activ supporters and insure the support necessary to success and persistence.

New York, Jan. 10, 1891. E. B. FOOTE, JR.

The Farmers' Alliance and Liberalism.

I wish to call the attention of the officers of the Secular Union to the attitude the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union are taking in regard to the uniting of church and state. They are organizing and combining all kindred organizations into one political party. And their demands are just, and are bound to win among all that depend on manual labor for a livelihood, except a very small per cent, that are orthodox in their politics.

I said their demands are just, and I believe they are, except those that pertain to religion, and this is the part I wish to call particular attention to. In its early commencement this became one of its demands: "That the law relating to the suppression of the transmission of immoral, profane, or obscene literature through the mails be made more stringent, and be extended so as to suppress the transmission of such literature by any public carrier."

And also the People's party's preamble to their platform for the state of Kansas reads thus: "The People's party of Kansas, in delegation assembled, recognize almighty God as the rightful sovereign of nations, and from whom all just powers of government are derived, and to whom all human enactments ought to conform." And I wish also to call your attention to the resolution they passed at Ocala, Fla., asking for the closing of the World's Fair in 1893 on Sunday. And in various sub-alliances throughout this state they passed resolutions that they will enforce all Sunday laws against recreation, such as hunting, fishing, etc. So you can see they as a body are opposed to Secularization, while I know the rank and file to be made up of Liberals, I being one of them. And the Liberal element is so strong in some of the sub-alliances as to vote to dispense with the services of the chaplain in opening and closing, as we did in the Cambria alliance. Of course we could not sustain it, as it was contrary to the rituals, but it nevertheless shows they hav not such easy sailing right in the order. While you as officers of the Union hav not the right to declare in favor of any political party, you hav a right to try and Secularize all; being aware that some of your order will support all of the existing parties and any new ones that shall spring into existence, and I firmly believe that the great labor party that is undergoing national formation will find at least four-fifths of the Liberal elements within its ranks. Therefore it stands you in hand when they come to declare their platform of principles to try and hav them form them in consonance with Secular principles of government. And if you fail, why, then tell your people of your effort, and this no doubt would hav a strong tendency to alienate the Liberal element from their support. And if it was rightly managed we would hav a strong ally in the Catholics, because they are opposed to strict Sunday laws and chaplaincies.

Just as sure as evolution is a law of progression, the great labor organizations will become the dominant party of this country, and any unbiased mind whose interests are identical with theirs cannot help becoming convinced. And as the laborers are in a vast majority, it means their supremacy. And all clauses in their demands are progressiv except those pertaining to religion, and as Liberal-minded people were the fathers of the movement, it is peculiarly adapted to a progressiv class of people, and the religious part is just as peculiarly adapted to a retrograding class of people. And as all new movements are more sincere in their demands than old ones, the danger is from the religious part of this movement. If it was either one of the old parties that was making such childish demands we would hav nothing to fear, because we would know it only meant policy, conservatism, and hypocrisy.

JOHN W. ABBOTT.

Washington Secular Union.

Words fail me to express the sorrow or to describe the loss sustained by the Washington Secular Union by the death of George M. Boman.

WASHINGTON SECULAR UNION, Jan. 1, 1891.

MRS. MARY E. BOMAN, Dear Madam: At a special meeting of the board of directors of the Washington Secular Union held Sunday, Dec. 28, 1890, were passed resolutions of respect and sympathy with you at the loss of your noble husband, our treasurer and brother director, which resolutions will be duly forwarded to you when properly engrossed.

Under our constitution no nominations for officers are allowed to be made. Yet upon the first ballot for treasurer you were unanimously chosen to fill the unexpired term of the late George M. Boman.

The directors realize that none so well as you, his honored, loved, and loving wife, knew the nobility of his nature, the integrity and benevolence of his life, or can better appreciate the honor of being his successor.

The board of directors repectfully entreat you to accept the trust and duties of treasurer and director thus imposed upon you, confident that the affectionate wife and able helpmeet of our lamented brother in his every good word and work is not alone the unanimous choice of the officers, but of every member of the Washington Secular Union.

Respectfully, your friend, and coworker for reason, right, and truth,

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Secretary Washington Secular Union.

We all rejoice that Mrs. Boman has accepted the position, not alone because she is a genuin Infidel possessing great business tact and ability, but also because her acceptance as treasurer and director givs us a woman on the board of directors, among our chief officers—a practical realization of our principles recognizing equal rights for all men and all women with men.

At a special meeting of the directors, held Sunday, Jan. 4, 1891, itemized accounts of all receipts and expenditures by the treasurer and secretary, up to date, were presented, audited, and approved. The following is a summary:

Total receipts for membership	$217 00
Total receipts for defense fund	244 50
Total	$461 50
Expended by treasurer	$ 57 75
Expended by secretary	174 52
One-half membership fees paid to secretary	$108 50
Total expenditure	$340 77
Cash on hand	$120 73
Total	$461 50

Take notice what a sinecure! what a soft snap! what a bonanza! the secretary has had. The constitution provides that the salary of the secretary shall not exceed $1,200 per year. At the first meeting of the directors it was voted that one-half of the fees received from membership should, up to the amount of $1,200, be devoted exclusivly to payment of the salary of the secretary.

The total amount received by the secretary from the Washington Secular Union for the year's services of incessant hard work each day, and very often the larger part of the night, has been $108.50, less than thirty cents a day, $9 a month—and find himself.

I could not hav "found" myself or family—should hav been lost to the work—but for the generous personal contributions of my Liberal friends, and the proceeds of my occasional brief lecture trips. I rejoice to announce that if the salary of the secretary has been exceedingly small, such cannot be said of the work accomplished or its results.

The foundation of our state organization is now well laid. The plans of the glorious structure of practical organization command the admiration of all who study them. We hav, during the past year, labored under very many and great disadvantages, met and overcome many obstacles, and realize that much of hard, thankless work and self-sacrifice are required to carry the good work to completion. But the outlook is most encouraging; each week of late we hav been cheered by rapid increase of membership, and more general and earnest interest. At the annual meeting to be held at the G. A. R. Hall, Second street, Seattle, on Sunday (morning, afternoon, and evening), Feb. 22, 1891, the directors will make a full report of the work accomplished, that cannot fail to greatly rejoice and encourage all good Liberals, and prove a source of just pride to the members of the Washington Secular Union.

The necessity of even more rigid economy, and the advice of the lamented Geo. M. Boman, induced me to remove to Freemont, a suburb of Seattle, virtually part of the city (the electric street-cars run from the post-office in Seattle to Freemont every twenty minutes, fare five cents, and only fifteen minutes' ride). Henceforth all mail matter for me should be addressed, Lock Box 5, Freemont, Wash. The office is now located next to the corner of Grand and Maple avenues, where all good Liberals, and especially members of the Washington Secular Union, will be sure of most glad and hearty welcome.

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Sec. Washington Secular Union.
Lock Box 5, Freemont, Wash.

Sabbath Desecration.

From the Portland Oregonian.

Colonel Shepard, of the New York Mail and Express, recently refused to advertise the program of a Sunday evening sacred concert at the Casino because it included, besides church music, some of the grand airs from the Italian opera, which were given for the benefit of people who could not afford to enjoy the opera. At the recent Presbyterian banquet in this city one of the speakers remarked that "Sabbath desecration has attained such a pitch of insolence that it defies all law, human and divine. It is time we were remembering that God reigns and that his law cannot be violated with impunity." As a matter of fact, the Hebrew Sabbath according to Deuteronomy, Nehemiah, and Hosea, was a day of joy, mirth, and good cheer, a holiday in memory of the deliverance of the Israelites from their slavery in Egypt. Emanuel Deutsch, one of the highest authorities on Jewish questions, says:

> We cannot refrain from entering our emphatic protest against the vulgar notion of the Jewish Sabbath being a thing of grim austerity. It was precisely the contrary, a day of joy and delight, a feast day, honored by the best cheer, by wine and lights and spices and other things of preëminently bodily import.

Certain other Old Testament laws, found in Exodus, gave to the Sabbath a harsh and inhuman meaning. Fires were forbidden on the Sabbath, and men were stoned to death for gathering sticks on that day. It is clear, therefore, that the idea of humanity and freedom attached by some laws of the Bible to the Sabbath was entirely reversed in others. The severe and harsh view of the Sabbath was ignored and often violated by Jesus, who nowhere leaves a word in favor of keeping it. He said "the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath," and that "it is lawful to do well on the Sabbath." He treated it as other days, and was denounced as "not of God, because he keepeth not the Sabbath." Archbishop Whately says, "Jesus did decidedly and avowedly violate the Sabbath." The apostles and followers of Jesus were indifferent to the day, and there is not in the whole New Testament a precept calling men to keep the Sabbath. Finally it was positivly forbidden. Another day was soon set apart, our Christian Sunday. For a long time labor was allowed upon it. Even under the famous law of the emperor Constantine farmers were allowed to labor freely on Sunday. The emperor Charlemagne finally forbade labor on Sunday.

The doctrin that Sunday was a substitute for the Sabbath was rejected by Melancthon and by Calvin, who rebuked the "superstition of Sabbatism." Luther, with characteristic strong sense, said Sunday was not to be kept because Moses commanded it, but because nature teaches us to rest; and he added, "If anywhere the day is made holy for the mere day's sake, then I order you to work on it, ride on it, dance on it, to do anything that will remove this encroachment on Christian spirit and liberty." Sports were long allowed on Sunday. In Scotland a law of 1457 ordered the practice of archery on that day, and King James, who gave us our best English translation of the Bible, wrote a book advocating leaping, dancing, and May games after "meeting" on Sunday, to keep the people from tippling. The Puritans, in opposition to Luther and Calvin, taught that Sunday was a substitute for the Hebrew Sabbath, derived its authority from that day, and should be kept like it. The present heirs to Puritan errors still persist in calling Sunday the Sabbath, despite the fact that Sabbath meant Saturday through all the Bible and the early Christian church, and still means that among the Jewish people. The Puritans in trying to make Sunday another Sabbath did not take as a model the true, humane Sabbath of rest, freedom, and joy, the Sabbath of the book of Deuteronomy, of Nehemiah and Hosea; but the Sabbath of Exodus, during which there could be no labor nor innocent pleasure. The Long Parliament legislated against "vainly and profanely walking" on Sunday; King Charles was rebuked by the Scotch clergy for smiling on that day. Some God-fearing people of Glasgow, as they came out of church, once fell upon and almost killed a drover who was going by whistling, and Buckle tells of some fishermen on the northern coast of Scotland who went out on Sunday to save a ship in a storm and had to do penance for it. In Boston there was once a cage for Sabbath-breakers. It is this Puritan view of Sunday that has completely passed away, and given place to the justification of the observance of Sunday as a day of necessary social and spiritual recreation and refreshment. At a synod of Scotch churches in 1867 the Puritan Sunday was admitted to be a failure, and the great Dr. Guthrie declared he had seen more drunkenness in an hour in London and Edinburgh than in five months in Paris, where he counted thirty-three theaters and places of amusement open on Sunday. On the continent not only churches, but libraries, reading-rooms, art galleries, and everything that educates are kept open on Sunday more than any other day.

These are the facts concerning Sunday; its origin, its past austere and vicious perversion by the Puritan; its present genial and liberal observance that is stigmatized as "desecration" by the theological bourbons of the pulpit. Among other signs that we are on the eve of a "New Reformation" we include the larger freedom and humane observance of the Christian Sunday, which is to-day construed exactly as Christ construed the Jewish Sabbath, viz.: that it was lawful to do anything on Sunday that is proper on other days. About a year ago the Rev. H. M. Simmons delivered a sermon on the Sunday question before the Unitarian Society of Minneapolis, Minn., and he handled it fearlessly. He exposed the absurdity of Evangelist Moody, who refused to take the Sunday train over to St. Paul one cold Sunday afternoon, but went over in a team. The team broke the biblical laws as much as the train; his driver broke them, and had Moody's admirers accompanied him to St. Paul by team rather than by train, where would hav been the spiritual advantage in tiring out a hundred horses and drivers rather than riding comfortably in a train in a third of the time with only a twentieth of the human labor? This is the unanswerable question that Rev. Mr. Simmons put to Evangelist Moody. Mr. Simmons concluded his defense of the railroads as follows:

> In view of what railroads are doing to enable hundreds of people to see God's green fields and their friends and families on this their rest-day, and to come to our city and hear sound evangelical sermons, and all with so little sinful labor of men and none at all of forbidden horses, I say, "Blessings on the Sunday trains."

Of Sunday newspapers Mr. Simmons makes stout defense. If Sunday work makes a paper wicked, then it is the Monday paper that should be suppressed, which contains the reports of the sermons. If the newsboys ought to be ordered home, why, then we must order home the coachmen and horses of Colonel Shepard of the New York Mail who hav broken the biblical law. To the objection that the Sunday paper is not good, or that its good is mingled with bad, with murders, bigamies, and adulteries, Mr. Simmons answers:

> But so is the good in the Bible mingled with similar reports of Jacob's bigamy and David's adultery, of Joshua's manifold murders and the Psalmist's blessing on the man who should dash the Babylonian babes against the stones. Still preachers do not call the Bible bad because of these contents. Why should such writings be called divine in the scriptures, and devilish in the papers? Preachers excuse them in the Bible, saying, "It is a picture of life, and must giv the evil as well as the good." So is the newspaper—and we must expect it to contain both bad and good. It pictures murders as brutal as that of Samuel hewing Agag in pieces before the Lord—it contains poems as erotic as Solomon's Song, and plenty of matter no more fit to go into a family than is the biblical story of Amnon and his sister, or of Lot and his daughters. There is always, in a great paper, good reading for all who want it. On the whole a paper seems a good thing for Sunday. Or if it is not good for Sunday, then it is not good for Saturday, and the same principle which would suppress to-day's issue, would suppress the whole newspaper system. But the system is admitted to be good.

Replying to Rev. Herrick Johnson's dogmatic declaration that "the Sunday newspaper had not come to stay, if God had come to stay," Mr. Simmons said:

> But Herrick Johnson's God has not come to stay, and is rapidly retiring before a juster and truer one. That God of the biblical story, who forbade fire on the Sabbath, and ordered men slain for picking up sticks, has already gone. And any God whose orders retain the least injustice and inhumanity is destined to go in like manner. Not the God of creation fable which has proved false, or of a theology which desecrates Sunday by preaching that deity is partial, but the God of nature and law, of justice and love, of human rights and human hearts; this is the God who has come to stay. This God "worketh hitherto" through all the eons before Adam, and ever since, coming with new creation every summer, and still smiling on us in this Sunday morning sunshine. But he worketh best on earth through the growth of human justice, and is worshiped best by our helpfulness to each other. His Sabbath is kept, not by resting in honor of a rest that he has never taken—but in the spirit of that better Jewish law, by giving rest to the weary, freedom to the enslaved, aid to the oppressed and poor, and joy to all. Such a spirit consecrates Sunday and all other days with it.

Lectures and Meetings.

AUGUSTUS A. LEVEY, of New York, president of the Manhattan Liberal Club, will lecture at the Newark Liberal League on Sunday afternoon, January 18th. Subject: "Events in 1957."

W. F. JAMIESON is giving a course of six lectures in Correctionville, Ia., where, during the year, he has already given a number of lectures. Mr. Jamieson has favored giving lectures in a town for not less than one week. He says: "Persistent, educativ lectures are what count for Liberalism. One or two lectures in a place may be more profitable for the speaker, but funds expended for one or two lectures are almost entirely thrown away. Longer engagements and more thorough work is the demand of the hour." He next expects to visit Kingsley and Marcus, Ia. Address him at his permanent address, Des Moines, Ia.

Communications.

Religious Banking and Bankers.—Miss Willard in a State of Eclipse.

The city of Chicago had an instructiv winding up of the year of grace 1890, in the failure of the banking firm of S. A. Kean & Co. This was, par eminence, a religious firm, organized in a very wicked city, to show to the world of transgressors how business, and particularly banking business, could and ought to be done in a strictly Christian way. It opened its daily business with religious exercises. The Bible was its standard of morals. Under such professions it secured the confidence of the religious public. Having no sufficient capital on which to do so large a business as it undertook to do, and after enjoying and profiting by the public confidence for some years, it broke up, leaving a large number of people who had put their funds into the bank for safe keeping to find that they were indeed safely kept, not for them, but from them. During the legal investigation that ensued, subpœnas were sent out to two Methodist ministers who were said to hav closed up their accounts on the day of the assignment, knowing that the bank was about to break, and that they would lose their money unless lifted. If discovered that such was the fact, the court no doubt would ask these gentlemen to return the amounts withdrawn, and share the losses of the rest of the depositors who were not informed of the real condition of affairs.

These saintly bankers it seems were greatly admired by Miss Frances Willard, and she is now attracting much public attention by a most extraordinary letter published in the Chicago Tribune; and which, bearing as it does upon the subject I am discussing, will be published, it is hoped, in THE TRUTH SEEKER, so that its readers may learn something of the character of this remarkable woman and judge of the fairness of my criticism. Miss Willard, speaking in her letter of the losses which some of her pet institutions hav suffered by the Kean failure, says: "That $1,000 will replace all the losses of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union; that $3,000 are the losses of the Temple; while the Woman's Temperance Publishing House receives every day nearly half as much as it had on deposit with Mr. Kean." From the new religious method of keeping accounts, can any of this world's arithmeticians and bookkeepers tell how much money was actually lost by the publishing house? The Chicago Tribune, in an editorial published during the process of exposure up to date, says:

> The Kean bank may fittingly be described as a sink of corruption. The more it is stirred the worse it smells. The "business" seems to hav been systematically misrepresented for years, and the legitimate inference is it was done for the express purpose of deceiving so much of the public as might be tempted to risk cash there. The whole thing recalls a remark by Bunyan about some men who "make of religion a stalking-horse that they may gain thereby."

While the Kean failure and the amount of the defalcation will not appear in the list of "embezzlements for the year 1890," just published in a Tribune's extra, numbering 462 persons, and the funds stolen amounting to $8,622,956, the losses by this firm will be published in the list of defaulters for the year 1891.

Miss Willard, as the reader of her letter will see, censured the pulpit and the pew-holders, because they did not "leap into the arena" to vindicate the character of poor innocent brother Kean. She says: "His thirty years of clean life and helpful service in Chicago Home Missionary Work, Young Men's Christian Association work, Sunday-school and Temperance work, his simple, plain way of living, seem to me factors worth recounting in the present crisis. Thirty years of good behavior and brotherly helpfulness, ought to count for something; and not to hav failed before, in all the financial crises of Chicago, should surely count for something. Although I am pained beyond expression by the silence of the good, it is then true that the world's people stand by each other better than do members of the household of faith."

It is noteworthy here that Miss Willard is "pained beyond expression," not by the coolly planned and executed villainy of Kean & Co., in robbing confiding depositors of their hard-earned money, but because of the silence of the clergy and pew-holders, and their backwardness in leaping into the arena to defend the character of a man proved to be a cruel, hard-hearted swindler.

After another glorification of Mr. Kean's high character "as a leading Prohibitionist, a representativ Methodist, and banker for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and its affiliated interests," this model Christian lady hints that "hatred of the temperance cause may be back of all this" persecution of an innocent man. But how could the haters of the temperance cause, by which she means the opponents of Prohibition, hav anything to do either with bringing about the rottenness and scoundrelism of the bank, or its exposure to the public? The instincts of this class would prevent them from investing in such a bank, for they are of the world, and shrewd observers of mankind are suspicious of those who are over-much righteous; and it was the plundered depositors who set the dogs of the law on the track of the rogues and chased them down.

Miss Willard, in her letter referred to, has eclipsed her own fame. For years she has posed before the public as a reformer of bad morals; for morals may be either good or bad. She is so outrageously benevolent that she wishes to compel people by law to drink no intoxicating liquor, not even cider or wine, because she says—in defiance of scripture—that it is sinful so to do. She wants to shut the doors of the Columbian Exposition because she thinks it would be wrong, although the vast majority of the people can see no harm in it at all. She wants to put a religious creed into the national Constitution, enforce it by law, and subject all who are convicted, either of heresy or Sabbath-breaking, to fine or imprisonment. And yet this lady, whom all the religious women in the country regard and imitate as a model saint, is so stone-blind that she cannot distinguish between an honest man and a set of deliberate swindlers and thieves, provided the latter are pious and devoted Methodists who do business on Bible principles, and perfume the rooms of their banking-house with the odor of sanctity.

It is alleged that Miss Willard, in her zeal to destroy the Pauline character of the Methodist church and open up the way for woman to exercise all the official functions that men now perform, is aiming to become a bishop. But judging from the tone of her letter, written obviously with the intent to sanction and sanctify the character of Kean notwithstanding his doings as a banker, what an overseer of the church she would make! It is well known that the pirates and brigands of Italy and Mexico, although outlawed by their governments, keep priests to act as chaplains, and administer saving ordinances of the church, when any of them are about to die in the act of robbery or murder. Judging from Miss Willard's letter, and her total inability to see the difference between right and wrong, when the wrong is practiced by a pious Methodist and Prohibitionist, what a sink of iniquity the Methodist church would become under such an overseer! John Tetzel, in the sixteenth century, thunderstruck all the honest people in Europe, and hastened on the Reformation, by the sale of indulgences to commit sin. The pope, in order to raise money for religious purposes, especially to build St. Peter's church at Rome, gave Tetzel a license to forgiv people's sins, provided they gave freely of their money to church purposes. Sins of all degrees of criminality would be bleached into virtues the moment the money was paid. Miss Willard would be another Tetzel. She has not a word to say in the condemnation of the robberies deliberately, and for years, perpetrated by the Kean bank, either because they were committed by a pious Methodist whose sins she knows, past, present, and to come, were blotted out of the book of God's remembrance, having been atoned for by the blood of Jesus; or, because Mr. Kean was a Christian after the order of Saint Jacob, who felt that, being a favorit of God, he had a right to cheat the Labans who put their money into his hands for safe keeping. May we not hope that her boldness, only equaled by that of the monk Tetzel, will, like his, arouse the slumbering sentiment of justice in the hearts of the honest people in the Methodist church, and lead them to retire that lady from public gaze as a moral reformer, and send her where she can become a student in some primary school of ethics?

But I am encroaching on your space; and if you will publish Miss Willard's letter, which I inclose, I will postpone the remainder of what I hav to say on this subject till the next week. VINDEX.

Jan. 3, 1891.

MISS WILLARD'S LETTER.

For days I hav waited to see some leader in the pulpit or pew leap into the arena of public controversy in defense of S. A. Kean. His thirty years of clean life and helpful service in Chicago home missionary work, Young Men's Christian Association work, Sunday-school and temperance work, his simple, plain way of living, his continuous honorable connection in the most prominent way with a bank as widely known as any in Chicago, seemed to me factors worth recounting in the present crisis. Thirty years of good behavior and brotherly helpfulness ought to count for something among one's fellow-men; and not to hav failed before in all the financial crises of Chicago and the country at large, should surely count for something. Although I am pained beyond expression by the silence of the good, it is then true that the world's people stand by each other better than do members of the household of faith. If "Mike" McDonald had been so universally assailed would there hav been so few voices raised in his behalf? Does the edifice of character, so slowly and patiently builded, count for so very little where storms of disaster fall? When one is dead we love to tell of his good and generous deeds. Why should we not when one is wounded and stricken on life's treacherous highway? How soon a whisper can tarnish a reputation. How do we know but that systematic whispering may hav been a large ingredient in the witch's broth that has so boiled and frothed in the city press for a week past? The Woman's Christian Temperance Union and its affiliated interests hav had Mr. Kean for banker during several recent years. He is a leading Prohibitionist, a representativ Methodist layman. Who knows what hatred of the temperance cause may be back of all this—what blow aimed at an organized movement against the liquor traffic?

Happily we hav never had much money to deposit at any one time, and so far as I know $1,000 will replace all the losses of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and $3,000 those of the Temple, while the Woman's Temperance Publishing House receives every day nearly half as much as it had on deposit with Mr. Kean. But I know by my correspondence that the press of the country understand that an appalling calamity has overtaken the white ribbon movement. Possibly. "The wish is father to the thought." There is joy in heaven over one sinnner that repenteth. There is doubtless joy in hell over one saint that falls. Beyond a peradventure there is a rejoicing in every grog shop of the city where the temperance cause or any of its advocates is overtaken by misfortune, seeming or real.

But "God is not dead," as Sojourner Truth reminded Fred Douglas in a great emergency. The Bible in business, prayer in a banking-house, these are consistent Christian means and methods and worthy of all good report. Christ and his cause will come more and more into contact with every-day life of trade. Let us hope for the best, believe in the vindication of character, the rehabilitation of reputation, and the triumph of eternal justice toward the banker as well as his depositors. This is a woman's pen, titled lance fashion in this tournament of opinion, "with malice toward none and charity for all."

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

Mathematical Evidence Against Immortality.

I admire the candor and sincerity of Mr. W. W. Walker in yours of the 27th inst. He objects to the Brotherhood of Moralists because it requires its members to combat the belief in the so-called spirit manifestations as vain delusions. He calls himself an Agnostic on the subject of Spiritualism, being not fully convinced of its truth. He "waits for the light"—for positiv evidence that Spiritism is either true or false, admitting that the phenomena alluded to may possibly be attributed to other causes."

Can such desire for knowing the truth be highly enough extolled? Is it not worthy of emulation by those of our Spiritualistic allies who rail at Materialists for not accepting such phenomena as positiv evidence of spirit existence? Mr. Walker seeks for satisfactory evidence of an after life, or for proof that this heirloom of ancient ignorance and superstition is a fallacy. Can such evidence be produced? I believe it can. For instance, what if it can be mathematically demonstrated that human souls hav been already evolved from this planet in such numbers—provided always that any hav been evolved at all—that they extend in a compact mass far beyond our sun in every radial direction? Think of that, Mr. Walker, and ye believers in immortality, a compact mass of souls filling the space surrounding our earth within a radius of many millions of miles, and this accomplished within a few thousand years! And our planet one of the smallest ones giving, or which will giv, birth to life and mind essentially the same as ours. The extent of soul evolution—if any is going on—has never yet been computed, and the believer in immortality has been left in blissful ignorance of it, but when its extent is presented to him in round and undeniable figures it will prove a staggerer. If then the human souls already evolved from our planet occupy such a vast area of space, what of the souls that hav been and will be evolved at some time from our vastly greater sister planets? And where will the necessary room be found for the souls that will eventually see the light of day in our parent planet, the sun, when her life and mind generating period arrives? Would her soul product alone not extend into the domains of adjoining planetary systems? And what of the inferior organisms springing in vastly greater numbers from all these various orbs, beings to whom immortality the same as ours is conceded by Spiritists? Where will the necessary room for all of them be found, please tell me? But this is only a moiety of what we hav to consider in computing the necessary space required for all immortal minds evolved throughout the universe; for all progressiv scientists agree that every orb in infinit space will at some time during its existence produce essentially the same beings as this planet has produced, all having sprung from the same stock.

Now, then, it can be mathematically demonstrated that the soul-product of our system (if there be such) will, when the sun has added her vast quota to it, encroach upon and occupy the domain of several adjoining planetary systems. Do not deride the idea, but wait for indisputable figures, data, and statistics. This fact established, I ask, Where will the necessary room for the souls of these neighboring systems be found? I pause for a reply. Will it be forthcoming? The soul-product of the planets and sun constituting our system is of such magnitude, always presuming that there is any at all, that if they produced but a fraction of the organisms evolved of them, their souls would be crowded into these adjoining systems in a compact mass standing side by side and on top of each other like pickled herrings (with not a particle of spare room to flap their wings in), and the souls of these other systems would be similarly crowded into ours. That these systems gyrate in space, nor maintain their respectiv positions, matters not, for their intervening distances remain virtually the same, that is, where some recede, others approach, thus preserving their equal distribution through the vast expanse of space. The eventual filling up of the latter, if immortality were true, would be the inevitable result, nay, would hav been the inevitable result an infinit number of times already, for hav not an infinit number of life and mind evolving world systems preceded those in existence now? Contemplate the meaning of eternity, ye believers in individual immortality, with all that it implies, and then ask yourself, Can such doctrins be true? Is it possible for nature to eternally evolve spirits without eventually filling up the spaces that divide the life-producing worlds pervading it? Is it possible to eternally add to the contents of a vessel already full to overflowing? And what of the souls evolved of these infinit numbers of dead and dying worlds that hav preceded ours? What has become of them? Why do our self-styled "spirit-mediums" not giv us some information concerning these spirits of former worlds? And what of the souls that will be evolved of the worlds now in embryo, and which will exist when our entire present systems will again be resolved into their original cosmic dust? Eternity is a fact, gentlemen, a hard, solid, indisputable fact. Eternity and nature will exist when all present existences or formations will be obliterated, and appear to the minds of futurity as we now contemplate the beings and worlds of former epochs. If a few paltry millions of years will fill all space with immortal souls, what chance for immortality is there for the beings evolved of future worlds? Claim it for us and not concede it to them? With the same justice may the beings of former worlds hav claimed it for themselvs and denied it to us, seeing that the interstellar spaces, being limited in extent, admit of only a limited number of souls. You say that space is unlimited. Very true, but are the worlds pervading it not as unlimited? Is space not being filled with souls by an unlimited number of worlds, if the doctrin of immortality be true? Can you claim this alleged boon for the beings evolved of this insignificant speck alone, and not grant it to the beings of far superior worlds? Down upon such presumption and conceit! Admitting the infinity of space, the infinity of the life-producing planets must be admitted also, leaving no outside promenading grounds into which the world's entire soul-product may penetrate to flop their wings and shout hallelujahs in.

Conceding the infinity of space, the interplanetary spaces separating the worlds are measurable, hence limited, showing beyond all reasonable doubt that it is only a question of measurable time when these intervening spaces will be filled with souls to their utmost capacity by the infinit number of life and mind evolving worlds. And what then? Would further soul-evolution not be an absolute impossibility? Can the fallacy of immortality, therefore, not be mathematically and scientifically proved?

With these undeniable facts before him, can Mr. Walker still wonder that Materialists regard modern Spiritualism as the outgrowth of ignorance and superstition, and must he therefore not look for the causes of so-called spirit manifestations elsewhere?

Marengo, Ill., Dec. 29, 1890. H. WETTSTEIN.

W. S. Bell Goes to Sea.

I went to the Broadway pier in San Francisco, two weeks ago, to take the steamer for Ft. Bragg, two hundred miles distant. I may say, to begin with, that my trip was not a thing of beauty or a joy forever.

> A life on the ocean wave,
> And a home on the rolling deep,

is very good poetry, but it is one of those cases where 'tis distance lends enchantment to the view.

The ship I sailed in could not, strictly speaking, be called a floating palace. The Coos Bay, for that is her name, is quite a small boat, and as she rolls and pitches about in the least bit of rough weather, the profane and sea-sick passengers familiarly call her an "old tub." She has no spacious saloons such as the Providence and Bristol floating palaces of New York hav. No ladies' cabin or gentlemen's cabin, where one may sit on cushioned seats under an electric light and read the latest magazine or "My Uncle Benjamin." You find no room of any kind except a very small one, a half apology for a dining-room. As soon as you come upon deck you are run along the gangway a few steps and then into a little pen, and there you are stalled and installed for the whole trip. It is true you may take a step or two from your door to the dining-room, if you feel so disposed, and most of the passengers do not feel so disposed. It is one of the luxuries of a home on the rolling deep that they willingly forego.

As soon as I was steered into my little pen I looked about me to take in the situation. Here I was in a stateroom that possessed every feature of a stateroom except that of stateliness. True, it was a room, but it was not a roomy room. I could stand up, sit down, or lie down. I was cabined, cribbed, and confined. The berth, or shelf, upon which I had to bestow my delicate frame of two hundred avoirdupois, was probably twenty inches wide. And as the one above it was not very much above it, I found it very difficult to put myself in a reposeful position.

I did not go to bed until the Coos Bay steamed far outside the Golden Gate, and was heaving and pitching amid the waves of a heavy sea.

The window to this dry-goods box of a state-room was correspondingly small. I had to open it to look out upon the rolling deep. I hav seen horses' heads protruding through a similar-sized space in the side of the stable. I fancied a resemblance in pasture, at least. I peered out of this aperture to see a whale that the sailors said was seen. I caught a sight of his flukes, but did not see him spout.

Although our voyage along the Pacific coast was not quite as pacific as it might be, it was nevertheless entirely too rough for the lady passengers. Poor things! When they came on board rigged up in fine style, and as gay as peacocks, they looked charming, but next morning, after they had been heaving Jonah all night, they were a pretty sight.

The Pacific coast is very unlike the Atlantic coast in the matter of bays and harbors. Here we hav but few bays. The coast has little indentures like saw teeth, which, in good weather, a steamer can run into and make a landing, but even a heavy ocean swell prevents a landing. When we reached Ft. Bragg, there was too much "swell on" and we could not land. Our tub turned about and ran back over her course twenty miles, and put into port at Little River, where we lay all night.

In the morning the Coos Bay steamed out, and made a landing, in a few hours afterward, at Mendocino City. Our captain informed us that we must go ashore here, as he should return directly to San Francisco. Here was where I came to grief. The Coos Bay was lying off shore two hundred yards. We had to get into the small boat and be transferred to a lighter, and from the lighter raised seventy-five feet by a derrick, and thus transported high and dry on land.

Although our ship was lying in comparativly quiet waters, she was nevertheless greatly moved by the ocean swell. The small boat was lowered with two ladies in it, but I was invited to climb down a ladder to get into the boat. Here was the ship rising and falling on the swell, and the small boat at her side rising and falling on the waves of a chopped sea much more rapidly. At one time the small boat would rise from three to four feet higher than it was a moment before. I managed to get over the gunwale with some difficulty, and made my descent until I came near the side of the small boat, then the officer said, "Jump," and I let go, as that was about all the jumping to be done.

I landed in the boat and slipped upon my fall, and found myself with two skinned shins. We were carried to the lighter, and here again trouble was brewing for me. The passengers had to be helped up on the lighter out of the boat by parties standing on the lighter and taking us by the hand and giving a heave ahoy pull.

I got there, but with an additional abrasion of one of the aforementioned underpinnings. I limped through the streets of Mendocino City inquiring for the time of the first stage to Fort Bragg. I was not amiable.

A three hours' ride brought me to Fort Bragg, a sawmill town, where I met good friends and a warm reception, by C. C. Johnson, Oscar Bucholtz, and many others. My lecture on "Liberty and Morality" was well received by a large audience. On Sunday night the audience was not so large, but many who heard the lecture, "The Evolution of Religious Ideas," were as much if not more pleased with it as they were with the other lecture.

The churches exert every effort to keep the people away from our lectures. The Christian cannot stand the light. No prophecy could more surely foretell the downfall of superstition than this fear of the sunlight of science.

My friends at Ft. Bragg had arranged, or thought they had, for me to lecture at Greenwood. But when I got there, I found that no arrangements had been made. The man whom I was to find a great Liberal, was nothing of the kind. I was exceedingly disappointed. Somebody lighted up the hall, but nobody came, not even my supposed Liberal friend. I could not get away, and so remained another night and proposed to lecture. The audience was composed of men. A collection of a few dollars was raised; my supposed Liberal friend took up the collection. He is reported to make ten dollars a day and allowed me to pay my hotel bill. I was anxious to get out of Greenwood. Some said the boat would not land there (i. e., at Little River) and that I had better take the stage for Point Arena, eighteen miles away. The dread of having to stay in such a place for three days more and the possibility of having to get on board the Coos Bay in the same rough way that I disembarked, induced me to take the stage for Point Arena. Here they hav a pier to which the boat ties up.

We reached Point Arena long before the boat was due. I sat around in the hotel till about 3 o'clock; then everybody goes to the pier to see their friends or freight off. The boat was late. As she hove in sight the young people raised a faint cheer. It soon became doubtful whether she would come in. The doubt was not of long duration—she whistled three times and passed by. The gaiety leaves the people. We trudge back to the hotel. And here I was to stay three days in a lifeless town, and could not get away. As Jonah was three days and three nights in the mouth of a whale (Talmage says Jonah was only in the whale's mouth), so I remained three days and three nights in one of the most woebegone places it ever was my sad misfortune to be in. After the expiration of three days and three nights the despised tub came along, and I was as glad to get on board again as I was to get off. Happy mortal was I when I got on the pier of San Francisco, just about daylight, and rushed through crowds of hotel runners to catch an early ferry-boat for Oakland.

W. S. BELL.

Items of Foreign Freethought News.

An international Catholic scientific congress is to be held in Paris in the beginning of April. Judging from the name taken by the gathering, it does well to open on the first of that month.

Twelve persons hav been sentenced by the city court of Dessau to six months' imprisonment each for blasphemous conduct. The wicked fellows made a parody on the cannibalistic feast known as the Lord's supper.

Religious persecution in Austria is on the increase. The other day a meeting was broken up by the police because some one read aloud Dr. Specht's lecture, "Brain and Soul." Science is free in Austria, but only so long as its teachings are not imparted to the people in general.

During the past year Dr. Voelkel has given two hundred and twenty-five lectures, besides editing his paper; been indicted eight times for blasphemy—discharged in five instances; and has at present seven indictments for various heretical offenses pending against him. Among the witnesses for the prosecution clergymen figure quite often; the Halle case has two such "holy" witnesses.

The latest news from Sweden indicates a speedy return to the former state of fraternity among the Freethinkers. Since the expulsion from the society of Henry Berghell, the various members of the executiv board hav returned and resumed their duties. Mr. Lennstrand, whose splendid lecture on "God" has recently been translated into German, has not as yet reoccupied his presidential chair, but will, we hav no doubt, do so in the beginning of this year.

The Belgian Freethinkers hav met with a great loss. Dr. César de Pæpe, vice-president of the Federation of Belgian Freethought societies, has breathed his last. The doctor was an activ Freethinker, and a prominent scientist and philosopher. His name will liv forever among the Freethinkers of Belgium, and many Christians also will cherish his memory, for he, as La Raison says, "possessed two qualities which mankind admire: geniality and goodness." After the impressiv Secular funeral services were over, his remains were cremated, Dec. 25, 1890.

The Catholic church of Germany is feeling uneasy, owing to the large decrease of its membership during the past year, a fact owed, it is believed, to the intermarriage of Catholic men with Protestant women. To counteract this, two books hav appeared and are being circulated among the people. One, written by Paul Majunke, "extraordinary chamberlain to his holiness the pope," alleges that Martin Luther committed suicide; the other, by a Dr. Honef, resurrects the old story that "the colonel of the devils ordered these beings to proceed to Eisleben, there to torment Luther, that he might, hated and feared by everyone, hang himself to the bedpost."

IT seems almost incredible that, in the latter part of the nineteenth century, a large proportion of the people of Europe still profess to believe the fables of the creation, fall, and redemption, notwithstanding the fact that science and reason both declare them to hav been impossible as historic occurrences. —H. J. Hardwicke, F.R.C.S.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - JANUARY 17, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ARTICLE

By HON. A. B. BRADFORD,

ENTITLED

The Disadvantage of Specialism in the Advocacy of Reform.

It is a view of our work which should lead to thought and discussion among the Freethinkers of the country.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

In the Lone Star State.

In opposition to the Secular Union of San Antonio, Texas, which is circulating a petition to the legislature of that state to repeal Sunday laws, the clergy of that city are endeavoring to induce the same legal body to pass more stringent laws regarding the "holy" day of the Christians. Their special point, according to the Denison Gazetteer, is to prohibit brass bands parading on Sunday, and the clergy all over the state are appealed to for assistance. The Gazetteer says: "If those outside the pale of the church are to be prevented from making music on Sunday, the law should also prohibit the ringing of church bells on that day. The noise of a good brass band is infinitly superior to the clang of half a dozen or more discordant bells, which drive the sick distracted, and serve no useful purpose whatever."

We ask every Freethinker in Texas who may read this to send to Otto Praeger, 262 East Commerce street, San Antonio, for copies of the petition against Sunday laws. When received circulate them extensivly and then send them before the last day of February to the representativ of the district at Austin.

The World's Fair.

The Independent, which on the Bible in the schools and the taxation of church property questions is with the Infidels, has on the Sunday question deliberately chosen to go with the God-in-the-Constitution party, and waxes particularly hysterical over the proposed opening of the Chicago World's Fair. Its issue of the 8th instant contains several violent, ill-reasoned, and unfair articles in favor of closing the Fair, and also a Congressional expression of opinion thereon pro and con. This latter is of interest, but would, so far as the House of Representativs is concerned, hav been of greater interest had the Independent waited until the next Congress meets, for it will be that body which will act on the question if it is to be brought up in Congress at all, and the next Congress will not be composed of the same members as this. And it is our opinion that a canvass of the next House will disclose more members in favor of Sunday opening than the present one.

However, the people will be glad to learn how their representativs at Washington stand, so far as this fractional expression of opinion reveals it, and we subjoin the list of those opposed, those favoring, and those afraid to say much about it:

SENATORS OPPOSED TO SUNDAY OPENING.

Wm P Frye, Maine	R F Pettigrew, S D
J N Dolph, Oregon	James McMillan, Mich
E K Wilson, Maryland	George Gray, Del
R Blodgett, N J	John E Kenna, W Va
O H Platt, Conn

SENATORS FAVORING SUNDAY OPENING.

Charles F Manderson, Neb	Jos C S Blackburn, Ky
M C Butler, S C

SENATORS WITH NO OPINION FOR PUBLICATION.

Anthony Higgins, Del	P B Plumb, Kan

REPRESENTATIVS OPPOSED TO SUNDAY OPENING.

John Dalzell, Pa	A C Harmer, Pa
H St George Tucker, Va	D H Brunner, Pa
Clarke Lewis, Mass	N Dingley, Jr., Maine
J A Pickler, S D	John F Lacy, Iowa
T C McRae, Ark	James Buchanan, N J
C H Grosvenor, Ohio	S G Comstock, Minn
W J Stone, Ky	Daniel Kerr, Iowa
Thomas J Henderson, Ill	G H Funston, Kan
Wm Vandervcer, Cal	Geo T Barnes, Ga
Charles O'Neill, Pa	B M Cutcheon, Mich
Wm S Holman, Ind	C A Bergen, N J
W G Laidlaw, N Y	M S Brewer, Mich
H C Evans, Tenn	B A Enloe, Tenn
M Brosius, Pa	M H Dunnell, Minn
Charles C Townsend, Pa	H C McCormack, Pa
John J Hemphill	M L Smyser, Ohio
T S Flood, N Y	Isaac S Strubble, Iowa
George W Cooper, Ind	Thos O Miller, S C
J S Sherman, N Y	J A Quackenbush, N Y
C T O'Ferrall, Va	Burton McMillin, Tenn
Elijah A Morse, Mass	Richard Vaux, Pa
W D Owen, Ind	J H Walker, Mass
Levi Maish, Pa	Nathan Frank, Mo
Seth L Milliken, Maine	T G Skinner, N C
G S Osborne, Pa	W F Wilcox, Conn
E R Hays, Iowa	Joseph D Taylor, Ohio
Charles S Baker, N Y	C S Williams, Ohio
S A Craig, Pa

REPRESENTATIVS FAVORING SUNDAY OPENING.

Wm C Wallace, N Y	C A Hill, Ill
N C Blanchard, La	Silas Hare, Texas]
R H Clarke, Ala	G W Atkinson, W Va
G L Laws, Neb	J P Flick, Iowa
John M Langston, Va	J Abbott, Tex
I H Goodnight, Ky	Charles E Belknap, Mich
John T Heard, Mo	Geo W Fithian, Ill
J V McDuffie, Ala	A Joseph, Delegate from New Mexico
Felix Campbell, N Y
C H Mansur, Mo	W H Crain, Tex
J E Washington, Tenn	J M Brower, N C
A J Hopkins, Del	Walter I Hayes, Iowa
James B Reilly, Pa	W C Whitthorne, Tenn
J W Van Shaick, Wis	H Stockbridge, Jr., Maryland
Robert Bullock, Ga	John Lind, Minn
Charles Tracey, N Y	George W E Dorsey, Neb
E J Turner, Kan	S R Peters, Kan
J H Rowell, Ill	John L Wilson, Washington
L E McComas	H L Morey, Ohio
M Biggs, Cal (exceptionally)	R H Norton, Mo
Thomas M Bayne, Pa	H O'Neall, Ind
W D Bynum, Ind	R P C Wilson, Mo

REPRESENTATIVS WITH NO OPINION FOR PUBLICATION.

H F Finley, Ky	Wm F Barrett, Ind
John H Wilson, Ky	M M Boothman, Ohio
C Boatner, La

Senator John J. Ingalls, Kan., and Representativ W. M. Springer, Ill., desire Sunday opening for religious exercises; the former adds music.

The majority of those favoring Sunday opening, as well as nearly all of those opposing, are decided and emphatic in giving their views. A few among these who favor the opening do so "to benefit the workingman," and for other limited reasons. Senators Manderson, of Nebraska, and Blackburn, of Kentucky, deserve special credit for their open avowal of liberal opinions in this matter. The Representativs entitled to honorable mention for their unqualified frankness are John T. Heard, of Missouri; W. D. Bynum, of Indiana; J. P. Flick, of Iowa; Charles E. Belknap, of Michigan; Geo. W. Fithian, of Illinois; S. R. Peters, of Kansas; and H. O'Neall, of Indiana.

The situation at Chicago is briefly this: The matter rests with the Local Directory, as the National Commission will not interfere until that Directory submits its rules and regulations for the government of the Exposition. The Local Directory are of the opinion that present action by them with reference to the Sunday opening of the Exposition is premature. The avowed reasons for this judgment are, that the question is sure to arouse conflict, and as many other questions are now necessarily before the Directory involving serious conflict of judgment, this question of Sunday opening should not be raised until it is absolutely necessary to meet it; and that next spring there is to be another election of Local Directors, and some of the present board will probably resign and others will be voted out, and hence any action taken by the present Directory may possibly be reversed.

That the Sabbatarians are afraid they will lose in the contest is plain. They are incensed at the National Commission and at the Local Directory for not settling the matter at once in their favor, "so that it may be published to the ends of the earth." They consider it necessary to deny the report, telegraphed over the country, that a prominent German had been given a pledge by the Directory or the Commission that the gates of the Exposition would be opened on Sunday, and liquor sold on the premises, as one inducement to his paying over his subscription. They are, too, afraid that Mammon will hav something to do in settling the question—that the gate receipts for Sundays will be too strong a temptation to the thrifty Chicagoans. The railroads centering in Chicago, they say, can dump a hundred thousand people into the city with their Sunday excursion trains. What that will mean in the way of swollen receipts appalls them! Their hope rests with the national government, and Congress will be pestered by them without cessation.

It will be seen from this that there is ample time for Liberals to roll up some big petitions in favor of Sunday opening; these petitions will hav large influence in the matter, as offsetting the ones by the Sabbatarians, and the opportunity is a splendid one in which to work for our principles.

Two Kindly Corrections.

In his letter on "The American Secular Union's Policy," printed elsewhere in this issue, Dr. Westbrook says of his speech at Portsmouth, Ohio, "there is not one word regarding theology or the claims which the church makes for the Bible. It simply shows why the Bible is not a suitable book to be read to children." It seems to us that this last sentence contradicts the first, for we understand the church to claim that the Bible is just the book to be read to the young. If we hav misapprehended the attitude of the church in this matter we beg some theological authority to set us right. Moreover, Dr. Westbrook's view of the lecture does not agree with the estimate of it made by the Christian Statesman, which says: "It argues the question from the Infidel point of view, and is in many portions a scurrilous and blasphemous attack on the Bible as an obscene and cruel book. Other portions assail its authenticity and credibility. As showing the animus and ultimate purpose of the assault on the religious element in education, the pamphlet will be helpful to the friends of the Bible in the schools." And we must confess that after we had heard the speech and then heard the genial president of the Union object to another orator's radicalism we could see no valid reason for the objection unless the president desired to keep all the glory of opposing Christianity—for what is Christianity without its Bible?—to himself.

On another point, too, it seems to us the president of the Union falls into error. He says the Secular philosophy "is nothing less than Materialism pure and simple—nothing more. It is opposition to the supernatural and the spiritual." We understand this better since learning from the Progressiv Thinker that the president of the Union is a Spiritualist, but even then we fail to see why he opposes opposition to *super*naturalism, since a spiritual existence, if real, must necessarily be a part of nature. But is the Secular philosophy "opposition to the Spiritual?" It is not so set down by its recognized advocate on this continent, whom Mr. Holyoake, the father of the philosophy, alleges to be its clearest exponent, for he makes its first principle to be, "That the present life being the only one of which we hav any knowledge, its concerns claim our earnest attention." This is not opposition to the spiritual, for it does not maintain that this life is the only one of which we can hav any knowledge, but it is the very Agnostic position which the president asserts that intelligent Freethinkers like Huxley and Ingersoll assume. The principle quoted only affirms that up to date the world has no knowledge—that it does not know—of another world; and whether such world does exist it leaves to the future to discover. The god question it also leaves to the future, not affirming, neither denying, "for such as the father is, such is the son, and such is the holy ghost."

It is true that the Secular philosophy by implication contradicts every one of the most cherished Christian dogmas, and is pure Materialism. But that it does not directly oppose the spiritual, we hav the authority of the distinguished Secular philosophers who kindly permit Theists and Spiritualists to come into their fold and get warm. But why will

Dr. Westbrook not take the word of these philosophers instead of contending that Secularism is nothing but Materialism?

However, his explanation of the Union's policy throws light upon one thing—his opposition to Mr. Charlesworth as a field secretary of the Union. He does not want to send out an English Secular lecturer who in expounding his philosophy would be misrepresenting the attitude of the Union. The point may be well taken, but alarm in this matter is, we think, needless.

JUST as we go to press the news reaches New York of the death on Sunday, the 11th instant, of Josiah P. Mendum, publisher of the Boston Investigator, of cancer of the stomach. Only the bare announcement has reached here, and we can say no more than that the expected has happened, but is no less a cause of grief to his thousands of friends.

Editorial Notes.

ONE of the clearest thinkers and sharpest writers among the Liberals of the country writes to the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER: "I think your answer to Mr. Watts on what the Nine Demands imply is as conclusiv as any demonstration in Euclid's 'Elements of Geometry.'"

T. B. WAKEMAN says that in our greatly condensed report of his discussion with Dr. Janes some needful words were omitted in some of the sentences, which he corrects thus: Laws of nature are our record of the equivalences and correlativs of changes in matter. Mind is a correlate of the complex changes in our nervous systems under the action of the world upon them. The Ego is the outcome of these changes under the impingements of that ever-changing environment—the external world. The world is the true God; Humanity the true Christ: Human life is more than the Holy Ghost, it is the only Holy Life. He says, read these definitions with his article, "Anent the Spooks," in the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for 1891, and one will clear up the other.

WE hav received the following letter from an afflicted lady: "I wish you to stop sending any more of your papers to George Egley, Crescent City, Ill., as he has gone home to liv with God, notwithstanding he has been reading your paper, but he repented and accepted Christ before he left this world. Please do not send another one. MRS. GEORGE EGLEY." Mrs. Egley seems to think that reading THE TRUTH SEEKER will prevent one from going "home to liv with God," but we assure her she is mistaken. Readers of this paper are fully as apt, if not more so, to liv with God as anyone, whether they are pestered on their deathbed by preachers and their wives or not. From the tone of the lady's epistle, however, we judge that Mr. Egley has been fortunate in his change of residence.

THE Milwaukee Daily Journal says: "Every educated person knows that states cannot legislate on theological questions, or make one day more sacred than another by statute. And yet it is from just such legislation these controversies arise. All such laws that go beyond municipal regulation are void. No court would for an instant sustain an enactment trenching on men's religious beliefs or disbeliefs. Infidels and Christians stand on the same common ground. All forms of religion of all races are free to worship in America, or omit it. They owe no allegiance to our religious days. Fortunately our most cultivated churches do not take part in attempting to enforce what is persecution for differences of opinion. To deprive citizens of natural rights by law is persecution, no matter how much it is sugar-coated. As long as rights are equal, no one has the right to dictate the actions or belief of another on Sunday or any other day."

ONTARIO is blessed with a fine set of customs officers, highly moral and very solicitous as to the morals of the people over whom they hav been appointed guardians. Mr. J. S. Johnson, of Keenatin, ordered a "Pictorial Text-Book" from this office some time ago, and the book got as far as Port Arthur, where it was held by the customs collector, who informed Mr. Johnson that it was of an immoral character, and would be destroyed; and that if he (Mr. Johnson) persisted in his nefarious intention of possessing a copy he should "be dealt with according to law." Considering this statement by the customs officer, Mr. Johnson naïvely asks, "Ain't that hell?" We should say it is! As to the legal part of the matter Mr. Johnson can refer the Commission of Customs at Ottawa to the decision upon the book made in the case of John Herring, Esq., of Napanee, in which he said that the seizure should be released on payment of the duty required by the tariff. The decision was rendered Dec. 12, 1890.

SOME concealed heretic made a little diversion in the House of Representativs when the shipping subsidy bill was being argued in committee of the whole. Mr. Grosvenor, Republican, from Ohio, favored the bill, and was interrupted by a Democrat with a taunt about the result of the last election. Mr. Grosvenor replied that the opposition had not won everything, and that "when the gentleman took stock it would be found that never since the days when the sheet was lowered down heaven——" "When was that?" ejaculated a deep voice from the Republican side, amid a peal of laughter. Mr. Grosvenor said that he was addressing himself to the Infidels on the other side of the House. [Laughter.] "When this sheet, containing all manner of birds and beasts and creeping things, was let down from heaven there was not such a menagerie as would be found in the happy family in which the gentleman from Tennessee would find himself." Most of our politicians, not Roman Catholics, when they are not "working the church racket," hav little regard for the fanciful statements of holy writ.

AND the Christians love one another! A Seventh Day Adventist writing from Kingston, Minn., to his sectarian paper relates his experience while attending a Methodist revival: "I was attending service," he says, "and was seated in front of the minister, and although I had not manifested any unworthy deportment, he called me by name, and told me I had been preaching to the people that they had no soul, and that I broke the Lord's holy Sunday every week. 'And then,' said he, 'when the boys steal your bees [a beehive had been stolen], you hav them arrested.' Then he said to the boys, 'O boys, I don't blame you; I pity you. You hav been all slashed to pieces with false doctrin, and told that you had no soul.' Then he said to the audience, 'I hav not money enough to buy me a pair of felt boots, but I hav money enough in my pocket to head a subscription list to raise a fund to indict every Sabbath-breaker in this community, and I will. I will call to my aid,' he continued, 'the great Catholic community. I had rather see a saloon in town.'" And the Christians love one another.

THE incorporators of Dr. Gunn's "Society for the Enforcement of Criminal Law," of which Comstock's pupil, Joe Britton, is chief agent, are Robert A. Gunn, Frank Howard Howe, James McCarroll, George T. Gaden, Alfred L. Ryer, Charles L. Hildreth, William H. Barber, P. Ernenwein, John P. Newman, and Timothy Davenport. It is a queer aggregation. Dr. Gunn is supposedly a Freethinker, at least a member of the Manhattan Liberal Club; Mr. Howe is a Freethinking newspaper man; James McCarroll wrote the "Witch of the Wine-Mark" for THE TRUTH SEEKER years ago, is a Freethinking Irish friend of Wm. McDonnell's, has worked for years in and about the Bible House, and is now the editor of Belford's Magazine; while John P. Newman is a Methodist bishop, a peripatetic consular preacher, and is charged with being a Spiritualist. The others we do not know about. Dr. Hildreth and Mr. McCarroll—to their credit—hav withdrawn from the Society, and Bishop Newman is reported to be anxious to follow their example. It is probable that the society will be broken up, as it has not the big men back of it that Comstock's society has. Its dissolution will be its most creditable act, and its parent ought to be laid in the same grave.

WHEN a man helps a cause he loves in the whole-hearted way Samos Parsons, of San Jose, Cal., and a few others, help Liberalism, we are willing, if need be, to use a whole column of editorial space to herald their generosity to the world. Here is Samos Parsons's latest list of benefactions: American Secular Union, $10; Boston Investigator, $10; New York TRUTH SEEKER, $10; San Francisco Freethought, $10; H. L. Green's Magazine, Buffalo, $5; Ironclad Age, J. R. Monroe, $5; Independent Pulpit, Waco, Tex., $5; M. Harman's Lucifer, Topeka, $5; E. C. Walker's Fair Play, $5; F. Graves, Plaindealer, Hastings, $5; Lucy N. Colman, Syracuse, N. Y., $5; Matilda J. Gage, Fayetteville, N. Y., $5; Ella E. Gibson, Barre, Mass., $5; Nellie B. Simmons, Broadhead, Wis., $5; Elmina D. Slenker, Snowville, Va., $5; R. M. Casey, Five Oaks, S. C., $5; Thomas Winter, Cincinnati, O., $5; Jeremiah Hacker, Vineland, N. J., $5; J. H. Cook, Columbus, Kan., $5; A. R. Ayres, Hannibal, Mo., $5. And our friend only grieves because he can do no more. "I would like," he says, "to add to my list scores of names," and we believe him, and send him hearty thanks for what he has done. In "Letters from Friends" will be found his cheery letter accompanying the gift. May Samos Parsons's life be long in the land which Thomas Paine, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, and a few other respectable men gave him!

GEORGE WILSON, of Lexington, Mo., whose contributions to this paper hav made his name familiar to Freethinkers, writes to the Evening Post regarding the Sioux war. Mr. Wilson has lived among the Indians, knows them and their ways, and knows the ways also of the Indian agents appointed to look after them. When he was employed in a garrison store a frequent subject of conversation between him and the Indians around the post was how the agents took nine-tenths of the goods to sell and gave the Indians one-tenth. "I remember especially one Indian," he says, "who came in with his boy and began telling me that he was just back from the wak-o-pominy. That meant a free distribution of annuities or presents. He told me he had a squaw and three pappooses, and, 'This is the share that my whole family got,' said he, as he contemptuously stuck his butcher-knife into a big plug of tobacco that looked as if it had been rained on. The Indians said such a trader—naming a Frenchman, formerly a trapper—'got one wagon-load of the goods sent us by the Great Father;' such another 'got two loads,' and so on, 'and they traded some to us, and sent others up north to trade to other bands of our tribe.'" To the turning of the Indians over to the religious sects Mr. Wilson thus refers: "It was discovered that by turning the Indians over to the churches, the 'Indian problem' would be solved. A certain long-haired bishop thought that if he could lay his hands on Red Cloud's head, he would reduce him to peace when he was at war. A warden of the same church got to be agent under the régime of that religious denomination, and while his agency was in northern Nebraska, he went no further than Fort Laramie, where he industriously played poker, and left his subordinates at the agency to do what is usual in the matter of the Indian appropriations."

THE Tenth battalion of New York militia, located at Albany, had a bazar which closed about three weeks ago, the proceeds of which were to be devoted to furnishing their quarters in the new armory. They established a lottery scheme, with a $1,000 capital prize, and there were other games of chance, including a wheel of fortune. The Ministerial Association of Albany called upon the district attorney to suppress these unlawful practices and confiscate the prizes under the lottery law. Anthony Comstock was called upon, as the ministers were too cowardly to act openly, and he promised to assist them. The threats kept the officers and managers of the bazar in a state of suspense until one night, when they met secretly and held a drawing for the prizes. The list of numbers which won prizes was sent to the morning papers, with the names of the persons who participated in the drawing hidden under the term "prominent citizens." These lists as published escaped the scrutiny of the post-office officials and went out to subscribers. The next morning the activ members of the Ministerial Association hastened to the post-office and interviewed the postmaster. As a result, when the afternoon papers were sent to the post-office, they were detained. Since the holders of the winning tickets are not known, the agents of the Ministerial Association propose to watch the battalion bazar treasurer and see that he pays over no money. If the ministers of this country would mind their own business for a while it would be a great relief. Or if the people would promptly whack every ministerial nose poked into their business it would be a sight to make the gods rejoice.

THE Little Sisters of St. Francis is a Roman Catholic order in this city composed of women supposed to be extremely devout, and wholly devoted, under the direction of the male church authorities, to good works. They are persistent solicitors of funds to pay their expenses, and when their wagon stopped the other day in front of an uptown brewery a lady, who was looking out of her window from across the street, expected to see a hooded sister alight and enter the office on an errand of charitable solicitation. Instead she saw the sturdy Irish driver descend from his seat, take a beer keg from the wagon and carry it into the building! Evidently the sisters or some of their friends had been celebrating. And that this is not a solitary instance showing that things are not always what they seem is revealed by a paragraph in the World. A finely proportioned woman of some thirty-eight years of age, apparently, in the uniform habiliments of a religious order and sheltered from indiscreet glances by a long crepe veil, sat in a corner seat in a Third Avenue Elevated Railroad train one day last week, and seemed absorbed in contemplation. The crisp turn of a leaf after a while revealed under the edge of the veil the presence of a book which the passengers may hav supposed to be a breviary. The leaves kept on turning at regular intervals, and when Chatham square was reached and announced with considerable abruptness by the guard, the lady in black arose so suddenly that she dropped the volume which had so absorbed her. The gentleman who picked it up from the feet of the throng pressing out to "change for Second avenue," could hardly help seeing that the book was "Sappho."

IN his report for the past year State Superintendent of Schools Thayer of Wisconsin will make the Edgerton decision on Bible reading in the public schools a boomerang for the church which obtained it as well as for the Lutheran sect and other supporters of parochial schools. The cases in which the decision applies to other religious practices the superintendent divides into three classes, as follows: "1. Giving sectarian instruction in schools by requiring recitations in catechism; by the use of certain religious exercises prescribed by a church of which the teacher is a communicant, and by the use of text-books denominational in character and designed for use in parochial schools. 2. Employment of teachers belonging to a religious sect which requires and prescribes a dress or garb significant of their membership therein and consecration thereto; leasing of private or parochial school buildings owned or controled by religious sects for the use of public schools, thus requiring all children of the district, and sometimes of two or more districts, to attend schools taught by persons practically designated by religious bodies in buildings consecrated to religious uses. By this subtle means a district is required to contribute to support of such buildings and the maintenance of schools primarily established to giv sectarian or religious instruction. Another but rather more indefinit complaint relates to the practice of turning over all revenues from taxation and other public school funds to church parochial authorities to be used by them in maintaining their school with results exceedingly detrimental to the interests and effectivness of public schools and general education." Concluding, Mr. Thayer says: "The proper remedy in these cases, since the state superintendent is powerless to do otherwise than advise, is to petition one having competent jurisdiction for a writ of mandamus prohibiting the use of schools in this manner." If this sectarian fight between the Catholics and Lutherans on the one side and the evangelical Protestants on the other shall result in abolishing Bible reading and all other religious instruction in Wisconsin's public schools, it will not be the first time in which a falling out between rogues has resulted in direct benefits to the general public. But we should like to know where the Freethinkers of the state, particularly the German element, is located in this fight.

Letters from Friends.

WAGNER, ORE., Dec. 28, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I will send you a petition with a few names before it is too late, for I see the churches are getting in their work already. We are having quite a time with the Bible in our school. I hav objected to having it taught to my children, and it is about to break up the school; but the directors, to their honor be it said, are Liberals, so we will hav no prayers or no school. WARREN CARSNES.

BOZEMAN, MONT., Dec. 27, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I should like to inquire through THE TRUTH SEEKER if any of its readers hav ever known one H. L. Burk. My brother, Henly Lybrook Burk, has been gone many years, and we hav heard nothing from him. Michigan is his nativ state. We conjecture he is somewhere in the West, in the mountains most likely. Anyone who could furnish the desired information would confer a favor which would be deeply appreciated by his relativs.

THOMAS BURK.

MILLSVILLE, N. S., Dec. 23, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Please find $3 to pay for THE TRUTH SEEKER another year, hoping that every subscriber may be able to pay up in advance, and also be able to get a new subscriber with their own name. Let all try what they can do.

I think you might as well put your advertisments on the first and second and fifteenth and sixteenth pages of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and the pictures, and that would make a cover for it, and any that like may cut the pictures out and not spoil the paper. JOHN SILLARS ARTHUR.

KIRKSVILLE, MO., Jan. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav just read the communication by W. W. Walker in the issue of December 27th, and his views touching the Brotherhood of Moralists are my views, and for the same reason I declined the invitation to join the institution. We know yet but little about the invisible forces of nature. However, I hope the Brotherhood may accomplish much good. I received an invitation a short time since to aid in the establishment of a paper to be run in the interest of the above-mentioned institution, if it met my approval, which it did not. I believe it better that a few papers be well supported, than for many to be poorly supported. WM. HART.

MONGO, IND., Dec. 30, 1890.

TO THE SO-CALLED TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY: That you may know that this is a Christian nation and the church will and must rule in spite of all your false teachings, Liberals and Freethinkers are leaving your Infidel ranks by hundreds in this state and joining our order, the Patrons of Industry, and signing our by-laws. The heading of our by-laws reads as follows:

We, the citizens, farmers, and employees of North America, believing that almighty God as a source of all power and the ruler of nations should be acknowledged in all constitutions of societies, states, and nations, do hereby with due reverence to him associate ourselvs together under the following articles.

Now, what will you do about it? The amendment to the Constitution will come. We take them right in as they come to join our order. SOL. SPIROW.

MARTINSBURG, W. VA., Dec. 22, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I agree with the views of Mr. C. C. Germann, as expressed in his letter published in THE TRUTH SEEKER of December 20th, with reference to secret societies. I hav belonged to secret societies and know what they mean, and trust the American Secular Union will never be incumbered with anything of the kind. I am opposed to all nonsensical forms and ceremonies, and believe that the truth should always be known without having any secret society. A beneficial association might be organized among the Liberals for the payment of weekly relief benefits, and for death benefits upon a similar plan to that of the Royal Arcanum, Knights of Honor, and the American Legion of Honor, only omitting all ceremonies of initiation and other foolish forms. Let it be conducted strictly upon business plans and principles requiring the payment of a stated amount, and let everybody know the object and plan of it without having anything secret.

I hav written to Senator Faulkner, and also to Congressman W. L. Wilson, protesting against the Breckinridge Sunday Rest bill, and gave them my reasons for not passing the bill. I inclose you herewith their respectiv answers.

Yours for universal freedom, LOUIS WOLFES.

MILFORD, MASS., Dec. 21, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I presume my privilege of inflicting a letter upon you once a year has not been revoked. Inclosed find $3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER from Jan. 1, 1891, to Jan. 1, 1892. If I were deprived of THE TRUTH SEEKER during that time it would be a greater infliction than my letter to you. Some one has sent me this year Talmage's Christian Herald every week. I presume the donor thinks he is working for the "master" by sending me the paper with his hard earnings. Any person so moonstruck as Talmage is on Palestine—as to think it is the birthplace of either Father, Son, or Holy Ghost—would seem to be peculiarly fitted for an inmate of a lunatic hospital. The Bad Lands that the Sioux Indians are going to are far preferable to Palestine and the abominable traditions that are connected with it and imposed on credulous people. The Herald has a portrait and life of Professor Koch, the discoverer of the cure for consumption by a lymph. If some professor could only discover a lymph that would cure or prevent imposition, he would confer a greater boon on the human race than any cure for consumption; as the consumptivs bear no comparison to the number of credulous and superstitious people, and besides, those with consumption would need the new lymph as well as the others. Fraternally, CHARLES C. JOHNSON.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 28, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: My first words are, What a fine book the "Pictorial Text-Book" is! I was more than pleased when I got it. There is not a single picture out of place. And I think great credit is due Brother Heston for the talent he has shown in getting it up. I showed it to my relativs; also to some of my fellow-workmen, who are Catholics. Of course every picture did not suit, but they said it was about true. I hav sent it to a man I used to work with. He formerly belonged to the sect I belonged to, but he got to reading and studying, and, as a matter of course, joined the Freethought ranks. He is looked down on and despised by his friends around him, but he does not mind. He has the inward satisfaction that he believes in a far grander and more humane religion than they, and that is, the greatest good for the greatest number. In the shop in which I work one of my comrades was showing a picture of the different races of people. I looked over his shoulder and said, "The Bible says God made man in his own image; I wonder which of them he is like." Of course they couldn't make any answer, except to call me some very ugly names. They happened to be Catholics. Inclosed you will find $2.50 for books. I hope to be able to send for The Truth Seeker Library in a month or two. Please send me a price-list of books and papers published by you. J. H. WHITE.

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 20, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I see several of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER are advocating a Freethinkers' mutual aid and protection society, and I wish to add my voice to the demand for the same. It is something I hav often thought of, wishing there were such an organization in this city. Why can we not hav a society or lodge as well as the Masons, Odd Fellows, etc.? We Freethinkers cannot join any of those orders because the very first question they ask is, Do you believe in a supreme being, etc.? and require you to take an oath. Are we then compelled to do without the fellowship, comforts, and benefits of such orders? Surely there are plenty of Liberals in this city to organize and support a lodge, and enough in all the principal cities to make a national organization. I am hand and heart in for it. Can we not get together enough to organize, and at once? Cannot our valued champion, the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, head this thing for us? Can he not publish in THE TRUTH SEEKER a call for all who wish to hav such an organization to meet at his office, or any other place he may select, for the purpose of organizing? I will pledge myself for one to be there and to do all in my power for success of the organization. I earnestly hope in the near future to be a member of such an organization. I am heartily in accord with anything that will tend to further the interests of Freethought. And wishing the cause and our Editor every success, I am,

Respectfully yours, CHAS. DUNHAM.

SAN JOSE, CAL., Jan. 2, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: The inclosed I intend $5 for Macdonald and $5 for Somerby. Look over my list and you will see that if my donations or "mites" are small, there is quite a number of them, and they foot up to all I can spare at present. I rather giv a little to many than all to one. I can hit some who are really needy. I would like to add to my list scores of such names as Watts, York, Krekel, Ravlin, Bell, Pentecost, etc., but my means will not warrant it at present. These little sums are tokens of my respect, my thanks, my friendship, and my gratitude for what you all are doing, and hav done, for the cause of Freethought. Posterity will appreciate your labors and bless your memories. I say, then, go ahead, boys! You brave fellows! Scotch the vipers of superstition. Giv old priestcraft hail Columbia! Reynolds, Krekel, and others, are on the warpath up North. Shaw, York, and others, are fighting them down South in Texas. "Put," "Mac," Bell, and Ravlin are pouring in hot shot up and down the coast. Day is breaking; light is glinting; creeds are changing; gods are scampering; hells are freezing over; the New Jerusalem "cob-house" heaven has been hunted for with the great Lick telescope in full view on Mt. Hamilton as I write, but the pearly gates and golden stairs hav not yet been discovered. People are beginning to use some common sense. There is yet hope for humanity. I am glad they had a good congress. That Ida is a worker. I hope the premium book will be published by the million; the Girard College reclaimed; all the money raised which is needed to carry on the work, and I hope harmony will be maintained in the Liberal ranks and no quarreling among ourselvs as in former years. I hope soon to send you an order for a few choice pamphlets. While I liv I intend to do what I can afford in support of my principles. With best wishes for your success, I close.

SAMOS PARSONS.

BARRE, MASS., Dec. 27, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: One would infer by reading the letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of December 27th, page 827, that the only cause for exclusion from the Brotherhood of Moralists was Spiritualism and immorality. I am happy to inform your readers that such is not the case.

I consider there are four distinct evils that the society disapproves—Anarchy, Communism, superstition, and immorality. Anarchists are excluded because they are Anarchists, Communists because they are Communists, superstitionists because they are superstitious, and as Spiritualism is considered superstition that is included. Immoral people alone are excluded because of immorality; therefore there is no imputation that Garrison and his peers would be excluded, because they were good, pure men.

Belief in a deity and immortality excludes no one; but a belief that live birds and men can and do pass through the solid walls of a building, is deemed superstition, and as the society interdicts all superstition to be consistent they must decide against that, the same as against similar beliefs in the Bible. The notion of departed friends returning and walking out of locked cabinets clothed in the garb of earth, is considered as superstitious a notion as that of Jesus rising from the dead and eating broiled fish and honeycomb. The sentence from which your correspondent makes an extract is this: "To eradicate from the minds of as many as possible all beliefs in so-called divine revelations, special providences, spirit manifestations, witchcraft, prophecies, and miracle, as vain delusions of superstition and the source of sectarian hatred and strife." Anything so very bad in that? Of course, a Bible believer, or a believer in the phenomena called Spiritualism as caused by spirits, could not belong to such an organization, and why should he desire to be a member?

Pardon me, Mr. Editor; I did intend only a few words lest some of your readers who know nothing of the principles of the Brotherhood of Moralists, should be misled on reading the letter above mentioned.

One word more. I think Horace Seaver, not Colonel Ingersoll, is the author of the phrase, "One world at a time."

Eugene, your efforts in behalf of the suppression of Catholicism and in opposition to the Sunday Rest bill entitle you and THE TRUTH SEEKER to everlasting fame.

ELLA E. GIBSON.

COLUMBUS, O, Dec. 22, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Gods and Gods, and how many Gods will man hav before the end of time? The Christians hav a God that delights in the suffering and torments of the frail things he has made, or else to send some of them to heaven to dance and cut the pigeon-wing. We hav one god in two and two gods in one at present, that the people are worshiping. One is without body, parts, or passions—or brains—but with plenty of gall. It is clothed in a gown and is called church. The other god has body, parts, passions, but no brains or heart. It is clothed in uniform, with gun and club in hand, and is called government. In your issue of November 29th I find T. B. Wakeman worshiping the god with a club. I find also other prominent Liberals that are trying to destroy the ghost god, church, on their knees to the god state. It is a great wonder to me that such men as Ingersoll, Wakeman, Westbrook, and other great minds, should fight ghosts these many years while the vampire god, the state, has been around and above them crushing the life out of man. The state is god; the church is the ghost. In the Bible where the command is, Go forth and kill, and spare not, not even the child at its mother's breast, but the virgins spare—who was it that gave the command but the ghost? And god (state) executed it. Did not the state burn Bruno? And down until the present time did the ghost god or the god state imprison C. B. Reynolds? Which god is it, ghost or state, that taxes the poor man's home and exempts the temple? How long would the vapors of hell and the miasmas of religious ignorance and superstition hav covered this land if the bright light of liberty's and reason's sun had been turned upon man? But there stood the god state and imprisoned, burnt, hanged, and tortured every man or woman that tried to turn on the light. The Liberals hav been fighting a ghost these many years, calling it God, when the real god (state) was sitting back enjoying the sacrifices being offered to it, in the way of human lives, in wars; in shops, factories, and mines; tithes and taxes; the virtue of woman and girls, and the worship of Liberals as well as Christians.

T. B. Wakeman knows as much about Anarchy as a Christian does about justice. Society at present is neither cooperativ nor competitiv, but based on god's (state's) favoritism. Mr. Wakeman, what has the god, state, done for humanity against the ghost god, church, in any clime or time?

E. T. ADAMS.

HANOVERTON, O., Dec. 31, 290.

MR. EDITOR: As a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER I wish to state a few facts and make a few suggestions to my fellow-Freethinkers in regard to the Catholic problem. As many people appear to think that the Catholic church is becoming civilized and is not therefore longer to be feared, I present the following case which occurred on last Decoration day, within three miles of this place, and has recently terminated in a defeat of the ends of justice, by and through the efforts and influence of the church.

On the date above mentioned, the priest at Dungannon, Hennesy by name, being filled with the spirit, went to the house of his neighbor named McGraw, and with club in hand assaulted and beat into insensibility the daughter of the family, a member of his church. He was arrested, and gave bonds for his appearance at court, where he was sentenced to pay a fine of $100, and be imprisoned in the county jail for ninety days. No sooner was he in jail than a petition began to circulate among his friends, intended to secure his release. It was signed by his church-members to some extent and then presented to the governor, who released him at once, without so much as notifying the court of trial that such petition had been presented. So much for the facts.

Now, what I wish to suggest to my fellow-Freethinkers is, that in the future the religious pretensions of every candidate for official position should be carefully examined, and if he has any Romish inclination reject him at once, without regard for political considerations, as they amount to nothing compared to the consequences of Catholic supremacy, which—as Heston portrays with absolute fidelity—is rapidly overshadowing the country. If you value the liberty which you now hav, do not allow any consideration to blind you as to the importance of preserving it unimpaired to your posterity, which cannot be done for any length of time, under present conditions.

The Catholic church cannot be opposed in the same manner as other religious organizations can, for the reason that it is more of a political than a religious body. It wields an influence to-day over the legislativ and executiv officers of most states which should call to a halt every citizen entertaining American sentiments, and cause him to resolve that from this time forward he will oppose it with his ballot, as a political institution, and thereby render it harmless to all save its own slaves, whose ignorance prompts them to resist their own liberation. Let every citizen resolve that church and state shall be kept forever separate. W. H. KINTNESS.

EUREKA, CAL., Dec. 11, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav just read "Policy vs. Morality" in THE TRUTH SEEKER of November 29th. As the subject may interest others as well as myself, I will venture a few remarks.

I do not take the view Dr. Boynton has taken, but I will briefly state my ideas, and if I err in any way I shall be glad to see the error pointed out. In our daily walks of life we do many things without forethought; an inward prompting, which we call conscience, tells us how to act; and if we analyze the action we will find that we would hav acted the same if we had taken time to reflect. This brings us to the question, What is conscience? I claim it to be an instinct which we hav partially inherited from our ancestors, and partially improved upon ourselvs, and of which policy is the root. Every action has its consequences. This the sávage perceives as well as the philosopher. Therefore prudent people, whether enlightened or savage, if called upon to act in a strange capacity will hesitate and reflect upon the consequences and then act accordingly. This we call acting from policy. If the same party is called upon at some future time to perform a similar action, less reflection will be necessary, as the result is already known. If similar actions are frequently repeated no further thought is necessary, as former thoughts hav left their impress upon the mind, which by the law of association connect themselvs with the cause for action, and the actions become spontaneous. This we call conscience. These impressions are always more or less inherited by the offspring, and people often act in a certain way without being able to giv any other reason for it but that their conscience prompts them to do so.

Enlightened people find by experience that their own happiness is increased in proportion as they make other people happy. They aim therefore to make others happy in order to be happy themselvs; and since their forefathers hav done so before them they hav inherited an innate prompting to assist the needy, to feel for the unfortunate, to weep with those who suffer, and rejoice with those who are happy. And these promptings hav become so imperativ in some people that bitter pangs will follow any violation of them. This we call the upbraidings of conscience.

Unthinking Christians often tell us that conscience is a divine gift to guide us through the path of life. Nothing can be more ridiculous. The conscience of one person will often sanction what another person condemns. Even Torquemada, who was the most bloodthirsty monster that ever lived, has the credit of having been a conscientious man. The cannibal would be conscience-stricken if he let a prisoner escape while he and his family are hungry. Ignorant people think that conscience prompts all people to do good. This is far from the mark. A good conscience is perhaps the best possession a person can hav, while a bad conscience s worse than none. Yet, the promptings of a good conscience are not inferior to policy; they are the crowning point of it. ROBERT GUNTHER.

FORT WORTH, TEX., Dec. 17, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. D. W. Whitney, of Neola, Ia., replying to my communication on Prohibition, asks how I know that the assertion of the beer advocates that Prohibition in Kansas and Iowa is a failure, is false. I answer, by reports of reliable persons who liv in both states, by persons who hav traveled through them, by statistical reports in many newspapers, by revenue statistics both state and national, and by my own personal observation in passing to and fro through Kansas.

Mr. Whitney asserts that in his town of nine hundred inhabitants there is free whisky and five saloons are running regularly and drunkenness is frequent. What a happy town! And in a state where Prohibition is the law of the land! And yet Mr. Whitney says, a little below, "The only true way to do away with the evil effects of liquor is to make it just as free as vinegar." Judging from Neola, this remedy would fix things nicely. People do not manufacture fire-arms "to kill each other and commit suicide." They are made to kill game and overcome our enemies in time of war, and for other useful purposes. Prohibitionists do not desire to prohibit the manufacture and sale of alcohol for scientific, mechanical, and other useful purposes.

Our prohibitory laws forbid the use of fire-arms to kill our fellows, and we wish them to also forbid the sale of alcohol for drink. The latter kills many times more than the former.

If, as Mr. Whitney asserts, the population of Kansas and Iowa has fallen off, there are doubtless causes for it. But he attributes it to Prohibition. If some of the people hav left the states because they could not get enough whisky and beer, I conjecture those that are left will not much regret their absence. How long must we see and hear such misleading gasconade? Mr. Whitney would remove all restraint and let everybody make what he pleases and sell anything he can. That is, or closely resembles, Anarchy. The laws now prohibit the sale of drugs, of meat and vegetables, and many other things, except under certain restrictions. These are prohibitory laws, and so are all criminal laws. And all are necessary for the welfare of society. And society needs the prohibition of the liquor traffic (except under certain restrictions) more than any of the above, because it is by far the greatest evil.

Mr. Whitney closes his article with these words: "I do not think so little of my views that I am ashamed to sign my name in full." This means that I am ashamed of my views. Mr. Whitney is mistaken, and I request you, Mr. Editor, to giv my name and address to Mr. Whitney or any person who asks for it. The name neither adds to nor detracts from the merits of any article, and, as I am not seeking notoriety, I prefer to sign, as before, with my initial.

B.

P. S.—For the benefit of Mr. Whitney, I will now add that:

The population of Iowa, 1890, is	1,911,896
" " " " 1880, was	1,624,615
Net gain	287,281
The population of Kansas, 1890, is	1,427,096
" " " " 1880, was	996,096
Net gain	431,000

These figures are from Mr. Robert R. Porter's report to Secretary Noble, Dec. 12, 1890, just received, and show that Mr. Whitney was mistaken when he said both states had fallen off in population from 1880 to 1890. B.

CHEBANSE, ILL., Jan. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: A short time ago I bought the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" of the Twentieth Century Company, published by the Truth Seeker Company. I must say that I am well pleased with the book. Both the pictures and the prose giv heavy knocks at the old Christian superstition, and will act like a double-geared mechanism to batter that superstition to pieces. But what I want to say is that in perusing the book I was surprised to find one of my own poems on page 344, credited to M. Babcock. The subject is, "Why Does Not God Kill the Devil?" I wrote that poem in 1874, and it was published in the Chebanse Independent at the time, and a printed copy of it is now in my scrap-book. I got the publisher to print the poem on leaflets, which I gave away as long as they lasted. When the annual congress of the American Secular Union was held in Chicago three years ago, President S. P. Putnam introduced me as the author of the poem, "Why Does Not God Kill the Devil?" He had stayed at my house on a lecturing tour and seen the poem.

Good Christians can afford to cheat, lie, or steal, because they believe they can hav forgivness for asking for it. But Freethinkers must do what is just and right, for there is no forgivness or atoning blood for them. Let us giv every person their just dues, Old Nick included. I do not know whether Mr. Babcock appropriated my poem or some one thrust it upon him. He can best explain that matter himself, and if this statement comes to his notice I hope he will do so.

I do not know that the poem has ever been published in any of our Liberal papers, and I will send it to you for publication.

WHY DOES NOT GOD KILL THE DEVIL?

Why does not God kill the devil,
The curse of his earthly domain,
That we may hav peace and pleasure,
Without any sorrow or pain?
Adam and Eve in the garden,
Would never hav eaten the fruit,
Had not the devil been with them,
Or had he, snake-like, been a mute.
But he could talk just like a streak,
And quickly accomplished his plan;
He argued the point to the woman,
And she soon persuaded the man.

Why does not God kill the devil—
Why did he create such an elf?
But I am not sure about that—
He may hav created himself.
But God is almighty in power—
The book and the preachers say so;
And he would need only one finger
To lay the old wicked one low.
But still the old devil is living,
As free as the wind and the sun;
And his business seems mainly to be
Undoing what good folks hav done.

Why does not God kill the devil,
If he is the author of sin?
For then there would be no temptation,
And wickedness would not begin.
Hell fire might then be extinguished,
And save the expense of the fuel;
And every poor soul be excused
From punishment that is so cruel.
The nine-tenths that go the broad way,
Accounts of which hav been given,
Might everyone turn to the narrow,
And all be landed in heaven.

Why does not God kill the devil,
And wickedness bring to an end?
There ought to be no opposition,
For nobody would be his friend.
And if he's allowed his own way,
Which up to this time he has had,
It will soon be a dangerous thing,
To make the old evil one mad.
Recruits he has always been getting,
Till his army is very strong;
And if he should muster his forces,
The fight would be fierce and long.

Why does not God kill the devil,
If he goes about like a lion,
Scaring the lambs from the savior,
And driving the sheep from Zion?
A man never was a free agent,
And neither is he a machine;
He's governed by what is within him
And that which around him is seen.
If God made the devil to tempt us,
And do us all manner of harm;
Just let him remove the old fellow,
And things will then work like a charm.

Why does not God kill the devil?
It does seem to me very odd;
For he once took Christ up a mountain,
And tried to deceive even God!
He showed him the world all at once,
And spoke of his power and might;
But Christ had his doubts of the fellow,
And could not see things in that light.
Since that time the devil and Jesus
Hav been in all manner of squirms;
And there is no hope that they ever
Can meet upon good, friendly terms.

Why does not God kill the devil?
It would so much help the elect,
For he often leads them to trouble,
Much more so than one would expect.
Ward Beecher and others are tried
For sin that they would not commit
If the devil was not at their side
To help and to aid them in it.
And all the way down in the ranks
The pious ones often play smash,
Figuring in dishonest grabs—
Absconding with public cash.

Why does not God kill the devil?
I ask this great question once more,
Or otherwise save him from sin,
And place him on Canaan's bright shore.
The happy millennium can never
On this wicked planet begin,
Until God has killed the devil,
Or turned him away from his sin.
All will rejoice in the victory;
And wish that the good God may win;
For the day that the devil is dead
The joy of the world will begin.

Yours truly, JOS. HAIGH.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 3, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: A correspondent recently expressed regret that we are getting away from the social question, a question that he justly regards of paramount importance. Science being the Freethinker's shibboleth, I will note that social philosophy is the on'y branch of science that will apply to the social question, and is not physical but ethical science. I think that distinction should be specially noted by those who refer us to science for a solution of the social problem. Rational Freethinkers having been repeatedly charged in THE TRUTH SEEKER with being "hypocritical pretenders," or, at their best, "but milk-and-water Freethinkers who hav not the courage of their convictions," I will suggest the probability that they hav courage and steadiness to balance themselvs upon the line of a happy medium between extremes and combat the fanaticism on either side. It having been suggested that Freethinkers are not so numerous that they can afford to dispute among themselvs, I will offer the counter suggestion that if rational Freethinkers were less than half as numerous as they are, they could better afford to combat fanaticism, by whatever name called or miscalled, than be suspected of indorsing it; for, fanatics being a damage to no cause but that they pretend to advocate, rational Freethinkers hav less occasion to combat Christian than Antichristian fanaticism. Moreover, superstition is usually associated with fanaticism; and I hav not found that Antichristian fanaticism is an exception to the rule; for if the thought that all or any part of the evil that is inflicted upon man is caused by nonentities is not a superstition, I hav greatly mistaken the import of the term. It is obviously an absurd delusion; for they are not myths but men who inflict the social evil, and endeavor to divert attention from themselvs by charging it to myths; and I note that some who style themselvs radical Freethinkers are not above a suspicion of encouraging that bit of hypocrisy. Christians being in the same boat, I will write them a short sermon on the kingdom of God and his righteousness, as defined by the gospel of the kingdom that they pretend to accept and revere. "Therefore, take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you."

To an intelligent and thoughtful mind that passage should suggest the inquiry: What kind of an institution should the kingdom of God and his righteousness be that it shall giv us all things that are needful? It should necessarily abound with all things that constitute substantial wealth; yet the gospel of the kingdom assures us that it were easier for a camel to pass through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. If so, it is obvious that ownership is incompatible with the kingdom of God and his righteousness. For where there is ownership there will be rich and poor, masters and slaves, a social relation that is well known to be brutalizing to both. Yet such is the kingdom of man, and it has been indorsed by two of your correspondents, who, I hope, will hav the courage of their convictions and endeavor to defend their favorit institution. But the abolition of ownership, and substitution of universal brotherhood and coöperation by all for the mutual well-being of all, will establish the kingdom of God and his righteousness on this planet, where we are enjoined by the gospel of the kingdom to pray in faith and hope that it shall be, and is the only place we know of that it can be, and giv human beings a reasonable hope of entering. It will evidently be the highest state of perfection attainable by human beings, and cannot be attained except through a provisional institution equivalent to state ownership that will rule the nations with a rod of iron and take the brutality out of those who instinctivly uphold such a brutalizing institution as private ownership has been practically demonstrated to be, by all the nations of the earth, and in all ages of the human race so far as traceable. J. A. TUTTLE.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Drink.

A nice little boy as ever you knew,
Cider would drink and tobacco would chew;
And if an old pipe came around handy,
He'd take a good smoke and feel like a dandy.

His papa and mamma with pleasure were wild
To think that they had such a wonderful child,
He'd smoke, drink, and chew with such great delight,
It appeared to his parents as though it was right.

But the scene soon changed. As older he grew,
More cider he'd drink, and tobacco he'd chew;
He'd get on a spree wherever he went,
And stay till the landlord had the last cent.

But time tells the story. One day he was found
In a lifeless condition upon the cold ground,
No longer to cider and whisky a slave,
But, alas, he now fills the poor drunkard's grave.

G. W. SMITH.

A Chapter of Early Life.

The road of my life is nearly seventy-two years long. I was born in Connecticut, under the influence and spirit of the Blue Laws and Methodist revivalism. I inherited an activ brain, a timid, imaginativ, sensitiv, highly impressible organism, and an insatiable desire for knowledge, which I obtained under great difficulties. I did not go to school till thirteen, but could read fluently at four. I had little to read but the Bible, hymn-book, and the old English reader, but read every old book I could get. When I was three months old my parents moved away up to New York, among its eastern hills, three hundred miles, which in those days was a great way to go, either on foot or in a wagon. We lived ten years in old, open, cold log-houses, near to the beautiful historical Mohawk valley, made famous by the stirring scenes of the Revolution and the preceding wars. We were within hearing of the grand and sublime Trenton Falls.

In those days, before railroads and canals, people did not travel much, and very few went out of their own township or county. Our fireplace—no stoves then—was only the back of a chimney, with stone for the bottom, and the top was made of sticks and mud.

Our food generally consisted of an Indian johnny cake, wet with water and baked on a board before the fire; potatoes roasted in the ashes, and now and then some fried pork, cut into mouthfuls on mother's wooden plates, and all put into a platter, out of which we all got our mouthful. A piece of wheat bread was seldom seen, and to me was a luxury. I was very scantily dressed, and wore no shoes till I was ten years old. Often did I run barefooted fifty rods on the top of the crusted snow four feet deep. On snowy, windy nights the snow blew in through the cracks and covered my bed, and I cried with cold feet, from which I hav always suffered so much and do now. The johnny cake—if any was left—was always frozen in the morning and hard as a brick. I would put a chunk before the fire to thaw, and gnaw off a little, and then wait for more to thaw. With what a keen hunger I did it! How I enjoyed it! "Hunger is the best sauce." Sometimes we had not even a potato to roast, and I wallowed a mile in the deep snow to get some of the neighbors.

My father was intellectual and a good man, but a poor provider. When my dear industrious mother would complain, father would say, "Polly, the Lord will provide." But the Lord did not seem to care how much we suffered for clothes, food, or fuel. Father was a Methodist exhorter and leader, and more anxious to save our souls in an imaginary future life than to provide for and make our bodies happy in this life.

My parents frequently took me to a camp-meeting in the woods. The chief attraction then for me was the cakes which the good sisters brought in their old-fashioned work pockets and would giv me, the poor, half-starved boy. The preacher, whom I then thought to be supernatural, would frighten me and fill my timid and sensitiv mind (is anything more wicked?) with woeful apprehensions as he, with stentorian voice and heartless tones, depicted the awful judgment day and the fires of hell, the lake of fire and brimstone, the separation of parents and children. And then they would sing, "Parents and children then shall part, part to meet no more."

Ministers would come to our poor abode, and if they did not get much to eat they always got hot whisky sling, and we, the children, were given one teaspoonful each. The men in those days usually carried a flask of whisky in their pockets to meeting and were generous in treating. Thus they were sure of "the holy influence of the spirit" or the spirits. At ten I was separated from my parents, and till eighteen I went through abuses, mistreatment, hardships, and exposures still greater than before.

Thus I hav given my young readers a clue to my early experiences, and to how much I was cheated out of my early life—cheated out of this life, by trying to save my imaginary soul from a future imaginary hell and the wrath of an imaginary, impossible, personal God.

O my young friends, be thankful that you liv at a later and better day, a day in which the facts and realities of this—to me the only—life are taught you, and how to make the most of it.

My eventful life is in manuscript, but will never (?) be published. Look in upon me here in my little room alone, a poor-rich old man, in pain and poverty and struggling to liv. With a tear-covered face, and inexpressible emotion, I hav written this brief reminiscence. Bless the Children's Corner.

PROF. J. H. COOK.

Correspondence.

NORTH HURON, N. Y., Jan. 1, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I wish you a Happy New Year. I am nine years old, and this is my second letter. The weather is fine and the sleighing is fine also; I go out riding almost every day, and my grandpa takes me to school every morning. I like the teacher very much. I am studying geography, arithmetic, reading, writing, and spelling. Mamma is a music-teacher, and I take lessons of her; grandpa plays the violin. So we hav plenty of music. I hung up my stockings Christmas eve, and the presents I received were too numerous to mention, but I did not see Santa Claus and I do not think I ever shall. I will send you a few verses that grandpa wrote for me to speak in school, and if you think best I would like to see them in print.

Your friend, BERTHA E. WEED.

COLUMBUS, KAN., Dec. 12, 1890.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Dear Friend: In physical pain and deep emotion I hav written a few memories for the Children's Corner, which dispose of as you think best. I must suffer with my atrophied arm and shoulder in the coming cold weather. I want to write you a long letter, but will not take your time. I hav so much consciousness and so great a mental hold upon life that I must suffer on and on. Be assured I appreciate all that comes from your pen—your high aspirations and everything which your "Womanhood Awakes." Bless and preserve you long for your humane work!

PROF. J. H. COOK.

[It is hard indeed to suffer in pain and poverty. We heartily wish the new year might bring peace and plenty to all. The editor of the Corner does all she can, and would do more if she could. Any desirous of aiding our sick brother Cook, whose experience is related in another column, may send contributions direct to his address, Columbus, Kan., and they will be most gratefully received.—ED. C. C.]

ST. ELMO, TENN., Dec. 14, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: Here are some questions I would like to hav the young folks from six to sixty discuss. I am a young lad only fifty-seven and am anxious to learn.

In looking at the sun, do we see the sun, or only the sun's atmosphere?

Is there any heat in the sun, or do the rays of light from the sun become heated in passing through the earth's atmosphere?

I am of opinion that if there are any inhabitants on the moon, or if an inhabitant of the earth could be transferred to the moon, on one's looking toward the earth, the earth would appear to be about double the diameter that the moon presents to the earth's inhabitants, provided the earth had no more atmosphere than the moon is supposed to hav.

I think that a person on the moon would not see the earth, but the atmosphere that envelops the earth. I think he would see the atmosphere in terrible turmoil, leaping and vaulting and anon falling to leap again in fantastic shapes and with tremendous energy, as astronomers tell us of the sun.

We know the earth's atmosphere is highly electric. We see the aurora borealis shifting, leaping, mounting, subsiding, and leaping again, and all with the most amazing rapidity. We watch the angry, whirling, tumultuous clouds, before, during, and after a storm. We see them shift and change with wonderful energy and swiftness. No doubt the outer portion of the atmosphere shows still greater energy, as the resistance would be far less in that direction. To an inhabitant of the moon with a good telescope the exhibitions of the earth's atmosphere must be a grand, a thrilling spectacle.

Astronomers teach that the sun is a molten mass, a seething globe of intense heat. But I do not see any good reason for accepting that conclusion. I think the atmosphere of the sun is what we see; that as it is much larger than the earth its electrical action is correspondingly greater. That the globe of the sun may be as cool as the earth, and has its inhabitants as well fitted for life on its surface as the earth.

I would be glad to hear from some of the other young folks on this subject through the Corner. I wish we could get more reports from Lick Observatory. To-day I hav read W. W. Walker's letter of November 11th. I thank you heartily, Brother Walker.

L. L. GOODWIN.

The Human Eye.

Science givs us interesting details about what the human eye has been and what it may become. The Veddas of India, which are the most ancient written documents, attest that at times most remote, but still recorded in history, only two colors were known, black and red. A very long time elapsed before the eye could perceive the color yellow, and a still longer time before green could be distinguished; and it is remarkable that in the most ancient language the term which designated yellow insensibly passed to the signification of green. The Greeks had, according to the generally received opinion, the perception of colors very highly developed, and yet authors of a more recent date assure us that in the time of Alexander the Great the Greek painters knew but four colors, viz., white, black, red, and yellow.

The words to designate blue and violet were wanting to the Greeks in the most ancient times of their history, they calling these colors gray and black. It is thus the colors in the rainbow were only distinguished gradually, and the great Aristotle only knew four of them. It is a well-known fact that when the colors of the prism are photographed, there remains outside the limit of the blue and violet in the spectrum a distinct impression which our eyes do not recognize as a color. Physiologists tell us that it is reasonable to suppose that as the color organ becomes more highly developed, and even before the human eye becomes perfect, this outside band will evolve into a color perfectly discernible.

A Royal Pickpocket.

Frederick the Great rang his bell for his page to attend him, but no page appeared. Again and again he rang, but still the summons was disregarded, and the monarch, opening his door and passing into the antechamber, found the heedless page asleep in a chair.

The corner of a letter was projecting from the youth's pocket, and his royal highness, probably thinking it was a love letter, and that it would afford him some amusement, quietly abstracted it and began to read the contents. It turned out, however, to be a letter from the mother of the page, fervently thanking her son for his kindness in remitting to her a large portion of his salary.

The king was so gratified at this instance of filial affection that he inclosed a large sum of money in the letter and returned it to the pocket of his page, who slept on oblivious of either his royal master's larceny or generosity.

A Dog Fireman.

The possibilities of the canine brain may not yet hav been fathomed even by dog lovers. The Caribou Republican tells of a wonderful feat of a Newfoundland in that town. It seems that when the office of the Vaughan House was opened the other morning, a hole six inches in diameter was found to hav been burnt completely through the double floor near the stove. The dog, known as Joe, was shut up in the room, and an examination showed marks of the dog's claws in the charred wood. Mr. Smith, the proprietor of the house, says Joe is a first-class fireman, and if he sees a burning cigar stub, a match, or a spark on the floor he will scratch them with his front paws until the fire is extinguished. Mr. Smith has no doubt but that Joe saved the building and perhaps the inmates.

A GRAVE in the cemetery at Offranville, in France, bears the amusing epitaph: "Here lies Mademoiselle Ursule Leveque, who died in her sixty-fifth year, surrounded by flannel and the affection of her family."

RELIGION OF MAN
AND
ETHICS OF SCIENCE.
BY
HUDSON TUTTLE.
A Historical and Critical Review of the Religion of Man.

CONTENTS: What is Religion? Fetichism. Phallic Worship. Man's Moral Progress Dependent on His Intellectual Growth. The Great Theological Problem. Man's Fall, and the Christian Scheme for his Redemption. Man's Position, Fate, Free Will, Free Agency, Necessity. Responsibility of the Individual. Genesis and Evolution of Spirit. The Law of Moral Government. The Apostles. Selfish Propensities. Love. Wisdom. Charter of Rights. Duties and Obligations of the Individual. Duties and Obligations of Society. Rights of Government. Duties of Society to Criminals. Duty of Self Culture. Marriage. Cloth; price, $1.50.

LOOKING BACKWARD
By Edward Bellamy,
Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.
The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.
A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.
12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE
French Invasion of Ireland in '98.
Leaves of Unwritten History That Tell of a Heroic Endeavor and a Lost Opportunity to Throw Off England's Yoke.
By VALERIAN GRIBAYEDOFF.
With a map and numerous illustrations by well-known artists. Handsomely bound in silk cloth. Ink and gold side stamps. Price, $1.50.

The present volume is an effort to rescue from comparative oblivion one of the many extraordinary episodes of the great French revolutionary war. . . . It points a moral that amidst republican institutions like ours, will not fail to receive appreciation. It shows, on one hand, the elevating influence of newly acquired ambition, . . . and on the other the debasing effects of Religious and Political intolerance both on the tyrant and the victim. Contains a heretofore unpublished letter of Thomas Paine to the French Directory.

The Agnostic Annual
FOR 1891.
Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.
CONTENTS.
An Agnostic View of the Bible.....Samuel Laing.
Fundamental Theses of Agnosticism. R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
Agnosticism and the Church of England. Amos Waters.
Avatar, Come! A Poem. Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Instability of Faiths. Hon. C. K. Tuckerman.
The Iron Hand Under the Velvet Glove. G. J. Holyoake.
Practical Religion.....Charles Watts.
The Cinerary Urn. A Sonnet. Author of "Cæsar in Egypt."
The New Anglicanism.....B. Russell.
Androgynous Gods. H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
Is Agnosticism Sound?.....Paul Carus.
"Is Agnosticism Sound?" Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Poems of Joseph Ellis.....Mirabeau Brown.
Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

Col. Kelso's Works.
The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 333pp., silk cloth, $3.
Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

LIFE OF
Joshua Davidson:
MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,
As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.
BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,
Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.
Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.
☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

EGGS FANCY POULTRY 10 VARIETIES. Ten years experience. Price List Free. No catalogue. Pigeons—Blue, Fans and Red Jackobins. J. L. MOCK, 1247 S. HIGH ST., COLUMBUS O.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs by Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam Should Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Churches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportunity.
As the Clergy Desire Sunday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Our Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Church Institutions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Products of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religious Trap.
Sunday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
Encouragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Church's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Church.
The Church's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot.
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denounced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Church.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Drouth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Our Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janus-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Our Country, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conquest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Church of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Result of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Put their Sins.
Jesus Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for True Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxious Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occurrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Churchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossus of New York.
The Political Caliban and the ReligiousRogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Question.
The Churches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Trouble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Church, "Don't Hurt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Church True to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Church and State.

Some Allegories.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Outside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via. Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Surprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occupation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolution to Orthodoxy.
The Evolution of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crusade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams, D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths, A. Bierbower, M. Babcock, Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway, Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought, Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A. Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe, Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach, Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages, Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll, President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, Percy Bysshe Shelley, Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills, Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster, Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

MATERIALISM AND CRIME.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 5 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE
French Revolution
ITS CAUSES AND RESULTS.
By W. S. BELL.
Paper, 12mo, 25 cents.

MORTALITY OF THE SOUL.
IMMORTALITY OF ITS ELEMENTS.
By A. S. de Pellegrini.
Paper, - - 15 cents.

PHILOSOPHY of SPIRITUALISM
AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.
By F. R. Marvin, M.D.
Cloth, . . . 50 cents.

POCKET THEOLOGY.
By VOLTAIRE.
Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms.
Price, 25 cents.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY EXPOSED.
By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.
15 cents.

PRO AND CON OF Supernatural Religion.
Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. GUILD.
Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

PYRAMID OF GIZEH.
Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.
By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D.
Price, 15 cents.

QUESTION SETTLED.
BIBLICAL and MODERN SPIRITUALISM.
By MOSES HULL.
Price, 60 cents.

Rational Communism.
THE PRESENT AND FUTURE REPUBLIC OF NORTH AMERICA.
Advocates associate life and employment as a preventive of vice, crime, poverty, etc.
By A CAPITALIST.
Paper, 493pp., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Relation of Witchcraft to Religion.
By A. C. LYALL.
Price, 10 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.
POPULATION QUESTION.
By Dr. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant.
25 cents.

TRUTH. A Poem. By E. N. Kingsley. 10 cents.

POVERTY: Its Cause and Cure.
How the Poor May Attain Comfort and Independence.
By M. G H.
Price, . . 10 cents.

Religion of Inhumanity.
With a Glance at the Religion of Humanity.
BY FREDERIC HARRISON.
Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION:
The Gibraltar of the World, as Now Constituted.
By George T. Bondies.
With
Exceptions to the Character of Christ as a Gentleman.
By W. T. Purviance.
25 cents.

IMAGE BREAKER.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Six Lectures.
Decline of Faith.
Protestant Intolerance.
Washington an Unbeliever.
Jefferson an Unbeliever.
Paine and Wesley.
Christian Sabbath.
Each, 5 cents; bound, pap., 25 cents; per doz., 40.

SABBATH BREAKING.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Price, 25 cents.

St. Matthew Before the Court
FOR THE CRIME OF FORGERY.
By SECULARIST.
Price, . . . 10 cents.

SEMITIC GODS AND THE BIBLE.
Including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, Bible.
By D. M. BENNETT.
(From Vol. II. "Gods and Religions.")
333pp., pap., 50 c.; clo., $1.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

THE HUMBOLDT LIBRARY
—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

No. 1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. A series of familiar essays on astronomical and other natural phenomena. By Richard A. Proctor, F.R.A.S.

No. 2. Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. (19 illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 3. Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The English Constitution."

No. 4. Man's Place in Nature, (with numerous illustrations). By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 6. Town Geology. With Appendix on Coral and Coral Reefs. By Rev. Charles Kingsley.

No. 7. The Conservation of Energy, (with numerous illustrations). By Balfour Stewart, LL.D.

No. 8. The Study of Languages, brought back to its true principles. By C. Marcel.

No. 9. The Data of Ethics. By Hebert Spencer.

No. 10. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music, (numerous illustrations), By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.

No. 11. } The Naturalist on the River Amazons. A record of 11 years of travel.
No. 12. } By Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S. (Not sold separately).

No. 13. Mind and Body. The theories of their relations. By Alex. Bain, LL.D.

No. 14. The Wonders of the Heavens, (thirty-two illustrations). By Camille Flammarion.

No. 15. Longevity. The means of prolonging life after middle age. By John Gardner, M.D.

No. 16. The Origin of Species. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other disquisitions. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 18. Lessons in Electricity, (sixty illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 20. The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.

No. 21. The Physical Basis of Life, with other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 22. Seeing and Thinking. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 23. Scientific Sophisms. A review of current theories concerning Atoms, Apes and Men. By Samuel Wainwright, D.D.

No. 24. Popular Scientific Lectures, (illustrated). By Prof. H. Helmholtz.

No. 25. The Origin of Nations. By Prof. Geo Rawlinson, Oxford University.

No. 26. The Evolutionist at Large. By Grant Allen.

No. 27. The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.

No. 28. Fashion in Deformity, as illustrated in the customs of Barbarous and Civilized Races. (numerous illustrations). By William Henry Flower, F.R.S.

No. 29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology, (numerous illustrations). By Andrew Wilson, Ph.D.

No. 30. } The Study of Words.
No. 31. } By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 33. Vignettes from Nature. By Grant Allen.

No. 34. The Philosophy of Style. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 35. Oriental Religions. By John Caird, Pres. Univ. Glasgow, and Others.

No. 36. Lectures on Evolution. (Illustrated). By Prof. T. H. Huxley.

No. 37. Six Lectures on Light. (Illustrated). By Prof. John Tyndall.

No. 38. } Geological Sketches. By Archibald
No. 39. } Geikie, F.R.S.

No. 40. The Evidence of Organic Evolution. By George J. Romanes, F.R.S.

No. 41. Current Discussions in Science. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S.

No. 42. History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock.

No. 43. Darwin and Humboldt. By Prof. Huxley, Prof. Agassiz, and others.

No. 44. } The Dawn of History. By C. F. Keary,
No. 45. } of the British Museum.

No. 46. The Diseases of Memory. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 47. The Childhood of Religion. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 48. Life in Nature. (Illustrated). By James Hinton.

No. 49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.

No. 50. } Money and the Mechanism of Ex-
No. 51. } change. By Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.

No. 52. The Diseases of the Will. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald.

No. 53. Animal Automatism, and other Essays. By Prof. T. H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 55. The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 56. } Illusions. By James Sully.
No. 57. }

No. 58. } The Origin of Species. } Two Double
No. 59. } By Charles Darwin. } Nos.

No. 60. The Childhood of the World. By Edward Clodd.

No. 61. Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 62. The Religions of the Ancient World. By Prof. Geo. Rawlinson, Univ. of Oxford. (Double number).

No. 63. Progressive Morality. By Thomas Fowler, LL.D., President of Corpus Christi Coll., Oxford.

No. 64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russell Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.

No. 65. Conditions of Mental Development: and other essays. By Wm. Kingdon Clifford.

No. 66. Technical Education: and other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. By J. F. C. Hecker, M. D.

No. 68. Three Essays. By Herbert Spencer. Special Number.

No. 69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze, Ph.D. Double number.

No. 70. Essays Speculative and Practical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 71. Anthropology. By Daniel Wilson, Ph. D. With Appendix on Archæology. By E. B. Tylor, F. R. S.

No. 72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.

No. 73. Evolution in History, Language and Science. Four Addresses delivered at the London Crystal Palace School of Art, Science and Literature.

No. 74. } The Descent of Man, and Selection in
No. 75. } Relation to Sex. (Numerous Illustrations)
No. 76. } By Charles Darwin. Nos. 74, 75, 76 are
No. 77. } single Nos.; No. 77. is a double No.

No. 78. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.

No. 79. Scientific Aspect of some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams.

No. 80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work By Grant Allen. (Double number).

No. 81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two Essays by J. Allanson Picton.

No. 82. Illusions of the Senses: and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six Essays. By Sedley Taylor, M.A.

No. 84. Studies of Animated Nature. Four Essays on Natural History. By W. S. Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 85. The Essential Nature of Religion. By J. Allanson Picton.

No. 86. The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences. By Prof. Wm. Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 87. The Morphine Habit. By Dr. B. Ball, of the Paris Faculty of Medicine.

No. 88. Science and Crime and other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 89. The Genesis of Science. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 90. Notes on Earthquakes: with Fourteen Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 91. The Rise of Universities. By S. S. Laurie, LL.D. (Double number).

No. 92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the Action of Earth Worms. By Charles Darwin, LL.D. F.R.S. (Double number).

No. 93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. By J. Mount Bleyer, M.D. (Special number).

No. 94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 95. The Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 96. A Half-Century of Science. By Prof. Thomas H. Huxley, and Grant Allen.

No. 97. The Pleasures of Life. By Sir John Lubbock, Bart.

No. 98. Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science. By William Kingdon Clifford. (Special number).

No. 99. Nature Studies. By Prof. F. R. Eaton Lowe; Dr. Robert Brown, F.L.S.; Geo. G. Chisholm, F.R.G.S., and James Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 100. Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 101. Æsthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. By Jas. Sully and Geo. Croom Robertson.

No. 102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. By William Nelson Black.

No. 103. The Coming Slavery; The Sins of Legislators; The Great Political Superstition. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 104. Tropical Africa. By Henry Drummond, F.R.S.

No. 105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. By Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. With a Prefatory Note by Prof. Huxley.

No. 106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. By Grant Allen.

No. 107. Ultimate Finance. A True Theory of Wealth. By William Nelson Black.

No. 108. English, Past and Present. Part. I. By Richard Chenevix Trench, (Double number).

No. 109. English, Past and Present. Part II. By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd. (Double number).

Single Nos. 15 cents; Double Nos. 30 cents.
Nos. 1 to 111 inclusive, cloth, plain edges—separately or together—10 vols., $2 per vol
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl. New York

Christ of Paul; or, the Enigmas of Christianity.
Frauds of the Churchmen of the Second Century Exposed.
By GEORGE REBER.
12mo, 400pp., - - Price, $2.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.
A Compendium of Universal History.
By WINWOOD READE.
Sixth edition, 544pp., - - $1.75.

SCRIPTURE SPECULATIONS.
With Creation, Stars, Earth, Primitive Man, Judaism.
By H. R. STEVENS. 419pp., $1.50.

ETHICS OF POSITIVISM.
A Critical Study and Survey of the Moral Philosophy of the Present Century.
By GIACOMO BARZELLOTTI,
Prof. of Philosophy at the Liceo Dante, Fiorence.
Price, $1.50.

OLD FAITH AND THE NEW.
A Confession.
By DAVID FRIEDERICH STRAUSS.
Authorized translation from sixth German edition by Mathilde Blind.
Price, ... $1.50.

HEALTH HINTS TO WOMEN.
Important Information for All, and "Danish Cure." With Portrait.
By MME. W. SCHOTT. Price, $1.50.

The Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets.
By S. BARING-GOULD.
Will be seized with avidity by all students of the Bible.—[Congregationalist.
Price, $1.50.

RADICAL PULPIT.
Discourses of Advanced Thought.
By O. B. FROTHINGHAM and FELIX ADLER.
Price, $1.

INSTITUTION of MARRIAGE.
And Remarkable Divorce Cases.
By PHILANTHROPUS.
446pp. - - - - Price, $1.

The Contrast: Evangelicalism and Spiritualism Compared.
By MOSES HULL.
Paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

PERSONAL IMMORTALITY
AND OTHER PAPERS.
Candid Arguments for and Against Immortality
By JOSIE OPPENHEIM. Price, 75 cents

SIXTEEN SAVIORS OR NONE.
By KERSEY GRAVES.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Collection of Forms, Hymns, and Recitations.
For Organizing Societies; for Marriages, Funerals, Naming of Infants, Obituaries, Epitaphs, etc. Also 525 Liberal and Spiritualistic Hymns for Social and Various Public Occasions.
18mo, 550pp. Price, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Nunneries.
By W. HOGAN.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Shelley: Philosopher and Reformer.
By C. SOTHERAN.
8vo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Lithograph of D. M. Bennett
Heavy plate paper 22x28. Price, 50 cts.

Lithograph of Bennett Monument.
In 4 colors, 22x28. Heavy plate paper.
Price, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
With Remarks on Rousseau and Comte.
By CALVIN BLANCHARD.
Paper, - - - 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.
WITH
Theological Amendment and State Personality
By JOS. E. PECK.
Price, - - - - - 25 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 1
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

The downcast eyes of timid acquiescence hav paid to impudent authority the tribute of a thoughtless yes.—R. G. Ingersoll.

CONTENTS.

A Splendid Judge of a Woman.
The Lady of the Club.
Under Protest.
For the Prosecution.
A Rusty Link in the Chain.
The Boler House Mystery.
The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors.
Florence Campbell's Fate.
My Patient's Story.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

Please state what periodical you saw our ad. in.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.

When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

WETTSTEIN'S
WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17 50; 15 jewels, $18.50; do. adjusted, $24 50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $ 5. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

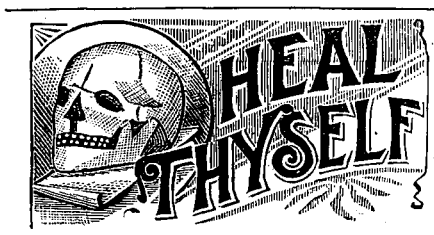
ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.



With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.
124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7.30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union
Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.
FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society
Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Portsmouth, O., Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7 P.M. in Grand Army Hall. Lectures, discussions, readings, poems, music and songs. A cordial invitation is extended to all; especially to friends from abroad. Correspondence solicited. J. L. TREUTHART, President. WILL S. ANDRES, Secretary.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brough to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

News of the Week.

THE Catholic clergy of France, having failed in their long endeavor to crush the republic, propose to sell it their favor in return for concessions. To which M. Ferry says: "For twenty years the republic has grown without you, and in spite of you. It can still liv and grow without you."

THE Parnellite party in Ireland is growing into an anticlerical one.

MAYOR GRANT of New York has applied for admission to the Catholic Club.

THE "Force" bill has been shelved for the present, but may be revived soon.

OPIUM and Chinamen are being smuggled into the United States through the Puget sound region.

REV. J. CLARK, Baptist, was arrested at Dayton, O., on the 9th on a charge of murdering a girl.

THE cold weather which has existed in this country several weeks has also prevailed throughout Europe, causing many deaths.

HUNGARIAN priests will resist the regulations which interfere with their efforts to secure the children of marriages between Catholics and Protestants.

THE Wyoming legislature closed at 5 o'clock on the morning of the 11th, after a heated all-night session, in which strong endeavors to keep the Bible out of the public schools failed.

SEVERAL members of the committee to preserve Adirondack forests are shown to hav done nothing to preserve them, but to hav connived in a big lumber deal to fell them.

DR. WINDTHORST said in the German parliament that a man without religion is only a beast, when Radical members cried, "What was Frederick the Great?"—that monarch having been a Freethinker.

IN Uganda, Africa, King Mwanga's religious allegiance is being fiercely contested for by French Catholic and English Protestant missionaries. At present the former hav possession of him, but the latter bear the upper hand in his country.

GEORGE OLMSTEAD, who perambulated Hartford on the 10th announcing that heavenly voices were talking to him, met with the usual fate of the inspired in these days, and will probably become a permanent inmate of the insane asylum.

DR. NEUER, of Denver, who has been at Berlin investigating Koch's lymph, will sail for home on the 22d, bringing a staff of hospital assistants and a supply of lymph. He will establish a hospital at Denver, expecting to cure consumption by the combined influence of the lymph and the famous climate of that city.

GERMAN workpeople and Radicals complain against control of their schools by the wealthy and the clergy. In Silesia, for instance, 620 of the schools are controled by the feudal landowners; of these, 240, with their 586 teachers, are under Lutheran influence, and the remaining 380, with their 598 teachers, under Catholic influence.

THE leading organ of American Catholics complains that though those religionists are in the majority in Belgium, "they are harassed by a minority which is ready to do anything to inflame the people against the Catholic party," and these agitators "hav now gone on a new tack—they hav spread among the Belgian workingmen the idea of universal suffrage, an institution wholly uncalled for in the constitution of Belgium's government."

THE hostil Sioux, whose number—including men, women, and children—is variously estimated at 3,500 to 7,000, are environed by 8,000 troops under General Miles. This cordon surrounds them at all points but the south, in which direction lies Pine Ridge agency, whither it is wished to drive them. At present writing they hav moved within one mile and a half of the agency, and may come in in peace. However, a shot by some uncontrolable brave may precipitate a terrible battle. The Brule Indian who killed Commander Casey of the Cheyenne scouts, to avoid hanging may start a fight. There are 2,500 troops at the agency. Several slight skirmishes occurred during the week.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS, AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

A WET TIME.

And David went up by the ascent of Mt. Olivet, and wept as he went up, and had his head covered; and he went barefoot: And all the people that was with him covered every man his head, and they went up, weeping as they went up.—2 Sam. xv, 30.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Gems of Thought.

THE Christians mistake an incident for a cause, and honestly imagin that the Bible is the foundation of modern liberty and law. They forget physical conditions, make no account of commerce, care nothing for inventions and discoveries, and ignorantly giv the credit to their inspired book.—Ingersoll.

THE indirect influence of climate, that, for example, which arises from the circumstance that in a hot country man livs in the open air, while in a cold one he livs shut up in his habitation—that he livs here upon one kind of food, and there upon another, are facts of extreme importance; inasmuch as a simple change in physical life may hav a powerful effect upon the course of civilization.—Guizot.

THE god-man of the New Testament is described as a being sadly deficient in intellect and knowledge, and childish, petulant, and morose.—H. J. Hardwicke.

FROM all the evidence accessible to us, it seems perfectly clear that Jesus was an enthusiast, who did not always assume the noblest bearing toward those who differed from him, and who not only condemned his opponents in extravagantly strong terms, but urged his disciples to take an even more offensiv course (Mark vi, 11). Jesus indeed sometimes appeared to lose his mental balance, so much so that his own friends declared that he was beside himself (Mark iii, 21). From the evidence afforded by the gospels, Jules Soury concludes that Jesus suffered periodically from congestion of the brain, and was sometimes insane. . . . Strange, too, that, when Jesus came to die, he prayed, "Oh, my father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me" (Matt. xxvi, 39). If Jesus were God, he must hav known that to let the cup pass was at one stroke to send the whole of mankind to eternal perdition. Moreover, he surely knew his own mind, and was not likely, by a prayer to himself, to change his own immutable will. But all these difficulties shrink to comparativly small proportions beside that which is involved in his exclamation in the last agony of all, as he hung stretched upon the cross: "Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani!"—Moss.

THE law of the past cannot be eluded,
The law of the present and future cannot be eluded,
The law of the living cannot be eluded, it is eternal,
The law of promotion and transformation cannot be eluded,
The law of heroes and good-doers cannot be eluded,
The law of drunkards, informers, mean persons, not one iota thereof can be eluded.
—Walt Whitman.

Is the fall of a stone certain, and the fruit of an unwisdom doubtful?—Carlyle.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 4. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY. { New York, Saturday, January 24, 1891. } 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 per year.

WHY THE CLERGY WANT THE PARKS, ETC., CLOSED ON SUNDAY.

Notes and Clippings.

THE supreme court of Georgia has recently decided that a church may be sold to pay the preacher, the case being one in which the pastor levied upon the property for arrears of pay.

AT the Sorosis dinner at Delmonico's last week, Moncure D. Conway said that Thomas Paine was the first of the American Revolutionists who spoke for woman. He said her influence was going to abolish revolutions and create peaceful changes.

AN interesting heathenish usage exists among the Poliéshooks (a Ruthenian tribe) in Volhynia. A bride being led to the church to be married must pass through the fire. A small fire is built for the purpose on the road, and the relativs of the groom dispose themselvs in files on both sides to see the bride pass over it. They believe that if the girl is not virtuous the fire must harm her.

OF late years Tolstoi, the Russian novelist and social reformer, has practiced the fad of working as a farm laborer on his estate, and more recently he undertook the duties of shepherd for his neighborhood. But his habit of not leaving his bed until 11 o'clock in the morning did not suit the peasants whose sheep he was supposed to hav care of, and they hav compelled him to resign his charge.

GENERAL BOOTH of the Salvation Army says he will do what he can to bring the right kind of people of both sexes to know one another. This is a part of his "Darkest England" scheme, and seems to be, says the World, a huge matrimonial enterprise. We suggest that when he has brought the couples together he presents each with a work on heredity and a copy of Annie Besant's "Fruits of Philosophy." There are enough paupers and criminals in the world now.

WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER says that because Blackstone declares "Christianity to be part of the law of the land," therefore it is a part of the law of the United States. The next position for William Allen Butler to take, says the American Sentinel, is that the president of the United States never dies, and can do no wrong. It adds: When the Papal Monopoly League has elected its candidate for the presidency of the United States, Mr. Butler will doubtless be called upon to advocate this theory to the people at large.

WHEN H. L. Knight, of San Francisco, who has recently rested from his labors, lay dying a Catholic sister asked him if she might not summon a priest. He replied: "You may; you may bring a priest, a bishop, an archbishop, the college of cardinals, and the pope himself. I never closed my door against any man on account of his religion. But," said the old man, "I should tell them all, singly and severally, that my chief regret in dying is that I can no longer use tongue or pen to expose them as either dupes or impostors." He died as he had lived.

HURRAH for Wyoming! The lower house of its legislature passed the following amendment to the Fitch school code, and then adopted the code: "All religious exercises, such as reading the Bible, praying, etc., are hereby prohibited in the public schools or any educational institution in the state of Wyoming, which is supported by and is under control of the state, during the sessions of such school or educational institution. The teacher or principal of any school or educational institution violating the provisions of this section shall be immediately removed from his or her position by the board of school trustees."

THERE is no reason for wonder at the failure of Father Ignatius to stir up a religious flame in this city, thinks the Sun. To many who hav read the reports of his sermons, and who hav seen that every reporter has testified to his eloquence and fervor, it might seem incomprehensible that he should not hav made at least such an impression upon the public as Mr. Moody succeeded in making a few years ago. A contributor to the Press explains the failure. He says that a gentleman who had been to the meetings complained that he was shocked by the bartering and begging that attended the services. "I was asked to buy a seat, a hymn-book, an autograph, and other things. Then I was asked to contribute to pay for the hall and for Llanthony Abbey." He wondered "if he would be allowed to get out with the shirt on his back." This indicates that the cash side of the mission has been made apparent above the religious side.

THE pope has sent out a letter in which he informs the "faithful" that the world is very sick socially and politically, because it won't accept him as God's lieutenant, who has authority to be the only thinker on this planet, and commissioned to run things in this world to suit his "sublime, ineffable, papal nibs." He attempts to show the G. O. P. that he "did it with his little hatchet," that the McKinley bill had nothing to do with it. The gang of broken-down Italian nobles, who are a majority of the "college," after many centuries of successful banking on ignorant and superstitious masses of humans, hav actually grown, or even bred into the notion that the creator of the universe would be obliged to make an assignment to them if they should close up the Vatican and go out of business. Many centuries of in-and-in breeding by a few Italian families, has resulted in giving them a notion that they are the only people on earth fitted to do business with God or Satan.—Loyal American.

A BOLD Bostonian writes to the Globe: "I observed with great pleasure Sunday before last, several boys and girls enjoying the excellent skating on a pond near Lake street, formerly Brighton, but now a part of Boston, a small piece of which, below the Undine spring, belongs to me. I had, on the morning of the same day, seen a policeman engaged in the old-time occupation of chasing some harmless boys off the Frog pond on Boston Common. Now, I think the time has come when skating should not only be permitted, but also made comfortable, on Sunday in every part of our city. I take the liberty of even suggesting to the municipal administration the desirability of this reform. There is no reason why, during the freezing weather, the ponds on the Common and the Public Garden should not be kept in prime condition for the skaters." It is not likely that such an innovation as skating within the precincts of the Common will ever be allowed. That historic spot is sacred to the hanging of witches!

Communications.

Who Made God?—Concluded.

His subjects must not only fear transgressing the primeval decree, they must be careful not to excite his wrath, his vengeance, his hatred, and his cruelty, because it does not require much clerical dexterity and genuflection to convert every moral and mental obliquity, when indulged by a divinity, into a gude, gutt, good, or God. In this way our spiritual guides, the priests, by their superhuman endowments and their exceptional genius in the realms of the inscrutable and domains of the visionary, hav furnished the world with such Gods as they believed were needed for its welfare. And not to accept them peaceably and submissivly would be presumptuous blasphemy, to deserve and invoke their vengeance.

The Christian and Infidel world in its bewilderment has much to say about God, and with all the conflicting theories, definitions, and descriptions it cannot be otherwise. The fable and the fall hav done it all, and set the world ajar. The staggering mental dilemma and struggle is to reconcile and harmonize the paradox that while God is good he is also the devil. Because in our sacred books and in the vast body of religious literature that floods the world, this duplex character is given to him. The church takes him as he was furnished or presented by the church fathers.

It is a difficult and inexplicable problem, but we submit when we are told that God's ways are not as our ways. "How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out!" Then we believers submit and think it is all for the best.

But the Infidels renew the quarrel; displeased with the God the fathers, in their great strait and bewildering predicaments, felt themselvs driven to define and interpret as best they could, they proceed to destroy him altogether. They are uninformed and fanatical or they would not do so. For man by nature, whether Infidel or Christian, loves good. He loves everything that is good. He strives after it and livs for it as he understands it. And not to love the principle and symbol of all goodness as expressed in the word good, gute, or God, as understood by the ancients in its primitiv sense, and before it was masqueraded in the fable as the God of ignorant innocence, is to be a misanthrope, a monster, a fiend incarnate. If we destroy God and decry the symbol of goodness, we lapse below the lowest vertebrate animal and put ourselvs outside of nature.

If the God our perplexed ancestors, in their great dilemma, made for us, is defectiv and incongruous, we hav fully as much right and liberty to revise and restore him to his ancient integrity, with the broader vision that we enjoy, as they had in their desperate extremities to do the best they knew how. Let the Infidel understand that a God that is not wholly good, and in every sense represents anything short of every good accessible to man, is not the true God, and no sensible God-loving man could be expected to acknowledge or accept it.

If we succeed in abolishing God from our affections, our hopes, and ambitions, we will be the victims of evil, servants of the devil, for there are but two acknowledged moral forces, and to abandon one is to be subject to the other.

The disciples and Christians of the first century were a sect of humble philosophers of the Platonic order. They were devoted to good works, living closely up to the ethics of Jesus.

They believed in no demons or divinities, nor would they worship or sacrifice to any. Many of them were tortured and put to death by the pagans on this account for their Infidelity. This is the uniform testimony of church and civil history. Their religion consisted in doing good. In our Anglo-Saxon language there was the word good, but no God. But our Anglo-Saxon (English) translators of the Bible, in order to adapt it to that idolatrous period, put this new word or name God in the Bible, in defiance of the Greek text, and by so doing hav made Christianity a pagan superstition, and these early Christians heathen idolators, which, if living, rather than submit to they would suffer death.

In the light of modern revelations in science and philosophy, so suggestiv of the origin of many theories and traditions, dogmas and beliefs, that hav long been incorporated in institutions and organizations of church and state, to open a general warfare and onslaught on their existence is to put the parties so engaged outside of common sympathy into a forced exile. It is excluding all opportunity for social intercourse, or mental or moral instruction of the masses, who so much need light and intelligence on these vital topics, involving human elevation, enfranchisment from error and the misfortunes ever enslaving those who are its victims.

When Liberals caricature, blaspheme, or deny the existence of good, alias God, as a thought, without reference as to the way it is spelled or pronounced, they array themselvs against the knowledge, the experience, and convictions of unnumbered millions of the human family for unnumbered centuries of the past. To deny the existence of this good is to deny the sensibility and susceptibility of all organized life being affected by contact with its environment. There cannot be conscious existence without a sense of good and evil; sometimes expressed as God and devil.

The fact is a fixed postulate and cannot be altered by man's morbid perversity, or by his capricious prejudices or false conceptions.

The sound and sentiment expressed in the word containing these vowels o and u are common to many, if not all languages, and mean nothing more than good in a secular sense.

History justifies us in believing and asserting that good had not been deified or demonized by the pagans in the countries where Christianity originated, and that these early Christians never heard of and knew nothing of God or good as a divinity or an object of worship; or if they did they would hav been as firm in refusing to honor him with worship as they were all the other recognized divinities.

It was a principle with them to worship no divinity, whether it was God, Jupiter, or Hercules. All such worship was pagan superstition.

I refer now to the Christianity of the first and second centuries, when it was an humble, simple, and despised religion or form of ethical philosophy, and not worthy of the notice of the aspiring or scholarly classes. But it had spread in the latter part of the second century and was becoming a power, when more scholarly men availed themselvs of the opportunity to achieve distinction by claiming to be converts; and acting as priests and bishops, soon brought it into disgrace by introducing their heathen corruptions and dogmas and making it a superstition.

These men are now called the "early Christian fathers." When we read their biographies, learn their characters and qualifications for the positions they occupied in the church and as religious teachers, we find they were the destroyers of original Christianity.

From their writings that hav been preserved and contemporary testimony, they all, during their lives as Christians, retained their early pagan faith in polytheism, and acknowledged their belief in the popular divinities of their day, though they did not teach these views in the church. But their pagan proclivities prompted them to originate new divinities out of words, names, objects, substantivs, and abstractions. They demonized or deified the words "chief good," of Plato, jesu christi, true wisdom, of Paul, the good sun or "sun of good." They also deified the light of the sun—the pure atmosphere—calling it "holy gas," then spelled Ghost; and pure water was Holy Spirit.

Pure love was good; so they said good or "God was love," and "they who dwell in love dwell in God." Light was good and "God was light, and in him there was no darkness at all." They soon deified the departed good men as a kind of divine messengers or servants for their divinities, whom our Latin and English ancestors translated in the Bible into Engles, or angels, because the Engles were blonds of fair complexion and comely appearance, as they supposed the inhabitants of the invisible sphere to be. They thus deified departed saints into angels, and Mary, the mother of Joshua (Jeshu), they deified as the mother of good or God. And a multitude of other places and things were deified as holy.

They also, consistent with their inherited, cherished faith, made a class of worthless or evil divinities, which go by the names of Satan and his angels, Beelzebub, the dragon, the serpent, and the devil, etc.

These holy fathers of the church began this corruption of the faith of the first simple disciples of Platonism, who rejected all divinities, and the succeeding writers and defenders of the faith, beginning with the gospel authors, scribes, or copyists and translators, for a thousand years, till printing was discovered and the Reformation commenced, when editors, printers, and publishers, true to the letter and teachings of the manuscript, printed the names of these Christian divinities with the capital initial to preserve them.

Of late years science and scholarship hav been undermining, exposing, and dissipating these long-established divinities and superstitions, to the great distress and terror of their ardent devotees; and in their frenzy to maintain them they are experiencing religious spasms in efforts to preserve the precious faith, insisting, with pious pertinacity, that in order to save them they must be incorporated and sustained in the civil and political institutions; in Sabbath laws and by periodical holy observances; by chaplains and church tax exemptions; and to secure the perpetuity of these, to hav our already good national Constitution turned into a divine ordinance by deifying the word good into a God, that the people may not only obey, but learn to adore, the document thus made holy.

That singular freak in human nature that hankers after and affinitizes with these demons or divinities, drives some to novel, not to say ridiculous extremities in manifesting their zeal and devotion. The National Reform Society is afflicted with this mania. Its members seem sanguin in a belief that, though our national Constitution is a good one, it would be much better if the word good could be placed in it, spelled G o-d—it would add much to its virtue and strength, for then the God divinity would be honored and treated with due regard, and in return would shower down his blessings on his appreciativ subjects. These reformers are so confident of the result that no efforts are too great in order that it may be consummated.

It is not wide of the truth to affirm that ninety-nine per cent of the people are superficial, narrow, and incompetent thinkers; the toilers, the idlers, and timid, the trained and neglected, the stupid and stalwart, the weak and indolent, see no point—no occasion nor necessity for discussing and analyzing this divinity or demon theory. They can scarcely see a connection between it and the welfare of society. Their logic and metaphysics are too limited and local, too scant and contracted, to grasp the idea in its entirety. How many readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER see no special or essential need for examining the question to see its force and bearing on and against progressiv and aggressiv thought? How many of them know that our religion was begotten and born in a land of demons? That all Christendom to-day is under demoniacal influence; that it exercises all the terror and power of a reality; that with our great professions of superior enlightenment, this demonology dominates our social, domestic, and civil life? It dictates our policy, overrides our reason, and demands our reverence. It is sung into us in our cradle lullabies, in the nursery and Sunday-school, in church hymns and instrumental music; at our meals, when we arise in the morning and retire at night, in sickness and sorrow, at our birth and at death. It is attuned, enjoined, and glorified from the beginning to the end of our existence. In courts of justice, in legislativ halls, in public proclamations for holiday observances, in the army and navy, on the battle-fields, on the scaffold, and in every public office from the hangman to the chief magistrate, it is invoked, honored, and reverenced in the oath. It hangs over the masses as a pall, a thrall that binds them down through life to a mental condition of servil obsequiousness that forbids them investigating, and makes Freethought, Liberalism, and rational inquiry revolting and offensiv to their instincts. This ecclesiastical and demoniacal chain must be broken by inviting attention to its weak and rotten links, and in showing where and how it was forged, its utter fragility and worthlessness to fetter anyone with an intelligent and enlightened understanding of its origin and purposes.

This chain of superstition that links us to the ages of rampant demonology is the salient point of our warfare. This tether must be broken, for while it is intact all our skirmishing and fusillading on the mental outposts of the fortress, buttressed about and intrenched and cemented together by ancient and venerable faith, in the presence and power of demons, divinities, or of modern gods, will avail but little, and will be treated as the ravings of the blasphemer or as the workings of Satan, their demon of darkness.

The root and trunk of our religion are found here. It is by traversing and surveying this ground and acquainting ourselvs with the age and with the motivs and objects of those who were activ and foremost in planting our faith, that we will be able to see the character, quality, and extent of the stupendous fraud that is now holding the human mind in abeyance.

While these demons stand unchallenged and unmasked, holding their grip on human affections, our pueril efforts to destroy the great ecclesiastical superstructure and overturn the foundations of the hierarchy that sustains it, all under the patronage and invincible support of this prince and chief of demons men call God—this imaginary divinity, ordained, equipped, and enthroned in power by creativ genius and human skill, as a ruler of this world and monarch of the universe—will avail but little, if not directed to the root and origin, to those seeds of ancient paganism planted and carefully cultivated by our Greek fathers and their successors, the servitors, patrons, and founders of our present orthodox Christian faith, wherever and in whatever degree it prevails.

Much that is printed, read, or uttered in discussions in our Freethought literature to the minds of the uninformed masses is accepted as mere declamation, or as the crude cogitations of a disordered mind, or as the ravings of the irreverent or infamous blasphemer, because it is mere fragmentary outbursts of railing and denunciation, generally unauthenticated and inopportune. Instead of interesting, attracting, and instructing, its effect is just the reverse, and tends to strengthen the faith in that which it is aimed to discredit and destroy.

Too much of the force of Liberal sentiment is in this way turned against the movement by its over-ultra, injudicious, and often unwise advocates. It is much better to calmly enlighten than it is to stun, stagger, or frighten and disgust a listener, with abrupt and untimely assertion or caricature.

Philadelphia, Jan., 1891. T. E. LONGSHORE.

Religious Banks and Banking.—Concluded.

One would suppose that the frequent exposure of frauds deliberately and for years practiced by religious people would cure that large class of persons who, on account of the weakness of their discriminating powers, may be named "gullibles," their family coat of arms being the gudgeon, that silly fish which has the reputation of biting at any bait that looks like being good. Their folly consists in supposing that religion has any effect whatever in making men honest and honorable in their dealings. The orthodox doctrin, as to the matter of salvation, is that every convert to the church is a regenerated man; that all his sins, considered as debts due to divine justice, hav been atoned for, and fully paid and settled, by the blood of Christ, whose satisfaction thus made to the broken law is set over to his credit in the book of God's remembrance. This legal transaction covers not only the original sin which he committed in his representativ, Adam, but all his actual sins, past, present, and to come, and hence he is in a justified state, which means that he is free from all condemnation, and is regarded now, henceforth, and forever as one who had never sinned.

This is the doctrin of Paul, the first great corrupter of Christianity, as Jefferson said, and accounts for the triumphant feeling expressed in his epistle to the Romans (chap. ix), where, in tracing the links in the chain of salvation, beginning with the foreknowledge and purpose of God, and ending with the saint's glorification in heaven, he says: "What shall we then say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? Who shall lay anything to the charge of God's elect? It is God that justifieth. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died, yea, rather that is risen again, who is even at the right hand of God, who also maketh intercession for us."

Now, taking men as we find them, while a noble man whom nature has made out of good material would scorn to take advantage of the certainty of his salvation to indulge in all manner of sin, the common run of people, who compose the vast majority, would do that very thing. When a temptation, on the highway or byway of life, meets one of these professional saints, taking him on his blind or weak side, he yields, secretly, and perhaps unconsciously feeling that if he does yield, the blood of Christ will blot out the record of his sin, provided he is sorry for it. For, as I hav shown, Paul clearly teaches that if a saint commits a crime, Jesus, like an attorney at law, stands at the right hand of God in heaven as his intercessor, and pleads that, as he himself paid the criminal's debt on the cross, the criminal must not only be acquitted but justified. The consciousness in a believer that the blood of Christ has an infinit value which may be drawn upon, acts on men as the knowledge a spendthrift son has, that his father has deposited in a safe bank a million of dollars which he can check out whenever he incurs a new debt. The doctrin of the church, Catholic and Protestant, is that the atoning blood of Christ, although only applied to sinners on this planet, has efficacy enough to redeem the sinners of ten thousand worlds like this. The pope of Rome, as God's vicegerent, and acting as secretary of the Lord's treasury, claims that the unappropriated surplus revenue of grace accruing from the infinit value of Christ's atonement is under his sole control, and that he has a right to use it in his official business. Therefore when a man wishes to break the divine law he looks at the list of indulgences, and getting the necessary money, purchases a "dispensation;" that is, the pope, through his subordinate officers the priests, takes out of the surplus fund in the treasury the necessary amount of grace, and givs the transgressor so much credit on account.

It is essentially so in the Protestant church. There is no other way of accounting for this class of gullibles being so large. They sincerely believe that, as to human conduct, all is gold that glitters; and if the gold becomes tarnished by exposure they never suspect that it is because the article is what the mineralogists call "fools'-gold," but think that it only needs rubbing up to make it shine as brightly as ever. We had an illustration of this, lately, in the kind-hearted old Massachusetts specimen of the gullible class, who was so charmed with the saintliness of a penitentiary convict she knew, that, notwithstanding the frequent proofs she had of his roguery, she allowed him to beguile her out of thousands of dollars.

But gullibility is such a weakness in the human character that, until mankind is cured of its religious superstition, it will always furnish swindlers the means of practicing their arts of cunning successfully. If a penniless fellow in Chicago wanted to make a fortune in five years he might assure himself of success within that time if he understood well the art of cajolery. From the history of so many, let me sketch the plan. The first step to be taken is to get converted at some revival, and evince a gift of prayer, and an emotional display of piety in the way of tears. We all know what a weapon of offense and defense a woman's tears are, and how often the stony heart of the judge on the bench can be melted by the appeals they make for mercy. It has been said that it is unmanly for a man to weep under any circumstances, and certainly, more really deep feeling is exhibited in stifling his emotions, and keeping back his tears, than in giving them free vent. But our amiable class of gullibles hav always yielded to the sympathetic force of tears. One of the Scotch preachers, during the times of the Solemn League and Covenant, was exceedingly admired by his hearers for his long sermons of three or four hours, and mainly because, as one of his congregation has recorded: "He had a great power o' watter; for he grat, and he spat, and he swat like mischief." And here I may digress a moment to say, that one reason why the regular clergy of our city churches are being cheated out of their congregations by the Sunday papers, is that, reading over their little dry sermons of half an hour, with no inspiration of hell-fire in them, they awaken no feeling in their hearers. They hav no need of handkerchiefs to mop the sweat from their foreheads, and the tears from their eyes and noses, as the old preachers had. The weeping part of the church services is left now to the revivalists, and hence they are the only class of the clergy who succeed, in defiance of the Sunday newspaper, in winning souls to Christ.

But to return to our pious knave. After he becomes remarkable for his zeal as a church-member, which is evinced in his punctual attendance on the means of grace, his next step is to get a class of children in the Sabbath-school, where he is a model teacher. Soon he is promoted to be superintendent, which, if in a large evangelical church, enables him to take a long step toward realizing his hope of being a wealthy man. For a Sunday-school superintendent, judging from the number of them exiled in Canada and the penitentiaries of the country, has special facilities for paving the way to success in making money. Serving the Lord for revenue, he is always at his post of duty on the holy Sabbath to address the children and tell them all about Jesus, and pious little boys and girls who, being too good to liv, like little Nathan Dickerman, died and went to heaven. All these children when they go home will echo and reëcho the praises of our dear superintendent in the ears of their credulous mothers, and she will repeat them in the ears of her husband. In due time, the godly women of the congregation ask their husbands to make the acquaintance of our hero, and invite him to their houses as a visitor. Our pious swindler, even if he is not married into the family, knows how to ingratiate himself into the good opinion and, finally, the confidence of the husband as a business man, because every business man is acquainted, and holds relations, with others of his class, and they enlarge the field of operations. At church on Sunday, at the prayer-meetings every week, as well as in the Sunday-schools, and especially on sacramental occasions, he exhibits his superabundant piety, until all who know him hav perfect confidence in him as being and possessing all that is requisit in the character of Deacon Smith's "truly good man." I giv our shrewd adventurer three years out of the five to achieve this conquest over the gullibles. Then I allow him two years more to trade upon his capital, which consists of mere confidence reposed in him as a religious man. Upon this he either speculates in stock, with funds stolen from his employers, or borrows a little money to set up a bank. If he adopts the latter plan, like his late exemplar, Brother Kean in Chicago, he opens the day's business with prayer to his patron deity, the God of Jacob. He has a secret reason for this, for Jacob was a rogue like himself. He cheated his gullible old father-in-law, Laban, the Syrian, out of his cattle, and also his own twin brother, Esau, out of his birthright; and, of course, a deity who would approve of such conduct would be the very one that a swindling banker in Chicago would like to worship and pray to every day, for he well knows that there are plenty of confiding Labans to be found among the million of people who compose the population of that city, who could be induced to put their hard earnings into his bank for safe keeping.

But now comes the dénoument, by which French word is meant, the development of the plot, the final issue, or result, the catastrophe. Justice, personified as Nemesis in the Greek mythology, a virgin goddess, although she has the reputation of being leaden-heeled, and slow of gait, has the eye of a basilisk, and the scent and endurance of the bloodhound, and at last overtakes the transgressor with his ill-gotten gain stored away in his pocket. She enters the bank without knocking at the door, holds up the insignia of her office and authority, puts the offender into the balance, weighs him, and finds him wanting in all the attributes of character which make an honest and true man. The church sends her agent to defend his character by the absurd and impudent plea that, having been for so many years a bright and shining light in the church, etc., etc., he must needs be innocent, although proven to be guilty,—thus committing the unpardonable sin of attempting to unsettle the order of the universe, and the affairs of men, by blotting out the eternal distinction between right and wrong. Justice, however, still declares him to be a robber, yea, still worse; for a robber has courage enough to run the risk of being killed in the act, but he is a swindler, who, to make himself rich, deliberately uses his religion to get the confidence and the money of men and women of moderate means, when he knows that they will ultimately be reduced to the pinchings of poverty.

But, most unfortunately, justice can only expose and punish the criminality of a swindler after she succeeds in catching him. She cannot make him disgorge his plunder, and giv it back to the victims of his treachery, although they be hungry widows and orphans. They must suffer the consequences of their being dupes; for both nature and the law allow men to be punished for their ignorance. VINDEX.

The Preachers and the Actors.

From the New York Dramatic Mirror.

Clergymen hav been giving professionals something to talk about during the last few days. The pastor of the Amesbury, Mass., Universalist church, the Rev. A. C. White, made his appearance there as Miles Standish, in a comic opera called Priscilla, supported by local amateurs. The house was crowded by church people and others eager to see the unwonted spectacle of a minister of the gospel kicking up his heels in public. From all accounts he made a success both as actor and singer, and carried the house by storm. As a matter of course, the Amesbury gossips hav wagged their tongues industriously over the clergyman's exploit, and the community is about equally divided between condemnation and commendation.

But far less innocent and censurable than the Rev. Mr. White's eccentric foray into the domain of comic opera were the sermons preached against the stage by a clerical sensationalist named Rankin—G. C. Rankin—in Kansas City at about the same time. This purblind preacher is one of the few relics of that school of orthodox mountebanks who, like their contemporaries and prototypes the vagabond strollers, hav become well-nigh obsolete in all civilized lands—a school that has done mankind more harm than good. Narrow, ill-informed, saturated with false ideas of life, they discuss public questions with the unreasoning fierceness of the fanatic and the crass ignorance of the bigot. Rankin has placed himself outside the pale of courteous consideration by the agency of his large mouth, that—figurativly, at least—discounts the orifice through which Talmage emits his Sunday discourses.

I think you will agree with me on this point when you hav perused the following extracts culled at random from his tirades:

The literature and customs of the brothel will become the common fashion of the stage and opera. They hav about reached that point already.

According to the statement of a manager, it is not moral excellence or literary worth, or high vocal skill, or elocutionary merit, or high-toned humor that enters into the "rage" of stage attractions, but the grossly indelicate exhibition of the "beautiful outlines" of the indecent female form.

From this school people are being trained in the art of perfidy, deception, intrigue, and licentiousness.

It is cultivating a taste for the literature, practices, and ribaldry of the dramshop and the brothel, from which, no doubt, the average theatrical troupe draws much of the fashion of its stage dress, indecent posings, coarse manners, and ill-scented inspirations.

Such an institution imparts and fosters a deep-seated disrespect for woman's virtue. It evokes and stimulates the worst passions and appetites of men.

It generates an atmosphere under whose pestilential influence the innate love of chastity withers and the lust of conviviality and libertinism grows and flourishes and brings forth its abundant harvest. It excites the cravings of the toper, it sharpens the wit of the gambler, it furnishes a plot for the gay seducer, it opens up unthought-of avenues to the foul conspirator against the sanctity of wedded life, and it flings the glamour of chuckling cleverness and ingenuity around the deeds of the pampered rake and the chartered libertin.

There is nothing mean or cunning in human life; there is nothing base or groveling in human conduct; there is nothing smutty or profane in human manners; there is nothing slimy in human thought and imagination, and there is nothing crafty and insidious in human motiv and purpose that is not thrown into some sort of grotesque or bewitching shape by the ordinary playhouse theatricals.

The utterer of these vicious libels is a popular clergyman, whose congregation, I am told, is one of the largest in Kansas City.

God help the poor Methodist flock that is led into error by the lies of this blatant shepherd!

Rankin, by the way, has drawn forth this criticism from a brother clergyman, the Rev. Myron W. Reed, of Denver: "Dr. Rankin's sermon was rank and wholly uncalled for, and showed the speaker's ignorance of what he was talking about. While on this subject I want to say that I think actors rank just as well as any other class of people, and just as well as preachers. I think they overdo their advertising, but then look at De Witt Talmage. He is the best advertiser in the business. I think the best idea would be to make the pulpit as attractiv as the stage."

THE managers of the exhibition at Chicago do not seem to hav risen to the conception that the exhibition is to be a national affair, and as such should not be used to propagate the peculiar beliefs of this or that sect, especially in view of the fact that the nation, as a nation, recognizes no religion.—European edition of the Herald.

Josiah P. Mendum.

From the Boston Investigator.

On Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 11, 1891, the sad funeral rites over the body of the respected and beloved proprietor of the Boston Investigator were performed. The day was perfect. The winter sun shone bright and the air was clear.

In accordance with the wishes of the deceased and his family the services were private, and were held at his late residence in Melrose Highlands. About seventy-five of the intimate friends of Mr. Mendum were present to pay the last tribute of respect and affection. The casket was in the front parlor of the house, and the face of the deceased was seen as if in peaceful sleep. A sheaf of wheat was laid upon the casket. Near by was a large bunch of white roses with the word "Finished" in purple flowers in the center. Many other floral offerings were in the room.

The services commenced with singing, "We Are Gathering Home," by the Commonwealth Quartet. Mr. L. K. Washburn then made the following address:

MY FRIENDS: We hav met together to pay our tribute of respect to a man who deserved the respect of a world.

Josiah P. Mendum is a name that has always been clean and pure. His children can cherish it with honor; his friends can speak it with pride, and his fellow-men can write it with grateful remembrance.

At the end of a long, busy life, a life of toil, of hardship, of bitter struggle, but also of success, of victory, and of triumphant peace, the white sleep of death falls on the tired hand and the weary brain.

Few men hav lived with more to be proud of; few men hav died with less to regret.

It is a great thing to liv life well; to liv in a way to make the world better; to be upright and true; to oppose the wrong; to work for the right; to stand by the poor, the oppressed, the down-trodden; to speak for the few, the despised, the maligned; to spend one's life in the cause of justice and truth.

Josiah P. Mendum did this, did it quietly, modestly, did it as his duty, and it is for doing this that we honor and respect him.

He worked for the good of this world; he did not waste his life in work for another. There was so much to be done here, so much that was needed to make human life what it should be, that he gave all his thought and labor to the present.

He could not accept a defeated hope on earth as the promis of a waiting joy in heaven, but, instead, he saw in it the necessity of a greater wisdom and a nobler life here.

He lived to make the most of his opportunities while they lasted; he did not ask where they were to end. He never complained of the hours or days or years being too long. He loved to work, and he could always find something to do. He was activ and interested in his business as long as the willing mind could obey its master.

There was no deceit in this man. He was truthful; plain-spoken even to bluntness. He would not lie to flatter friend or frighten foe. He relied upon facts, and he stated things candidly and without excuse or ornament. He had the rugged habit of honesty of purpose, and he did not varnish his speech for utterance. Where his word was given his deed was assured. Men who dealt with him trusted him. He possessed the strictest business integrity. He wronged no man of his just dues. He paid his every debt.

Sixty years ago the man who doubted the truth of the Christian dogmas was looked upon as bad; the man who rejected the hand of the Christian religion was looked upon as lost. It required courage sixty years ago to be honest to one's intellectual doubts, but it required a greater courage to follow the fate of one's intellectual convictions. There was then more to be encountered by him who avowed his opposition to the popular faith.

To Mr. Mendum the Christian religion was false, its doctrins were cruel, its preaching was injurious, and he determined to do all he could as long as he lived to show men that there was no power in the universe to be feared, and that they were wronging themselvs by sacrificing this life for another.

He was true to that determination, and well has he performed his task. How much he has done we cannot say, for results are not to be measured by what we see and know.

More than fifty years ago, before he was thirty years of age, he became the publisher and proprietor of the Boston Investigator. It was through this paper that he did his work; not as editor, not as contributor, but as manager, who, by his careful, conservativ course, by his indomitable energy, and by his lofty spirit of sacrifice, which, more than once, carried him and those who were dear to him almost to the edge of want, kept the paper alive and saved it to do the great work of enlightenment to which it was consecrated by its brave founder. He gave his life to the publishing of a paper that should advocate the mental freedom of man.

He never wavered in his purpose; never faltered in his labor; never turned back in his course.

He did what to him was right. He was faithful to his convictions. His heart and mind were both enlisted in the battle for freedom. Every day for more than half a century he stood at his post of duty. He lived to see many a dogma die, many a truth born, and he had the proud satisfaction of knowing that he had contributed by his efforts to the larger liberty which the world enjoys.

The Boston Investigator is alive to-day chiefly through the enterprise, sagacity, pluck, and perseverance of Josiah P. Mendum. It must stand as a monument to his name, and no man could hav a grander.

The man whom we honor to-day with our presence and our thoughts was not before the public. He did not seek office nor position. He had no ambition for place or power. He did not seek to lead men nor to build his fame upon the services of his fellow-beings.

All the triumph he asked was what his own hands could win. All the glory of his life was the result of his own efforts. He helped others. He worked for the improvement of the world. He gave his time and talents to promote the cause of human liberty and human emancipation from superstition. He saw the world of man held in the bonds of mental slavery, and he attacked this great evil whenever he could strike a blow for freedom and truth.

He fought for liberty as long as his hands could hold a sword, and his sympathy with man's struggles against wrong and falsehood ceased only with his breath.

It is a great thing to aid the cause of education by furnishing facts to the world; by providing a medium for the exchange of ideas, and it was this which Mr. Mendum did. For doing this thousands hav spoken his name with gratitude, and thousands more will liv to be benefited by his wise and judicious labors.

The nobiest fruit of human life is manliness. The man who lies before us in the peaceful arms of death was a moral man. He had no bad habits. Vice had no attractions for him. He was mentally and morally clean. He was not ashamed of his thoughts. There surrounded him an atmosphere of self-respect. He life was open, honest, aboveboard, and he lived in the light.

In this age character has made all creeds contemptible. It is what we do that shows what we are. The man who is sincere need wear no disguise; need make no profession. The paint of falsehood cannot hide the face of truth.

Josiah P. Mendum could not be a hypocrit. His lips could not lie. He told the truth whether it was pleasant or unpleasant. He made friends of the best, and it is a noble tribute to the sincerity of his character that they remained true through life.

His grasp was warm and kind, and where his confidence went his heart followed. He did not use flattery. Honesty needs only plain words.

In this man's character there was the firmness of earth. He held his opinions with uncompromising integrity. If they were right, why should he yield?

Those who knew him, knew that beneath his every act was a reason.

He was impulsiv at times, but never unjust. He did not want to be wronged nor to wrong others.

Mr. Mendum had the virtues which delighted in home; which protected the family; which shielded the weak. His life was divided between the duties of his business and the pleasures of his home. In his family relations he was exceedingly fortunate. His home was his heaven, his best place, and it yielded him every happiness, every joy.

In the sacred quiet and peace of home he passed his last days, with the hands and feet of love ever ready to wait upon his wants.

He bore his sufferings patiently; he faced his fate calmly and bravely, and died as he had lived—grandly.

This man whom we hav learned to respect, esteem, and love, has reached the end of life's journey. He has left us the legacy of a pure and noble life. We can honor him best by imitating his virtues.

Over his sleeping dust we say these parting words of respect and esteem.

Farewell.

At the conclusion of the address the quartet sang the hymn, "Lay Me Low."

The pall-bearers were Messrs. T. W. Ripley, Jacob Bean, L. K. Munn, and H. Sargeant.

The body was buried in the family lot at Wyoming Cemetery in Melrose.

SKETCH OF MR. MENDUM'S LIFE.

From the Boston Herald.

Mr. Josiah Paine Mendum, who has just died, had a remarkable career. It was not filled with any romantic incidents, startling tableaux, or thrilling situations which rendered it sensational, but was characterized by rugged honesty, rare intelligence, persistent industry, and devotion to the cause of the oppressed. There were bitter struggles, there were frequent triumphs, and a record of success in business and social life.

At the time of his death he had published the Investigator for more than fifty years, during which time he had been constantly associated in business with Horace Seaver, the editor, until the death of the latter a year and a half ago.

Mr. Mendum was born in Kennebunk, Me., on July 7, 1811, and therefore lived almost a decade beyond the popular idea of man's term of existence. He spent the years of his minority in his nativ town, availing himself of the little advantages of the town school in his early boyhood, but entering the printing business as an apprentice at the age of fourteen, on the death of his father.

Armed with credentials from his employer as to his "industry, sobriety, and a clever knowledge of the printing trade," he went to Dover, N. H., in his twenty-first year, and obtained work for a short time in the office of the Monitor, a Unitarian paper.

In 1833, however, he returned to his nativ town, and found occasional employment in the various offices there; but as the chances of regular work at remunerativ prices were not promising, he came to Boston, imbued with the idea, gathered from his Christian parents, who were Universalists, of saving what he could and paying as he went. Here his work was in a job printing-office, in a stereotype foundry, and upon daily newspapers.

In the summer of 1833 a young friend urged him to go and hear Abner Kneeland, the prominent Freethinker of that day, but for a long time young Mendum refused, because he was afraid of being led astray from religion. The "delusions of Infidelity" were abhorrent to him, and he feared to listen to them because of the possible result upon his mind. But when "Fr. Kneeland" had been prosecuted for blasphemy, Josiah's friend showed him how inconsistent it was to condemn a man for his religious opinions, and to refuse to hear or read his lectures, and even when he was prosecuted for publishing his opinions, to condemn him unheard.

The next Sunday evening the two friends went to hear Mr. Kneeland lecture on "The Treatment of Criminals," in which the argument was that the members of this class were creatures of circumstances, and should be restrained instead of punished.

Mr. Mendum did not suddenly embrace all of Mr. Kneeland's ideas, but he went often to hear him, formed a friendship for him, became acquainted with many of his people, and found them pure of life, well meaning, and kind in feeling.

From this point investigation was rapid and persistent; and so thoroughly was Mr. Mendum convinced of what he believed to be the falsity and cruelty of the Christian religion, that when Mr. Kneeland was released from prison the printing of his paper, the Investigator, was turned over to Mr. Mendum, who shortly after became its publisher and proprietor.

In October, 1847, Mr. Mendum married Miss Elizabeth Munn, of New York, a lady of advanced Liberal ideas, which she had absorbed in her intercourse with her friend, Mrs. Ernestine L. Rose, one of the first strong advocates of woman's rights, who is still living, and a persistent pleader for Freethought. Mrs. Mendum died in April, 1872, having given birth to six children, one of whom died in infancy. The others still liv, and the son, Mr. Ernest Mendum, succeeds his father as the publisher of the Investigator.

Mr. Mendum was an Agnostic, with all that the term implies, in regard to man's spiritual being and destiny. He was positiv in his antagonism to theology and Christianity. He fought all forms of what he deemed superstition with persistency and bravery. In all this he had the respect of all who knew him well, because of his lack of cant and hypocrisy, and his thoroughly pure character.

He held to his belief to the last moment of his life. He did not consider the fact of a future existence proved, but felt ready to meet it if there should be one. On the day of his death, feeling that the end was near, he asked, "Is this death?" and, being told that it was, he quietly awaited the end.

One Christian woman, an acquaintance, once remarked of him to show her dread of his indifference: "He is a bad man, because he is such a good man."

He believed thoroughly in the institutions of marriage and the home, and was thoroughly domestic in his life, although he could see the faults in the organization and customs of society as plainly as he discerned the wrongs of oppression.

He was identified with several of the great reform movements—the antislavery contest, shorter hours for labor, woman suffrage, and particularly the emancipation of the public schools from all sectarian influences. He was thoroughly opposed to our system of so-called protectiv tariff, chiefly for the reason that he believed that free intercourse between nations was a great factor to the progress of civilization.

Because of these progressiv ideas in behalf of humanity he was closely allied at different periods with many of the celebrated men and women of America, although he did not agree with all their ideas. Among these friends were Robert G. Ingersoll, Horace Seaver, Elizur Wright, Parker Pillsbury, William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Mary A. Livermore, Susan B. Anthony, Ernestine L. Rose, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Frances Wright, and others equally well known.

One of these evinced his friendship and sympathy in the following dispatch on the day of the funeral—although, on account of a misdirection, it did not reach its destination until this afternoon:

NEW YORK, Jan. 13, 1891.

ERNEST MENDUM, Boston: Had I not been in the midst of an important trial, I should hav attended the funeral of your father, one of the noblest and best of men. There is this consolation: He lived a long and useful life. He did good and shed light. Thousands upon thousands do him honor. My heart is with you. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Through Mr. Mendum's suggestion and persistent energy, the Paine Memorial Hall came into existence. He proposed the project first at a convention of Liberals in Philadelphia in 1869, where he urged that in various cities in America there should be a memorial hall to the hero of the American Revolution, where those of advanced thought could hold their meetings. The matter ended with the convention, but Mr. Mendum was not to be deterred. Not long after he reopened the subject in the Investigator, and the result was the building, which afterward Mr. Mendum bought, and which he finally put into the hands of a corporation of which he was the most activ spirit. In this building the Investigator is published.

A friend thus speaks of Mr. Mendum: "To him the doctrins of Christianity were cruel, and he did all that he could to show that there was no power in the universe to be feared, and from this he never wavered nor turned back. He always helped others, and constantly worked for the good of humanity as a whole, with which he had the deepest sympathy. He was no hypocrit, and in reviewing his life the truth is forced upon the mind that character makes creeds contemptible."

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

A Kindly Explanation.

DEAR MR. MACDONALD: I thank you for your courteous and kindly treatment of my recent article. I am quite indifferent as to what others may think of my address at Portsmouth, as it is in print and speaks for itself. "What is writ is writ; would it were worthier!"

I personally do not believe in the supernatural. I use the word super-sensuous instead. If there is anything in the phenomena of Spiritualism, it is natural. I make no distinction between matter and spirit, as I cannot draw the lines between them. I believe with Haeckel, as he quotes from Bruno: "A spirit exists in all things, and nobody is so small but contains a part of the divine substance within itself by which it is animated." I believe with Tyndall: "Besides the phenomena which address the senses, there are laws, principles, and processes which do not address the senses at all, but which can be spiritually discerned." I think the philosophy of Spiritualism is more defensible than that of Materialism; but I do not think much of the so-called "phenomena" of Spiritualism. I greatly respect those scientists and philosophers who believe that they hav received "proof positiv" of the continuity of human life. I hope that it is true. Many good Secularists are Spiritualists. The largest contributor of the American Secular Union in New York is said to believe that he often receives letters from a deceased son.

You do me unintentional injustice in saying that I am opposed to the appointment of an English Secularist as field secretary. So far from this being the fact, that is just what I want to do! My first choice for general field secretary is an "English Secularist" par excellence—Mr. Charles Watts, of Toronto; and the board would hav appointed him weeks ago, and the money would hav been pledged for his support if such unexpected opposition had not broken out. We hav reason to believe that the appointment would be received with great favor, and that the necessary funds would be forthcoming. It is the wish of five out of seven of our board to appoint Mr. Watts to this office, and we hope to convince all of our associates that this is the best course for our board to pursue. R. B. WESTBROOK, Pres. A. S. U.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 17, 1891.

Mr. John E. Remsburg's Plan.

I think Dr. Foote's suggestions in his open letter to Dr. Westbrook respecting Mr. Remsburg's plan are both sensible and practical. The Secular Union cannot afford to be without the activ support of the Freethought lecturers in the field. It is because the Union has not been wise and open handed in this direction that it has not accomplished greater results heretofore. It will not better the matter to send out one lecturer commissioned by the Secular Union to work for it. Dr. Foote fears that such an effort will result in creating jealousies among the lecturers, but I apprehend that it will result in worse—that it will produce hostility to the Union. Why? Simply because this one special agent "commissioned" by the Secular Union will be doing precisely the same kind of work that each and all the other lecturers are doing, namely, lecturing and organizing Secular Unions. Why then should one lecturer receive reward from the public and all others get nothing? I see very plainly that the special agent will do the Secular Union a damage. What is now wanted is a coöperation of the Secular Union with the regular soldiers now in the lecture field. These workers hav a hard time, and hav all they can do to gain a meager support. They cannot afford to work for the Secular Union or anything else without some remuneration. They are too poorly paid for their services and can assume no additional work without pay. If the Secular Union will devise Liberal measures, it may hopefully call upon the Liberals of the country for a generous support.

Oakland, Cal., Box 109. W. S. BELL.

Moses Harman's Peril.

[The following letter was received by Dr. Foote, Jr., a few days since. It tells where Mr. Harman is and where he is likely to be soon.]

DEAR FRIEND FOOTE: Yesterday I sent a brief telegram to you stating that Phillips had sentenced me to one year in the penitentiary for mailing the O'Neill letter. The decision was rendered at the federal building in Topeka at 1 P.M. yesterday. The reading occupied about forty or forty-five minutes. No chance was given me to put in a word of objection. I was not asked if I had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against me, and acting on advice of counsel, I did not demand the customary right of prisoners in that regard. I am still at liberty on my own recognizance, pending proceedings looking toward appeal to Caldwell's court. These may occupy a week or ten days; then, if appeal is not granted, I suppose there will be no help, no alternativ, but to Lansing prison I must go.

MOSES HARMAN.

When the Truth Was Best.

The divorce between our practical and theoretical morals has landed us in such a pass that, if a man tell the truth when it would appear that a lie would better serve his purpose, he is not believed. An interesting illustration of this statement is to be found in an anecdote which, when a youth, I communicated to a small local newspaper (Annan Observer). The less apology is required for introducing the anecdote here from the fact that it has intrinsic interest, as it relates to Robert Burns; has not, as far as I am aware, been incorporated into any of his biographies; and is assuredly authentic.*

Some time after Burns's settlement in the farm of Ellisland, which he entered at Whit-Sunday, 1788, a Highlandman of the name of Donald Macrae lived on the estate of Blackwood, the birthplace of no mean littérateur, Allan Cunningham. The thatch house in which the Celtic Donald Macrae had taken up his abode was situated near what is now the Auldgirth railway station. Ostensibly, Donald supported himself, his better-half, and one or two young Macraes, by the vocation of rural laborer. But, in good sooth, he had almost the same proud contempt for a plow that Rob Roy had for the shuttle of the Sassenach. He was seen out in the fields so seldom that the whole neighborhood surmised that the worthy Celt had more to do with "worms" and "stills" than with spades and mattocks. This soon became more than a surmise, and a good many hard-fisted men from the plow stilts and brawny-armed Vulcans experienced that the waters of the Nith were a rather cold and insipid beverage, but that they tasted absolutely glorious when dashed in a tankard-can with Highland Donald's whisky. This interesting theory was frequently carried into practice, so that he was pronounced a rare fellow, and a popular benefactor, this Donald Macrae. The rustics grew wonderfully great and wise under the influence of his potent "cogie." Through it Jockie found courage to pop the question to his sun-burnt and amorous Jenny; he grew wise enough to discuss politics and "Willie Pitt," and strong and athletic enough to take his place in the forge, even when it could be most appropriately said:

> Nae mercy then for airn or steel,
> The baney, brawny, ploughman chiel
> Brings hard owre hip, wi' sturdy wheel,
> The big fore-hammer,
> While block and study ring and reel
> Wi' dinsome clamour.

But alake! alake! that bugbear, the gager: Donald and his patrons were most uncomfortable near "to the lug o' the law." There was a gentleman of the name of Graham of Fintry, who had secured the appointment of a certain personage, of the name of Burns, on the board of excise; and, to make matters worse, another gentleman of the name of Miller of Dalswinton had given this same oger—this Ayrshire Burns, the farm of Ellisland at his own terms. The farm was so awfully near to the "still" too! Well really it was too bad of this Miller of Dalswinton. He might be forgiven for all his steamboats and crotchets and vagaries; but, really, locating that dreadful gager so near was altogether too bad. This Burns had already a fame that had preceded him. He was known to be a genius who could recite impromptus and scribble songs. That was all very well—at least, it would hav been all very well in Donald's estimation, if the bard could hav found it convenient to scribble his songs a hundred miles away; but to do so in the proximity of the Highlander's still, and run the likely chance of lighting upon it—as he was a sharp fellow this Burns—was terrible even to think of. The gager-poet had a great bold forehead, and a large dark eye in his head which flashed like fire. Moreover, he had a pair of powerful shoulders, "sturdy bearers" also, and appeared altogether such a man as might be extremely dangerous to interfere with in the execution of his duty—one who would fight for the excise "red-wat shod," however the "clarty barm might stain his laurels." But Donald and those interested in the prosperity of his contraband trade used every precaution to keep the still clear from the interference of Burns.

Now, it so happened that, although this alcoholic Celt could coolly defraud the revenue, he dreaded making any flagrant breach of the moral law. He was a simple, lazy, warm-hearted, and hot-headed Highlandman. Sometimes he was visited by the clergyman of the parish, for whom he entertained the most profound veneration. He of the "sacerdotal stole" might be interested in Donald—I know nothing to the contrary; but one thing appeared pretty obvious—he was deeply interested in the "still."

"Well, Donald, how are you to-day?" said his reverend visitor on one occasion.

"Her nainsel pe unco weel; come in, sur," said Donald.

The minister entered with congratulation and benison to the Highlandman's better-half, and kindly patted the big round heads of all the chubby-cheeked scions of the illustrious house of Macrae.

Donald busied himself in filling a horn-drinking quaich from a keg of most pretentious dimensions, which was secreted in a region of darkness and dust, of smoke and cobwebs, among the kipples of the house. His visitor poured the contents of the horn down his throat, pronouncing the same to be glorious.

"Now, Donald, has that big gentleman up there with the girds any brothers?" he asked, jocularly.

"Ah—oh—pe—maybe," began Macrae, in great embarrassment.

"Now, Donald, just say it out at once," said the minister; "don't be afraid, my good man, that I will betray you to that fellow Burns. I like a drop of the creature too well for that. But I just want to know if you hav any more barrels like that one. You had better not tell a lie about it. Do you remember what I was preaching last Sabbath about Ananias and Saphira?"

"Deed ay, sir! Her nainsel hae hardly pe-winkit since. As you said, truth always tells best. Yes, there pe anither sax kep up on the rafters, sir."

"That's right, Donald, my man; never forget that truth tells best. I will call back some of these days and taste if all the six are as good as that fellow that I hav just been preeing."

"Hon-o-ree; here's Burns! here's Burns!" exclaimed Mrs. Macrae, who had been looking out at the window.

Donald and his visitor glanced out simultaneously, and there sure enough was Burns. He was riding rapidly, and, it being a warm summer day, he was consequently enveloped in the dust of the road; but there was distinguishable through the white cloud, sitting astride a horse, the stalwart and manly form of the gager-poet.

"Preserve us all, what will be done now?" ejaculated the reverend gentleman in great vexation of spirit. "He will recognize me, and be forced to haul me up charged with smuggling and defrauding the revenue."

"Come weal, come dool," said Donald, as he went to the door, "her nainsel will pe telling the truth;" and, as the minister was about to remonstrate against this seemingly imprudent mode of carrying out his own maxim, the king's officer came in sight, and he had just time to withdraw far ben when—

"Well, Donald, anything to-day?" shouted the clear, bold voice of Burns as he drew up opposit the door.

"Yes, Mr. Purns," said Donald naively, "there pe seeven' kegs o' gran untaen-doun speerit up on the joists."

"O, you rascal," said Burns, laughing; "if there had been anything there, you would not hav been so ready to tell me;" and, again placing his feet in the stirrups, from which he had extricated them to dismount, he bade Donald good-day, and rode past.

Thus was our Bard for once deceived, not by a complex and cunning device, but by a remarkable manifestation of downright truth and honesty.

"Truth does tell best!" exclaimed poor, simple Donald, clapping his hands gleefully as he watched Burns riding away till he was out of sight.

His reverence came out of the corner, dusting his breeks and muttering, "Ay, ay, Donald, so truth does tell best; but, to acknowledge the God's truth, it seemed to me only ten minutes ago that, for once, a lie would hav told a good deal better. I was nearly smothered, lying buried in that dark neuk among the peats, and holding my very breath for fear of being caught. I feel queer. Let me hav another wee drap. If I had not preached that sermon about Ananias and his wife, you would hav been caught as clean as a leek. I hav saved you. Let me hav a good cogful of your strongest. It is clear that truth has got so scarce that, when you speak it, nobody believes you. Here's to you, Donald."—Saladin in The Agnostic Journal.

*The incident was related to me by the late James Scott, M.A., of Clarencefield, Annan, a gentleman of ripe scholarship and exceptionally wide reading, and who in his youth was intimate with several persons who had been contemporaries and friends of Burns.

Lectures and Meetings.

MRS. MARGUERITE MOORE, of New York, will lecture in Liberal League Hall, Newark, N. J., on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, January 25th. Subject: "Parnell vs. Gladstone."

SUNDAY, January 25th, Henry Rowley will lecture before the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, on Robert Burns. The speech will occur at Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South Second street, E. D., at 3 P.M.

PROF. CONRAD DIEHL will ask the very pertinent question, "Why Don't You Attend to Your Business?" of the Manhattan Liberal Club, on Friday evening, January 23d, at 8 o'clock P.M. The club gathers at 220 East 15th street. January 30th, Edward King will talk about Thomas Paine.

J. E. REMSBURG is now on his way East. The following is his program for Illinois and Indiana: Highland, Ill., January 21st, 22d, 23d; Litchfield, Ill., 24th, 25th; Strasburg, Ill., 26th; Fairland, Ill., 27th, 28th, 29th; Riverton, Ill., 30th, 31st; Quincy, Ill., February 1st; Macomb, Ill., 2d; Ipavia, Ill., 3d; Yates City, Ill., 4th; Marseilles, Ill., 5th; Rensellaer, Ind., 6th; Goodland, Ind., 7th, 8th; Fort Wayne, Ind., 9th; Muncie, Ind., 10th; Chesterfield, Ind., 11th; Indianapolis, Ind., 12th.

Communications.

Gems Culled from Recent Issues of the Religious Press.

The Christian at Work admits the necessity of erudition in determining biblical inspiration:

So far as the higher criticism inquires with candor, impartiality, and clear-eyed judgment into the authorship, the date of composition, and the various original sources and traditions from which the inspired writers, acting under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, selected the materials of their narratives, it is to be cordially welcomed; for it renders invaluable contributions to sound learning and helps every intelligent student to giv a reason for the hope that is in him. The books of the Bible can stand any amount of investigation, no matter how severe, if only it be fair and just. Infidel researches hav never yet been left in possession of the field, but hav in every case, without exception, been more than overmatched by the deeper and broader researches of Christian critics.

That is to say, if John L. Sullivan will allow me to bind his arms behind him so that his fearful "right" can do me no harm, I hereby challenge him to fight, and I am willing to wager considerable that he can not "knock me out."

So long as the guidance of the "Holy Spirit" is admitted and writers are dubbed "inspired," criticism is called "higher" and a help to "sound learning." But if it goes to the foundation of biblical traditions and finds them of the earth earthy, then they are classified as Infidel researches, and "hav been answered years ago."

As man is an integral part of existing matter, it is an impossibility for him to be inspired by anything except that which may or has come through his vision of nature or through living evolvements of eternal matter.

To say that a god or gods exist out of the domain of matter and are not subject to its changes, is a contradiction of the universality of matter and cannot find a moment's lodgment in a reflectiv mind.

The "inspiration" which the church claims for its old writers is a *super*natural one. The term is a contradiction in itself.

Superior to nature! Not a tangible thread of evidence has come down through the centuries of recorded history upon which to hang the slightest doubt that nature is the Alpha and Omega of the boundless universe.

The "deep and broad researches of Christian critics" after truth may be likened to the lazy dreamer who builds airy castles, magnificent walks, prancing steeds, and all the show and glitter of munificent wealth, with but a dime in his possession. The wealth is his to get, the truth is theirs to learn.

Last week at Omaha, Neb., there was on exhibition a picture by Bouguereau, a French artist, valued at $18,000. A young man deemed some of the figures immodest and threw a chair at it, making two large rents. He claimed that Jesus Christ would hav thus acted had he seen the picture. However, he found himself in prison as the result of his vandal act. But he is not a solitary instance of people who think they act in a Christian way when they violently oppose what they deem wrong. The most violent, vituperativ defenders of what they consider truth generally excuse themselvs in the name of Christ. But as he said to his disciples, so they might be told—"Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of."

This is a case of misdirected inspirations, and it was quite unfortunate for the young man that his "vandal act" was not performed within the precincts of a religious Christian community, for then it would hav protected him from arrest and found biblical warrant for his violent opposition to and destruction of the painting, for Jesus Christ went to the extent of ordering the taking of human life because some refused to hav him reign over them. See Luke xix, 27: "But those mine enemies which would not that I should reign over them, bring hither and slay them before me."

The young man was right in claiming that Jesus Christ would hav done just as he did, for certainly if Jesus Christ would murder men for objecting to his authority, he would hav made short work of an objectionable picture.

The Independent says of women and the conference:

What, then, it may be asked, is to be the practical outcome of this attempt to open the way for women to sit in the general conference? The outcome will be, we think, to emphasize the claims of women to seats in the law-making body of the church. The more these claims are examined, the more just and righteous they will appear. The question has not been fairly discussed. A great deal has been done to enlist the prejudices of conservativ people against the women; but these prejudices will in time disappear. The spirit of the church is a spirit of progress, and the present defeat will only be a temporary defeat. The question is bound to come up again, and when it does come up again the sentiment in its favor will be overwhelming. It will be carried just as lay representation was carried. That was defeated the first time, but adopted the second time.

As a matter of right, as a matter of policy, such recognition of women in church conferences is undoubtedly due, for it is a fact that two-thirds of the activ members and contributors to church treasuries are women. Take the women away and the preachers would be looking for useful employment and might eventually produce something of value to the world. If the church knows its material interest (and it has long been suspected of knowing it too well), it will admit the women at once.

Why should not women make laws for both church and state?

If they did not show better aptitude for it than their liege lords hav exhibited, they should be allowed the privilege of quickly choosing between electrocution and hanging.

Laws are generally made for the especial benefit of lawyers and the direct robbing of unfortunate clients. Their titles are very misleading. "An act for the relief of John Smith, who was crippled in the discharge of his duty as a deputy sheriff," simply means that the lawyer who pushes the claim gets the lion's share of it in fees and expenses. An act to improve by grading and paving certain sections of the town is a job put up by contractors, legislators, and lawyers to rob the people and fill their own purses. This is civil law.

Ecclesiastical laws differ from civil laws in this: The African in the civil woodpile and the negro sojourning in the ecclesiastical fence for ulterior purposes are both conspicuously present, but they aim for different results.

The civil law deals with persons and property; ecclesiastical law for the most part with beliefs and creeds. The first enslaves the body, the second imprisons the mind.

Now, an ordinary wife in good health, however insignificant in physique, can easily work both of these restrictions on an unsuspecting husband, and before he knows it, he is an ordinary private in the rear ranks and his wife the commander-in-chief of all the forces in and out of sight. The church can ill afford to lose the matchless strategy, the quiet advance, the intuitiv knowledge of men and their methods, possessed by women, and should open wide its legal doors to welcome an ally who has been and is the main prop in upholding their fast-decaying superstition.

The Churchman believes in General Booth's scheme haltingly.

We believe a fair trial will be more instructiv than a thousand dissertations on the subject, and we hold that £1,000,000 sterling would be a small sum to expend in such an experiment. We sincerely hope the money will be forthcoming, but, as we said some weeks ago, we greatly fear it will not.

This is a colossal scheme to relieve the pressing necessities of the multitudes whose ancestors, not belonging to the "Lord's anointed," were left landless when royal thieves appropriated the English domain. What but the power of the church and its unnerving superstition keeps back the resistless force which could be created by the demands of organized millions for simple justice? The crafty molders of public opinion, the subservient tools of despotic bigotry, the press, the bar, the pulpit, hav their hands full in keeping down the fearful rumbling of a social earthquake which is approaching nearer every day. Why in the name of natural justice should men—strong-bearded men in the full possession of manly strength, eager to work and thousands of acres of land lying idle and unused—be made beggars dependent upon the caprice of a debauched and effeminate aristocracy? And then to hav it doled out to them in the name of Christianity and charity!

The Evangelist utters its warnings against excessiv immigration:

This country will not be submerged and its social, political, and religious institutions destroyed because it has had no monitions of danger. It will be because those monitions hav been unheeded. There is no reason why the great republic should be made the dumping-ground for the refuse of the Old World.

This a truly Christian sentiment, uttered in loving response to the cry for succor that comes from our brothers in other lands. Poor, miserable men that dare scarce lift their eyes for fear of rebuke from their superiors at home, seeking more liberty and a better chance for themselvs here in this great republic—avaunt! return to your living death in your priest-ridden country. We, too, hav a priesthood, and the Evangelist voices its condemnation of you. We are afraid of you; our country is small and you will submerge it; you hav base designs on our social, political, and religious institutions; they are at present beautifully intertwined; so closely are they identified that hav been taken for triplets. Virtue, goodness, and honesty, are all they are made of; they know no guile, they are as pure as the driven snow; and oh! we fear that you hav smut on your hands and that you might take up the triplets to examin them and soil them with your plebeian hands, and that would destroy them and submerge our country.

Now, do go away like good men, and starve and die in your own country.

The Catholic News does not believe in the New England type of doctrinal evolution:

A work on the religious changes of New England would be a most interesting study. Belief has varied like a weathercock; nothing has been persistent except arrogant self-assertion and an ineradicable hatred of the church of God. Change as it may, New England always claims to be exclusivly and solely right, and expects the rest of the country to bow to her dictates.

The unvarying monotony of repeating the same litany and prayers over and over again is well presented in the following verse:

> God of the priest! thine anointed flatter,
> Bow, crawl, kneel, in Greek and Latin chatter
> Their servil mouthings, o'er and o'er again.
> Art thou not tired of the dull refrain?

Any change from the dull stupidity of unchanging forms of superstitious worship must be a relief to the devotee. Harmless innovations will not be tolerated by the Catholic church, which regards as sacred all the ancient traditions of its early fathers. Transubstantiation is still a Catholic tenet, and a belief in it is a necessary requisit for absolution. Certainly a more easily proved fraud could hardly be devised for placement in a religious creed, and yet we hav yet to hear of one Catholic who has had the hardihood to submit the communion bread (after its alleged change into the veritable body of Christ) to a chemist for analysis. The priests, however, tell tales of the horrible consequences which overtook a few impious wretches who took the bread away for that purpose, but who were never permitted by God to carry out their wicked design. It looks like a hopeless task to reach the reasoning faculties of such priest-ridden people, and to root out the inborn superstition fostered by early training that has made them pliant tools in the hands of crafty priests. Yet it will be done.

The falsehood and the mockery of it, revealed by the activ interference of the priests in secular affairs in Ireland, the unveiling of the sham pretense of solicitude for the people's interests by the expulsion of Dr. McGlynn for espousing their cause, these, and many other acts of the authorities of the church, hav raised some doubts, at least in the minds of some Catholics, that the infallibility of the pope is an open question. But let the Protestant church remember, however much it may inveigh against the Catholic church, it is the mother church, and differs but little from the Protestant, and while they are condemning its creed let them look into their own, and in both find how long historical fictions survive.

WM. ALLEN SMITH.

A Sarcastic Indian.

The Chicago Tribune having advised the killing of a thousand or so of the ghost-dancing Indians to quell the present trouble, one "Masse-Hadjo," an Indian of the Quapaw mission, writes that paper as follows: "You say, if the United States army would kill a thousand or so of the dancing Indians there would be no more trouble. I judge by the above language you are a Christian and are disposed to do all in your power to advance the cause of Christ. You are doubtless a worshiper of the white man's savior, but are unwilling that the Indians shall hav a messiah of their own. The Indians hav never taken kindly to the Christian religion as preached and practiced by the whites. Do you know why this is the case? Because the good father of all has given us a better religion—a religion that is all good and no bad, a religion that is adapted to our wants. You say if we are good, obey the Ten Commandments, and never sin any more, we may be permitted eventually to sit upon a white rock and sing praises to God forevermore and look down upon our heathen fathers, mothers, brothers, and sisters who are howling in hell. It will not do. The code of morals as practiced by the white race will not compare with the morals of the Indians. We pay no lawyers or preachers, but we hav not one-tenth part of the crime you do. If our messiah does come we shall not try to force you into our belief. We will never burn innocent women at the stake or pull men to pieces with horses because they refuse to join in our ghost dances. Your white people had a messiah, and if your history is to be believed, nearly every nation has had one. You had twelve apostles; we hav only eleven, and some of those are already in the military guard-house. We hav also a Virgin Mary and she is in the guard-house. You are anxious to get hold of our messiah so you can put him in irons. This you may do—in fact you may crucify him as you did the other one, but you cannot convert the Indians to the Christian religion until you contaminate them with the blood of the white man. The white man's heaven is repulsiv to the Indian nature; and if the white man's hell suits you, why you keep it. I think there will be white rogues enough to fill it. Hoping that our messiah will come soon and prove all that his prophets hav proclaimed him. I remain your most obedient."

SILENT and amazed even when a little boy,
I remember I heard the preacher every Sunday put
God in his statements,
As contending against some being or influence.
—Walt Whitman.

New Publications.

Unless otherwise specified, all publications noticed here can be had of THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, at the prices named.

Mrs. M. A. Freeman has begun the publication of a monthly paper called Chicago Liberal at 25 cents per year. It is little but hopes to grow.

E. C. Walker's Fair Play has put on the magazine form, and will appear monthly from 718 Fourth street, Sioux City, Iowa. One dollar per year.

The Freidenker Publishing Co., 470 East Water street, Milwaukee, Wis., send us the "Amerikanischer Turner-Kalender," a yearly publication selling for 25 cents. Our German readers will all want it, as it is a large and good quarter's worth.

The Popular Science Monthly for February will contain the conclusion of Dr. Andrew D. White's paper from "Babel to Comparativ Philology," also that of Professor Huxley's discussion of the "Aryan Question and Prehistoric Man." Price, 50 cents.

The Freethinkers' Magazine for January is enlarged to sixty-four pages. A fine portrait of Moses Harmon constitutes the frontispiece and there is an editorial sketch of his life. Some of the contents are "The Ship and the Barnacles," by M. J. Hull; "The Church and The Sabbath," by Franklin Steiner; "Betrayed," a poem by Voltairine de Cleyre. and much other valuable matter. Price 20 cents.

All that can be known or argued on the question of the identity of Junius as Thomas Paine will be found in W. H. Burr's pamphlet, "Thomas Paine: Was he Junius?" printed by the Freethought Publishing Co., 838 Howard street, San Francisco, Cal. The title-page is adorned with a big picture of Paine, copied from the portrait in Independence Hall, Philadelphia. Mr. Burr contends that Paine was Junius, and that he also wrote the Declaration of Independence. The pamphlet sells for 10 cents.

"Was Christ a Buddhist?" is the subject of an article in the January Arena, by Dr. Felix L. Oswald. Another good paper is by Hamlin Garland, "A New Declaration of Rights." This issue also contains a symposium on Helen Gardener's new book, "Is This Your Son, My Lord?" the writers in which are M. D. Conway, J. R. Buchanan, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Donn Piatt, and Robert C. Adams. With the exception of Mr. Piatt, who is a Roman Catholic, the opinions are favorable to the book. The price of the Arena is 50 cents per number.

Mr. Benj. R. Tucker, of Boston, has published the first English translation of Count Tolstoi's latest work, "The Fruits of Culture." This book, like the "Kreutzer Sonata," has never been published in Russia. It is, so the advertisment states, a two-fold satire on "culture" and Spiritualism. The follies of the so-called "cultured" classes are exhibited in a humorous picture of their fashions, "fads," and mental freaks, and the story hinges upon the effect of modern Spiritualism on an aristocratic family in Russia. It is in dialog form, well translated by George Schunam. Price, $1.

The Twentieth Century Publishing Company has reissued Hugo Genone's "Inquirendo Island," which was first printed by G. P. Putnam's Sons. It is alleged by the author to be a "satire," and deals with religion, though "not wanting," says Mr. Genone, "in a spirit of full reverence for the essential truths of God's universe." The writer thinks that "between the pestilential marshes of superstition and the cold glaciers of reason lies the fertil table-land of common sense," but he fails to show why there is no common sense in reason. Mr. Pentecost has "not for years enjoyed reading a book any more than 'Inquirendo Island.'" We envy the ease with which Mr. Pentecost is entertained, for the book is not a work of genius. The plan upon which it is constructed is old, and the working out is not particularly thrilling or skilful. Its "attack upon religion" is not very strong, nor will it greatly tend "to elevate the simple truths of Christianity," for historically Christianity has no truths and ethically it is pretty much all wrong. Price 50 cents in paper covers and $1 in cloth.

The Rev. R S. McArthur. of this city, is a Baptist, and that sect holds very sensible views of the relations of church and state. In his Thanksgiving sermon Mr. McArthur elaborated some of these views, and by request has published the discourse in pamphlet form under the title, "Three Essentials to National Perpetuity and Power." These essentials are: A Free Ballot, A Free School, A Free Church. The pamphlet is mainly a criticism of the Roman church and an exposure of its methods and purposes in this country. Dr. McArthur regards ignorance as the enemy of the free ballot, and would disfranchise those who cannot read. The free school he sees disabled by the Roman church, and that chapter of the pamphlet is a fierce excoriation of the Catholic hierarchy, with quotations of sentiments inimical to our schools from various Catholic authorities, from the pope to the little bishops of this country. The chapter on a free church deals with the Wisconsin trouble over the Bennett law, showing that the Roman church "made a determined effort as a church to control the state for its own purposes," and he criticises the German Lutherans for following in the same line. Mr. McArthur urges a complete separation of church and state, and says the Christians "hav no right to tax Atheists for the support of Christian churches." This subject is already upon us, and is to be "one of the live subjects for discussion for the next five years." He urges his church to "meet it in the spirit of an enlightened patriotism, and in a common love for what is right." We sincerely hope his church will heed his plea, and that all other churches might follow after. The pamphlet is valuable for the facts and quotations given, and coming from a Christian minister may be useful in winning adherents to the Nine Demands of Liberalism among religious people. The writer is to be congratulated at least upon his courage in speaking so boldly upon a subject that few ministers dare to touch for fear of unpleasant consequences, for Rome has a long arm and strikes hard. The price of the pamphlet is 10 cents.

Daniel G. Brinton, A.M., M.D., professor of ethnology at the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia, and of many other things, who is also one of the committee on the Manual of Morals to be published by the American Secular Union, has written a book called "Races and Peoples," which is published by N. D. C. Hodges, 47 Lafayette place. The volume is composed of lectures delivered at the academy last year, since written out, and references added in footnotes will enable the student to pursue his readings on any point in ethnography in which he may be interested. That Dr. Brinton is devoted to pure science, allowing no sentiment to bias him in dealing with the subject under consideration, may be seen from this statement in the second chapter, on "The Beginnings and Subdivisions of Races." He says to his pupils: "In the rapid survey contained in the previous lectures you hav seen in how many points the races differ. No wonder that the question has often been seriously mooted by scientific men, Could they all hav been derived from one common ancestral stock? This is the old debate about 'the unity of the human race,' still surviving under the more learned terms of monogenism or polygenism.

"As to that other question, whether man came into being as such by a gradual development, evolution, or transformation from some lower mammal, this may be regarded as the only hypothesis now known to science, and must, therefore, be accepted, at least provisionally, until some better is proposed. It is the only theory consistent with man's place in the zoölogical world, and is borne out by numerous anatomical analogies, which hav been referred to in my first lecture.

"In fact, we are driven to it by necessity. No other origin of species than by transformation of earlier forms has been suggested, even by those who reject it. I do not speak of specific creation, for that supposition does not belong to science, but to an obscurant mysticism, which is the negativ of all true knowledge."

The book is designed and used as a text-book for colleges, and with professors imparting such instruction at one end of the colleges, it matters little what the chaplains say at the chapel end. "Races and Peoples" covers a great deal of ground, is written clearly and unambiguously, and though its author differs with Herbert Spencer and Sir John Lubbock in some things—especially as to the universality of the religious feeling—it is a volume that every studious Freethinker will desire to possess. It is full of information. Price, $1.75.

Of our recent review of his work, "The Religion of Man and the Ethics of Science," Hudson Tuttle writes: "It is not usual for an author to reply to a review. His book is placed before the public free for all to praise or condemn. The audience to which THE TRUTH SEEKER appeals is one in which I feel more than passing interest, and desire to be rightly represented to. It is true that it is largely composed of the Materialistic element, and for that very reason should be fair and unprejudiced. If a reviewer has any obligations either to the author or his readers, it is not to misrepresent the premises of the author. I do not suppose for a moment that THE TRUTH SEEKER critic knowingly misrepresents the positions taken by the 'Religion of Man,' yet he is wide of truth and accuracy when he says: 'This may not be the author's fault, for anyone hampered with a God to reconcile with actual things, and a varied assortment of supernatural theories like reincarnation, must of necessity depart from strict scientific methods, and assume a good deal that he can hav no hope of proving.' Had the critic read the book as carefully as the 'Scientific Method' demands, he would hav seen that a whole section is devoted to disproving reincarnation, and as for God, the first chapter gives the progressiv rise and fall of the gods, until nothing remains but the unknown realm beyond the expression of force through and by matter, which by its infinity is beyond the comprehension of the human mind, The passage I hav quoted is at utter variance with the character of the book, the purpose of which is on the same line as that of THE TRUTH SEEKER. Methods may differ, but the object is the same; the liberation from the thralldom of ignorance, bigotry, and superstition. If not asking too great a favor, your publication of the following passages from the preface will show how little the work is 'hampered with a God,' or 'supernatural theories:' 'The religion of the Gods comes from without, as a foreign system, to be received by the servil devotee; the religion of man originates from within, and is a normal growth of humanity. While all past ages hav been employed in the study and illustration of the former system, not until recent times has the latter received attention. Those who hav in the past dared advocate the rights of man hav been mercilessly crucified. The field is new; broad as the universe; profound as the depths of space; as high as heaven. In its exploration, the old charts are worthless, the old guides are blind leaders of the blind, and not a step can be taken until the chains of superstition and bigotry are cast aside. Not alone the manger-born, but every child is a divine child, and the immaculate mother is repeated in every human mother. The divine and immortal spirit of man, and its inherent tendency to perfect its powers and realize its ideals, is the foundation of the new system. Let us endeavor, on entering this field, to leave superstition and educational bias as worn-out garments by the way, and without revengeful anger at the spectacle of the innumerable host of martyrs to Freethought swinging in gibbet-chains, tortured at the stake, or entombed in horrible dungeons along its border, direct our steps to the highlands of Freethought. The way is new; the obstacles are many; the reward, not the praise of the multitude. It offers no atoning sacrifice; no scapegoat for sin. It demands an upright, manly, self-reliant life, complete in the harmonious activity of all faculties and endowments. To assist and encourage those who are weary of the theological views of nature and man, and are restless under the light of knowledge, is the object of the following pages'"

Tolerance.

He is not great whose work or word,
By fiery indignation stirred,
Would judge all evil hearts that liv
With no relenting palliativ.

Nor he that by too neat a skill
Would axiomate the human will,
And bid our fettered minds declare
Responsibility a snare.

Nor he that seems, for those who list,
An icy intellectualist,
Cramping morality's wide span
In bounds utilitarian.

Nor he that mercy's form would dress
In tinseled robes of mawkishness,
And giv to crimes of worst intent
His facil tears for nutriment.

Nor he (nay, least of those alive!)
Who speaks of sin's eternal gyve,
And deems that by some dark decree
Man is what man must ever be! . . .

But he is great who fronts all shame,
And dares to name it by its name,
Yet feels his breast burn warm for those
Hard-struggling in temptation's throes!

Who rates at full a dreary worth
The bitter despotisms of birth,
Where tyrant ignorance controls
Her loyal tens or thousand souls!

Who sees how vice her venom wreaks
On the frail babe before it speaks,
And how heredity enslaves
Like ghostly hands that reach from graves!

Who well has pored on life, and thence
Deduced sublime experience;
Who pities error since he must,
Though still his pity leaves him just!

Whom random ire, whom sudden ruth,
Can turn not from the vital truth,
Nor once retard, nor once advance
His calm and regal tolerance!

Ah, such as he should walk afar
With Plato in some purer star,
And mark the grand Greek muse and dream
In some new deathless academe!

—Edgar Fawcett in Youth's Companion.

Nirvana.

Winds and wild waves in headlong huge commotion
Scud, dark with tempest, o'er the Atlantic's breast;
While underneath, few fathoms deep in ocean,
Lie peace and rest.

Storms in mid-air, the rack before them sweeping,
Hurry and hiss, like furies hate-possessed;
While, over all, white cloudlets pure are sleeping,
In peace, in rest.

Heart, oh, wild heart! why in the storm-world raging
Flit'st thou thus midway, passion's slave and jest,
When, all so near, above, below, unchanging,
Nirvana is, and rest?

—Buddhist Ray.

Odds and Ends.

EX-POUNDER: "What is the moral of the story of Lot's wife?" Little Willie: "Please, sir, it teaches that we hadn't better be too fresh."—Once a Week.

BABIES, they tell us, come from heaven, and in heaven we are also told that there is no marrying nor giving in marriage. "It's aw muddle," as Stephen Blackpool would say.

"How did you come to marry John?" "Well, he bothered me so that finally I told him I'd take him on trial." "But you've lived with him ever since?" "Yes; but he hasn't ceased to be a trial yet."

MAMMA: "If you are so naughty, Dorothy, no one will love you." Dorothy: "Yes, mamma; I know some one who will love me, and the badder I am the more he loves me." Mamma: "Why, Dorothy, whom do you mean?" Dorothy: "The devil."

"UNCLE JACK," said Robbie, as he critically examined a rabbit his uncle had just given him, "didn't you say the Lord made rabbits?" "Guess I did, Robbie," was the reply. "Well, don't you think," reflectivly added the boy, "that when he got as far as the tail he sorter tired of his job?"

THE parson's tones were full and deep,
And soon his hearers were asleep;
Each head was nodding on each breast
In gentle, peaceful Sunday rest,
And noticing each nodding head,
The poor, nearsighted parson said,
"I'm very glad that you agree
In everything so well with me."

UNCLE CHARLES: "And are you going to buy me something for my birthday?" Millie: "Yeth thir, I gueth tho." Uncle Charles: "Please, may I know?" Millie: "Yeth thir. I'm going to buy my dear Uncle Charles a mithionary." Uncle Charles: "A missionary! I'm no cannibal." Millie: "No. But grandma thays you're a puffect heathen."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

KING of the Cannibal islands (to his typewriter): "My dear, just take this note for the Board of Missions, in New York." Typewriter: "I am ready, O noble Tumtum." King: "Gentlemen: The last lot of missionaries you sent me were old and tough and stringy. If you cannot do better—got that?—if you cannot do better I shall hav to make a change. and—get—my—missionaries—elsewhere. Yours truly, Tumtum, Rex."—Life.

"I THINK," said the cannibal jester to the three epicures who had assisted him in consuming a reverend tourist, "I think we should put the deceased down on our minute-book as 'Ruling Passion.' He was so strong in death, you know." "Strong in death?' inquiringly remarked King Fo Fum, picking his teeth with a splinter of bone. "Yes," returned the jester, complacently patting his paunch. "Hasn't it taken four of us to hold him?"

ONE Sunday, during high mass at twelve, in the chapel of the little village of Glengariff, three ladies of the Protestant faith were obliged to take shelter from one of those heavy summer showers which so frequently occur in the south of Ireland. The officiating priest, knowing who they were, and wishing to appear respectful to them, stooped down to his attendant, or clerk, who was on his knees, and whispered to him: "Three chairs for the Protestant ladies." The clerk, being an ignorant man, mistook the words, stood up and shouted to the congregation: "Three cheers for the Protestant ladies!" which the congregation immediately took up, and gave three hearty cheers, while the clergyman actually stood dumfounded.

A MISSIONARY POEM.

There were some little Zulus once
Who hadn't any clothes,
Who hadn't any stockings warm
To hide their little toes.

And in a distant country a
Society for good,
Decided that the heathen should
Hav raiment and hav food.

So they sent a pious preacher
Out to the Zulu wild,
To teach to them the word of God
As to a little child.

So he got his books together,
And on a sultry day
He started to the country of
The Zulus, far away.

And when the preacher landed there
The Zulus danced around,
They took from him his clothes and books
And flung him to the ground.

They built of wood a roaring fire,
They placed him in a pot,
In vain he preached the word of God,
Those Zulus heeded not.

And the men who sent him out from hom
Think he's doing heathen good,
And those Zulus hav received him and
Are filled with Christian food.

—Savannah News.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - JANUARY 24, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ARTICLE ENTITLED

"SHOUTIN' JOE,"

By WATSON HESTON.

WITH PICTURES BY HIMSELF.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

A GREAT many complaints hav reached us lately of delay and non-delivery of THE TRUTH SEEKER to subscribers. With the exception of the two holiday weeks the paper was deposited in the post-office each Wednesday, and the fault lies with the post-office department. By Thursday morning every paper should be on its way to its owner, and should reach a very large portion of the country by Saturday night. The New York post-office suffers from inadequate facilities, but there is no reason why thirty-eight hours should be required to reach Brooklyn—a mile; three days to reach Philadelphia—ninety miles; and four days to reach Newark—fifteen miles, as has sometimes been the case. If Mr. Wanamaker will allow his censorship of the mails to lapse into innocuous desuetude and attend to the business part of his duties, his administration of the postal department would find greater favor in the eyes of those who pay him, his employers, the people.

The Breckinridge Sunday Rest Bill.

Hearty thanks are due to those of our readers who hav complied with our request to write to their members of Congress protesting against the enactment of the Breckinridge Sunday Rest bill. The letters hav been of great service to the cause of liberty. More ought to hav written, and we hope will write, though we can now say on the authority of a Congressman whose letter is herewith printed that the bill is practically killed so far as this Congress is concerned. But we want the Liberals to get into the habit of taking an activ part in our politics when Liberalism is affected. They are sufficiently numerous, by well-directed effort, to hav much influence on subjects where personal interests are not concerned, and the more prominent a Liberal is in his own community the greater will be his influence on his representativ, either state or national. If only the thousands of THE TRUTH SEEKER readers wrote letters it would make our statesmen open their eyes, and if the readers of the other Freethought journals join in those statesmen will wonder what has happened.

Here is the Congressman's letter alluded to. It is from Wm. T. Ellis, of the Second district of Kentucky, written to Dr. C. H. Drayne, one of his constituents at Sebree:

"HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVS U. S., WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 7, 1891.

"DR. C. H. DRAYNE, Sebree, Ky., My Dear Sir: In answer to your favor of the 1st inst., I can assure you quite positivly that you need suffer no uneasiness whatever in regard to the Sunday Rest bill. That bill is before my committee, and before the sub-committee of which I am a member, and months ago I caused it to be pigeon-holed, where it will safely remain, I think, as long as I am a member of that committee. I believe with you that the legislation is unwise, undemocratic, and un-American, and I would oppose it to the bitter end should it ever get out of the committee and into the House, which I hav no idea it will.

"I agree with you that Congress had as well leave the committee who hav charge of the World's Fair and the people generally to determin the day on which it should be opened. Congress has nothing to do with it, and I do not believe will hav. Your truly, W. T. ELLIS."

This agrees with the views of Representativ Wilson of West Virginia, as expressed to Mr. Louis Wolfes, of Martinsburg, but Mr. Ellis speaks with more authority, as being in a position to enforce his views. We congratulate Mr. Ellis upon the good news he is able to send, and also upon the manliness of his position and the frankness with which he proclaims it to the world.

The Exhibitors at the World's Fair.

According to a Western journal, there is another force making for righteousness in the matter of opening the World's Fair on Sundays. The American Association of Exhibitors was organized during a recent exposition in Boston, and its membership includes manufacturers of nearly every commodity to be placed on exhibition in Chicago, and one of their objects is to control the Chicago Exposition. Recently the president of the Association, Benjamin L. Allen, of Boston, has been traveling over the country, adding new members to the Association, and getting them to adopt iron-clad rules which will govern the Fair.

Regarding Sunday opening of the Chicago Fair one of the activ members of the Association in Philadelphia said to a reporter: "Just think what our organization means. In Chicago we will number nearly four thousand of the exhibitors, banded together with iron-clad regulations. Now, suppose the directors and President Palmer, and the rest of them, say the Fair shan't be open on Sunday. Well, in case we think differently, we will order the doors open every day in the week. If General Palmer and his men refuse, up go our thousands of exhibits into boxes, and back they go to our factories and warerooms. If we disagree with the directors about the price of admission, or anything else, in fact, we win or close up the Fair by removing our exhibits. The exhibits make the Fair. Take away our exhibits, and who will come to Chicago just to look at General Palmer and his friends?"

With the exhibitors, the people of Chicago, the railroads, and the public sentiment of the country against them, the Sabbatarians are going to hav pretty hard work closing the gates of that Fair on Sundays.

The Literature Fund.

When the Kentuckians were preparing a new constitution to be submitted to the people of their state in place of the old, Mr. S. P. Herron and THE TRUTH SEEKER took considerable interest in the proceedings so far as the proposed Amendments related to taxation and Sunday laws. Mr. Herron sent us the names of as many of the delegates as he could gather, and we sent them what literature and arguments we hav in favor of impartial taxation, and no religious Sunday laws. The pamphlets were not wasted, for one of the amendments proposed to the taxation clause included the churches on the tax-list. The three biggest men in the convention—Governor Buckner, ex-Governor Knott, and Judge Hines—favored the amendment, and thus the question was brought prominently before the people. Its final fate we hav been unable to learn; but we are satisfied, at this period, to hav got it even discussed. And it only cost the Liberals of the country $13.94; for THE TRUTH SEEKER furnished the documents at cost and did the work for nothing.

Now the Liberals of Texas are besieging their legislature for a repeal of the Sunday laws, and our Literature Fund enables us to lend them a helping hand. We hav obtained a list of the Texas statesmen, and every one of them will be presented with a copy of Remsburg's "Sabbath Breaking," to enable him to vote upon the question intelligently. We trust they will read it carefully—the pious ones prayerfully. If they do this they can come to but one conclusion: that Sunday laws hav no "divine" authority; that religious laws are unconstitutional and un-American; that those laws stand to-day on the statute books only as relics from a bigoted past; and that they are maintained by a few interested individuals by means of religious prejudice.

The cost to the Literature Fund of this missionary work is $17.89; and it leaves us $35 97 to do the same thing over again when a useful opportunity occurs. Drop a dollar into this Fund when you hav it to spare, and thus help enlighten our lawmakers. The usefulness of the Fund is not limited. By it last year the Liberals exercised an influence in forming the organic laws of all the new states in the Northwest, and Kentucky, and we can reach the lawmakers of Texas as easily as we could our own legislature at Albany.

"In Order to Reform" the Jury System.

A political journal of this city which seems to hate reform of all sorts talks sarcastically of the effort made last year by some people who do believe in reform to so amend the system of collecting juries that more efficient service would be secured. It is charged that responsible men will not attend court, preferring to be fined, as the fines are in nearly all cases remitted upon presenting excuses, or if not remitted are never collected. Accordingly, the legislature of 1889, at the demand of the reformers, and upon the report of a special committee of the senate, appointed for the purpose, so amended the Code of Civil Procedure that the corporation counsel shall every three months furnish a detailed list to the mayor of the number of fines collected from those who failed to do jury duty, together with the reason why any fine previously imposed upon a delinquent should be remitted. The report for the last three months shows:

Fines imposed on delinquents	$63,150
Fines remitted by judges	60,880
Fines not remitted	2,270
Fines actually collected	None

And the journal which dislikes reform exultingly says: "In order to reform it is quite necessary to know what you are about."

With this remark we agree wholly. But we do not agree with the explanation of the jury difficulty by the same authority, which explanation is this: "Such is the activ business life of New York, so numerous are the demands upon the time and thought of its more energetic and industrious men, so earnest and intense is the competition in all branches of trade, and so many are the cares and concerns of the public-spirited, that it is extremely difficult to secure efficient jurors." It is true that business men dislike a jury call, and will go to almost extreme lengths to avoid performing the duty. Special exemptions for some professions are obtained by law, such as editors and reporters of daily papers, doctors, ministers, lawyers, firemen, election inspectors, and so on. In this way the list of eligible men is greatly reduced, and those called offer various excuses to the judges, and when these are not successful, "stand in" with the clerks of the courts.

But this unwillingness to serve does not spring entirely from lack of time. It proceeds in at least one-half the cases from a dislike of the methods of the courts, natural indignation at the lack of courtesy with which jurors are treated, a distaste for the superstitious mummery of oath-taking on a greasy Bible, administered by bulldozing clerks, and the utter inadequacy of the remuneration in all of the courts in the city but one.

The present custom of obtaining a jury is very old, and was very good in ancient days when neighbors met at the call of the court ready to do their duty to the community, and the judges and officers of the court considered them entitled to equal consideration with themselvs. The system is still good for sparsely settled districts. But for this city it is not good. A hundred men are ordered to attend as a panel for a Part of the Supreme Court, for instance. Sixty per cent of them are on hand, and when court opens find themselvs ranged round a room like a lot of travelers in a waiting-room. The clerk calls their names, to which they answer; he puts them into line as a drover punches cattle through a steamer's gangway, and with about the same courtesy, and after they hav kissed a dirty Bible or called down heaven's vengeance upon perjurers by uplifted hand, or by persistent maintenance of their rights taken the affirmation without any religious twaddle, they get before the judge, who listens to their excuses. Being ordered to remain, they again take seats around the room and wait for further orders. A dozen go in the jury-box. The remainder sit still, waiting, perhaps two hours, perhaps all day, when they can go home, to return the next morning to again wait the orders of the court. This program is repeated with no variation for two weeks.

It is tiresome and disagreeable, and it is made unnecessarily so by the incivility of the attendants, who, "clothed in a little brief authority," treat the jurors as they would treat a drove of cattle, order them around, thrust a dirty book at them, and finally, if they are the arbitrators of a case, pen them up in a small, filthy room there to remain until the eleven men made obstinate by their treatment shall hav been convinced by the one who is always right. For their services they receive the magnificent sum of one dollar per case decided by them—a case which they may hav considered for two or three days! It is not at all surprising that they resort to all sorts of means to escape such treatment. The judges of the courts are usually gentlemen, but they pay little attention to the panel; the clerks of the courts sometimes answer jurors' questions courteously; the attendants are, in this city at least, almost without exception, men without one gentlemanly instinct. They are the ward heelers, the political workers for district bosses, and their positions are their rewards. They are generally Irishmen, Roman Catholics, servants of Tammany Hall and Archbishop Corrigan.

What is needed to reform the jury system is to reform the courts, beginning in some instances with the judges, and certainly extending the reform to all the subordinates. Ireland, run by Rome, ought to be kicked out of New York's government. Ninety per cent of the office-holders are Roman Catholics, dirty, ignorant, bigoted, with no conception of the people's rights, tyrannical in spirit, domineering in manner, and stupid in the performance of their duties. That is what New York has obtained in handing over the municipal government to the political wing of the Roman hierarchy.

"In order to reform it is quite necessary to know what you are about;" and this observation applies to the Sun quite as patly as to those well-meaning persons whom that journal sneers at as "professional reformers." The Sun is largely responsible for turning New York over to Tammany Hall to be plundered for the benefit of its ward heelers.

Only Another Instance.

That what we hav said in the foregoing of the influence of Romanism in our city's government is true is very timely evidenced by the necessary action of one of our police captains. Months ago we told how the Catholic "Sisters" of various orders besieged our city hall on the pay-days of the Irish Catholic clerical force, and now it comes out that so objectionable hav their visits become to a police station on such occasions that the captain has been forced to exclude them. This is the more peculiar as Tammany Hall has for a long time had a virtual monopoly of the appointment of policemen, with the natural result that nearly all the officers are Irish Roman Catholics.

The precinct in which the trouble occurred is the twentieth, with the station-house in West 37th street. Located in the precinct is the Asylum of St. Vincent de Paul, in charge of the Sisters of Mary, under the immediate supervision of Priest Septier. For several years, on each monthly pay-day, a sister has visited the station with a regularity and persistency acquired only by long drilling as a human automaton. In this way several hundred dollars a year hav been gathered from the officers stationed there. Recently Captain Cross succeeded Captain Murphy in command of the precinct, and one of the first things he did was to order the custom discontinued, an order which the sisters dislike. To a reporter, when questioned, Captain Cross gave his reasons. "A conscientious sense of my duty," he said, "alone prompted me to deny the Sister's request. I do not consider that these visits are just the proper thing. It is not a universal custom throughout the police department. I hav only served in one precinct before I came here where the custom was permitted. My experience as a roundsman and sergeant has taught me that the great majority of policemen are opposed to having these Sisters visit the station-houses on pay-days. The policemen's pay is not too large. Most of them hav need for every cent which they receive. This looks to them like coerciv charity. For this reason, as a captain true to the interests of the men under my command, I do not think I hav any right to allow the presence of the Sisters on these occasions. What the policemen do with their money after they leave the station-house is no concern of mine. If they wish they can giv the Sister their entire month's pay and I will find no fault."

To the same reporter the Sisters were typically meek and Jesuitical, for the very good reason, we suppose, that they expect to hav Captain Cross's order overruled when the top-sawyers of the Roman church bring their "influence" to bear on the high police officials of Mulberry street. The Sister in charge said: "We hav been going to the station-house for years. No captain, until Captain Cross took command, ever objected to our presence. Captain Cross is a good man, but he is opposed to our visits. We respect his honesty, and believe that his sense of duty only prompts his action in the matter. We want the World to say nothing but kindly words about Captain Cross. We will pray for him and will hope that in a little while he will see his way clear to rescinding his order. Some of our friends hav seen Captain Cross, and we hav some hopes that the good man will not long deprive us of the privilege of visiting the station-house on pay-day. We know we hav the sympathy of most of the policemen, because they hav come here and assured us that they regret the captain's order."

The Roman Catholic church has elevated the avocations of legal thieving and religious begging up to high art. If the pope ever moves over here what a joyous time he will hav! He will find his mansions all prepared for him.

J. P. Mendum.

A long career of usefulness and devotion to liberty of thought and life has closed with the death of Josiah Paine Mendum, the publisher of the Investigator.

Mr. Mendum was a careful, frugal, painstaking man; thoroughly devoted to his splendid cause, and untiring in caring for his paper. He was not an orator nor writer; speaking and writing he left to Horace Seaver to do; but to the no less necessary part of the work, the practical side, he was as devoted as was Mr. Seaver to the public part, and performed it no less capably. By his good judgment and frugality the Investigator was solidly established and Mr. Mendum himself became possessed of a comfortable competence which his talented son will undoubtedly husband and increase.

Mr. Mendum lived longer than most men can, and his death became his life. His brain outlived his body, and he was as clear mentally two hours before the last as ever. He passed away easily, with his affairs in order, and fearing nothing. Few men hav prepared for the long journey so tranquilly as the oldest Freethought publisher in the United States.

It is a cause of congratulation that his son can fill his place in the counting-room of the Investigator, and that in the editorial chair of Horace Seaver sits a man so able and so devoted to Liberalism as L. K. Washburn. The paper will not cease to be an influence for good, nor to delight its thousands of friends each week as it has done for over fifty years. To Mr. Mendum's family we offer sympathy, and to those who are to continue his work the assurance of good will and cordial appreciation.

Elsewhere in this issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER will be found an account of the funeral, quiet and unostentatious as was Mr. Mendum's life, and a brief sketch of his life work and personal history.

The Bible and Protestantism in Peru.

The manner in which the Catholic church controls countries so unfortunate as to be peopled by its members is again made plain by a recent incident in Peru. We are not particularly in favor of widely distributing the obscene book known as the Bible, but so long as the Romish church permits the Douay version of it to occasionally find its way to the layman we do not see why the King James translation should be prohibited. This, however, is not permitted in Peru, neither is the Protestant sect allowed to do missionary work among the benighted citizens of that republic.

An Italian, Penzotti by name, the agent of some Bible society in this city, went to Peru several months ago and applied to the legation of the United States for information as to the possibility of selling or disposing of Protestant Bibles in Peru and of making arguments in favor of that creed. The American minister, after consulting with the government of Peru, replied to Penzotti that Peru, although a republic, held the Catholic religion as paramount, and would not nor could not by its constitution allow public worship by any other. Foreigners residing in Peru who are not Catholics are allowed to hav their places of worship, but retired from the street, without bells or any manifestation of publicity, and Penzotti was informed that a legal objection was entertained against his disposing of Protestant Bibles among the people and to his advocating publicly the principles of that faith. Nevertheless he proceeded to commit these two forbidden acts, and in consequence has been in prison since July last. At the request of the American society he represents the United States legation here was ordered by the department of state to inquire into the matter and if possible use its good offices. The minister of foreign affairs replied to such a request that if Penzotti would giv a bond to leave the country by the first steamer and not to return his liberty would be granted. His friends could not or would not giv the security required and he is still in durance.

Whenever the Roman Catholic church has had control of a country there has been no liberty of thought within its borders. In this she seems to be the one thing which is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, and those countries wherein she is gaining ground should govern themselvs accordingly.

Editorial Notes.

THE cable brought news last Saturday that Charles Bradlaugh is again seriously ill. Mr. Bradlaugh has not had very vigorous health since his sickness of last year, but has reported himself in the National Reformer as steadily gaining. The present relapse is probably due to overwork.

THE Independent appears to be growing backward. This sentence would seem familiar if found in a Roman Catholic journal, substituting the word church for Bible: "Liberty of thought in the church does not mean liberty to deny the doctrin of the Bible with impunity, and without correctiv disciplin. It is always in order to contend earnestly 'for the faith which was once delivered unto the saints.' Human speculations destructiv of that faith are simply heresies that contradict the word of God. Away with them!" And then burn the heretics, does our contemporary mean?

A WELCOME relief has come to the country in the resolve of the New Hampshire Republicans to allow Henry W. Blair to stay at home instead of representing them in the United States Senate. Dr. J. H. Gallinger has been chosen in his place by the Republican caucus for the term beginning next March, and whether the Republicans elect their man or not—which they will—Blair is out of the way. It is said on good authority that Blair's fanaticism for religious legislation is one of the chief causes of the loss of his grip on the New Hampshire Republicans. If so, it is a righteous retribution.

THE citizens of this town are burning with indignation over the dirty condition of our streets, but it never seems to occur to them to send a petition to Mr. Pecci, professional pope, at Rome. He is the fellow to blame. He runs Archbishop Corrigan; that's sure. Archbishop Corrigan runs the Tammany Hall politicians; that's also sure. The Tammany Hall politicians run the street-cleaning department; that is likewise sure. And the streets are not clean; that's indisputable. A petition to Rome, as aforesaid, might hav a good effect, and we trust the people of New York will consider the propriety of sending it.

BISHOP FREPPEL, at a reception which he gave on the first day of this year to the clergy of the diocese of Angers, made an address to his guests in which he declared that the campaign of irreligious Frenchmen against the church, although now less glaringly conducted, was still continued. The form of the government, he said, had nothing to do with the matter. He was of the conviction that Catholics must organize, not as a party, but under the direction of their bishops, and "wrest from Freemasons and Freethinkers the rights and liberties of which they hav been deprived." It occurs to us that France has in the past had quite enough of Catholic rule, and that she will do well to continue the irreligious Freemasons and Freethinkers in power.

Liberty in Literature.

We hav ready the Testimonial to Walt Whitman by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll, a magnificently got-up pamphlet of nearly eighty pages, with portrait of Walt Whitman and the author. It is printed on extra heavy calendered paper, in large type, with beautiful paper cover. The text has been revised by Colonel Ingersoll, and the extracts from Whitman's poems by the poet himself. It is the only authorized and authentic print of the Testimonial. Price, 25 cents.

Letters from Friends.

FORESTVILLE, N. Y., Dec. 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Find inclosed $5 for THE TRUTH SEEKER and the picture book. I am getting old and cannot work much, but I can look at the pictures and amuse myself. I shall always take your paper as long as I can see to read. I am almost eighty now, and see to read and write without glasses. A happy New Year to Editor Eugene and mother, and all friends of THE TRUTH SEEKER.

MRS. J. W. BENNETT.

VINELAND, N. J., Dec. 23, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $6, for which please continue THE TRUTH SEEKER and send me a copy of "The Godly Women of the Bible," by An Ungodly Woman of the Nineteenth Century, and a copy of Voltaire's "Pocket Theology," and a TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for 1891. I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER from its first number, and now in my eighty-first year like it as well as ever. J. S. SHEPARD.

PEDEE, WIS., Jan. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL for 1891. I hav been a subscriber to the noble D. M. Bennett's paper from the start, and it seems we cannot get along without it. Keep hewing away at that old tower Babel! No fable! Keep Peck pecking it to them! Light is looming up in the far-away distance. Happy New Year to all the truth seekers in the world. But the happiest, everlasting, self-sharpening New Year to THE TRUTH SEEKER staff, from Heston and S. H. Wixon down to the TRUTH SEEKER devil.

Yours, DAN BROBST.

GRANTFORK, ILL., Dec. 16, E M. 290.

MR. EDITOR: I must say the outlook for our cause is becoming brighter and brighter. Humanity is evolving in our favor faster and faster. I can see the time in the future when Christianity and churchianity will melt away like a chunk of ice in a hot summer day. The straws are all pointing that way, and the ball is rolling faster and faster. There is no check to it. People are beginning to think for themselvs, and education is clearing the wool off their eyes. But we must at all hazards maintain our free school and keep the Bible and prayers out of it. ANTON J. KRAFT.

LIBERAL, MO., Jan. 3, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find check for $3 for the ship of state another year. May the grand old ship sail until the bray of the ecclesiastic is heard no more in the land, and free thought, free press, free speech, perfect humanity and justice, will reign supreme. Then and not until then will the swords be beat into pruning-hooks and the spears into plowshares, and war be known no more. I wonder if the Christians would like to send a few more brainless preachers to Dakota to teach the Sioux that his redeemer cometh.

P. J. UMBEITE.

DES MOINES, IA., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: With my prospects of a lecture course in the town where I am, I feel justified in sending Wm. Hart, of Kirksville, Mo., $1 for two of his books. This gentleman is a thoroughgoing Liberal. The sad affliction which has overtaken him will call forth the aid of liberal-minded people. I wish my own circumstances permitted me to giv a hundredfold more help. I know Brother Hart to be one of the most earnest Liberals in the land, of untiring industry. Years ago I was made a welcome guest by himself and excellent wife on many occasions. I will often think of the sufferer, made doubly sorrowful in his great calamity, which robs him of not only property, but a faithful son.

W. F. JAMIESON.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Dec. 29, 1890

MR. EDITOR: I hav been an interested reader of your paper for several months, and hav enjoyed it much. I hav tried to propagate its ideas by loaning my paper to those who did not take it, and by reading extracts from it before the Woman's Suffrage Club of this city, of which I am secretary. Most of the members of our club are Freethinkers, but a few still are held in bondage by the church, but even they are beginning to feel that they must look outside for help, being convinced that that institution will never allow them a privilege or a right that it can deprive them of. Hoping that the dawn of liberty for all mankind may soon brighten into day, I remain,

Most respectfully yours, MRS. E A. LAWRENCE.

HAMBURG, IA., Jan. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: On January 1st and 2d, Charles Watts, of Toronto, Can., lectured in the Opera House in this city to a large and intelligent audience of about three hundred, notwithstanding the revivals in progress at some of the churches. His subjects he handled and vindicated in a masterly manner, and in a way to enlarge the mind and understanding of many that were present. Had we more large-hearted, liberal-minded, educated, and sincere gentlemen like Mr. Watts giving their vast learning to the advancement of Truth, whatever that may be, the world would become better in a short time and bigotry and superstition would soon be things of the past. We hope to hav him giv another and a longer course of lectures here early in the spring. Let me hear from Liberals in this county and near here, that we may make arrangements for him. Please write. Address,

E. T. DALBEY, Box 314.

BRONSON, FLA., Jan. 3, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $2.50 for the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" in cloth. I claim the honor of being the first one to suggest the publication of such a book, to be placed upon the center-table of every Liberal as a silent preacher to all his visitors and guests. And I am satisfied that it will prove to be the most satisfactory investment for propaganda that has yet been made. I liv in a priest-ridden community, and as a matter of course the people are ignorant and superstitious, and an unbeliever is deemed a dangerous man and is boycotted. He cannot be elected to any office of honor or trust. I had the misfortune to be nominated to represent the county in the next legislature, but no sooner was it known that I was an Agnostic than pulpit and press combined to defeat me. I had never seen God or lived in any other world, hence was not qualified to legislate in this. When the old "India-rubber God" is retired people will become more sensible and reasonable.

O. RICHARDSON.

NATIONAL SOLDIERS' HOME, WIS., Jan. 3, A.S. 291.

MR. EDITOR: As probably no one else will do it, I thought it best to write and send you a suitable epitaph for the late lamented Mr. Bull:

Alas for mighty Sitting Bull,
The doctor * of the Sioux!
From Jordan's stormy banks he'll pull
While another wears his shioux.
If the papers tell the tale in full
Anent this bloody nioux,
The doctor was a vicious bull,
A match for ancient Jioux.

Send the ANNUAL for Anno Scientia 291.

Yours truly, NELSON HUNT.

* Medicin man.

CRESCO, IA., Jan. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am a constant reader of the National Tribune, Washington, D. C. I like to be reminded of the experiences and exploits of my former comrades. The only disagreeable, and, I must say, not only useless, but really depraving, feature of the otherwise good paper is its religious department under the head of "Sunday Meditations." The space disfigured with this priestly humbug might be used to better purpose, viz, to the diffusion of practical knowledge. Of course the latter is also attended to by such able writers as Prof. Felix L. Oswald, Dr. J. H. Porter, and a few others. But I fear that the practical communications from these friends of humanity do not make, as they should, a deeper impression upon the reading community than do the mind-degenerating "Sunday Meditations." I hope, for the sake of mental progress, that my fears may not be realized.

I do wish that Colonel Ingersoll would keep in line with his fellow-soldiers by means of an occasional article in "the National Tribune. His letters would be appreciated by all sensible veterans, and would certainly exert an influence for the good of mankind. F. L. DAUBERSMITH.

CLEVELAND, O., Jan. 8, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose you clippings from the Cleveland papers in regard to a red-hot heresy trial, that of Rev. Mr. McQueary, which is progressing here. The trial is very important, as it is a landmark in the nineteenth century and I understand that the gentlemen expect to definitly and finally determin the truth of the immaculate conception. I hav always tried to be a consistent Agnostic, but I am tainted with the belief that in a legal sense Christ certainly was the son of God. It is a maxim of the law, Qui facit per alium facit per se, "Who doeth by another doeth by himself." Now, the Apocrypha to the New Testament shows that Mary was a vestal virgin in a Jewish temple. A priest, a vicar or agent of God, seduced her. The priest induced Joseph to marry her. When Jo discovered her condition he demurred, or kicked. Mr. Priest said, "It's all right, Jo; the kid is conceived of the Holy Ghost." Jo, being a devout man, believed all the priest told him. If it be true that the priest was the agent of God, then on the above-cited maxim Christ was truly the son of God. Qui facit per alium facit per sent. L. A. WILLSON.

HARMONY, IND., Jan. 5, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please allow me a little space in your grand old TRUTH SEEKER? Will some good friend of THE TRUTH SEEKER or anyone else please explain to me the difference between faith and animal desire? I am nearly seventy-five years old; perhaps that is the reason I do not know. A neighbor of mine, a believer in that old obscene book, said that all animated nature came from one common pair, and that God made them when he made Adam and Eve, and scattered them all over the world. I asked him how it came that every continent produces different kinds? He said we ought not to ask such questions. That was all he said—exit. My opinion is that the conditions of the continents produce everything without the aid of a God or gods.

I went to hear a funeral sermon preached by a United Brethren sky-pilot, and in the course of his remarks he said Ged never makes any mistake. Now, the thought occurred to me that perhaps the things that he made out of nothing were pretty good, but when he came to making things out of material he made some most egregious mistakes, I think. For instance, look at the poisonous reptils, bumblebees, hornets, wasps, yellow-jackets, etc., to bite and sting the people when they go out together blackberrying. Bah!

J. M.

GREEN HILL, O., Jan. 6, E.M. 291.

MR. EDITOR: I am somewhat disabled in my shoulders and arms from muscular rheumatism—brought on from three years' service in the army, as I suppose—but from the way I feel to-night I think that I shall be able to celebrate my centennial here on earth, unless I should be like one of my illustrious predecessors of Bible notoriety, and if such should be my luck I want the good old TRUTH SEEKER right along. I cannot do without it. It is like a sweet, wee wife. Nothing but death or extreme poverty could cause us to separate.

There is, all about here, a scarcity of money that will last until the bankers see fit to disgorge. We poor devils are at their mercy. It is a question with me whether it would not protect us better to hav our banking system revised and not the tariff, and let the people get the money direct from the government as they need it, the same as they do postage stamps. I think it would for everyone be better, "the laird, the cotter, and the tenant."

I am still working away with my petition; got about one hundred and fifty names; hav five others out at work; when I get them in I will send them to you. With my best wishes for you and the TRUTH SEEKER family everywhere, I remain,

Yours for individual liberty, ENOCH WICKERSHAM.

NEW HAVEN, O., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I wish you to acknowledge for me through the columns of your valuable paper the receipt of the paper called Freethought and several copies of THE TRUTH SEEKER; for which I wish to say that I am truly thankful to the unknown senders of the same. I shall be grateful for any reading-matter that any kind Liberal brother may feel disposed to send me, and I will try to do all the good for Freethought with it I can. I was a soldier in the late war; hav heart disease and hav not been able to do a day's work for over three years, and get but a small pension. And as I hav nothing but my day labor to depend on for my support, I hav but little to spend for reading-matter. There are not many Liberals in New Haven. We hav one old pioneer here who has been here for fifty years, and was a Freethinker when I came here thirty-two years ago. He is sound on Freethought. We like THE TRUTH SEEKER very much and hope we may be able to take it right along. I will endeavor to do so if I hav to cut the corners closer on something else.

Will you please giv me the address of R. G. Ingersoll, also of Elmina D. Slenker? THOS. S. CHARITY.

[A letter to Col. R. G. Ingersoll, New York, N. Y., will reach that gentleman. Mrs. Slenker's address is Snowville, Va.—ED. T. S.]

SOUTH CHELMSFORD, MASS., Jan. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Brother Infidels, how are you? The pictures on both sides of the paper are the reason I renew. I shall stay by you till the end of time, on the pictures. Everybody will look at them, and often read a little. I came into a red-hot hardshell Baptist community, and my old mother and brother, that pray over the vicious, were horror-struck at THE TRUTH SEEKER. But of course the pictures had to be looked at, and mother said after a while that there was some good in it. When I first got back from the land of the Dakotas there was a grand rally made on my belief. They all prayed, and the professional revivalist buttonholed me after every prayer-meeting. I could not get in a word edgeways. At last he broke out with, "What Infidel can say, tomorrow will be a bright, clear day and no sun? Not one iota of nature's laws can be changed." "Do you believe that story about Joshua commanding the sun and moon to stand still and they obeying him?" I asked him. Of course he flew the track. "Don't you let folks know round here that you are an Infidel! No one will respect or trust you!" But they do. I buy wood and hay and parties take my word for the weight and measure, and I do not hav to pay till it is gone. But complaint has been made to the selectmen about my working Sundays; and as three men hav been fined $10 and costs for getting in hay Sunday, I am careful to stand in with the powers that be. Keep your shirt on.

JOHN C. BLAISDELL.

BLOOMDALE, O., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: It is frequently cast up to me that my belief may be good to liv by, but could not be good to die by. Now, I want to put on record one case that came under my immediate experience where a young man lived and died firm and unflinching in the belief inculcated by THE TRUTH SEEKER and the reading of scientific and Materialistic literature. He first came under my notice about a year ago, when he came from Kansas and the West to his home here, having spent some time in the West, during which time he had imbibed the rudiments of his late belief by some reading of Lucifer. I soon became acquainted with him, and found him to be a lover of science, a man of progressiv ideas, and withal of an amiable disposition. It gave me pleasure to hand him what books and pamphlets, etc., I had in my possession to read. I should hav mentioned that last winter he was attacked by the grip, which left a lung trouble fast on him, under which he labored along until a few days ago, with occasional revivals and relapses. I understood from him that his father was much displeased at the course he had taken in the matter of belief, and I often thought I could discern a certain frigid turn in his father's behavior toward me; consequently I called on him but once during his illness.

However, his brother told me that he was thoroughly resigned to the inevitable; that he discouraged a certain old lady who called on him and wished to talk about Jesus, etc, by waving his hand (his voice was gone) and whispering to her that it gave him pleasure to hav people call, but he did not wish to hear anything of that sort. And when a minister called who wished to pray with him, he told him it was unnecessary, and when the dominie further asked if he did not wish his silent prayer he still told him it was quite useless, as he had no misgivings concerning what was to come. And when, on the point of dissolution, he was asked what his thoughts were about a future life, he said he did not believe in any; felt satisfied to go; that all must go, and as this was his turn he wou'd go without regret. His brother assured me that he never saw a man go with so much resignation and calmness, and I was quite overtaken with emotion on hearing how resolute in his belief was Jesse Fremont McKee. Personally I consider him to hav been a most estimable person, and look on him and his example with much pride. C. C. GERMANN.

LIMESTONE, ILL., Dec. 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find twenty-five cents for the "Bible Inquirer," by A. Jacobson. I want to lend it to a preacher of the Free Methodist church. The Protestants, Baptists, and Free Methodists are after me hot and heavy, trying to convert me. And while the two former are content with sending me books of their faith, the latter made an effort to convert me last Friday night at their church. The preacher and one Holy Joe, who is always crying, came over to speak to me after church was over. The preacher shook hands with me and the old man asked me if I had salvation. I said, "No." "Well, you ought to hav." I smiled and shook my head. "Don't you feel the need of the Lord?" the preacher said. I said, "No, sir, I don't." The Holy Joe told me to "holler." I said I would not. Then the preacher asked me if I was ready to die. "Yes, sir, quite ready." "Are you willing to die now?" "Yes, now, right here." "Are you not afraid to meet God?" "No, sir; I am not afraid to meet God or the other party." "But God says you are unprepared." "Whom did he say that to?" "He says it in his word. Come again," said the preacher. I said I would and he went toward the door. I followed and caught up with him there and invited him to our debate. He said perhaps he would be busy there—at the church, I mean—but I told him it would be on Saturday night, so I don't know whether he will come or not.

I went to church again last night, and when they had their scripture lesson I repeated verses 17 and 18 of the last chapter of St. Mark. He looked hard at me but said nothing. Then he preached a sermon in which Infidels were alluded to. Which I suppose meant me. All the holy ones eyed me—to see what a Liberal looked like, I suppose. He seems to be sensible when he speaks on other subjects. And no doubt his faith is sensible to the holy ones, but I am not holy.

I would like to correspond with some Liberals near my own age, eighteen, as there are not many here, and those who are are almost without exception afraid to say so. I will close, with three cheers for Freethought.

ANNA M. MOHN.

739 Lincoln ave., Peoria, Ill., care of J. H. Fischer.

NORSE, TEX., Dec. 15, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Samuel P. Putnam, of San Francisco, Cal., delivered a lecture on "The Demands of Liberalism and Freethought," at Norse, on Dec. 8, 1890, to a good and appreciativ audience. Mr. Putnam is a forcible, logical, and eloquent speaker. He showed the absolute justice and the immediate and pressing necessity of the Demands of Liberalism; and that these Demands are founded upon the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence. That in order to carry out the Declaration of Independence, and to keep "church and state forever separate," the Demands of Liberalism must be heeded, and be enacted into law to make this indeed a free country and this nation a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The speaker presented the principles of Liberalism, and showed that Liberalism accepted all that is good and true, and cherished everything that has an elevating tendency; and rejected all that is bad and everything that has a degrading tendency. He contrasted the principles of Liberalism with the dogmas of Christianity, and showed the superiority of the first over the latter. That Liberalism and Christianity were diametrically opposit and opposed to each other. That the one represented enlightenment, advancement, science, and evolution; the other, ignorance, superstition, stagnation, and degradation. That in order to become a good Christian one must not only accept and believe without evidence, but acknowledge him or her self totally depraved, and must believe in the atonement, the trinity, and other equally absurd doctrins and tenets of the church—a church instituted by a crafty priesthood for their own individual benefit and glory, and for the subjugation and enslavement of mankind to a superstitious religion and tyrannical and despotic government. On the other hand, Liberalism means liberality in everything. It means intelligent liberty, the widest liberty of thought and expression—"intellectual hospitality." It teaches a true and natural morality. It takes its stand for all that is good and true, and all that is grand and sublime. That a true Liberal not only accepts all truth, whenever or wherever discovered, and from whatever source it may emanate, but has a vivid perception of all that is grand and sublime, and a feeling of veneration for anything really sacred.

Liberalism takes its stand for a new and true education, in which all man's faculties and capabilities shall be unfolded and cultivated. Man's whole being shall receive proper cultivation; his physical, mental, and moral powers shall receive simultaneous and proper education and culture. His head, heart, and hand are to receive proper education.

Liberalism takes its stand for universal mental liberty, for universal moral liberty, and for universal industrial liberty. It inculcates a true morality and high aspirations. It teaches science and progress, and takes its stand for the advancement and elevation of the human race.

Mr. Putnam gave an excellent lecture on the Bible on Dec. 9, 1890.

I had the pleasure of accompanying Mr. S. P. Putnam to Walnut, where he delivered two lectures to good audiences. His lectures were well received and pronounced excellent, both at Norse and Walnut. We enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Dean and family while at Walnut. From Walnut we went to Clifton, where Mr. Putnam delivered his lecture on "Evolution vs. Christianity" to a good audience, on Dec. 12, 1890. T. THEO. COLWICK.

TRENTON, TEX., Jan. 7, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Samuel P. Putnam was with us December 26th and 27th, and gave three of his truly grand lectures. The hearts of all Liberals were made to leap with joy as he proclaimed to the world the glad truths of the here and the now, and with an eloquence equaled only by the grandeur of the truth he announced. He made no promises of what might be hereafter, but told what might be now and would be if we could only look to this life and strive to make it what others had made it up to the present. We could get no church or school-house—there being no public building—nor any private building, when a retired merchant kindly gave us his vacated storehouse, remarking as he did that the Infidels were the only persons who had come up to a man and paid him up, while the delinquent Christians had forced him out of business. How does that sound in the ears of those who claim all morality and all good? The truth is, it is just the other way—all who claim most do least, and the Christians are the greatest offenders.

When I, in common with the whole audience, listened to the glorious truths proclaimed by Mr. Putnam with his magic eloquence, and were made glad thereby, we looked around and saw absent—whom? The clergy. We could not be surprised at that. But when we saw the teachers of our schools likewise not there, we grew sick at heart and thought, what obstruction to progress is this thing you call religion, keeping the instructors of our children—paid, too, by the state—from hearing the great truths of our latest discoverles in the vast domain of science and morals (and Mr. Putnam spoke of nothing else)! And this when it was not necessary for them or anyone else to believe what he said. Well, I was sick then and I am sick now, in mind, to think and to know such facts, and my children to be educated by such influence to shun the truth of what makes all humanity grander and better! Must I weep over the prospect of my own blood in my children, as did I when I saw an honored Baptist preacher weep when he bid adieu to his son for the last time before his departure for the penitentiary? I do say that the whole system of morals of the church is wrong, and when the efforts of our grand army of Liberal lecturers are not even attended, but systematically lied on and slandered, what can I expect?

But I do not know that I need get too sad, when I think that had that same Mr. Putnam come here and delivered those same lectures ten years ago he would hav stood a good chance to be mobbed. Not so now. He or anyone else can deliver all the lectures, and the only result is, first, ugly looks from orthodox faces—who ever saw any other look?—and next, the Christian lie that is learned from their holy book, the Bible. After all, we, and the whole world, are evolving. Daylight is just peering over the dark horizon of the past, and the resplendent light of man's intellect, with the humanity that must be free, will make the future safe. Then to the comparativly few Liberals scattered over the world—be of good cheer! The sun of humanity is just rising, and who cannot see it? Our free schools, and what is better, the printing-press, form the promised messiah to make men free in mind, more glorious than in the mere freedom of body. DR. W. C. HOLMES.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' HOME, Jan. 10, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I will express a few thoughts on God as a financier; the evolution of man and survival of the fittest. In the opinions of men, those who hav managed their business so as to insure the greatest success and accumulate the greatest capital, hav been regarded as the most talented and the best financiers. And as God made a sad mistake, when he created the devil, who in a short time inaugurated a revolt and has subsequently prosecuted a vigorous opposition, it is my purpose in this article to attempt a brief comparison of the management and success of the old gent and that of his rebellious son. And as it is often asserted that dishonesty is never successful, and that honesty is the best policy, we would keep a close eye to this maxim in order to see which of the combatants must be victorious in the end.

God, after giving this earth to the devil, like many whimsical parents concluded to retract, and accordingly one week planted a small colony in and about Eden. No sooner, however, had his pap taken a leave of absence than the boy crawled into a snake and instigated another revolt in the premises of the new colony, and made his skip. It appears, however, that the old man returned in time to prevent the revolt from becoming fatal only in part of the stock, as Abe seems to hav been a No. 1 legitimate offshoot of Gehova. But his grandson Kane soon dispatched Abe as an intruder, knowing that the devil had the best right in those parts. And although grandad God was very wroth with his son (devil) and his grandson Kane, he allowed Kane to go unpunished, only that he put a mark upon him to prevent others from murdering him (more of a reward, I think). Perhaps grandpap was intimidated by the hostil disposition of his grandson; and it really appears so from the success that the young desperado achieved, in that his grandpap even made him a wife, and blessed him in his business capacities, as it is said he built a city. The example here is a little tough—that God so blessed him for a private murder on account of his jealousy of his brother's popularity. But as the old man has always been faulty in morality this need not excite our wonder.

It appears from all accounts that the devil had a wonderful increasing success over his pap by way of the sons of God marrying the daughters of men, until the old man became disgusted with this mongrel race and concluded to drown the entire herd except Noah and his family. There, however, the old man made a fatal mistake in not providing for the death of his rebellious son, the devil, who was ready for business, it appears, as soon as the shower was over, by inciting good old Noah to get drunk; which, in connection with the indecent conduct of Ham, excited the ire of the old fellow so that he belched forth his curses upon those unborn. Of course these were the children of the devil, and so he inaugurated a scheme to take revenge by building an observatory, or tower of Babel. But the all-wise, all-powerful God got scared, not knowing that it was impossible for man to go past the limits of the world's atmosphere and climb to heaven, and so he could do no better than to confound their language, and scatter them like throwing a bombshell among a flock of geese. It appears to me that they would hav been worse off after they had dispersed than before, for the want of some one to interpret. What a wonderful miracle that was, for so many people to forget their original language and instantaneously to hav another. Whether this punishment was commensurate to the crime they had committed, we are left to conjecture. But as God has always persisted in punishing the innocent for the guilty, the penalty has long since been in excess of the crime. And there has been but little extenuation, and that is obviously in direct opposition to the will of God, and due to the benign influence of the good-natured devil. For of all the ills the human race has been subject to, the diversity of tongues is the most significant. God, being encouraged by this victory, now steals a march upon the devil by going to old Abe and making great promises—not one of which he had the least intention of fulfilling, and which he could and did not. He did, however, succeed in raising a discord in the case of Jake with his father-in-law and his brother Esau, and finally getting Jo sold into Egypt in order that he might hav an excuse for killing a great many of the devilish Egyptians after torturing them as well as his own.

It might be proper here to introduce, as a matter of financial achievement on the part of God, the fact of his deceitfully robbing the Egyptians by borrowing their jewels. Among the many shrewd plans of this master of finance, we must not fail to notice also the ordinance known as circumcision. Decency prevents us itemizing the exact manner in which this memorable rite was performed, which is suggestiv that decency was disregarded by God when a matter of profit was under consideration. It is only necessary to say that, although it was not castration, it was equally barbarous, and disgusting to sensitiv humanity. It appears from all accounts that this was the most successful hit God ever made to distinguish between his and the devil's stock, as we hav no account of it ever being counterfited by the latter. The obvious reason is that the devil possessed too much humanity, which has always proved his besetting sin. Next we follow God from Egypt to Kanaan. But as the history is not only published, but preached, it is useless to giv it in detail. Suffice it to say that God, with his rude artillery—rams' horns, asses' bones, and such like—overthrew all the devil's armed Kanaanites and their walled cities in great triumph.

But though God succeeded so well in thus getting away with the devil, the cunning old adversary would steal into camp in disguise, and in this way persuade God's children that God was not a god, notwithstanding his great deliverances and miracles. And in this way the devil was constantly annoying God and stirring up insurrection, etc.

It is confidently believed, and often affirmed, that had General Mose, Josh, Gid, Jep, Dave, or Sol, acted as generalissimo during the entire warfare, all losses and captivity would hav been averted. But it so happened that this king of kings and Lord of Lords made such a poor selection of commanders of his forces that finally he was compelled by the Romans to send his only son, J. Christ, to deliver his property. However, he proved too timid to continue the war, but by the aid of General John succeeded in inaugurating an enlistment into the army, sealing with a mark of designation called baptism. The devil has been charged (and not unjustly, we believe) with counterfiting this mark, in proof of which is the fact that many turn traitor in an incredibly short time after baptism.

Shortly after the death of General John and J. Christ, Pet and Paul, then Paul and Barny, then Paul and many others, had many dissensions concerning their master's financiering, until it was settled that Pet was boss, as he had showed so much courage in cutting off the servant's ear, denying his master, cursing, etc., etc. Pete also delegated his power and authority to Pope, who then executed his office and prosecuted his wars with greater success than any who had preceded him since the day of Dav, or perhaps Gid or Josh. And for nearly one thousand years the devil was literally chained, while the Spanish Inquisition was built and utilized to God's service. Then there were several attempts made by the devil to revolt, without success, until he secured the services of Mart. From that time God has been suffering from attacks on all sides, and although it has been ascertained that across the waters in every direction are innumerable friends of the devil, and that his children are constantly increasing, and that the devil is much kinder and better to his soldiers than God is to his, yet we find God so devoid of principle as to maintain that he is perfectly good, etc.

Conclusion: The means the devil has been using is not the sword, but reason, steam, electricity, and all that contributes to giv us ease, plenty, and comfort. While evolution has been doing its best to overcome God and improve our condition, can it be properly said that as a matter of fact the fittest has constantly survived? Or does the survival of the fittest only date back to the discovery of America? Can it be that we shall nevermore fall into the hands of the living God? Could we but inaugurate a system of marriage in strict accord with phrenological selection so that every man would be a friend to good, and an enemy of God—be as manly as Ingersoll—we should be beyond the reach of God and hav no further use for priests. The supposed millennium would be here. EX-REV. JOSEPH N. MAXEY.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

" Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Why I Don't Send My Only Child to Sunday-School.

Twelve churches are near where I liv,
Not one of them five miles away.
Though they differ somewhat in their creeds
They are all " the lamb's bride " (so they say);
Should a Freethinker speak his thoughts here,
Where there's so much religious devotion,
He would meet opposition, I fear,
And would stir up an angry commotion.

All my lifetime I've lived near these churches;
Their practices, too, I've long known;
Fifty years I hav been a Freethinker,
Comparativly standing alone,
But never hav I been discouraged,
Though slandered by saints, who backbite;
I hav trusted in science, believing
That justice, in time, will make right.

I am askɘd " why I don't send my daughter
To church, and the Sunday-school, too,
For the sake of her 'moral improvement'—
To learn what she always should do?
Then, she might become a good Christian,
And enjoy, with our church, happy seasons."
Their questions I'll answer with candor
By giving the following reasons.

Superstition makes lasting impressions,
Hammered into the brains of our youth,
And foolish, miraculous stories
They are made to believe are the truth;
Ghosts, witches, and fancy hobgoblins,
Are tales that to children are told;
The infantil minds will believe them,
And do not forget them when old.

The legends and myths of " the ancients "
Were once just as fully believed
As the Bible is now by the Christians,
Not dreaming that they were deceived,
To doubt them was deemed sacrilegious,
Deserving of infinit pain,
And to place our reliance on reason
We were told was both foolish and vain.

They teach little innocent children
That they must believe thus and so,
Else the good God will be very angry,
And will send them where bad people go;
That by nature they're miserable sinners
Without any hope of salvation
Unless they believe the big Bible
That tells us all about the creation.

Creation means something from nothing.
Although it is hard to conceive
How nothing can bring to light something,
Still, we're told, " This is safe to believe."
Such lessons are taught to our children,
Though to them they must seem very odd;
To the child, Santa Claus is as real
As Buddha, Mohammed, or God.

The tale of the snake in the garden,
Persuading our mother to eat
Some fruit that her God had forbidden,
Is a story that's hard to be beat;
Because this unfortunate woman
Was duped in this act—that was planned—
A curse on the race was established,
The whole human race must be damned

Unless some great scheme of redemption
Shall stay the ineffable flood
Of God's wrath, with some plan of salvation
(Since atonement from sin demands blood).
So God himself, born of a woman,
Condescended awhile here to dwell
With his sin-cursed and ungodly children,
Just to rescue a portion from hell.

" Angry Gods, cheating devils, and sinners,"
These pet words our children hear often;
Sunday-schools teach our new life beginners,
Thinking they can their " stony hearts " soften!
What can we expect from our children,
Made to think they are wholly depraved?
They are made to ignore human reason;
Superstition their minds has enslaved.

If they'd teach what they know to my daughter,
And what they don't know, leave that out,
Teach her something on which she may reason,
And not tell her " 'tis sinful to doubt,"
Perhaps I might then be persuaded
To yield to their earnest request,
But we don't want our child's mind degraded,
For our love for her can't be expressed.

So we guess we'll not send daughter Elda
To the Sunday-school, though " they " desire it;
'Twould be "leading our lamb to the slaughter;"
Truth and justice don't seem to require it;
We've no taste for " Old Sooty's " dominion,
For we think we would make a poor show there,
And if Satan makes war up in heaven,
Our folks would prefer not to go there.

Fabius, N. Y. HOMER A. BILLINGS.

Letter from a Trapper.

EDITOR CHILDREN'S CORNER: In the solitude necessary to the occupation of a trapper, I take great pleasure in the perusal of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and am quite interested in the Corner, in which of the date of November 29th is a little piece entitled, "The Intelligence of Toads," which prompts me to write, if sanctioned by the editor, on the cunning of the wily coyota, as called on this coast—the name is borrowed from the Spanish language. East of the Rockies he is called prairie wolf. The animal is of the dog species, though of a uniform color—a mixture of yellow and gray—has a drooping, bushy tail, and carries his head low when traveling. He trusts more to the sense of smell, which is most astonishingly keen, to detect danger, than either to sight or hearing, which are remarkable. To catch this cunning marauder in a steel trap the greatest caution is necessary. First, the trap must be disinfected of all smell, then handled with gloves. If touched with the naked hands the coyota detects it for many days afterward. Different trappers use different methods, but I set traps in gangs—two or more together—placing the bait or scent at some central point, always going on horseback and carrying a canteen of water to sprinkle the ground where I stood while arranging the traps; for as a dog can follow the tracks of his master, so a coyota can detect the tracks of an enemy. In the winter, when food is scarce, coyotas may be caught with bait appealing to the stomach; but in the summer and early fall scent is used appealing to the passions. A few years ago, while trapping in the southern part of the state, I had an opportunity, with the aid of field-glasses, to watch a coyota approach some traps. He was very suspicious, walked several times around them, apparently about ten feet away; would reach with his forefoot as far as he could to paw the bait out or feel for danger; then stopped as though to consider for a moment, turned around and started off in a direct line at right angles to where I was and disappeared in the sagebrush, but soon appeared again with a comrade, both going direct to the traps. They stopped a moment to recon noiter. Soon one stepped forward, as though he thought, I guess it's all right, when, zip! something happened, for one coyota jumped as high as the length of the chain would let him, and the other made a mark across the plains that looked like the blending of coyota and dust, looking back only from a safe distance, as much as to say, "That is just about what I thought."

Some counties giv a bounty for their scalps, for they are very destructiv to sheep, pigs, or poultry. Their hide is worth only fifty cents.

With much joy to the readers of the Corner, I remain, T. J. CONLEY.

Tehama Co., Cal., Dec. 8, E M. 290.

Correspondence.

ELMENDORF, TEX, Jan. 2, 1890.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: I hav never written for the Corner, but I admire the efforts of the boys and girls, and I always read them before anything else. We hav no church here, and I hope we never will. I go to a Catholic school and pray all day, then come home and read THE TRUTH SEEKER. I do not go there for religion, but for a good education, as it is the best school here. The most people here are Liberals. Papa has been taking THE TRUTH SEEKER for three years and he likes it very much. Hoping this will not be thrown in the wastebasket, I remain,

Your Liberal friend, WILLIE SINGER.

["Thrown in the wastebasket!" No, indeed. We are glad to welcome you, Willie. Write again. Tell us all about Elmendorf. Be brave and true, strong in truth, and steadfast in principle.—ED. C. C.]

PASADENA, CAL., Dec. 28, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I read in THE TRUTH SEEKER of the children wanting to hav a paper to themselvs. I think it would be a grand thing. Every time we get THE TRUTH SEEKER I wish there were more letters and stories. I enjoy puzzles, and was very sorry when they were done away with in the Children's Corner.

As you see by the heading, I liv in California. It is very nice and warm here. There is to be a tournament of roses on New Year's day in Pasadena. Prizes are shown in the show-windows, many of them being desirable. There will be a prize given for the finest decorated pony or family carriage The decorations will be floral. Well, as I am taking up space which would otherwise be occupied by letters more worthy of being read, I will close, hoping success to all effort for the Children's Corner.

Yours truly, MARY BEERY.

LEXINGTON, KY., Dec. 17, 1890.

DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS: Father Huntington lectured to us a week ago, and presented a view on God which was anything but theological. He spoke of the almighty as a force which was the source of life and motion of the universe. With regard to the origin of the relation between cause and effect, he said nothing, for he knew that it belongs to the nature of things. The besom which sweeps this principle away would convulse the creation, and bring it back to its original chaos, that is, if such a state of things ever existed.

Religion does not belong to any dignified series in the order of creation, but springs from a fantastic arrangement of materials, fraught with danger to the human mind, as the condition of the Indian at the present period proves conclusivly. This view will, I think, be admitted, when we meet with the assertion, in ancient sacred history, that religion was corrupt, and had no connection with morals, from the time of Joshua to Samuel.

This latter worthy man attempted a reform, which, I presume, caused him to hack to pieces Agag, an Amalekite prince, before the Lord.

Immoral piety is worthy of the contempt of all lovers of order; a safer rule of conduct should be substituted as a humanizer and promoter of all that is good. We want rules so pure that they could never be based on vice. Religion cannot be depended on, for it is generally found in connection with evil.

Father Huntington spoke of the single tax system, but as it will take time to bring it about, a little land should in the mean time be held sacred to the poor, and inducements held out which may lead them to suppose that they are at home in their own country.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union advise in the Union Signal a very strict rule under the Constitution, and the successful turn which Mormon affairs hav taken will also remind us that as long as wise legislation can advance civilization, no violence should be resorted to, especially by Christian people.

ALHAZA.

LONG HILL, CONN., Jan. 6, 1891.

MISS WIXON: My father takes THE TRUTH SEEKER and I read in one of the last numbers about what you termed "The Santa Claus Fiction." I was taught to believe in a Santa Claus, and enjoyed it very much. If you call those falsehoods, I suppose you call fairy tales the same. I agree that those are, but of all stories, I like fairy tales the best. You say, " No child likes a make-believe story." I do fully as well as " truly " ones. I think it is real nice to hav every member of the family receive presents on Christmas day.

ETHEL M. BEARDSLEY.
(Aged thirteen years.)

REMARKS.—Ethel is like very many older folk who enjoy believing myths to be facts. But this is an age of progress. The fables are fast being left behind with the ignorant and credulous, while those who would keep abreast of the times are ever seeking to " follow truth where'er she leads the way."

As for " fairy tales " the stories of science in earth, air, wind, and wave rival all the visions of fancy, all the scenes of fairy-land. If our friend will seek knowledge in the wonderland of beauty and utility spread all around her, she will find her hours profitably and pleasantly spent, and gain, at the same time, much valuable information.

We hav never yet seen a child who did not, when questioned, prefer a true story to a false one, after realizing the difference between truth and falsehood. Ethel is an exception to the rule. When she comes to understand the value of fact over fiction, she will regard it as the one pure pearl above all price. May she never be deceived by the designing and artful, who love falsehood better than truth.

It is always pleasant to receive presents, when worthy of them, on Christmas, or on any other day of the year; still more pleasant is it to giv presents to the needy and destitute, and any day is suitable for this purpose.—ED. C. C.

Our Limited Wisdom.

All the family were reading in the library one evening. Mr. May had the evening paper, which he put down once to look up a reference in the encyclopedia. Mrs. May had a French art book, and consulted her French lexicon frequently. George asked his mother the meaning of several words in the story-book over which he was poring.

Eva, aged five, sat with George's Companion upon her lap.

" Reading, too, pussy?" said her father.

" Yes, sir."

" Why, Eva May, you can't read!" said her brother.

" Yes, I can. I can read 'dog' and 'cat' and 'boy' and lots of words when I find them. I read all the words I do know, and that's all that any of you are doing," returned the observant little woman.—Youth's Companion.

Imaginativ Robert.

He is a bright infant is Robert, and imaginativ. When he saw the sun disappear behind a cloud at sunset one night he said: " The sun hasn't gone to bed, but I guess he's undressing himself." At another time he said to his father, " I hav got as many kisses for you as there are pine needles on the pine-trees and flowers in the woods."

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

ALABAMA.
Star News Depot, 2,003 2d ave., Birmingham.

CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., Los Angeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.

CANADA.
T. C. Allen & Co., 124 Granville st., Halifax, N. S.
Mrs. W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto.
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.

COLORADO.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.

FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.

IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.

ILLINOIS.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 314 S. State st, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.

INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend

KANSAS.
E. D. Sharpnack, Galena, Kan.

LOUISIANA.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.

MAINE.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.

MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.

MICHIGAN.
A. Atwood, Eaton Rapids.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.

MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.

NEBRASKA.
J. I. Freuhauf, Omaha.

NEW JERSEY.
C. Schmidt, 69 Pacific st., Newark.
J. G. Hunter, 66 Wickliff st., Newark.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.
Casimir Davis, Woodstown.

NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner. 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., "
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., "
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.

OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
Emory P. Robinson, Sidney.
W. Smith, 329 Superior st., Cleveland.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe street, Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland.

OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.

PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk. Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.

RHODE ISLAND.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.

TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.

TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
J. Jackson, Dallas.

UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
W. F. Reybould, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
Geo. Funk, 909 Pacific ave., Tacoma.
C. B. Reynolds, 21046th st., Seattle.

ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.

AUSTRALIA.
Chas. H. Bamford, 190 Little Collins st., East Melbourne, Victoria.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.

NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs by Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam Should Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Churches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportunity.
As the Clergy Desire Sunday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Our Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Church Institutions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Products of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religious Trap.
Sunday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
Encouragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Church's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Church.
The Church's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denounced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Church.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Drouth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Our Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janus-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Our Country, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conquest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Church of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Result of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Put their Sins.
Jesus Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for True Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxious Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occurrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Churchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossus of New York.
The Political Caliban and the ReligiousRogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Question.
The Churches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Trouble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Church, "Don't Hurt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Church True to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Church and State.

Some Allegorics.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Outside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via. Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Surprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occupation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolution to Orthodoxy.
The Evolution of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crusade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams, D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths, A. Bierbower, M. Babcock, Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway, Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought, Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A. Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe, Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach, Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages, Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll, President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, Percy Bysshe Shelley, Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills, Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster, Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

D. M. BENNETT'S WORKS.

ADDRESS THE TRUTH SEEKER OFFICE.

A Truth Seeker Around the World. Four large volumes. With a steel-plate engraving of the author in Vol. I., and each volume illustrated with forty-seven cuts. Handsomely bound in red cloth, $6.50; in leather, red edges, $9.50; in morocco, gilt edges, $10.50.

The World's Sages, Thinkers, and Reformers. 1,075 pages, 8vo. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Champions of the Church; Their Crimes and Persecutions. 8vo. 1,119 pages. Cloth, $3.00; leather, $4.00; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

The Gods and Religions of Ancient and Modern Times. Two Volumes. Written in prison. In cloth, $3.00 per volume, or $5.00 for the two volumes; in leather, $7.00; in morocco, gilt edges, $8.00.

From Behind the Bars. A series of letters written in prison. Over 700 pages. Price $1.50.

A Truth Seeker in Europe. A series of letters written during a visit of ten weeks in Europe. Giving some account of the International Freethinkers' Congress held at Brussels, to which Mr. Bennett was a delegate, followed by a description of what he saw in England, France, Holland, and Italy. The letters from Rome alone are worth the price of the book. With a steel-plate portrait of the author. 850 pages. $1.50.

The Semitic Gods and the Bible. Treating upon the gods of the Semitic nations, including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, the Virgin Mary, and the Bible. To the latter 230 pages are devoted, showing that book to be a very inferior production for a first-class God. 333 large pages. Paper covers, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

Judaism, Christianity, and Mohammedanism examined historically and critically. It is thought to be the most damaging exhibit of Christianity that has appeared. 500 large pages. Price, $1.50.

Thirty Discussions, Bible Stories, Essays, and Lectures. 700 pages. Paper covers, 75 cents;

The Humphrey-Bennett Discussion. A debate on Christianity and Infidelity, between D. M. BENNETT and Rev. G. H. HUMPHREY. This book has had a very large sale, and is a splendid work for Freethinkers to loan to Christian neighbors. 550 pages. Price, $1.

Bennett-Teed Discussion. Between D. M. BENNETT and CYRUS ROMULUS R. TEED. Jesus the Lord God Creator of Heaven and Earth. Paper, 30 cents;

What Objections to Christianity? A discussion between D. M. BENNETT and G. M. MAIR, divided into the following theses: 1. Christianity is neither new nor original, being borrowed or copied from much older systems of religion.

2. Miracles and supernatural achievements hav been as fully and truly ascribed to other teachers and founders of religion as to Jesus.

3. The story of Jesus and his mission in the world is unhistorical; it is not corroborated by contemporaneous history.

BENNETT affirms; MAIR denies. This is an exhaustiv discussion. Price, $1.50.

Trial of D. M. Bennett in the United States Circuit Court upon the charge of depositing prohibited matter in the mail. This givs a full history of this celebrated case, and shows what monstrous injustice was perpetrated upon MR. BENNETT. Price, cloth, 75 cents; paper, 50 cents.

An Open Letter to Jesus Christ. 5 cents.

Interrogatories to Jehovah. Being 3,000 questions propounded to his Jewish Godship upon a great variety of subjects. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Deacon Skidmore's Letters. First Deacon of Zion Hill Baptist Church, giving many church incidents and his evolution from Christianity to Liberalism. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

The Book of Chronicles of the Pilgrims in the Land of Yahweh: also the Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers. Cloth, $1.00

The First Epistle of Bennett the Apostle to the Truth Seekers 10 cents.

The Great Religions of the World. 10 cents.

Open Letter to Samuel Colgate. 10 cents.

An Hour with the Devil. 10 cents.

Sinful Saints and Sensual Shepherds 10 cents.

Christ of Paul; or, the Enigmas of Christianity.

Frauds of the Churchmen of the Second Century Exposed.

By GEORGE REBER.

12mo, 400pp., - - Price, $2.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.

A Compendium of Universal History.

By WINWOOD READE.

Sixth edition, 544pp., - - $1.75.

SCRIPTURE SPECULATIONS.

With Creation, Stars, Earth, Primitive Man, Judaism.

By H. R. STEVENS. 419pp., $1.50.

ETHICS OF POSITIVISM.

A Critical Study and Survey of the Moral Philosophy of the Present Century.

By GIACOMO BARZELLOTTI,

Prof. of Philosophy at the Liceo Dante, Florence.

Price, $1.50.

OLD FAITH AND THE NEW.

A Confession.

By DAVID FRIEDERICH STRAUSS.

Authorized translation from sixth German edition by Mathilde Blind.

Price, ... $1.50.

HEALTH HINTS TO WOMEN.

Important Information for All, and "Danish Cure." With Portrait.

By MME. W. SCHOTT. Price, $1.50.

The Legends of the Patriarchs and Prophets.

By S. BARING-GOULD.

Will be seized with avidity by all students of the Bible.—[Congregationalist.

Price, $1.50.

RADICAL PULPIT.

Discourses of Advanced Thought.

By O. B. FROTHINGHAM and FELIX ADLER.

Price, $1.

INSTITUTION of MARRIAGE.

And Remarkable Divorce Cases.

By PHILANTHROPUS.

446pp. - - - - Price, $1.

The Contrast: Evangelicalism and Spiritualism Compared.

By MOSES HULL.

Paper, 60 cents; cloth, $1.

PERSONAL IMMORTALITY

AND OTHER PAPERS.

Candid Arguments for and Against Immortality

By JOSIE OPPENHEIM. Price, 75 cents

SIXTEEN SAVIORS OR NONE

By KERSEY GRAVES.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Truth Seeker Collection of Forms, Hymns, and Recitations.

For Organizing Societies; for Marriages, Funerals, Naming of Infants, Obituaries, Epitaphs, etc. Also 525 Liberal and Spiritualistic Hymns for Social and Various Public Occasions.

18mo, 550pp. Price, 75 cents.

Auricular Confession and Nunneries.

By W. HOGAN.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Shelley: Philosopher and Reformer.

By C. SOTHERAN.

8vo, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Lithograph of D. M. Bennett

Heavy plate paper 22x28. Price, 50 cts.

Lithograph of Bennett Monument.

In 4 colors, 22x28. Heavy plate paper.

Price, 50 cents.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.

With Remarks on Rousseau and Comte.

By CALVIN BLANCHARD.

Paper, - - - 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.

WITH

Theological Amendment and State Personality.

By JOS. E. PECK.

Price, - - - - - 25 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

The Humboldt Library of Science.

In this series are well represented the writings of DARWIN, SPENCER, HUXLEY, TYNDALL, PROCTOR, CLIFFORD and other leaders of thought in our time, at 50 to 75 per cent. lower than usual prices.

We have the Library bound in Complete Sets, as follows:

OLD STYLE.—In this style the volumes average 640 pages 8vo, and are arranged thus:

Vol. I.	Nos. 1-13	Vol. VI.	Nos. 60-70.
" II.	" 13-24	" VII.	" 71-80.
" III.	" 25-36.	" VIII.	" 81-91.
" IV.	" 37 48	" IX.	" 92-103.
" V.	" 49-59.	" X.	" 104-111.

Cloth, plain edges, $2 vol. (Separately or in sets.)
Half seal, marble edges, $2.75 vol. (In sets only.)

NEW STYLE.—Nos. 1 to 111 inclusive, are bound in 3 vols., averaging 492 pages each, 8vo, thus:

Cloth, extra, red edges,	$1.75 per vol.	$22 75 per set.
Half seal, plain edges,	2 25 "	29 25 "
Half seal, marble edges,	2 50 "	32.50 "
Hlf Mor., marble edges,	2.75 "	33 75 "

In sets only.

All of the following are octavo, cloth:

WORKS BY PROFESSOR HUXLEY.

Man's Place in Nature. Numerous ill.; &
The Origin of Species. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Physical Basis of Life & other Essays.
Lectures on Evolution. Illustrated. 2 books in 1 vol. 75
Animal Automatism, and other Essays.
Technical Education, and other Essays. 2 books in 1 vol. 75

WORKS BY CHARLES DARWIN.

Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection; or, the Preservation of Favored Races in the Struggle for Life. New edition from the latest Eng. edition, with additions and corrections. . . 1.25
Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. With illustrations. New edition revised and augmented. . . 1.50
Formation of Vegetable Mold Through the Action of Worms, with Observations on their Habits. With illustrations. .75

Charles Darwin: His Life and Work. By Grant Allen. 75

SELECT WORKS BY GRANT ALLEN.

The Evolutionist at Large;
Vignettes from Nature; and
Force and Energy: A Theory of Dynamics 3 books in 1 vol. . . . 1.00

WORKS BY HERBERT SPENCER.

The Data of Ethics. 50
Education: Intellectual, Moral, and Physical: and Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other Disquisitions. 2 books in 1 vol. . .75
The Genesis of Science.
The Factors of Organic Evolution. 2 books in 1 vol. 75

SELECT WORKS OF RICHARD A. PROCTOR, F.R.A.S.

Light Science for Leisure Hours.
Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects.
Hereditary Traits, and other Essays.
Miscellaneous Essays.
Illusions of the Senses, and other Essays.
Notes on Earthquakes, with 14 miscellaneous Essays. 6 books in 1 vol. 1.50

SELECT WORKS OF WM. KINGDON CLIFFORD, F.R.A.S.

Seeing and Thinking.
The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays.
Conditions of Mental Development, and other Essays.
The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences.
Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science. 5 books in 1 vol. 1.25

SELECT WORKS OF EDW. CLODD, F.R.A.S.

The Childhood of Religion.
The Birth and Growth of Myth.
The Childhood of the World. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

SELECT WORKS OF TH. RIBOT,

Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

The Diseases of Memory.
The Diseases of the Will.
The Diseases of Personality. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

THE MILKY WAY.

The Wonders of the Heavens. 32 illus. By Camille Flammarion.
The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.
The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Nathan T. Carr, LL.D. 3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

POLITICAL SCIENCE.

Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The Eng. Constitution," and
History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock. 2 books in 1 vol. . .75

THE LAND QUESTION.

The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.; and Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birbeck, M.A. 2 books in 1 vol. . .75

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Mystery of Matter, and The Philosophy of Ignorance; and
The Essential Nature of Religion. By J. Allanson Picton. 2 books in 1 vol. . .75
Science and Crime; and
Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E. 2 books in 1 vol. 75

[Continued in next column.]

HUMBOLDT LIBRARY (Continued).

Current Discussions in Science; and Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S. 2 books in 1 vol. 75
The Black Death. An Account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century; and
The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker. M.D. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Naturalist on the River Amazon. A Record of Adventures, Habits of Animals, Sketches of Brazilian and Indian Life and Aspects of Nature Under the Equator, during Eleven Years of Travel, by Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S., Assis. Sec. to the Royal Geographical Society of England. 75
The Rise and Early Constitution of Universities, with a Survey of Medieval Education. By S. S. Laurie, LL.D., Professor of the Institutes and History of Education in the University of Edinburgh. .75
The Religions of the Ancient World, including Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia, Persia, India, Phœnicia, Etruria, Greece, Rome. By George Rawlinson, M.A., Camden Professor of Ancient History, Oxford, and Canon of Canterbury, author of "The Origin of Nations," "The Five Great Monarchies," etc. 75
Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze. Translated from the German by J. Fitzgerald, M.A. . . .25
Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Logic and Political Economy in the Owens College, Manchester. . . .75
On the Study of Words. By Richard Chenevix Trench, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. 75
The Dawn of History: An Introduction to Pre-Historic Study. Edited by C. F. Keary, M.A., of the British Museum. .75
Geological Sketches at Home and Abroad. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., Director-General of the Geological Surveys of Great Britain and Ireland. . .75
Illusions: A Psychological Study. By James Sully, Author of "Sensation and Intuition," "Pessimism," etc. 75
The Pleasures of Life. (Parts I. and II.) By Sir John Lubbock, Bart. 2 parts in 1. .75
English Past and Present. (Parts I. and II.) By Richard Chenevix Trench. 2 parts in 1, Complete. 75
The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S. Over 80 Illus. 75

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit, on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Samples FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N. Y.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait.. 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life. Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts..... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2.Rev.Theologicus,D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 1
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

Science in Plain Language.

I. EVOLUTION, ANTIQUITY, BACTERIA, ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S.E.

II. ASTRONOMY, SUN, MOON, STARS, ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S.E.

These handy series of volumes on science—of which the above works form the first two numbers, others to follow—are written in a way that cannot fail to make them interesting to even the most casual reader. They supply a popular need. The price of each is 50 cents in cloth.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WETTSTEIN'S
WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17 50; 15 jewels, $18.50; do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $ 5. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

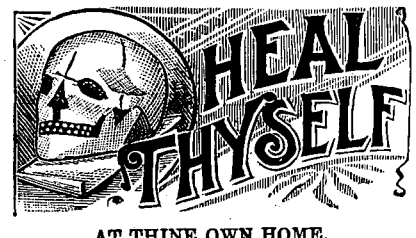
ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN. Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.



With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can have their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.

124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7.30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,

Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union

Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.

FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society

Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto. "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Portsmouth, O., Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7 P.M. in Grand Army Hall. Lectures, discussions, readings, poems, music and songs. A cordial invitation is extended to all; especially to friends from abroad. Correspondence solicited. J. L. TREUTHART, President. WILL S. ANDRES, Secretary.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brough to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

News of the Week.

SEVEN agents of the Church Missionary Society of England along the Niger hav been deposed on serious charges.

AT Cincinnati, between March 10th and 20th, the Farmers' Alliance, Knights of Labor, etc., will form a national political third party.

BANCROFT, the historian, died on the 17th, aged ninety-one.

THE late session of the Colorado legislature was disgraced by turbulence and bloodshed.

IN Blount county, Ala., two proselyting Mormon elders hav been whipped and expelled.

THERE are revolutionary disturbances in Chili and the Argentine Republic, and riots in Brazil.

REV. A. GEORGE, of Leeds, N. Y., has been arrested for betrayal of his stepdaughter, which resulted in her death.

AT St. John's church, Philadelphia, the other Sunday, at the close of mass John Carrigan continued kneeling and was found to be dead.

SAXONY is disturbed by a religious band headed by Hans Wurzel, who claims to be Moses's successor. Eighteen members hav been imprisoned for rioting.

ENGLAND has referred the sealing dispute to the United States Supreme Court. This is unprecedented, and some think it a discourtesy to our diplomatic service. The court will reject the matter as out of its sphere.

THE pope has remonstrated with Russia for persecuting Roman Catholics, and closing their churches at Vilna.

DR. SCHLOZER, the representativ of Germany at the Vatican, has informed the pope that his country will readmit all religious orders but Jesuits.

THE Sioux hav entered the agency and submitted. They hav pretended to surrender their weapons, but hav kept the good ones, and the general may disarm them by force.

THE new president of the republic of Costa Rica, Central America, has agreed with the bishop on the payment by the state of a sum for salaries of religious teachers in the schools.

THE Russian imperial committee on petitions has refused to receive, and returned to London, the petition for mercy to Jews which was addressed to the czar by the public meeting at Guildhall.

THE pope has authorized Premier Mercier of Quebec to hav "the Blessed Sacrament reserved in a tabernacle at his private residence." Mercier has built a sumptuous chapel for the purpose.

THE bill for federal supervision of national elections, called by Democrats the "force bill," caused an all-night session of Congress on the 17th, and still is unsettled. Democrats threaten trouble if it is passed.

METHODIST missionaries at the Caroline islands desire our secretary of state to ask of Spain reparation for injuries to them. On the other hand, the Spanish authorities of the islands complain that the Methodists hav repeatedly stirred up the natives against government, from jealousy of the Catholic church.

A CATHOLIC journal which favors temperance deplored that in a committee lately appointed by liquor-dealers to look after saloon interests in the state, twenty-four members in forty-four were Catholics. Now, at seeing that the twelve liquor-dealers on the newly elected board of aldermen of New York are Catholic almost to a man, it laments, "What a showing for the great Catholic body of the greatest city on the continent!"

MEXICAN patriots continue to demand the expulsion of foreign-born priests, urging that the church has been the most deadly enemy of republican ideas and measures in Mexico; that it invited the Austrian emperor Maximilian to usurp the Mexican government and supported the infamous decree that everyone resisting be shot wherever found as a traitor; and that it has just imported foreign priests, chiefly Spaniards, believed to be disguised Jesuits, whose "coming is inexplicable on any reasonable or worthy ground," and who "go through the country fleecing the people, and preaching against the reform laws and instigating the people to disobey them."

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Gems of Thought.

SEEING, hearing, feeling, are miracles, and each part and tag of me is a miracle.
Divine am I inside and out, and I make holy whatever I touch or am touched from.
. . . . . .
This head more than churches, Bibles, and all the creeds. —Walt Whitman.

I REMEMBER the walk to Asneburnskis very well—a fit place to go on a Sunday; one of the true temples of the earth. A temple, you know, was anciently "an open place without a roof," whose walls served merely to shut out the world and direct the mind toward heaven; but a modern meeting-house shuts out the heavens, while it crowds the world into still closer quarters. Best of all it is when, as on a mountain-top, you hav for all walls your own elevation and deeps of surrounding ether. The partridge-berries, watered with mountain dews, which are gathered there, are more memorable to me than the words which I last heard from the pulpit at least; and for my part I would rather look toward Rutland than Jerusalem. Rutland—modern town, land of ruts, trivial and worn, not too sacred—with no holy sepulcher, but profane green fields, and dusty roads, and opportunity to liv as holy a life as you can—where the sacredness, if there is any, is all in yourself and not in the place.—Thoreau.

SHIMEI FLINGETH ROCKS AT DAVID.

And he cast stones at David, and at all the servants of king David, and all the people and all the mighty men were on his right hand and on his left.—2 Sam. xvi, 6.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EGGS FANCY POULTRY IO VARIETIES. Ten years experience. Price List Free. No catalogue. Pigeons—Blue, Fans and Red Jacobins. J. L. MOCK, 1947 S. HIGH ST., COLUMBUS O.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6 To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE foundations of our civilization were laid centuries before Christianity was known. The intelligence of courage, of self-government, of energy, of industry, that uniting made the civilization of this century, did not come alone from Judea, but from every nation of the ancient world. —Ingersoll.

ANTIQUITY, it must be allowed, whether as regards politics, philosophy, or literature, was greatly superior to the Europe of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries.—Guizot.

THE savage beasts are not more formidable to men than the Christians are to each other when they are divided by creed and opinion. —Emperor Julian.

RELIGION has filled Great Britain with war. The history of the Catholics, of the Episcopalians, of Cromwell—all the burnings, the maimings, the brandings, the imprisonments, the confiscations, the civil wars, the bigotry, the crime—show conclusivly that Great Britain has enjoyed to the full the blessings of "our most holy religion."—Ingersoll.

RELIGIOUS controversies hav often dislocated the social system, hav presented an insuperable obstacle to the fusion of the different elements of a nation, hav produced long and sanguinary wars, and hav diverted a large proportion of intellect and energy from enterprises that are conduciv to the welfare of society.—Lecky.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

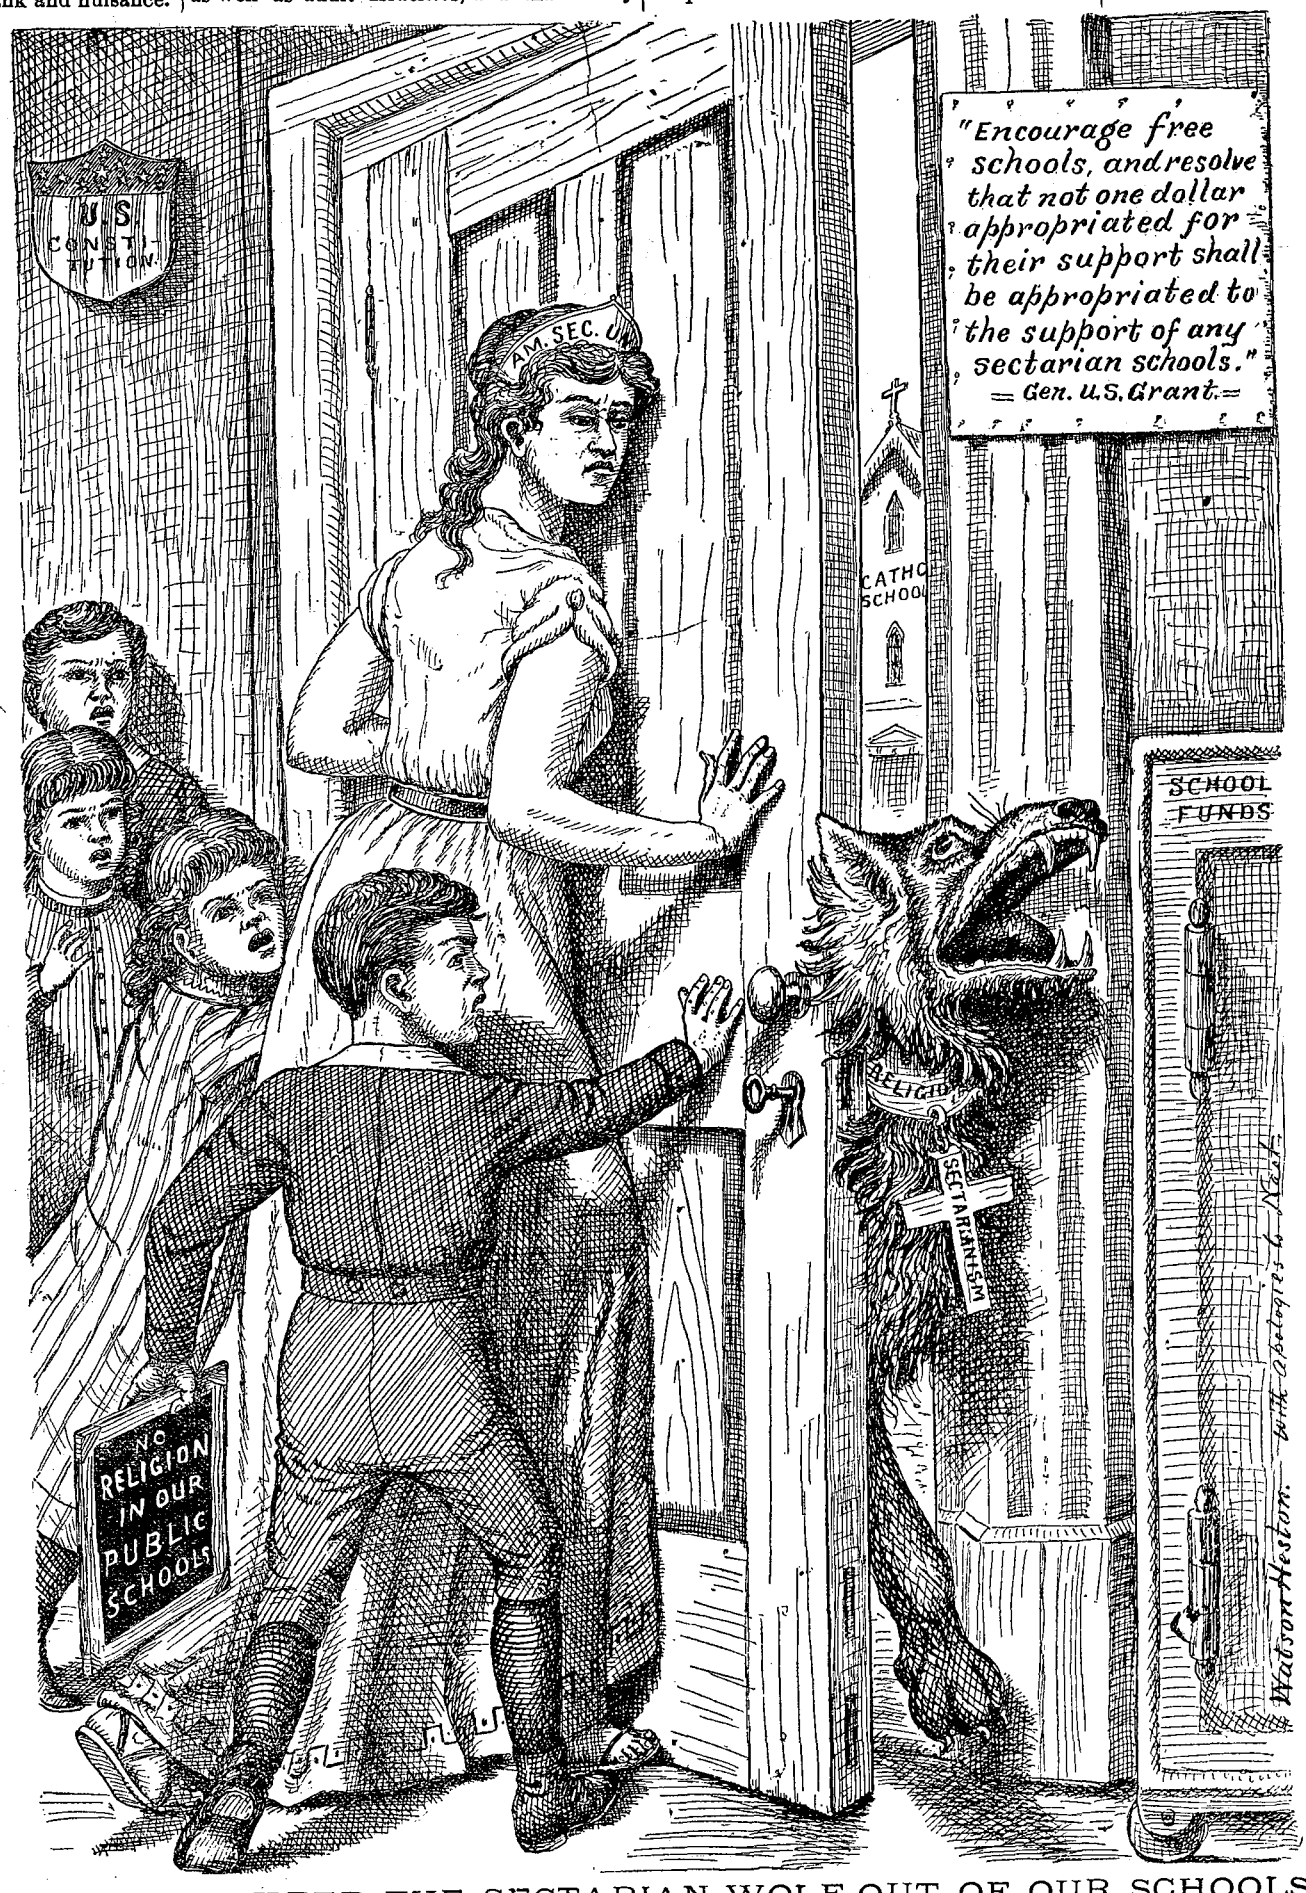
A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 5. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY. { New York, Saturday, January 31, 1891. } 28 LAFAYETTE PL. } $3.00 per year.

Notes and Clippings.

Now that he has exposed himself so thoroughly, says the Sun, Father Ignatius should be dismissed as a mountebank and nuisance.



THE following interesting item of news appeared in the Sun, of this city, on January 24th: About three hundred circulars were received yesterday by members of the Brooklyn Spiritual Association. The same society a week ago received a lot of circulars headed in big letters, "Madam Dis De Fake," in which many members of the association were caricatured. Yesterday's circular owes its origin to the Anti-Fraud Society, as the circular itself avers. It begins as follows: "Free-lovers, fools, and fakirs must be driven out of Brooklyn Spiritual meetings. The Anti-Fraud Society is determined to expose and hold up to ridicule the contemptible impostors called public mediums, and the fools who are duped by them. Also the free-lovers, who, by their presence at public meetings, keep respectable people away. All persons of good character desiring to join the Anti-Fraud Society are requested to notify the secretary." An address to the Spiritualists of Brooklyn follows in these words: "In our next circular we will giv the names, addresses, etc., of the free-lovers who attend the various Spiritual meetings in Brooklyn. At the present time we are in possession of names, dates, important facts, etc., in the case of thirty-two persons, and we want to get more information. If you are in sympathy with this movement and know of any persons whose names should appear in our next circular, please fill in the following form and return to us. We intend to make it hot for free-lovers and mediumistic liars and tricksters." In the form at the bottom of the circular there are vacant spaces to be filled with the name and address of any married woman whom the signer can "positivly state" to be maintaining questionable relations with a man, the address and name of the man also to be given. The blanks, when filled out, are directed to be sent to Thomas B. Kelsay at the general delivery of the Brooklyn post-office. The circular concludes as follows: "We hope enough additional information will be sent in to make our next circular interesting."

LOVE and charity are none too common elements among Christian teachers, observes the orld. On a recent Sunday Rev. G. C. Rankin, Methodist, of Kansas City, referred to a sermon of Rev. J. E. Roberts, Unitarian, as "musty utterances of that blondined type of Christianity" and "old rat-eaten literature." Dr. Roberts was present, and it was thought by some of the congregation that he would wait outside and administer a thrashing to Rankin, but he didn't.

ACCORDING to the new laws to be promulgated, says Novoyè Vremya, Jews will be forbidden to hold real estate in all the dominions of the czar in Europe and in Asia; Jewish craftsmen will not be allowed to settle either in the capitals (St. Petersburg and Moscow) or in any of the large cities of the empire.

THE reason why clergymen liv to be seventy years of age on the average, says the Herald, is that they hav an annual attack of bronchitis, which can only be cured by a tour through Europe—expenses paid.

PRUSSIAN school officials hav administered this sharp reproof to the Jew-baiting teachers in Cassel: "It has come to the notice of the government that many gentile schoolchildren ridicule their Israelitish comrades as well as adult Israelites, and that many teachers encourage directly and indirectly this sort of abuse. Such behavior on the part of the teachers is most thoroughly condemned and must cease. Teachers must also punish children guilty of the indecency in question."

TRYING TO KEEP THE SECTARIAN WOLF OUT OF OUR SCHOOLS.

THERE is a deep-felt agitation among the Mohammedans of the czar's dominions in connection with what they class as being an unwarranted interference with the Koran. Some time ago, Councillor Smirnoff, of the official press censorship bureau, issued an order which called for the expunging of thirteen verses from the Koran. Soon after the order was issued there was much excitement created by the manner in which the order was regarded in the mosques. The agitation is gradually spreading through central Asia, and the Moslem preachers are now energetically denouncing the action of Russia in this matter. The emir of Bokara and the khan of Khiva, it is announced, will send delegates to the czar asking him to restore to the Koran the thirteen verses which hav been expunged.

WE called attention recently to the case of Adventist King, who has been sent to jail down in Tennessee for the crime of keeping holy the seventh day of the week instead of the first. And for the term of his natural life, apparently. For he was sent to prison on his refusal to pay a fine. That fine must be paid, and King won't pay it. So there he is, till, in the rustic vigor of Tennessee English, the cows come home. In Vermont, on the contrary, jurisprudence is not so inexorable. One George F. Kibling, of Norwich, has been convicted of selling the incredible number of seven hundred and fifteen drinks to Vermonters in defiance of law. But while Tennessee condemns a Tennesseean to an eternal dungeon for a merely cranky interpretation of a text of holy writ, Vermont has pity on a Vermonter whose sins number more than seventy times seven. Not for life does she incarcerate the wicked Kibling for selling seven hundred and fifteen drinks. He will hav to polish marble for sixty-one years seven months and twenty days only. Tennessee is a good field for Vermont missionaries. The only trouble is that very seductiv brands of whisky are said to be procurable in the neighborhood of the dungeon against the bars of which Martyr King is chafing. Missionaries are human. And Vermont missionaries may be also thirsty.—Commercial Advertiser.

MRS. ANNA C. FALL and her husband are lawyers at Boston, and hav petitioned the state legislature to change the law forbiddin contracts between man and wife. As the law now stands the couple cannot be law partners, and they desire to tackle their clients in company.

Communications.

The Union of Church and State.*

We hav assembled here to-day to congratulate each other, our country, and mankind, upon the advance that has been made in the cause of human liberty. We are here to giv a new impulse to that great progressiv movement, the object of which is to bring the human race out from the dark shadows of ignorance, of falsehood and superstition, into the glorious light of science, of truth, and of intellectual freedom.

Think of the long night of spiritual darkness which enveloped the earth as with a thick cloud for more than a thousand years, relieved only by the pale luster of a few stars here and there, which served only to make the darkness when they disappeared still more appalling.

Over three hundred years ago the day began to dawn. The change has been attributed to the Protestant Reformation. Religious writers are quite inclined to claim, in some way, for religion all the good that has ever appeared upon the earth. For instance, in the case of the Sandwich islands, they claim not only to hav converted and civilized the natives—a civilization, by the way, which came very near resulting in their extermination—but they make special claim to having turned them from idolatry. I had occasion to investigate that question while I was spending a winter there eighteen years ago, and found that the people, the chiefs taking the lead, had become infidel to their own religion, and had destroyed their idols, before the missionaries set foot upon the islands.

Equally baseless is the claim that to the Protestant Reformation we owe the enlightenment of the last three centuries. The cause lay deeper than that. While Luther was protesting against the abuses of Catholicism, others were protesting against Catholicism itself, while still others—and these were the most far-seeing and the noblest of all—were protesting against the whole system of which Catholicism was the most manifest exponent. There were three strata of Protestants; one on the surface, one intermediate, and the other underneath. It was the third stratum, those who planted themselvs upon fundamental and eternal principles, who struck the light which has illumined the world.

But while much has been accomplished, very much remains to be done. While thousands hav come out into the light of day, tens of thousands remain in the twilight. There is hope for them, because they are in a sort of purgatory. Others are in the condition of Biagio da Cesena, in Michael Angelo's great painting of "The Last Judgment." Biagio was master of ceremonies to the pope, and Vasari relates that while the artist was at work upon the painting, Biagio objected to the nakedness of the figures, declaring them indecent. He seems to hav been a sort of Anthony Comstock, Wanamaker man. Michael Angelo, to punish him for this and other annoyances, placed him, in the painting, in hell, among the damned. There he was in one corner, as natural as life, his head sticking out and his body enveloped in flames. Biagio begged the pope, Paul III., to hav the caricature effaced. But the pope refused to interfere. He told Biagio that if the artist had placed him in purgatory he could hav got him out, but from hell there was no redemption.

So there is hope for those who are in the half-way house between truth and error—our Universalist and Unitarian brethren, for instance. I mean, of course, the hardshell Unitarians—they are the ones who are partly in the dark. There is hope for these classes. They can be got out. But for those who are bound hand and foot in the shackles of bigotry and superstition and who hug their chains—for them there is no redemption.

We are assembled here to-day to continue the protests of the third stratum.

We are here to protest against the half million of dollars which was paid last year for the support of sectarian schools from the treasury of the United States. The money was expended under the direction of the commissioner of Indian affairs. A protest came from New York, and was read in the Senate by Senator Jones of Arkansas. It looked very well upon its face, but when the facts came to be examined it was found to be not what it professed to be, a protest against the use of the money for such purposes, but a protest because the Catholics had had more than their share of the public plunder. While the Catholics had received $356,000, the Protestants had had only a little over $200,000. Hence those tears. The Protestant portion of the plunder was skilfully concealed or smoothed over, while the Catholic part was paraded as though that was the only expenditure for sectarian purposes. Could effrontery go further? The daughter trying to crowd her mother out of the public treasury.

We are here to protest against the exemption of more than two thousand millions of church property from taxation. Let those who want churches and church lots pay the taxes on them. Why should they remain exempt, and thus an increased burden be thrown upon the shoulders of those who hav no use for churches? Let those who still wish to dance to the old religious tunes, be made to pay the fiddler.

We are here to protest against all attempts to bring about a union of church and state.

We are satisfied with the Constitution as our fathers made it; with the declaration that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof."

There are those who are not satisfied with this, the most beneficent and admirable provision of our fundamental law, and who are working to establish a different national policy through an amendment to the Constitution. They are the self-constituted religious guardians of the people. In proportion as they are losing their influence over the judgment and the moral sense of the masses, to the same extent are they itching to get control of the temporal power. Conscious of their inability to cope with their opponents on the field of argument, they wish to put them down by the strong arm of the law; to disfranchise them; to drivé them out of the country. An exponent of the National Reform religion, writing in the Christian Statesman, Nov. 1, 1883, said:

> What effect would the adoption of the Christian Amendment, together with the proposed changes in the Constitution, hav upon those who deny that God is the sovereign, Christ the ruler, and the Bible the law? This brings up the conscience question at once. . . . The classes who would object are, as THE TRUTH SEEKER has said, Jews, Infidels, Atheists, and others. These classes are perfectly satisfied with the Constitution as it is. How would they stand toward it if it recognized the authority of our Lord Jesus Christ? To be perfectly plain, I believe that the existence of a Christian Constitution would disfranchise every logically consistent Infidel.

In the Statesman of Feb. 21, 1884, Mr. J. C. K. Milligan, writing upon the same subject, said: "The worst result will be to disfranchise them."

Those who are endeavoring to establish a national religion do not admit that they are working for a union of church and state, but at the same time they advocate the supremacy of the church over the state. They avow their purpose to bring the whole land under the coercive control of a religion the principles of which would hav to be authoritativly determined.

This is the kind of union of church and state they are trying to bring about. Not such a union as has existed in England and in other countries for so many years, in which the state is supreme over the church, but a union wherein the church is to be superior to the state. The supremacy of the state over the church is bad enough, but from the supremacy of the church over the state, good Lord deliver us.

President Seelye, of Amherst College, in an article published in the Forum, for July, 1886, entitled, "Should the State Teach Religion?" (a question which he answers in the affirmativ), after stating that religious instruction of a people is indispensable, and that the family would not and could not provide it, also that "the church is confessedly not doing this work, and unless you giv it the ubiquity and power of the state, the church neither will nor can do it," said:

> The state should provide for instruction in the gospels for its own preservation; if the conscience of its subjects approve, well; if not, the state will be cautious, but courageous also, and if it is wise, it will not falter.

Subjects! We are free citizens of the United States. We are not the "subjects" of any political, religious, or religio-political despotism. We are not the slaves of President Seelye, Sam Small, or any other petty priest. We are the citizens of a great, a free, and a glorious country.

In a speech in Kansas City this Sam Small, a prominent worker in the movement, said:

> I want to see the day come when the church shall be the arbiter of all legislation, state, national, and municipal; when the great churches of the country can come together harmoniously and issue their edict, and the legislativ powers will respect it and enact it into laws.

Church over state—the church above imperiously issuing its edict, the state beneath obsequiously putting that edict into the form of laws.

In March, 1884, Rev. J. W. Foster, in the columns of the Christian Statesman, said:

> According to the scriptures, the state and its sphere exist for the sake of and to serve the interests of the church. [Church over state again.] . . . The expenses of the church in carrying on her public aggressiv work, it meets in whole or in part out of the public treasury.

What is this in fact but a union of church and state, except that the church instead of the state is to be in the ascendency?

The editor of the Statesman does not advocate union of church and state; oh, no, but he says:

> It is the duty of the state, as such, to enter into alliance with the church of Christ, and to profess, adhere to, defend, and maintain the true religion.

What is the spirit manifested by those engaged in this religious crusade against the Constitution? Their hearts are filled with bitterness and hatred toward those who differ with them in opinion in religious matters. They would fain strike them to the earth, as Peter was supposed to hav struck Ananias and Sapphira.

Rev. E B Graham, one of the vice-presidents of the National Reform Association, an organization whose special object is to secure an amendment to the Constitution, making Christianity the national religion, said in an address delivered at York, Neb., reported in the Christian Statesman of May 21, 1885:

> If the opponents of the Bible do not like our government and its Christian features, let them go to some wild, desolate land, and in the name of the devil, and for the sake of the devil, subdue it, and set up a government of their own on Infidel and Atheistic ideas; and then if they can stand it, stay there till they die.

There you hav it. We cannot liv together. Therefore we, Infidels, Jews, Atheists, and "others," if we do not like the kind of government or the kind of Constitution which they intend to make, must be disfranchised and leave the country. If we cannot liv together, and if they don't like our government or our Constitution, why in the name of heaven don't they leave the country themselvs?

At Lake Side, O., in August, 1887, Dr. McAllister said:

> Those who oppose this work now will discover, when the religious amendment is made to the Constitution, that if they do not see fit to fall in with the majority, they must abide the consequences, or seek some more congenial clime.

There it is again. Must leave the country. "Fall in with the majority!" We are with the majority now. And we intend to remain there.

In my opinion—though I do not deny there may be some little danger—in my opinion not all the priests of Christendom can dragoon the American people into running the risk of bringing back the persecutions of past ages by incorporating any religion into our Constitution or into our form of government.

In a speech in a convention of the same National Reform Association, held in New York, in February, 1873, Rev. Jonathan Edwards, D.D., said:

> We want state and religion—and we are going to hav it. It shall be that so far as the affairs of state require religion, it shall be revealed religion, the religion of Jesus Christ. . . . The Atheist is a dangerous man. . . . Tolerate Atheism, sir! There is nothing out of hell I would not tolerate as soon. . . . Atheism and Christianity are contradictory terms. They are incompatible systems. They cannot dwell together on the same continent.

There it is again. Must leave the country. Nothing else will do. No matter how well we behave, no matter how good citizens of the republic we may be, or how worthy members of society, it all goes for naught. We differ from them in opinion, and therefore must leave the country. Banishment from the country is the punishment prescribed by the American Inquisition.

The spirit here exhibited is the same as that which left its footprints in the Blue laws of several of the American colonies. It is inherited from the Inquisition of the Middle Ages, and turns for its justification or excuse to the teachings of those who founded the Christian religion.

I mean Peter and Paul, and their coadjutors and successors. Peter, as the story goes, struck down dead Ananias and Sapphira for attempting to deceive the apostles, and many hav been put to death since that day for opposing those who claimed to be the successors of Peter.

Paul said, "If anyone preach any other gospel unto you than that ye hav received, let him be accursed." Paul was a persecutor by temperament and practice. Before his conversion he had persecuted the Christians, making havoc of the church, entering into every house, haling men and women and committing them to prison, pursuing them relentlessly, even unto death.

After his conversion, his nature was essentially the same as before. "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ," said he, "let him be anathema maranatha." He pictures the Lord Jesus as "taking vengeance" on those who obey not his gospel. Hymeneus and Alexander, who had departed from the faith, he, Paul, had "delivered unto Satan." Alexander the coppersmith had done him much evil, he said, and he asked the Lord to reward him according to his works. In other words, he wanted the Lord to help him to get his revenge on Alexander the coppersmith. It was a personal matter between him and Alexander, and he wanted the Lord on his side.

He declared of those in the church who were unruly, and vain talkers and deceivers, that "their mouths must be stopped." Now, there is one way to stop the mouth of a person who is determined to talk. But we are not left to inference upon this subject, for in his epistle to the Galatians he expressly says he would they were even "cut off" who troubled them.

The ministers would hav us believe that Paul meant only that they should be cut off from the church. What then becomes of the word "even?" "Even cut off;" as though it would be something dreadful. Besides, "he would" it could be done. Now, he could easily hav them cut off from the church. He had only to speak the word. But this refers manifestly to something that he lacked the power to do.

*A lecture delivered at the American Secular Union Congress at Portsmouth, O.

Paul did not hav control of the temporal power. But when the church obtained control, then was done that which Paul would hav done if he had had the power. Then were they even cut off who troubled them.

No Christian church or sect of any such church has ever failed to persecute when it had the power. And these people who are trying to change the Constitution in the interest of religion are imbued with the spirit of persecution. They are religious bigots.

We may as well call things by their right names. When I was in Paris six years ago I met an old friend and acquaintance who had the unfortunate habit of telling big stories, and making statements without any regard to their conformity to truth. His stories and assertions were mostly of a harmless character, sometimes made to illustrate his subject, sometimes merely for the edification of his companions. As an example of the statements he would make: After we had visited one of the largest business buildings in Paris, while he was expatiating upon its immensity and its wonders, I asked him why they had no elevators in it. He replied that they had had nine elevators, but not being satisfied with them, they had taken them all out. The fact was, there never had been an elevator in the building. Well, he had shown me about the city considerably, so I thought I would return the compliment, and took him with me to make a call upon Björnson, with whom I was well acquainted. My friend could not resist the temptation to indulge in some of his whoppers for the entertainment of the celebrated poet and philosopher. Björnson said nothing. The next time I called upon him I undertook to apologize for my friend by saying that I supposed he had told those stories so often that he had come to really believe them himself. "No, he don't," said Björnson, "he is a liar." He believed in calling things by their right names.

So in regard to these people who are making this onslaught upon the Constitution; we might indulge in smooth phrasss, and say they are full of religious zeal but err in judgment, etc., but we may as well come out in plain Anglo-Saxon, and say they are religious bigots.

They are imbued with the spirit of the Inquisition; and animated by that spirit, they can even coolly contemplate the contingency of a war to be waged for the establishment of the Christian religion. Rev. M. A. Gault, in the Statesman of April 1, 1886, said it cost us all our civil war to blot slavery out of our Constitution, and it may cost us another war to blot out its Infidelity.

In reference to this phase of the subject, a timely warning was given by Mr. Abbott, editor of the Index, in a protest against the movement, which he was permitted to present at the national convention of the National Reform Association, held in Cincinnati in 1872. He said:

I make no threat whatever, but I state a truth fixed as the hills when I say, that before you can carry this measure and trample on the freedom of the people, you will hav to wade through seas of blood. Every man who favors it votes to precipitate the most frightful war of modern times.

To accomplish their purpose, the fanatics who are engaged in this enterprise are willing to unite with those whom they and their ancestors hav been abusing for centuries—the Roman Catholics.

"Whenever," said the Christian Statesman of Dec. 11, 1884, "they [the Roman Catholics] are willing to coöperate in resisting the political progress of Atheism, we will gladly join hands with them."

In the Statesman of Aug. 31, 1881, Rev. Sylvester F. Scovel said:

We may be subjected to some rebuffs in our first proffers, and the time has not yet come when the Roman church will consent to strike hands with other churches as such; but the time has come to make repeated advances,* and gladly to accept coöperation in any form in which they may be willing to exhibit it. It is one of the necessities of the situation.

Said Dr. A. A. Hodge, of Princeton, in an article in the Princeton Review, for January, 1887:

All we hav to do is for Catholics and Protestants—disciples of a common master—to come to a common understanding with respect to a common basis of what is received as general Christianity; a practical quantity of truth belonging equally to both sides, to be recognized in general legislation, and especially in the literature and teaching of our public schools.

Said the Christian Union of Jan. 26, 1888:

It is quite possible that the time may come when the real issue will be between the Theist and the Atheist. . . . Whenever that time comes, the Protestant and the Catholic will stand side by side in a common defense of those common beliefs which hav been their mutual possession these many centuries.

At the Saratoga National Reform meeting, August 15–17, 1887, a motion was adopted requesting the National Reform Association to secure a basis of agreement with the Roman Catholic authorities. And these newly made friends hav since been working together in Washington, to forward the religious legislation there pending. As the result of this combined Catholico-Protestant movement, we, the Infidels, Atheists, and "others," who are satisfied with the Constitution as it is, are to be disfranchised and driven from the country. Even those who did the most in founding our government, would not, if living, be permitted to participate in its blessings. Jefferson, Paine, Franklin, and many others, would hav to flee from the wrath to come.

It is time the people arouse to a sense of the danger which is menaced to their free institutions, and realize the attempt which is being made against their liberties.

Some of the religious journals oppose the movement; among others, the ably conducted American Sentinel, published formerly at Oakland, Cal., now in New York city. This is the only paper published which I read from beginning to end. It is partly because it is so small, but principally because its articles are interesting and valuable, and exceedingly important. The only considerable national organization effectually making opposition has been, until lately, the American Secular Union.

But there is another lately formed, of which the veteran Freethinker, Matilda Joslyn Gage, stands at the head, "the Woman's National Liberal Union," and we hail it as a most valuable auxiliary. The women hav come to the conclusion that they hav long enough made or raised the money to buy pulpit carpets and cushions for the ministers' feet. They hav concluded that they will no longer be mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. All hail the day of their political and religious emancipation.

The question of church and state is one which interests all classes. For no sooner will the Constitution be placed under the control of the Christian religion by the combined forces of Protestants and Catholics—and it can be done in no other way—than the question will immediately arise, which of the allied armies best represents the Christian religion? The Catholics hav the older title, having themselvs made the Bible, and it may turn out that they will vindicate their right to control the Constitution. In that case those who originated the movement may find themselvs called upon to drink of the cup which they had prepared for the Atheists and Infidels.

So far as we are concerned, it would be quite immaterial which party should prevail. If the Catholics, we would be done for at once; if the Protestants, we would be done for all the same, only not quite so soon. For, if the Protestants should prevail, the next question would be, which branch of them, or which denomination, or sect, or combination of sects, is best entitled to speak for the Christian religion, and therefore best entitled to say what shall be taught in the public schools under the amended Constitution?

The joint resolution introduced by Senator Blair, proposing his amendment, provides that

Each state in this Union shall establish and maintain a system of free public schools adequate for the education of all the children living therein, between the ages of six and sixteen years, inclusiv, in the common branches of knowledge, and in virtue, morality, and the principles of the Christian religion.

What are the principles of the Christian religion? It may be difficult to say; but it is sufficiently safe to assert that one of the principles of that religion is, persecution for opinion's sake. It is taught in the Old Testament—it is taught in the New Testament—it is taught in the history of the church in all the successiv ages.

It does not essentially detract from the dangerous character of the proposed amendment, that the author has the inconsistency to declare, in the first section, that "No state shall ever make or maintain any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." This is a mere subterfuge. What more efficacious law respecting the establishment of a religion could its votaries desire, than an act requiring the principles or doctrins of that religion to be taught at the public expense; thus compelling those who do not believe in such religion to pay for promulgating its doctrins to the youth of the country?

The ecclesiastical power has already lost its hold upon the reason and conscience of the masses. This attempt to get control of the Constitution, is a desperate effort to bring the aid of the civil power to the support of a "lost cause."

The attempt should be met with a prompt and merited rebuke. Let church and state remain forever separate. Let us heed the maxims and warnings of the founders, the defenders, and the preservers of the republic—of Madison and Hamilton, of Washington and Paine, of Jefferson, of Lincoln, and of Grant. Let not a spirit of persecution worthy only of the Middle Ages find sanction and encouragement under the stars and stripes, which hav been dedicated to liberty. Let the Constitution remain what our fathers intended it to be, the common heritage of a great, a generous, and a free people.

Portsmouth, O., Oct. 31, 1890. C. B. WAITE.

*"Advances," yes, advances, and "repeated advances" to this lady of Babylon, whom they hav been calling such a naughty name for hundreds of years.

No longer is "the woman drunken with the blood of the saints." She is in her right mind, clothed in the garments of righteousness, and when the crusaders of the American National Religion look upon her, they wonder "with great admiration."

The mystery of the woman is told. But ah, tell us "the mystery of the beast that carrieth her, which hath the seven heads and ten horns."

J. P. Mendum's Death.

From the Boston Investigator.

On the afternoon of January 10th, in his quiet home in Melrose Highlands, lay weary and sick unto death the attenuated form of J. P. Mendum. All that the kind ministrations of a loving family could do, every means that the allied skill of six medical practitioners could suggest, had been exhausted to prolong the life of this kind and useful man. But in vain. There he lay, calmly, patiently, bravely awaiting the fall of the curtain that should shut him away from the living forever. With a mind keenly observant of his condition, he had for several weeks realized his approaching dissolution, and with customary thoughtfulness had busied himself since Christmas in arranging his affairs; in writing or dictating letters to distant loved ones, and in the bestowal of such gifts among those who were nearest and dearest to him as he thought would be useful and appreciated as a last remembrance from him who held them in esteem.

About 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon he experienced what appeared to be a nervous shock. He roused from his couch and sank back exhausted. A change was at this time apparent to those who were with him, as it must hav been to him also, for turning to his eldest daughter, who had been since the first a most constant and loving attendant at his bedside, he said: "Lydia, is this death?"

"Yes, father, it is," was her reply.

He rested awhile propped upon his pillow, and then asked: "Lydia, are you here?"

"Yes, father."

"Well, dear, do not leave me." And with that he again grew quiet. These were his last words, except, later in the evening in response to the nurse's question if "the pain had left him," to reply, "Pretty much," or to ask, in a voice now almost inarticulate, for a drink of water. But long after speech had failed him his strong mind held its seat, and he would by gestures indicate the desires his lips could no longer express.

At 10 o'clock he rested quietly with closed eyelids, painless and apparently asleep, and thus he was at 1:30 Sunday morning when his son, Ernest, left the room, with instructions to be called if any change transpired, or if his services should be again needed in the sick-room. He was not summoned. His faithful services were never required again by that devoted father, for very gently and painlessly his breathing became more and more feeble, till, like the last sigh of a summer zephyr, it ceased entirely, and the loved and loving father, the kind and trusted friend, the wise counselor, the brave and valiant worker, who asked only what was right and struggled with all the strength of patient, enduring manhood to effect it, was at rest—asleep forever with the beloved wife who had preceded him by some nineteen years—asleep with the philosophers and all the noble dead, whose example he had cherished, and whose memory it was his life's work to honor—asleep with Voltaire, with Gibbon, with Volney, and with Paine—asleep with D'Holbach, with Hume, with Darwin, and with Mill—associated in eternal rest with Phillips, with Garrison, with Martineau and Wright, and finally once again united by death most kind, after a brief interval of a year and a half, with his lifetime friend and fellow-worker, the sage and venerated Seaver.

His life was a high and noble one, full of years and duty well performed, bristling with difficulties and over rough and thorny pathways, which were all overcome and cleared by the bravery and determination of this man, till at the end, as life sunk into a glorious peace, he could inscribe upon his banner what, alas! so few of us can write—Success!

Yes, "Success," above all words, should be his epitaph! He was successful in home life, successful in winning the esteem of his neighbors, successful in his association with his employees, successful in business, where for the last fifty years his word had been considered as good as his bond, successful in gaining the admiration and regard of the best of mankind—the thinkers of the world—and at the last, successful in the sick-room, where his patient fortitude, his wise forbearance and thoughtfulness for others, softened the hearts of physicians and nurse, till one and all came to love this good old man, and to mourn that a mind and heart so pure and true must so soon cease to be.

He died loved, he died honored, he died at a time when his services were still required, and though old in years he died young in heart, leaving many friends, and can any life be more successful? The wealth of India, the fame of Napoleon, measures not the success that crowned his simple, brave, and honorable career.

The Picture Book, Cloth, $2.50; Boards, $2.

Many purchasers of the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" having expressed a desire for a cloth binding for it, we hav arranged to satisfy the demand, and for an additional fifty cents will send it in silk cloth, gold and back-lettering. Illuminated board covers, $2. In either style of binding it is the cheapest book for the money among Freethought publications. It is also one of the very best.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President, . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. W STAUFFER, Vice-President, 1516 Montgomery ave., Phila., Pa.
J. O BENTLEY, Vice-President, . 812 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Secular Union Guarantee Fund of $5,000.

Amount of pledges to December 29, 1890.....	$623 23
P. F. Spencer, Evansville, Wis. (paid).....	2 00
A. J. Wadlia, Greeley, Colo. (paid).....	2 00
John Price, Scappoose, Ore. (paid).....	5 00
Henry Beichling, McAuley. Ida. (paid).....	5 00
Ignace Glaser, Bastrop, La	3 00
A friend in New York state (paid).....	1 00
T. S. Frisbie, Hartford, Conn. (paid).....	5 00
A. Parlett Lloyd, Baltimore, Md. (conditional).....	50 00

Total amount of pledges to Jan. 23, 1891. $795 00
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer American Secular Union.
(Per I. C. C.)

Philadelphia, Jan. 26, 1891.

Let Us Hav Peace.

Jealousy exists in the ranks of the American Secular Union, and it is assuming a serious aspect. No close observer can deny this. The wailing cries of "want-to-be leaders" confirm its existence, and articles recently given in print furnish strong evidence of a jealous faction in the organization that are laboring in line with a "rule or ruin" policy. Evidently it crept in some time ago. It commenced working devilment from the very start, assuming larger proportions as time passed on, until now it is practically raising hell. Brimstone is in the air. Certain satanic angels in human garb are spitting fire and flame. And it seems all this spitting is because the majority of the directors of the American Secular Union refused to appoint John R Charlesworth a "field" secretary. But this is merely a surface indication, and down underneath the scum and bubbles of the top lies the real cause, the root, if you please, of the evil that besets us. Just before the convening of the late congress I ran against this root, this real cause. It struck me then and there that for it to "trail and twine about," without a check, was dangerous to our best-laid plans; I realized then and there that the congress for which my friends and myself had labored so hard, and which we had hoped would be the turning-point to harmony and success, would, to a great degree, on the contrary, present unpleasant things and feelings. I watched this real cause from the time I first discovered it until the close of the said congress, and the effects it worked were damaging indeed. The only mistake of that congress was the allowing of this root to remain in Secular soil. It is poison, and should be dug out, labeled such, and placed on the shelf of useless things. It is at present blossoming over the shoulders of Dr. Foote, Mr. Charlesworth, and several editorial writers, and a few more blossoms like those of recent date will reduce the American Secular Union to a powerless, howling mob. Is this our desire? Do Secularists in general giv their assent to such a course? I think not, and for that reason the national head should be maintained in dignity and respect, should be upheld and fortified, save only when constitutional rights and limitations are transcended. The casting of stones at him and the working members of his cabinet because John R Charlesworth has not been appointed "field" secretary, is, I think, to say the least, entirely out of place, and uncalled for. Cast your eyes backward in the direction of the late congress. Pause with me for a moment at the point in the proceedings when the matter of "field" secretary was called up. It was apparent that Mr. Charlesworth would like to be such official. Now, the congress could not appoint him to the place, for it had not that power. Neither could it nominate him, and it did not. What then did it do? Why, simply recommended him. And bear in mind, this was not done with the distinct understanding that he should hav the place, for final jurisdiction as to that rested with the board of directors, and a majority of them hav spoken against Charlesworth's appointment. At the congress I was also recommended, but I withdrew my name. Had I not done this the directors would hav had two express recommendations to deal with instead of one, in addition to those by way of implication; that is to say, two expressly given by the congress, and others impliedly given in the nature of things. There was only one field secretary to select, and Mr. Charlesworth and myself—had I allowed the recommendation extended me to remain in force—could not hav by any manner of twisting and parceling been made the field secretary. Two separate bodies, you know, cannot occupy one and the same place at the same time. Is it not obvious then that the arguments presented on behalf of Mr. Charlesworth to show he should not hav been rejected are illogical? Is it not plain they rest on sandy foundations? And further that they tend to tear down rather than build up? The fact is, only a few of the delegates to the late congress thought Charlesworth would be made "field" secretary, and the recommendation and unanimous vote thereto was of the complimentary order, such as is frequently given unfitted candidates on the first ballot in state and county conventions. I so regarded my recommendation, and acted accordingly. And what is more, I am not mad about it. I close, hoping for peace in the ranks. WILL S. ANDRES

Portsmouth, O.

Drifting, But Where To?

The Secularist who starts out with the laudable desire to arrive at the truth is sure to become observant and critical; indeed, these qualities, arising from the exercise of a fearless judgment, enable him to enjoy the glorious privilege of being independent. The true Secularist, however, should not confine himself to criticising his opponents only, but should keenly and carefully scan the projects of his own party. Despite what has been said to the contrary by those professing to know, there exists to-day a widespread dissatisfaction among Secularists with respect to the position and progress of their opinions. Complaints not loud but deep are being heard from every side, and it is these complaints that are the stimulus for writing the present article.

The Freethinkers of the country are asked to subscribe a large sum of money for the avowed purpose of state Secularization, but they are given no assurance of the manner in which this is to be accomplished. State Secularization can never be accomplished unless we turn our efforts to Secularize the individual. Society is merely an aggregation of individuals, and if we wish to improve society, we must first improve the individual that goes to make up society. "It is admitted that we do not expect to win the churches as organized bodies." Then if we cannot win the churches as organized bodies, how can we expect to win the state as an organized society? Our course, then, is very clear. First Secularize the individual, and then we shall be on a fair way toward Secularizing the state. It may be said, What do you mean by Secularizing the individual? Teach him to labor to promote human happiness and human welfare here, not to wait until he is dead for that which living he might enjoy. Teach him to work to earn the esteem of his fellow-man. Teach him that the world has been governed by fear and imagination. Teach him that all religions claiming a supernatural or spiritual origin are merely human inventions. Teach him that all supposed supernatural or spiritual creeds come within the circumference of the same circle. Teach him that God has been the pretense and man the real object of adoration. Eradicate supernaturalism and superstition from his mind and blind devotion from his brain, and you will be on a fair way toward making him a Secularist. Secularism has two sides to one truth, which permeates all society, for closely allied to freedom of thought is its freedom of expression upon all subjects. It is the sun of truth which dissipates the mist from all questions, gazing upon science with rapture, and seeks upon the ground of scientific research to solve those problems that in any way interfere with the work, the wages, and the happiness of man. Our principles should hav no limit, but, alas! we, as moral reformers, are told by those assuming authority that we hav one object in view, and one only—the separation of church and state. Now, the question arises, How long has this been our only object? When, where, and by whom were the restrictions and limitations put upon our platform? Oh, could the shades of those Freethinkers who hav died a generation ago loom up before us, they would blush with shame at our cowardice and inconsistency and complacency of spirit. We should feel our littleness of spirit, courage, and energy before their well-directed attacks against the evils of society. We are to-day pursuing a decidedly retrogressiv course from that pursued by those who hav bequeathed to us traditions they fought and suffered for. This is bigotry and selfishness indeed on the part of those who hav assumed authority—a bigotry which, like the retina of the eye, closes before the glare of light, and seeks in the darkness that obscurity so necessary for its contemplation.

We are being deceived by the cant of progress. Our assumed leaders are trying to infuse into our society an enemy, an ever-watchful enemy, who cannot conscientiously go to the length of our principles, yet we are assured with an air of grave modesty that they will giv us material aid in the furtherance of our ideas. Three years will soon hav elapsed, but where is the help that is so much sought after and enlarged upon? Surely it is time that such a fallacy was dispelled from the minds of those having charge of our principles, and above all the means of propagating them. I venture to think that the attitude pursued by these people has, instead of effecting a conciliation, had a decided tendency to excite the derision of our enemies and the open distrust of our friends, a fact plain to be seen by the chary manner in which the subscriptions are coming in. Now, the "design of Secularism" (so-called), as it is generally understood, implies a course of action, public and private, in which the theories and sentiments of religion (so-called) are entirely discarded. The true Secularist is thoroughly convinced that all results arising from a belief in and a worship of a "supernatural" or "spiritual" power are injurious to the well-being of society, and therefore his aim and purpose in this life is to oppose the teachings and destroy the influence of those who are interested in the continuance of the evil. But the question for our consideration now is, whether we are satisfied with this retrogressiv policy pursued by the imperious and somewhat despotic sway of a self-elected dictator, or whether the time has not come for the inauguration of a bolder and more spirited course of propagandism to be carried into effect by a plan of operation that shall cause agitation among the theological world, and the consequent spread of free inquiry, together with the abrogation of that phase of religious belief which all intelligent Secularists believe to be at the root of all evil. Our cause is suffering to-day, and considerably, too, from the readiness with which persons pretending to hold Secular opinions hav placed themselvs in the van of our movement. It was generally the boast of Freethinkers that they were the pioneers of progress, and that they had always assisted with zeal and liberality the efforts of those who exhibited a manly courage in disseminating their opinions, but we cannot proffer ourselvs as such now, for we are hampered, burdened, and retarded by a clique of quasi-religious persons who, however good their intentions may be, in their own interests, still are utterly opposed to seeing a bold, brave, and energetic propagandism inaugurated, but who, on the contrary, will, if they are allowed, lead us in the opposit direction and into the hands of our enemies. Let us hav at the head of our party men, and women too, who are not ashamed of the name of Infidel, and who would scorn to hide behind an ecclesiastico-political conventionality. JOHN R CHARLESWORTH.

Dr. Westbrook's Policy for the Union.

L. K. Washburn in the Investigator.

We print this week a communication from the president of the American Secular Union on the policy of this organization. We must confess to no little surprise at the tone of this article. We had supposed that the principles embodied in what are known as the Nine Demands not only carried with them a protest against the evils of a practical union of church and state, but also a protest against the policy of the Christian forces by and through which such union was established and is now maintained. Could the emancipation of the negro be demanded and slavery not be condemned? Could freedom be demanded as the black man's rights, and the forcible deprivation of this freedom not be characterized as wrong?

Dr. Westbrook is aware that "Atheists, Agnostics, and Jews" are not responsible for the evils against which the Nine Demands are directed. He is aware that "Atheists, Agnostics, Jews," Infidels, Freethinkers, and others, who are outside of the Christian circle, had no part in forging the fetters which bind the state to the church. He knows who is responsible for the exemption of ecclesiastical property from taxation; he knows who is responsible for the hiring of chaplains for our legislativ bodies and public institutions and paying them with the people's money; he knows who is responsible for the presence of the Bible in the public schools; he knows who is responsible for all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as a holy day upon people who honestly and intelligently reject the faith upon which such observance is based; he knows who is responsible for the branding of honest men in our courts of justice as unreliable witnesses because they are too honest to take a false oath; he knows that Christianity and the Christian faith enjoy privileges and advantages under our laws, and he knows who is responsible for this state of things. If we should ask President Westbrook to say who is responsible for the evils of church and state, which the American Secular Union was organized to abolish, he would doubtless acknowledge that Christians were.

Can we demand that these evils be abolished and praise the men who are responsible for them? Can we demand that the wrongs we endure as Freethinkers, Atheists, Agnostics, be corrected, and approve of the religious faith upon which they rest? Can we, as Liberals, Secularists, work for the total separation of church and state, and, at the same time, indorse the church?

It seems to us that we are bound to attack the religious system which is responsible for the evils we, as Secularists, endure, and which we are working to abolish. President Westbrook declares that the American Secular Union stands for "state secularization and nothing else," and that "it is not, in my [his] judgment, necessary to say one single word about theology or religion." He interprets the constitution of the American Secular Union as meaning silence about the Christian theology and the Christian religion. This is the "policy" of the Union which he advocates. He says: "I must support the constitution or resign; and I do not intend to resign at present." Does President Westbrook mean by this that he expects those who do not agree with his "policy" to "resign" as members of the American Secular Union?

We can hardly imagin a person advocating the repeal of our Sunday laws, or the laws exempting church property from taxation, without reflecting upon the religious system which is responsible for these laws.

President Westbrook, in defending the "policy" he advocates, declares: "In my lecture before the congress at Portsmouth, showing why, in my opinion the Bible should not be read in our public schools, there is not one word regarding theology or the claims which the church makes for the Bible." It is not everyone who possesses the happy faculty of hitting a person and not being aware of having dealt a blow. It is generally known that the Christian church claims the Bible is reliable, and yet President Westbrook said in his lecture before the congress at Portsmouth: "Each of these accounts—the accounts of creation in Genesis—is absolutely inconsistent with what science teaches in our school-books."

It is generally known that the Christian church claims that the Bible is the "pure word of God," and yet President Westbrook said in his lecture before the congress at Portsmouth that "There are more than one hundred passages of the most coarse and vulgar description in the Bible. To print them in a book and send it through the United States mails would put a man in the penitentiary. There are entire chapters that reek with obscenity from beginning to end." To find out whether President Westbrook hit the church, let us ask the church.

We applauded the words of Dr. Westbrook when we heard them at Portsmouth, we commended them when he sent us his lecture in pamphlet, and we indorse every word of his lecture now. We hope he does not wish to take them back.

What President Westbrook says in his communication about "Materialists" and "Materialism" we are at a loss to understand. We hope that Dr. Westbrook is not ashamed of the company of Liberals and Secularists.

We still stand for an aggressiv policy on the part of the American Secular Union. The Christian church is our organized enemy, and it is through its teachings that the evils we are working to abolish hav been established. Emancipate the mind from religious superstition and the entire Secular battle is won.

Church and State.

THE SECULAR UNION AND RELIGION.

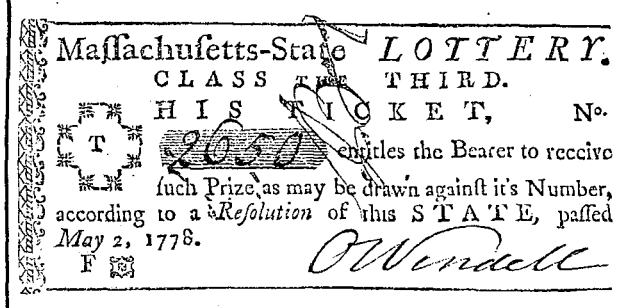
I cannot understand why Dr. Westbrook and Miss Craddock insist that the principles of the Secular Union hav nothing to do with religion, when it is the one purpose of the Union and the every point of the Nine Demands to eject and debar religion from state affairs, whilst it is the key-note of religion, the reason of its origin, its practice through the ages, its endeavor now, and its hope in years to come, that government is instituted by God to do his will, that the church is the master of the state, and that none but believers in the dominant dogmas and the panderers to the priesthood hav any right to a voice or title to benefit in civil affairs. True, there are individual religionists and occasional churches that oppose ecclesiastical interference in national concerns, but even they must object to priestocracy on account of their own inferior powers and through fear of being swallowed by bigger fish, rather than from any desire that the idea of God and the dignity of his statute be eliminated from our Constitution and courts, as they profess faith in the infallibility of the ancient and horrible fiction that the powers that be are ordained of God, and must, therefore, be submitted to whether we like them or no. It must, therefore, be held right that Bruno, Servetus, and Rogers were burnt, the Quakers hanged, and Williams banished, and wrong that Washington fought Lord Cornwallis, or else God made a mistake in his ministers.

A BAPTIST BACKING.

The religious education of children cannot be intrusted to the state; it must be left in the hands of parents, friends, Christians. For unless "the powers that be" make it a point to select none but earnest Christians to teach in the public schools there will be many schools in charge of persons who hav no interest in the Bible, and no power to awaken such interest. Yet who would go so far toward the union of church and state as to hav the latter sit in judgment on the religious character of a large body of servants? Most certainly the result of such inquisition and patronage would in the end be evil to all concerned (Alvah Hovey, Church and State, 1874).

That is what a leading Baptist divine and college professor has to say on the Bible in schools. If some of our liberal Christians and "softy" Secularists would assert themselvs as strongly, we should get over the hill of Zion and onto the plains of freedom much easier.

The Baptists hav generally and from the first stood firm for purely secular government, and they hav lately refused to join the crusade to make this a gospel government, howeyer inconsistent with the Bible and religion in general their action may be.



A PRESBYTERIAN'S PATRIOTISM.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: What we need just now is a revival of pure Americanism. There is an American life; there is an American character; there is an American history; there is an American destiny; and these are good enough and glorious enough for any man or woman who walks American soil. Allegiance to any other nation let everyone here forswear. Alliance with foreign nobility let every American daughter condemn. Every other flag of any other fatherland, let them one and all be left behind. As born or adopted citizens of this peerless American nation, we salute with a rapture of loyalty the one flag whose stripes were baptized in the blood of the struggle of a people for its independence, whose stars came forth from the awful darkness of a mighty civil war to shine with an increasing radiance upon a people's commonwealth (Geo. B. Spalding, D.D., First Presb. ch., Syracuse, N. Y).

The above is from a review in the Watchman, which heartily commends the whole discourse on the "American Idea." I do not know why the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER could not hav done as much for my address on "American Principle," which he slurred over with faint praise and insinuated reproach, though I therein argued for his own loyal sentiments. Perhaps he has tired of my contributions. If so, I will quit.

A JOB FOR JOHN.

I herewith mail you a genuin lottery ticket, at the risk of being gobbled up by Holy John. It is a back number, one that helped gain our national independence that John profits by as well as you and I.

Would he not hav his hands full if this state should see fit to follow its own precedent and reëstablish its lottery? If you are not afraid of his pious clutches, I would like you to get this ticket copied by electrogravure and print it in THE TRUTH SEEKER, but as reports of drawings by lottery are prohibited the mails, perhaps even the mention of an old ticket would be too much for the morals of the Sunday-school mail-pouches.

I hav no leaning toward lotteries, holy ones such as the Bible records and church fairs fakir in, or those of the profane sort from boys' marbles to Wall street deals, but I do insist that every mail-bag be marked, "Hands off," and that no censorship be imposed on pen or press, and no Holy Office be set up in the post-office. JOHN PRESCOTT GUILD.

Tyngsboro, Mass, Jan. 18, 291.

The Parsons Are Atheists.

"I believe in God, the father; in God, the son; and in God, the Holy Ghost." That is one of the oldest of all philosophical beliefs, and comprises, when rightly construed, an accurate figurativ description of an infinit living existence.

The acorn is both the son and the father of the oak, and contains a subtle and invisible "spirit," or power, which determins the nature and species of an infinit succession of oaks and acorns. So, also, of the seed of the apple, pear, quince, lemon, strawberry, or aloe, and of all seeds. They each contain a "spirit" peculiar to themselvs, by which they produce, from the same soil, water, and air, fruit that is sweet, sour, or bitter, as the case may be. Each seed is father, son, and contains the vital principle that was called the "Holy Ghost," and the three are one seed, not three seeds.

The Bible contains many writings, some of which are philosophical, some poetical and historical, and some—mostly interpellations—are parsonic; and in each of them "God" is regarded in a different light. The philosopher's "God" was what we call the reproductiv power. The poets created an imaginary body for him. The parsons added bone and sinew, and used the philosophic and poetic fictions as a means whereby to delude, tax, and govern a superstitious and ignorant people.

A finite mind may recognize infinity, but never can comprehend it. We recognize the facts of infinit time and space, but never can comprehend them. We recognize the infinit force and conditions the philosophers called "God," but no person ever can comprehend them.

The parsons profess to recognize God as a person (although they sometimes speak of him as a spirit), but no intelligent man can believe them. An omnipresent person must be shapeless, because he must extend equally in all directions. He must be motionless, because, being everywhere, there can be no place to move to. The parsons reject all belief in a possible God, and, hence, they are Atheists.

Townsend Center, Mass. WM. HARRISON RILEY.

Items of Foreign Freethought News.

The seventh indictment of Dr. Voelkel for blasphemy has been found, this time at Hamburg. And Mr. E. Vogtherr, of Berlin, stands a fair chance to be convicted of the same heinous crime, as the state court has in his expression, "God is a phantom," seen a malicious attack on an "institution" of the Christian church, for the existence of a veritable and cursing God is a necessity to that body.

Nowhere else are the Freethinkers so activ as in France, where every occasion is used as a means to propagate the principles of mental liberty. The various festivals and feasts, and some of the "sacraments" even, are adopted. But while the plan in itself is the same as the one used by the early Christian church toward paganism, the Freethinkers do not stop at simply changing the names; they keep the dates and occasions, but discarding the rest, put in its place humanity and the principles and teachings of mental liberty. We mentioned some time ago the various secular festivals instituted, and will add to these that of baptism, which is celebrated as a social festival, with speeches, music, and dancing.

At the beginning of this year things were lively in Sweden. This exceptional excitement caused by Henry Berghell is gradually wearing off, and common expectation is now centered upon a debate at Malmö between Mr. Ludwig Meyer and Mr. Lennstrand. We hav not heard how badly the former was defeated. The Christmas and Norwegian festivals were even more successful than last year. There is no doubt about it, Freethought, expounded and managed by men like Mr. Lennstrand and Captain Thomson, can not be ousted. The last number of Fritänkaren contains a biography and well-executed portrait of Mr. J. M. Wheeler, of the London Freethinker, the English spokesman for Swedish Infidels. Mr. Lennstrand announces that this year he intends to present the biographies and likenesses of such Freethinkers as by deed or writing hav earned for themselvs an international name as advocates of mental liberty.

In our last "Items" we noted the death of the Belgian Freethinker Cæsar de Paepe. Dr. De Paepe was born July 12, 1812, in Ostende, and died Dec. 19, 1890, in Cannes. In his youth he studied law, while working for his support at a printer's case; he discontinued this study later in life and applied himself to natural science and medicin. As a doctor he did much good, confining his practice almost exclusivly to the poorer classes, asking no compensation for his services. After his seventeenth year he was a Freethinker and Socialist. The disposal of his remains was made occasion for a great demonstration, joined in by university professors, eminent lawyers, municipal officers, Freethought societies, Freemason lodges, labor unions, etc. Over two hundred wreaths sent from Paris, Rome, Berlin, Lyons, Marseilles, Amsterdam, Madrid, etc., were carried in the procession. At the crematory Mr. Volders spoke on behalf of the workingmen; Leon Furnemont, advocate of the Belgian supreme court and editor of La Raison, for Freethought; Lawyer Féron, in the name of the Progressionists, and Professor Denis, on behalf of science. It would be well for Freethought did we count in our ranks more men like Cæsar de Paepe.

Lectures and Meetings.

PITTSBURGH Liberals will celebrate Thomas Paine's birthday, Thursday, January 29th, at New Grant Street Theater (near Seventh avenue) with an oration by Miss Ada Campbell, of Australia.

W. S. BELL is coming East on a lecture trip, and will pass through Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Chicago, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia, to New York. His address is Box 109, Oakland, Cal.

FRIDAY evening, January 23d, at the Manhattan Liberal Club, 220 East 15th street, Edward King will discourse about Thomas Paine. A newly discovered portrait in oil of Thomas Paine will be exhibited by kindness of its owner, Mr. J. H. Johnston.

THE Chicago Secular Union will giv a "Thomas Paine Entertainment and Ball" at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street, on Saturday evening, January 31st. The speakers will be Mrs. Mattie P. Krekel, Judge C. B. Waite, Mrs. M. A. Freeman, and General I. N. Stiles. Dancing begins at 9:30.

SUNDAY, February 1st, Dr. E. B. Foote, Jr., will tell the Brooklyn Philosophical Association "What's Best to Eat." Dr. Foote is a practical authority on anti-fat. The association meets at Fraternity Rooms, Bedford avenue and South Second street, Brooklyn, E D. New Yorkers take the Twenty-third street ferry.

Liberty in Literature.

We hav ready the Testimonial to Walt Whitman by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, a magnificently got-up pamphlet of nearly eighty pages, with portrait of Walt Whitman and the author. It is printed on heavy calendered paper, in large type, with beautiful paper cover. The text has been revised by Colonel Ingersoll, and the extracts from Whitman's poems by the poet himself. It is the only authorized and authentic print of the Testimonial. Price, 25 cents.

Communications.

Letters to Workingmen.

I would address the workingmen—the laboring poor of the world. Being myself a member of the "tin-pail brigade," I hav a right which you might in justice deny to one not of our fraternity. I may be able only "to tell you that which you yourselvs do know." I only hope my words may awake a thought, or stimulate a resolve, to do what little you may to work out the problem of our wrongs. The time is fast approaching when some action must be taken, or we shall become a nation of slaves, or rise in mad fury only "to find ourselvs dishonorable graves."

'Tis not in our stars,
But in ourselvs, that we are underlings.

With cool wisdom and brave determination we may walk out of the social labyrinth unharmed and unharming. You know the facts—we are poor; we do not receive the full fruits of our labor; we are supporting a vast army of drones, and this large non-producing class are growing fat and insolent, and sneeringly ask, "What are you going to do about it?" Well, this is the subject of my story. I do not propose to devote any of its chapters to "political economy," which I consider a most stupendous fraud —"springes to catch woodcocks"—an apology for appropriating the world's wealth. Man, in his individuality, is the only factor deserving any consideration. What he earns let him take. Man's labor creates all wealth; this we know, and it is sufficient to establish in justice the result, that man, the creator, should enjoy the benefits of wealth. But we find

The one owns city homes, and lands,
And the ninety and nine hav empty hands.

While it should really make no difference how this state of things was brought about, a study of the facts of this usurpation would, I believe, stimulate man to recover his lost birthright, notwithstanding the bias which the belief of centuries has established. Common sense must proclaim, in view of all the facts science introduces, the farther back we trace the history of man the more nearly he approaches the condition of the animal. And whether we accept the Darwinian theory of his origin, or the special creation of theology, the evidence has convinced even the most intelligent of the clergy that primitiv man was a savage. Man began in ignorance and brutality, and while I believe with the Materialist that evolution is ever on lines of least resistance, and devoid of any intelligent design, I would not quarrel with those who maintain the existence of some power working toward righteousness. A belief of some "great unknown"

That set those wheeling globes in motion,
And wound up the vast machine, may do no harm. It is, I believe, very important that you divest your mind of the idea of a theological God that can do something—a power or being somehow or somewhere whose will is supreme—for if such exist, all man's endeavor to correct abuses is an impertinence. With such a superintending and controling mind, the words of Pope are true,

Whatever is, is right.

To say otherwise is simply limiting the power and wisdom of supreme intelligence. I ask you to think it out. If man by his limited knowledge can take the crab-apple of nature and produce the luscious fruit of our orchards; if he can increase the size, beauty, and flavor of fruit and flowers, the speed, elegance, and strength of animals, what wonders might the infinit mind perform! It will not do to say, "God has given man wisdom to perform his will." If he wanted his will performed, why not giv him a little of his "infinit wisdom," and not wait for the slow course of evolution?

If you answer, "The laws of evolution are the laws of God," I merely say, the nature of the rose is not changed by giving it another name. To me, the terms "God" and "evolution" hav nothing in common. If it means anything, God is a supreme creator and controler and director—an omnipotent, omniscient, omnipresent being—while evolution is but another name for cause and effect. The forces of nature, ever in action, produce change, gravitation, chemical affinity, chemical union, effect, combinations. Certain elements in conjunction and under certain conditions giv rise to an action we call life. Of the how and why we know nothing. But to claim that the existence of these forces and their action, which we call the universal or natural law, necessitates a creator, is introducing a greater mystery to explain a less, and in no way settles the question, for the boy's inquiry is just as pertinent, "Who made God?"

It is easier for me to see in matter "the promis and potency of all terrestrial life."

And, as special design in the arrangement cannot be demonstrated, I prefer to believe that intelligence meets its highest development in man's brain. Professor Huxley says: "While it is thus a philosophical impossibility to demonstrate that any given phenomenon is not the effect of a material cause, anyone who is acquainted with the history of science will admit that its progress has in all ages meant and now more than ever means the extension of the province of what we call matter and causation, and the concomitant gradual banishment from all regions of human thought of what we call spirit and spontaneity." Why do I desire to convince you of the non-existence of a "supreme being?" It is this: As deity fades man becomes more prominent. If we can believe that man has reached his present high condition by his own endeavor, we exalt humanity. We feel a kindred for all animate creation. We are indebted to the generations past for our existence and enjoyment. Let us pay the debt by making the conditions a little better for those who come after us. Let us leave the world a little better than we found it. This requires no spirit of martyrdom, no religious altruism, only intelligent selfishness. Our own happiness is quite sufficient. This should admonish us to render justice as we hope for justice.

All mankind are equal. Any inferiority is due to circumstances often beyond one's control, while superiority is more often due to favorable circumstances than to any intrinsic value in the man. Human nature is about the same all round. Man began in ignorance and brutality and roamed this world for countless ages with the advantage of other animals only in constructing a simple instrument for defensiv and aggressiv warfare. When we consider the immense period that was passed in this low condition we realize what a slow growth man's intelligence has been. In that morn of evolution a single hour was as ten thousand years with us. But the "struggle for existence," "the survival of the fittest"—that is, those best adapted to take advantage of their environments—the strongest, the most cunning, he who could take advantage of others and bend them to his will—produced in time the warrior. As inventiv intelligence grew, man began to think, and to think of his thoughts. His dreams suggested a duality, a second self, that could leave the body and survive the body's death. His reflection, shadow, and echo was further evidence. Absolute ignorance of cause made seeming a reality. All motion was life—the winds, the rain, the thunder and lightning, were the action of unseen beings, hence his sacrificial offering to appease their wrath. His imagination begat signs and omens, the fetich and the ghost, and cunning minds were not slow to take advantage of this awesome fear; hence the medicin man and his power. The warrior, by his subjugation and acquisition, evolved the ruler and the governor. The medicin man became the priest, the many gods became one God. The ruler, to strengthen his government, invoked the aid of the priest. Hence the divine right of kings and royalty appropriating the wealth of the world. The laborer was a slave, and slavery was a divine institution. Justice had no existence outside the edicts of the kings or priests. Blasphemy was the highest of crimes. The rights of individual man unknown and unheard of. Thus we see labor has never lost its rights. It never had any to lose.

Matthew Arnold says, "Workmen hav no natural rights, not one. Only we ought instantly to add that kings and nobles hav none either."

But kings and nobles had what was better. They had the power, and they successfully asserted their "rights." They made the law, and they made the government to enforce the law of their "rights." We shall never hav "rights" until we hav the power to assert them.

Arnold said, "All rights are created by law." But he was wrong. All "rights" are created first, and the laws are made to preserve them. The "law" can make no rights. Neither can government grant them. I know governments claim to do this, and when public opinion sanctions the law it may be enforced, but if public opinion be against it, it very soon becomes a dead letter on the books. Do not confound government with civilization, or public opinion, or society. It has often very little in common with these. It is an institution founded by and still in control of a certain class to preserve and maintain their "rights."

Think it out, comrades. And I would suggest that you forego a little of that "harmless beverage," and economize a little on that "fragrant weed," and buy a little literature on that subject. Even the price of a "social glass," or a "fragrant Havana," can purchase a pamphlet on the question. Do not be afraid of a name, but read all schools of thought. Do not accept anyone as being authority, but think for yourself. Talk it over with your friend, your neighbor, at the social gathering, the lodge, and the hall, and I will write again. A. L. Ballou.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Agnostic Musings.

It is a matter for reflection with the Liberal thinker how long ere the Christians will look with the eyes of common sense and justice upon a fundamental error of their religion. The Christians overlook the fact that in their professed love for Jesus they are making their God, the one they worship, to be a fiend of the worst character for cruelty, and also to be imbued with the lowest, meanest, and most trifling passions. At times he seems to be Pleased with a rattle and tickled with a straw.

The future of this world is, however, hopefully better. But how long our architectural, untaxed, tinseled churches may continue receptacles for operatic music, perfumery, and fashion, can only be supposable. The primitiv or basic structure of Christianity must, however, retire before the higher realities of civilization as the crudities of matter unfold before the revealments of science. Science is really making our priests and reverends ashamed of living on the explanations of Mosaic fables, and their ingenuity is well-nigh exhausted. Thinkers of all degrees are becoming familiarized with the universal law of progress; and even the devoutly pious cannot help observing how wickedly our ancestors hav been terrified with the picturings of hell and horned devils.

Agnosticism leads us to know that all nature is God, and that nature's ever-operativ, universal, and inflexible laws admit of no transgression without retribution, and therefore loud and noisy praying to some imaginary God is evidence to the Liberalized thinkers of the sheerest ignorance and hypocrisy.

The desire of all Liberal thinkers is demonstrativ evidence referable to the tribunal of our reason.

It is strange what questions will at times be propounded to the Liberalized thinker. The writer has been asked numerous times, and also has asked others—Could it be possible, would they willingly reliv their past lives over again with all their cares, pleasures, hopes, pains, reverses, and disappointments? He has yet to get a single answer in the affirmativ. Is this therefore to be held as proof that all our mental enjoyments consist in anticipation?

And yet, as Mr. Paine says, "Let us not quarrel with nature." This is a glorious, magnificent world; a spacious academy or university for the production of man! It is true, some students, from unfavorable organizations, graduate to the gallows; many as depredators on their fellow-man; while others under more pleasant circumstances (perhaps the pets of their grandmothers, or aunts, or from genteel laziness) bellow repentance from some of our ten thousand pulpits.

And here starts another radical question, repentance. No man, woman, or child, ever burnt or mashed their fingers but they repented of their deed; and sincerely pledged themselvs never to repeat the folly if they possibly could.

Yes, this is a beautiful world for the exercise of our reason. And what adds to our happiness is the oblivious state of our individual future. This unhappiness can only be made endurable by the exercise of our reason. Here again let us reflect. We behold a procession of little Sunday-school children, all buoyant with anticipated pleasure, dressed in their best attire, and they are supremely happy! How cruel would the knowledge be to them if their future was fully laid before them by some wormwood croaker that many of them would in the hazy future experience the bitterest of anguish, mayhap in the loss of dearest friends, loss of wealth and health, yea, of reputation—and suffer criminal incarceration. No, it is a wise condition of man's being that he is oblivious to his earthly future, and at death the Agnostic's Hope dispels the doubt of lost individuality. D. B.

Brooklyn.

Aspects of Jesus and of the Christian Churches toward Property.

In The Truth Seeker of January 3d, under head of "Dividing Up," the relation of Jesuism toward privativ privilege in wealth was examined and compared with that of modern revolutionary Communists. Some names of propagandists were mentioned. They are rather a political than an economic school, though they profess some Marxisms. They are not to be confounded with practical communists, such as monks and Shakers, the followers of Jesus. There is a third class distinguishable as not celibates, and who call themselvs Christian Socialists, but I know of them only as a few sentimental aspirants toward a good time a-comin'. The renunciant attitude toward property, common to the sainthood, whether Christian or Brahmin, is not frankly altruist; it compounds with the selfishness of privativ privilege by private salvations and damnations, or ultramundane privilege. This hypocrisy is analogous to the pretended Anarchism of other Communists, whose political success would be the dissipation of their theory. No human instinct is more radical or universal than that of personal property; it is indeed but an expansion of the nutritiv nisus for assimilation, but true physiological property does not extend to those privativ monopolies which, without increasing personal welfare, prevent others from obtaining this. Only blind desperation can rage against personal property because of its abusiv extension over what is not personal in the means of associativ production. Proprietary and industrial association is very different from Communism, though it may hav

Communist accessories, as in education and the care of the infirm.

Leaving revolutionary Communism in the clouds of the future, where it begs against experience, the question of Anarchism or dispensing with government; I remark that if the tradition of industrial Communism among the Essenes of Judea is reliable, then the absence of any recorded effort of Jesus in that direction shows that he was but a visionary, distracted from practical work and distracting others. What does non productiv Communism amount to? As it cannot liv without consuming, it must be parasitic on industrial society, like monachism. For preachers, it tallies with the craze of the end of the world at hand in which Millerites still echo Jesus.

Christian churches in general hav not the excuse of this craze. With regard to property, they are factors of privilege by superstition. They seek the blood of labor, which they liquefy like venomous insects, by injecting moral poisons, such as their spirit beggary of vicarious atonement and salvation by grace. Essentially monopolist, they are all beggars of the question of destinies and enemies to scientific culture, which is the productiv industry of destinies. They change doctrins as snakes slough their skins, but their parasitic and domineering ambitions are constant.

Barren of productiv virtues since the brief exception of the Benedictines, they assume the direction of charities, with what results the Papal States may show.

Myths fabricated to humor ancient fantasy by personifying natural forces may be dropped with metaphysical theology, leaving the church a machine like the state, or governmental, for privilege and plunder. This transformation will unify the ecclesiastic and the political power, with "God in the Constitution," under such leaders as Wanamaker, Blair, and Fanny Willard. It is now being advanced under pretense of opposing certain corporate monopolies and absorbing them in a Governmental or State Socialist monopoly. This point of view explains our interest in the analysis of Christianity. M. E. LAZARUS.

A Little While With the Church Folks.

Our Schools to be Protestant.

From the Junior American Mechanic.

There is good reason to apprehend that our public school system will hav to encounter the severest criticism and the fiercest assault within the next four years. Unquestionably the Roman Catholics mean to press their case against this distinctiv American institution until they overthrow it or sustain a humiliating defeat. Infidels intend to giv this country no rest until every vestige of religion is banished from the schools if they can accomplish their purpose. In this contest the churches must hav their share. Every Christian should put himself in closest sympathy and contact with the schools, and every church should take this cherished element of our civilization to its heart.

Letters to Lay Over on Sunday.

J. E. Gregory to the Illinois Sabbath Association.

I wrote to Postmaster General Wanamaker, asking him if it was necessary that the mail clerks on the trains should be kept on duty on Sunday, and he responded that it was absolutely necessary on through routes. I tell you, my friends, the entire damnable system of train-moving on Sunday is directly traceable to the abominable practice of forwarding and delivering mails on that day. The railroad companies are compelled to run through trains to carry the mail bags, and they put on passenger coaches and invite the public to help them pay the expenses. The movement of freight trains on the Sabbath is indirectly chargeable to the mails. For instance, a godly man purchases a stamp of this professedly religious nation with a coin bearing the inscription "In God We Trust." Having bought it, he licks it with a tongue which is wont to offer up supplications, and puts it on a letter ordering goods. He knows the letter will travel on Sunday, and, knowing that trains must run, he thinks it no harm that the freight he orders should travel on Sunday also. Consequently he adds a postscript: "Rush the goods right through," which results in a Lord's day's journey for a freight train, and the consequent Sabbath employment of the men necessary to the welfare of the train. Now, what is the remedy for this evil? Now, the scheme I propose is that every person favoring reform in this line shall hav printed, stamped, or written on every envelope he uses the words, "Do not forward or deliver this letter on Sunday." Thus will the country in a very short time come to realize the seriousness of the question, provided a sufficient number of persons will support the plan. No politician in government employ can know what letters are from voters and what are not, consequently every envelope bearing the inscription will hav its weight.

Why Bouguereau's "Spring" Was Destroyed.

From the Omaha Bee.

Warbington made no attempt to escape and freely admitted that he destroyed the picture. He was taken directly to the station, where a Bee reporter questioned him regarding his insane act.

"I destroyed that picture to protect the virtue of woman," said the young man in answer to the first question.

"In what way do you think that picture endangers the virtue of women?"

"It is not a proper picture to hang in a public place. I saw those virtuous women looking at that picture, and the thought came to me, what would Christ do if he were here and saw this? I thought Christ would smash the thing if he were there, so I just took a chair and struck it with all my might."

"Did you ever see that picture or a similar one before to-night?"

"Not in a public place among respectable people. I hav seen them in houses of ill-fame, and knowing why they were found there I thought that the one I destroyed was out of place."

"When were you in a house of ill-fame?"

"Only a few days ago."

"Will you state the purpose that took you to such a place?"

"Yes, sir. I went there to collect a bill."

Warbington is a man about twenty-five years old, a little above the medium hight, and will weigh about one hundred and fifty pounds. He is evidently insane upon the subject of religion. He is a member of the United Presbyterian church, and has been identified, to some extent, with the Young Men's Christian Association.

The Pope's Lament.

From Leo's October Encyclical.

Not to-day only has Italy become subject to the wicked and evil influence of the sects; but for some time past they hav tyrannized over it as they liked, with absolute dominion and power. Here the direction of public affairs in what concerns religion is wholly in conformity with the aspirations of the sects; and for accomplishing their aspirations they find avowed supporters and ready instruments in those who hold the public power. Laws adverse to the church and measures hostil to it are first proposed, decided, and resolved in the secret meetings of the sect; and if anything presents even the least appearance of hostility or harm to the church it is at once received with favor and put forward.

Amongst the most recent facts we may mention the approval of the new penal code in which what was most obstinately demanded, in spite of all reasons to the contrary, were the articles against the clergy, which form for them an exceptional law, and even condemn as criminal certain actions which are sacred duties of their ministry.

The law as to pious works, by which all charitable property, accumulated by the piety and religion of our ancestors under the protection and guardianship of the church, was withdrawn altogether from the church's action and control, had been for some years put forward in the meetings of the sect, precisely because it would inflict a new outrage on the church, lessen its social influence, and suppress at once a great number of bequests made for divine worship.

Then came that eminently sectarian work, the erection of the monument to the renowned apostate of Nola, which, with the aid and favor of the government, was promoted, determined, and carried out by means of Freemasonry, whose most authorized spokesmen were not ashamed to acknowledge its purpose and to declare its meaning. Its purpose was to insult the papacy; its meaning that, instead of the Catholic faith, must now be substituted the most absolute freedom of examination, of criticism, of thought, and of conscience; and what is meant by such language in the mouth of the sects is well known.

Some Sayings of Sense.

The Meanness of Preachers.

George Alfred Townsend in Boston Globe.

In my youth I was sometimes called to go to Girard College and obtain its president, whose name was Allen, to come and preach for my father. According to the express will of Girard, no minister of any gospel had any right to enter the gate of that institution. He debarred from his hospitality priests of every sort, because he had been brought up in France, where much havoc had been raised by ecclesiasticism, and he, as a poor cabin boy, himself an orphan, believed in a higher and more equal opportunity for man.

Yet it was habitual in my youth for the preachers to visit Girard College simply because they were not wanted there. The provision against them seemed to whet their curiosity. This Mr. Allen was a sort of exhorter or local preacher, and he would come away from college and deliver addresses in country pulpits. The whole matter leaves upon my mind a dubious notion as to whether honor and religion are strictly complements of each other. . . .

If you look at the books which were written just before our civil war by clergymen upon the divine right left to man to debauch his slave woman and her children, you will wonder that any respectable civilization was left over to our time.

The Danger of a United Church and State.

Bishop Venner in a Recent Sermon

The mixing up of politics with religion, under any circumstances, is fraught with manifold and multiform dangers, especially in a young and free country. Chief among these manifold dangers is, either the establishment of a state church, or, what is equally dangerous, the predominance of any particular sect, either of which is the greatest possible curse in any country.

There is no tyranny so cruel, no yoke so intolerable, as priestcraft when vested with temporal authority. Priestcraft alone is odious enough, even though it can influence none but the most ignorant and unlearned. But spiritual villainy, supported by temporal tyranny, ever has been, is, and will be the very best representation of hell upon earth. More political atrocities, butcheries, crimes, and enormities hav been committed in the name and on account of religion than hav arisen from any and all other causes combined.

In any country where all religious sects are tolerated, and where religion is absolutely free, there is always great political danger lest any particular sect should become largely predominant. In this country the danger lies equally in regard to Methodism and Roman Catholicism. In the case of the former because of its ultra views on the liquor question and Sabbatarianism; and in that of the latter, because of its exclusivness and objections against the education afforded in the public schools.

The Trouble With the Prohibition Party.

From the Moon, Madison, Wis.

Many wonder why the Prohibition party does not go ahead as other new parties hav. Shall we tell you why? All right; we shall; but don't curl up that little nose of yours; there may be a considerable amount of truth incorporated in what we say. When you pick up the Prohibitionist platform, the first you can find is, they recognize the "Almighty God." What does this do? It excludes all disbelievers who are in favor of temperance legislation, and awakens disgust in the hearts of the believers who wish to keep religion and politics entirely separate. They hav opened their meetings with prayer and afterward used language, in many instances, unfit for the barroom, which must of course turn many people's stomachs against them. They beg continually at their meetings. It is a better way to solicit aid privately, as this public begging, accompanied by the preamble of their platform and the opening prayer, make a "common sinner" feel pretty much as if he was sitting in a house of worship, and as usual, he forgets what has been said. Then take the tail end of the platform, where they ask for the restoration of the Bible to our public schools. That completes it. You hav now a complete minister party, and you remember that the larger portion of the leaders are ministers. To these causes, muchly, you can attribute the standstill of the party in question. The people are afraid of priest-rule and they will not hav it.

Why?

"Old Timer" in a Chicago Paper.

Theologians and even philosophers tell us—the evolutionists excepted, for how can that be just which is without our power to avoid?—that "judgment for an evil thing is many times delayed, but it is sure as life, it is sure as death;" that "the great soul of the world is just;" that "there is justice here below, and, even at the bottom, that there is nothing but justice!" And yet why is it that in this "platitude of a world" the manliest man who goes in a ragged coat is never reverenced; that it is not even discovered that he is manly until he is able to purchase a new garment? Why is it that the man who gets himself appointed and elected is not the best and the ablest? And, finally, why is it in this complex problem of life that there be so many whom fate decrees must rejoice in "cold potatoes" and so few in "cakes and ale," apparently for no fault of theirs?

Another Constitutional Amendment.

Platform of the American Party of California.

As an important step in defense of the common school system of education, and the perpetuation of the separation of church and state, we join with other citizens in seeking to incorporate in the Constitution of the United States a sixteenth amendment embodying the following prohibitions: "No state shall pass any law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, or use its property or credit, or any money raised by taxation, or authorize either to be used, for the purpose of maintaining or aiding by appropriation, payment for services, expenses, or otherwise, any church, religious denomination, or religious society, or any institution, society, or undertaking which is wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control."

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - JANUARY 31, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ARTICLE ON

Alaskan Myths, with Original Illustrations.

By IDA C. CRADDOCK,

Corresponding Secretary of the American Secular Union, who spent several months in Alaska studying the country and its inhabitants.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

What They Say About the Picture Book.

Edgar Richton in Watts's Literary Guide.

To the purely aggressiv Freethinker, this volume will be welcomed with unbounded delight. The aim of the publishers and of the artist is to ridicule Christianity, to make mockery of theological pretensions, and thereby to shame mankind out of the pestilent superstitions of their forefathers. Each alternate page is allotted to the artist, Mr. Watson Heston, while the other is occupied with a formidable array of facts in explanation and support of the fronting illustration. We can guarantee that, to Freethinkers, the volume will afford considerable amusement; but we cannot recommend Christians with sensitiv prejudices to obtain it—especially if they are subject in any way to heart disease. The awakening effect might be appalling.

The World's Fair.

The Independent publishes in its issue of last week a supplementary batch of letters from cabinet officers, Congressmen, and governors upon the opening of the World's Fair on Sunday. The cabinet officers are Secretary Windom and Attorney-general Miller, and, as might be expected, they are both opposed to opening the Fair. Mr. Miller "holds that one day in the week devoted to rest is more valuable, both economically and morally, than used in any other way; while Secretary Windom expresses his earnest sympathy with the sentiment that would preserve the American Sabbath inviolate."

Sixteen governors are represented in the symposium; eight agree with the cabinet officers, five disagree with them, and three are astride the fence. Several more Congressmen are heard from, the majority in favor of Sunday closing. Congressman Stockdale of Mississippi is in favor of Sunday opening, and his letter is such a unique specimen of argument by which a politician can be with the people and also with the Christians that we giv it entire:

"I think the Columbian Exposition should be opened on Sunday.

"In expressing this opinion, I speak after reflection, and with due regard, I hope, for the sacredness of the Sabbath. The Exposition is expected to be an object-lesson on the civilization of the world, and will hav plenty of objects and subjects in it perfectly fit for Sunday study to occupy all the Sabbaths, for the same people will hardly be there more than two Sabbaths. We deem it proper to teach in our Sabbath-schools the geography and history of the lands and peoples mentioned in the Bible, as well as the different races, their laws, customs, triumphs, and failures.

"In those Exposition buildings people can learn more in one Sunday than by a hundred days of Sabbath-schools and by listening to a hundred sermons, and prepare themselvs, for the balance of their lives, to better understand discourses and writings on those most interesting themes.

"It would be regarded as eminently proper for people to go to some elegant church edifice and listen to Dr. Talmage and discourse solely on the people and products, lands and things, he saw on his trip East. Why not let those same people go into the Exposition buildings and see what he describes and learn that lesson better than they possibly could from description?

"There will be paintings by the old masters and by recent masters, as well as statuary, illustrating the great events in the history of civilized races. Living specimens of the present types of those races will be there.

"There will be paintings of the Holy Land and of sacred scenes more vivid and awe-inspiring than pen or tongue can portray—the birth, the miracles, the crucifixion, the resurrection, the ascension, all standing out in almost living characters and scenes, and the great works and achievements of the apostles and martyrs as well. They will impress deep and solemn religious sentiments on the minds of the observers, particularly the young, never to be effaced.

"In such surroundings there will be a thousand sermons grander and more effectiv than men can preach.

"I know it will be said, all these things can be seen on week days, and so can sermons be heard on week days, and other objects will distract attention from the proper subjects of contemplation; but there is something silent and undefined in a Sabbath morning that prepares the mind of saint and sinner for better and higher reflections, and leads by chords soft and charming to the contemplation of grand and holy subjects.

"The older Christians condemn the gorgeous equipments of church edifices as distracting attention from the simple worship of God. Modern sentiment considers it proper to worship, and expects sinners to be converted, amid these magnificent surroundings.

"The disciples plucked the ears of corn on Sunday, simply to allay a temporary inconvenience of hunger. Their health would not hav suffered until the morrow, nor would David's health hav suffered by one day's fast when he ate the shew bread.

"Some of the physicians of that day and this would hav told the man with the withered hand to wait until Monday, as he suffered no pain and had waited so long; but the divine physician would not postpone the opportunity to do good, and healed all who came to him at the risk of his life.

"The people who complained of his acts were neither hungry nor afflicted. There will be thousands of people at the Exposition, wealthy and cultured, comfortably housed, who can lounge and ramble away Sundays and remain there as long as they please. They can afford to apply the law strictly, as was attempted to be done to the disciples. But there will be other thousands there who cannot make a long stay, and other thousands still who cannot, or will not, be permitted to leave their employment except on Sunday. Those thousands must see the Exposition on Sunday or never. I believe that if the savior himself would speak, seeing those multitudes gathered there hungry for knowledge, he would open the doors and say: 'Many of the objects within testify of me; enter and be profited.'

"It is not a proposition to erect an entertainment on Sunday. All the exhibits will be in place, and the only question is: Shall the people be permitted to look at them with their eyes, or be locked out, and ramble to resorts or go out on excursions. To hide them away and bar the entrance to those buildings and present to the world the spectacle of that great International Exposition—collected from the four quarters of the globe—a very cosmos of itself, with its teeming avenues of information and marvelous lessons, concealed from view, and all those multitudes of poor people, anxious to behold and learn, locked out from a scene worth a trip across the ocean to see, would be merely to gratify a sentiment of a few people, and which is without good reason. Surely those who would keep the people out will be expected to suggest some better means of employing the time. All the churches in Chicago will not hold a quarter of the people. What shall be done with the balance? It will not do simply to lock these people out, and say we hav done our duty, and if they commit more sin it is not our fault. I suggest that services can be held in many places within the building. Let a great man preach in the Music Hall, and hav services in other places. Let pious and learned men lecture on the paintings of religious character, and giv information and infuse good sentiments at the same time. Far more good can be done in that way than by locking the people out and sending them rambling through the city on Sunday.

"I believe good morals and the interests of religion itself demand that the buildings be opened on Sunday.

"I hav written more than I intended, but as I occupy an official position in the government which givs standing to the Exposition, I thought due you in your high calling to giv my reasons."

We like better the letter of Governor Joseph K. Toole of Montana. He says without circumlocution or limitations that he is "in favor of keeping the Exposition open on Sundays." The governor of Ohio considers it a social question, and is in favor of opening the Fair on a part of Sunday, as is Congressman Quinn, of New York, who, being a Catholic, would open the gates after 12 o'clock, when the people will hav had time to attend mass. The governor of Idaho, V. B. Willey, would open the Fair for the "benefit of the poor people of the city of Chicago; they will find many things of more than usual interest in and about the grounds that will tend to elevate their standard and keep them from the saloons." The Hon. Dudley Coleman, Congressman for Louisiana, writes this queer letter:

"Should the Columbian Exposition be open on Sunday? I reply most emphatically, Yes!

"This Exposition is to celebrate the anniversary of the discovery of this country by an Italian, and in a country named after that Italian; and now shall we insult his memory and his name by a violation of the customs of his nativ country, by attempting to close the Exposition to those who from choice or necessity desire to enjoy the advantages, the rights, and the education of this Exposition by visiting it on Sundays? 'When in Rome we do as the Romans do.' Then, when honoring the memory of an Italian, why not remember his religion? This Columbian Exposition is to be an international affair, and as such we cannot expect that Puritan ideas should prevail. If an Exposition is ever held to celebrate the 'landing of the Pilgrims,' I should then be surprised to see that Exposition kept open on Sundays. If the Seventh-Day Adventists or the Jews should inaugurate and hold an Exposition for more than a week, I should expect to see it closed on Saturdays. The United States government has invited to the Columbian Exposition other foreign nations, prominent among which are our Latin-American neighbors, and they, following the customs of their countries, would not only prefer, but hav reason to expect, the Exposition to keep open and be running on Sundays."

The others, like pharisee Goodell, of New Hampshire, talk about maintaining the glory of the American Sabbath, when they mean that they desire to hav the Exposition closed on Sundays for the benefit of their own religion. Altogether, though, the expression of opinion obtained by the Independent is valuable, and shows as much liberality of views as could be expected from men in high places of profit, honor, and power. And we heartily agree with the Independent that "it is of vital importance that this question, whether the gates of the Exposition shall or shall not be open on Sunday, should be settled rightly." But we probably shall never be able to agree with the Independent's definition of right in this matter.

A Possibility for Protestantism.

Basing his estimate on the results of an actual religious census of a district on the west side of this town, the Rev. Mr. Junor of the Dutch Reformed church figures that the population of New York is thus divided with respect to religion:

Roman Catholics	762,666
Church-going Protestants	258,666
Non-church-going Protestants	253,333
Heathen	325,335
Total	1,600,000

With these figures as a text the Sun preaches a sermonet to the brethren, especially of the Protestant faith, which may well cause them to think. Of the non-church-going members of that church, enough of them, says that paper, ought properly to be included among the heathen to make their number equal to about one-third of the population. And neither can all the church-going Protestants be called Christians in truth. Very many of them are only outward conformists. At heart they are Infidels and heathen Agnostics. They keep up their religious observances simply as a matter of social propriety and to please their wives; but when they express their honest opinions they reveal themselvs as more or less radical unbelievers.

But if we went further, says the Sun, "and undertook to divide the population into those who cling sincerely to the old faith of Christianity and those who reject it wholly or partially, on which side would the majority be? Is it not probable that the truly faithful would be very far in the minority?

"The majority of Presbyterians, as the discussion and vote on the revision of the Westminster Confession hav shown, are all at sea as to their faith. They do not know exactly what to believe, but they know that they do not believe the doctrinal standards of their church as they are now. And as what they reject involves the very existence and sovereignty of a personal God, they are traveling on the road to total and downright Infidelity. The same may be said of the Congregationalists. So far as outward indications go, the Baptists and Methodists are less affected by the prevailing skepticism. The Baptist millennial conference in Brooklyn proved that at least a strong party of that communion retain the most childlike faith in the letter of the Bible; and the new and revolutionary school of biblical criticism, with principles and methods so destructiv of the old veneration for the scriptures as the veritable word of God, seems to hav produced little effect on the Methodist ministry. But, according to Mr. MacQueary, arguing at his trial, the ranks of the Episcopal church are full of heretics. 'I might a tale unfold about the good heretics in our church,' he said, 'that would probably make you tremble for the fate of traditional orthodoxy.' The discussions at the recent church congress at Philadelphia showed a tendency to accept the conclusions of the later scientific and philosophical criticism of the scriptures which seems to justify the remark. It looks as if Mr. MacQueary were suffering rather because of his indiscretion in giving public utterance to heretical opinions than because of his singularity among the clergy in entertaining them. If all the Episcopal heretics were arraigned for trial ecclesiastical courts might hav to sit permanently in every diocese. If all the heretics of every church were now burnt alive at the stake, as Servetus was burnt in 1553, the awful fires would hav to be lighted in every town and kept burning ceaselessly day and night."

Thus it is, if these words be true, that civilization is destroying Christianity, as our fathers knew it, eliminating the cruel and absurd, and leaving only a system of ethics which has nothing to stand upon. Without the interposition of science, without an appeal to reason and experience, the church will some time be in a state of moral chaos, and that not far in the future. It surely behooves the heretics of Protestantism to pay attention to this possibility.

The Macqueary Heresy Case.

The Macqueary heresy trial is affording the press of the country a great many texts for a great many newspaper sermons. The decision in the case is not expected for several weeks yet, and the sermons are likely to be multiplied many times.

Mr. Macqueary's heresy consists in denying that Jesus was born of a virgin and that there is a resurrection of the body. These are two vital dogmas of the Christian faith, declared plainly in the articles of the Episcopal church.

The views of the orthodox party are pretty well expressed by the Welsh monk, "Father" Ignatius, in a sermon preached in the Lenox Lyceum, his text being, "You shall earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." His view was that "while Freethinkers, Infidels, Agnostics, and Atheists had a perfect right to their opinions, they had no right to hold them and continue to call themselvs Christians." He went on: "The Macqueary case affords a magnificent opportunity for those who hav accepted Christ to say that those who do not believe the truths of Christianity shall not stay in the Christian church and continue to poison the spiritual waters which our children are to drink. It is a worse crime to thus poison the soul than to kill the body. It is the duty of the bishops to eradicate the poison that is now sapping the vitality of the church. If Mr. Macqueary is right in saying that the Rev. Dr. Heber Newton holds the same views that he does, Bishop Potter must put Dr. Newton out of the church. I hope Mr. Macqueary is mistaken, and if Dr. Newton is here and will say he holds to historical Christianity, I will be very glad to beg his pardon for thus publicly accusing him. But if what Mr. Macqueary says is true, out Dr. Newton must go. If I were a citizen of New York, I would petition the bishop to hav the awful charge against one of your best-known clergymen investigated, and if it is proved to be true, to open the doors of All Saints' church very widely. The question before us is not whether Christianity be true, but whether a man who does not believe it can stay in the Christian church."

The liberal party in the church hesitate to take this orthodox and logical view, because of the wide consequences which must logically follow. There are a great many Macquearys in the church, and the methods by which he has arrived at his heretical conclusions are the methods of a great part of Protestant scholarship. The very fundamental tenet of Protestantism, that the Bible is the supreme authority in matters of faith, is Mr. Macqueary's justification, for the matter must be decided by its teachings and they bear more than one construction. And while his construction may be different from that of many clergymen, it is reached in accordance with the methods of modern Protestant criticism, methods originating with German biblical scholars and followed by innumerable English and American "divines," chief among whom is Professor Briggs, who was but a few days ago pronounced orthodox by Bishop Potter, of Mr. Macqueary's own faith, and elevated to a high scholastic position by so orthodox an institution as the Union Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

The court trying Mr. Macqueary, therefore, has before it, says a very lucid review of the case made, it would seem, in the interests of the heterodox party in the church, "this whole method of biblical criticism to discover whether it is consistent with the faith of the church. As defined by Professor Briggs, it proceeds on the theory that the test of divine inspiration is the truth of the utterances of the scriptures. The old belief that the very language was inspired and dictated by God to human penmen, he dismisses as mere superstition, or bibliolatry, as he terms it. The divine authority, he teaches his Presbyterian pupils, 'is not in the style or in the words, but in the concept,' or what is conceived by the mind. Hence he brings in man's reason to determin whether there be inspiration from God. If what is said is true, it is inspired; if it is not true, it does not come from heaven.

"In other words, if we follow the precepts of Professor Briggs, the Bible is to be examined and criticised like any other book of religion. He does not hesitate to teach that while it contains inspired truths, it also contains unexplainable errors. He makes of it a fallible book, instead of the wholly true and awful word of God. The revelation of the almighty he finds not in the Bible merely, but also in the church and in the reason. He givs the reason the right to separate the chaff of human error from the wheat of divine truth and authority.

"Hence he rejoices at 'the age of rationalism, with all its wonderful achievements in philosophy,' since it is 'preparing men to use their reason' for this critical purpose. Neither is it surprising that he looks forward so confidently to 'a happy reconciliation' between faith and reason, though he would hav defined this outcome more correctly if he had called it the surrender of faith to reason. No scientific skeptic asks for more than a rationalistic judgment of the Bible on its merits solely, and not as a book singled out as beyond human criticism because it is the word of God, and therefore of indisputable authority."

An Episcopal clergyman, writing upon this case, said the prosecutors of Mr. Macqueary were really trying "a school of thought supported by an illustrious company of clergymen." And the position is summed up in these words by the reviewer before quoted: The court "cannot condemn him without condemning them; and if he is driven from the church, they ought to follow. As compared with them, he is small and feeble. Punishing him would be like whipping a pupil for following the instructions of a master whose wisdom he had been taught to reverence."

The Episcopal church is in a dilemma, from which it will require much shrewd squirming to find deliverance. But however the decision reads, the great fact brought out and emphasized is that heresy has found lodgment in the churches, and that the Christianity of to-day is not Christianity at all.

The Rev. Robert J. Burdette.

If there has ever been a "converted" scamp who has taken particular pains to vilify and misrepresent Freethinkers, both in the pulpit and in his humorous writings, that scamp is Bob Burdette. One of his malicious squibs on "Ingersollism" has been the round of the religious press several times.

The Christian Advocate of January 15th has a painful duty, it says, to perform with regard to Mr. Robert J. Burdette. That duty appears to be to rebuke his proclivity to get drunk. The Rev. Dr. Buckley writes, in sorrow, of course:

"A few weeks ago the New York Tribune published an account of Robert J. Burdette, the lecturer, having a drinking bout at Amherst College five years ago with certain students. The Times, of this city, on Monday, January 5th, published a dispatch announcing that the Rev. Robert J. Burdette lectured on Friday evening, January 2d, for the Young Men's Christian Association in St. Louis, and was to lecture Sunday afternoon, January 4th, at the same place, and at the Delmar avenue Baptist church in the evening. Mr. Burdette appeared at neither. The dispatch to the Times says:

"'The air is burdened with rumors of a midnight supper at Faust's Friday after the first lecture; that a gentleman looking very much like the Rev. Bob and answering to his name was there, various houses were visited, and wine flowed freely.'

"We are sorry to see these things, and still more grieved to be compelled to publish what we know as a warning to Young Men's Christian Associations, Methodist Episcopal churches, and Chautauquas, and all other institutions where morality and temperance are valued, not to employ Robert J. Burdette as a lecturer.

"Last winter he was announced to lecture before the Young Men's Christian Association in the Lyceum Hall of Morristown, N. J. A large concourse assembled, among the rest the editor of this paper. Mr. Burdette arrived late, and came upon the platform in a condition which led us to think him drunk. Observing him carefully during the entire evening, we had no doubt that he was but partially recovered from a spree. Subsequently he went to different rum-shops in the city, drinking and amusing the persons present, and left the place the next morning about daylight in an intoxicated condition. The Young Men's Christian Association, hearing statements of these things, investigated and found the facts as represented. The lecture bureau that furnished him to the Young Men's Christian Association investigated the matter, and found them as stated.

"What our duty was to the Christian public greatly perplexed us; but after reflection, in the hope that this was a mysterious lapse that might not occur again, we concluded to be silent; but when the program for the last Commencement exercises of Pennington Seminary, of which the writer is a trustee, was announced, and Mr. Burdette's name appeared, we felt it our duty to notify the president privately, that he might make inquiry and ascertain the facts. A committee of young men visited the Young Men's Christian Association aforesaid and the Lecture Bureau and discovered that the statements were correct, and the engagement was canceled.

"It now appears that instead of being an isolated instance at Morristown it is becoming a habit. Mr. Burdette is an ordained minister of a branch of the Christian church, unquestionably a man of genius, with whom we hav had large sympathy because of some pathetic elements in his earlier career, but the Young Men's Christian Association and the varied branches of the Christian church that hav employed him should be cautioned that they are liable at any time to be plunged into a scandal of this sort, and that the moral effect of employing him until he reforms is unquestionably evil.

"Publishing the foregoing with sorrow, we shall hail with joy the opportunity of placing upon the same page proof that Mr. Burdette has become worthy of Christian confidence."

We hope that now the Rev. Robert J. Burdette will cease lying about Infidels and Infidelity, and attend to the reformation of himself!

The Natural and the Supernatural.

A writer in a Christian journal criticises his fellow church-members for what he considers their "irrational prayers." His text is the sickness unto death of a daughter of his neighbor and the vain supplications of a churchful of people for her recovery. He says:

"I could not join in the prayers, I could not lift my own voice in petition. To my heart it was mockery, it was irrational; and yet it is done every day, and he that does it mocks God. Christians who would not pray that roses might bloom in December, or that the apple might be ripened in May, will do the equally silly thing of praying that God will stay a self-limited disease. Yet the laws of the disease are no less absolutely fixed than the laws of flower and fruit. A fever is a self-limited disease, of certain course and character. You may pray that its duration be stopped, but will you gain anything?"

We contend that when a Methodist writes such words and a Methodist journal publishes them, hope for the final prevalence of Rationalism is not without ground. The significance of the matter, however, may be thought by some to be lessened because the writer is a doctor. The more one knows about the natural the less he believes in the supernatural.

For Boycotting a Bakery.

Mrs. Maria Kullberg kept a bakery in East Boston. Mrs. Kullberg has a child. She also had the Roman Catholic religion, and has some of it now, but not so much as formerly.

Mrs. Kullberg used to send her child to the parochial schools, but as it learned little she transferred its attendance to the public school. Thereupon Rev. Hugh O'Donnell, her priest, excommunicated her and ordered his parishioners to boycott her bakery, to the complete ruin of her little business. And now she has entered suit against him for five thousand dollars damages.

Such a suit as this has once before been decided in Boston, and against a priest. If Mrs. Kullberg can prove damage to her business from the boycott, it is likely that Rome will learn another lesson. The damage from the excommunication, however, will be hard to estimate.

Letters from Friends.

DUSHORE, PA., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $5. Please send me the ANNUAL for 1891, and use the balance for benefit of THE TRUTH SEEKER. W. WHITTICK.

CHICAGO, ILL., Jan. 8, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I herewith inclose $3.25 for the subscription to your ungodly paper and for one of those ANNUALS for 1891. I hav one of the "Pictorial Text-Books" that my two little girls never get tired looking through. It seems to be always new and interesting to them. If you had anything else with pictures in I would order it immediately. As solidly for our cause as any man living, I am,

Yours honestly, W. E. FOULKES.

SIX MILE BROOK, N. S., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $3 for the year 1891 for the almighty TRUTH SEEKER, and twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL, whatever it is—I don't know, and I do not believe God knows, either. However, keep the flag flying. A blessed change is gradually and surely coming. I am agreeably surprised sometimes, when I travel among the people, to meet with so many skeptics and unbelievers in the old hell-fire superstition. JAMES BARRY.

ESSEX, IA., Dec. 29, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I inclose $5, for which I wish the valuable paper, THE TRUTH SEEKER, one year, also the "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book" I hav been a reader of the Boston Investigator about three years. What is the price of your paper in clubs? There are a great many Liberals in this vicinity. Please send a list of Liberal books that you hav for sale. There are a few school-teachers here who hav tried to enforce the scholars to read (and believe) the Bible every morning, also to pray; but the directors objected, and it was stopped at once. THOMAS G. H. PORTER.

MOUNT PLEASANT, PA., Jan. 19, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I want my paper every week, and on Saturdays if possible, for I feel lonely on Sundays without it. I tell you that it is quite a treat, after a hard week's work, to receive the glorious TRUTH SEEKER, and hav the grand privilege of perusing its multifarious subjects on the holy Sabbath. Watson Heston is a terror with his pictures—that is, to superstition. And how true to the nature of the subjects he handles! His pictorial sermon on Matt. vii, 9, is exactly the thing. I know it, for I hav been there.

Yours truly, JAMES RODGERS.

MOUND CITY, Jan. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I must hav THE TRUTH SEEKER while I can pay for it and see to read it. Mr. Peck's letters suit me. They drive home and clinch. I hav them read when I can. I meet many who are like myself but tell me they cannot afford to subscribe to THE TRUTH SEEKER. I tell some of them it is worth $3 to them to lose the fear of the devil and brimstone. The church-members do not trouble my wife for cakes or anything in that line. They pass by on the other side. I do not trouble their God-houses, so they mark me down for a hard old cuss. I like the way Heston does things up. Yours for Universal Liberty,

JAMES ADAMS.

ROOKPORT, MO., Jan. 17, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I herewith send a petition to open the World's Fair on each Sunday of its continuance. I solicited 274 persons, and 250 signed the petition. Do you not think that is a pretty good showing? There is one dear old parson writes a wail to one of our local papers. He says: "Whither are we drifting? Here we hav the saloon, and a number of our leading citizens memorialize the Columbian Exposition commissioners to keep open on Sunday, thereby overthrowing the Sunday law. Whither are we drifting?" Oh, dear! I think I will get up another list. I think I can get another 250 names with a little effort. I wish you would send me your TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL when it is ready.

G. G. BEOK.

GOLDEN, IA., Jan. 13, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Charles Watts gave two lectures in the city hall, Manchester, Ia., on the evening of January 6th and 7th. The first lecture—subject, "Secularism and Christianity: Which is Superior?"—was delivered to a small but attentiv audience. The second lecture, "Christianity, Its Nature and Origin," was listened to by a larger audience, in which were three ministers, one priest, and a half-dozen lawyers. During the lecture Mr. Watts challenged them to debate, but at the close of the lecture when the call was made for questions and criticisms there was no response. All convinced? Yes, convinced that they could not answer him. Although the Christian angels of suppression gobbled up the five hundred hand-bills which we had printed and posted, the lectures were a success. R. N. HOWE.

MANCHESTER, MO., Jan. 7, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Please send THE TRUTH SEEKER to the following address for one year. Inclosed find $3 in payment of the same.

I cannot get any other subscriber here. There are but few Liberals in this vicinity, and some of them are too poor to subscribe. I giv my papers to some of my friends after reading them, and hope in this way to do some good. It is sowing good seed that will soon take root, and bring good fruit some day. But we cannot expect to make much change for many years to come. It is my opinion that the weakest point in the orthodox lines is the Sabbath superstition, and if Liberals can break the line there it will be easy to make further advances. It seems to me that Remsburg's "Sabbath Breaking," if it was published in a pamphlet of about twenty-four pages and sold at ten cents, would do much good, as there are many persons who would be willing to read it who would not read a larger work or a more radical work. There is nothing in it to offend any intelligent church-member, but it might set many to thinking and lead them to further investigation. C. W. CAINES.

OSWEGO, ORE., Jan. 9, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: There is nothing that givs me more pleasure than to read your valuable TRUTH SEEKER, and to bear the proud title of "Infidel." Oswego is a small place six miles south of Portland. It has about six hundred inhabitants, and three joss-houses, namely, the Catholic, Congregational, and Methodist. The Methodists hav the only Sunday-school. This Sunday-school has an Englishman to teach the Holy Queer class. When Samuel P. Putnam billed this place for a lecture this Sunday-school teacher cautioned the school about going to hear the "Infiddle" speak. When Putnam came I told him of it, and in the next issue of Freethought the following article appeared: "If there is anything in the world that will make a Christian dance, it is the music of an "In-fiddle."

Long liv Heston and the cartoons! E. L. DAVIDSON.

MOUNT PLEASANT, UTAH, Jan. 9, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: In see in your most reasonable paper that a gentleman by the name of John Peck wants to get a Christian of mustard-seed faith just now for the benefit of the sick, and givs a very fair offer of $1,000 a month. It has almost made me sick ever since I read it that I am not a Christian, as I am only getting $25 a month for grubbing land. Would Mr. Peck also furnish a couple of hold-ups, as in the case of Moses when they were busy killing babies—they could not run, you know? For if so, I will look around and see what I can do.

The Lord says, Pray and you shall receive, but I do not think that praying will do any good just now. He has got too many churches on his hands. Has too many irons in the fire. I know he must be terribly busy just now, because I never see a minister call on him nowadays when they are sick; they always call on a doctor.

But the Lord also says, Hunt and you shall find, and so I think I will take a hunt and when I find I will let you know. However, in the mean time, I will tell all the Christians I see about the offer, as I consider it a fair one, after all. A happy New Year to Mr. Peck and THE TRUTH SEEKER. NEILS P. NELSON.

OXFORD, NOVA SCOTIA, Jan. 12, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Things are running along about the same in this town. The churches and Salvation Army still keep hammering away. That they are making their members any better is not, however, very evident, as we hav lately had an exhibition of some of the worst and most crooked business transactions ever seen in this neighborhood. Had the parties been strangers (as were the "Picturesque Canada" agents), we would not hav been surprised, but when we see them going to church two or three times every Sunday, carrying a bundle of books under their arm almost as big as a haystack, pinching their Bibles so tight that the middle appears to be being pinched out at the ends, attending prayer-meeting on week-nights, bawling praises to God from the choir, being made deacons and elders of churches, looked up to as the leading men of the town, holding up their own honor and integrity as things beyond taint, it seems a strange thing that so many still hang on to the church and its superstitious humbug, notwithstanding the trickery and knavery carried on under the cloak of religion. We are trying hard to get them to open their eyes and see, but it is a difficult matter, as the people here hav got so full of the Holy Ghost they hav no room for common sense. Wishing you a happy New Year, I remain,

Yours truly, SUBSCRIBER.

GLASFORD, ILL., Jan. 14, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Please find $4 25, for which I wish you to send "The Candle From Under the Bushel" to the parties mentioned below. I was very sorry to hear of the disaster which befell Mr. Wm. Hart, of Kirksville, Mo., author of "The Candle From Under the Bushel." I bought a copy of his book six months ago, and would say it is the best book I ever read. And THE TRUTH SEEKER is the best paper. "Christianity Before the Court," by John Peck, is worth the price of THE TRUTH SEEKER for one year alone. I hope Peck may liv to be as old as Methusaleh, so he can keep Christianity before the court. That is just what we want. As for the pictures, I would say, let them come. I would like to see one on every page of the paper. I keep hotel, and I keep THE TRUTH SEEKER on my desk and the pictures draw the attention of most of my guests. We hav two churches in this place, Methodist and Baptist, and I do not think there are over twenty-five members in all, and most are women and children. The circuit was so hard up last year that they could not pay the Methodist pulpit-pounder, so I took a subscription paper and raised him $50 to get away on. I only got about $7 of that amount from the church-members. Superstition and religion go hand in hand. When ignorance rules the innocent suffer, as in the case where the Lord struck David's child when he should hav struck the old devil David instead. W. F. FAHNESTOOK.

TERRELL, TEX., Jan. 10, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav just heard two lectures at Forney, near here, by Samuel P. Putnam, on "Liberalism," and "The History of the Bible." They were the first Liberal lectures ever delivered in Forney. Mr. Putnam handled them so nicely that I am sure the church people who heard him hav a different opinion of us and our cause now than they had before his visit. There was a good crowd out for Forney, and they gave the speaker marked attention. Mr. Putnam set our cause squarely before them, and showed its superiority to orthodoxy in producing good fruit. Then he furnished Liberals with solid food.

I wish that Mr. Putnam could deliver these two lectures in every community in Christendom. They are just such talks as our cause needs. Church people need them to get the truth. The weak Liberals need them to prevent starvation, and to giv them life.

We are to hav a four days' debate here, commencing February 2d, on the inspiration of the Bible, by Mr. O A. Phelps, Liberal, and Mr. A. O. Riall, pastor Christian church. We are expecting a good time. We will show the church before we get through that we hav something on our side worthy of attention.

I see much hard work before us, but I can see encouragement. Boys growing up are hearing these things, and the church can never control them as formerly. They hav lost their power over the thinking people. There are men now in every community talking our cause. We need only organization, and a way to circulate our literature, and it would cause such a revolution of thought and good as was never seen in any country. T. C. GLASS.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I admire your article on what kills Secular Unions and Leagues in your first issue of the year. It seems to me that nothing can be done to advance the cause of humanity while Christianity exists and while priests can rule the people with the idea of a ghost who will punish them everlastingly if they refuse or neglect to do as they tell them. In reading history we find the origin of almost all the wars and massacres of the last fifteen hundred years has been religion. But for it this world might hav been a paradise compared to what it is. It blotted out the civilization already attained by the Greeks, the Romans, and the Moors. Religion has been the curse of the world. In all ages it has divided the people into two or more hostil armies, and now in the short time since Stanley has opened Africa, the marquis of Lorne tells us in the North American Review, the natural rivalry of the priests of the Catholics and Protestants is a little disappointing. For instance, in Uganda they hav divided the natives into two parties. The Katolica, as the Roman Catholic blacks call themselvs, are at civil war with the Men of the Book, as the Protestant blacks are called. Then the Arabs come and use these divisions, and King Mwanga had lately to hold his court in the security of an island in the great lake Victoria, because he was powerless on the main land. Serious conflicts hav occurred between the rival factions, and the missionaries hav been more occupied with dressing wounds of late than with the care of souls. The old united nation of Uganda has been rent in twain. This has been the fate of all nations who admit the Christian priest, until one faction crushed out the other. And if either faction gets the control of the young in either parochial or public schools, farewell to freedom. They will hav the people of this country as they hav in all others where they hav been admitted, with their hands on each other's throats. JOHN DOWNES.

NATIONAL HOME, WIS., Jan. 17, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: May the gods lie with impunity? Now, the Christian's God repeatedly called himself the son of man, and said he had not where to lay his head (Luke ix, 5, 8); yet the veriest idiotic Christian living knows well enough that he was not the son of man, but God's son, and God himself at that; and that he built a limitless universe for his own use, and had several places to lay his head. Then, let us go back to the prophet, who is the best of Christian authority, for he cries out vehemently: "O Lord God of hosts, why is my pain perpetual and my wound incurable which refuseth to be healed? Wilt thou be altogether unto me as a liar, and as waters that fail? . . . O Lord, thou hast deceived me, and I was deceived" (Jer. xv, 20). It is quite evident that for "plain home talk" and holy impudence Jerry excelled, and would hav proved a host in himself in a Sunday-school like unto that of the great Wanamaker's, especially on the divine curse. Hear him: "Cursed be the day wherein I was born: let not the day wherein my mother bore me be blessed. Cursed be the man who brought tidings to my father, saying, A man child is born unto thee, making him very glad. And let that man be as the cities which the Lord overthrew, and repented not: and let him hear the cry in the morning, and the shouting at noontide; because he slew me not from the womb," etc. I regret exceedingly that the obscenity laws of our country prevent my quoting the balance of this sanctimonious slush belched forth by this lachrymose prophet Jerry. So I must forbear. Prison bars are dolesome things to gaze upon from the dark side. Yea, verily, giv our school-children the Bible, lest they forget Abraham's God in the days of their youth, and wax gleeful over Joshua lassoing the sun. NELSON HUNT.

BYRON, MINN., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: As souls hav advanced in value, as they usually do about this time of the year, our saints (?) are holding a week of prayer, prepraytory (preparatory) for a messiah craze revival. They are putting on their war-paint, and the war-cry is heard in the land. Wounded-Head of the Methodist tribe, and Young-man-who-is-afraid-of-the-Infidel of the Baptist band, are somewhat hostil toward one another, and it is feared by our most respected citizens that an outbreak may occur at any time, but as their weapons are nothing but thick-pointed lances (tongues) the battle is not liable to be more serious than heretofore. None hav been killed, but some quite seriously wounded in reputation. Our Baptist minister here said he would be glad to visit me, but I had to promis that I would not mention the Bible to him while at my house! When asked if it was not his place, nay, his duty, to expound, instruct, clear up the mystery surrounding this book, his answer was that when the devil had hardened a man's heart against God and his works, it was almost impossible to take him from his (the devil's) clutches. What grand reasoning this is! I asked him what the promis was worth, As long as the light burneth the vilest sinner may return.

I hope that Mr. Peck will liv to see a good many years, as he is doing lots to wipe out this drivel called Christianity. And there are our noble Ingersoll, Jamieson, Remsburg, Reynolds, Mrs. Besant, Miss Gardener, and our Miss Wixon, who help to make our grand old TRUTH SEEKER the best paper in the world. I hope to be able soon to send to you for some books. I wish you would send me your list of publications.

I wish to invite any and all Liberals to write me, as I would be glad to read letters from anyone who is the friend to humanity, and who has the backbone to express himself as against a fraud, whatever name it bears. Wishing you and the readers of your paper prosperity, I am,

Fraternally yours, WALTER A. JOHNSON.

MOUND CITY, KAN., Dec. 30, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: I hav noticed one or two communications in THE TRUTH SEEKER the past summer against Prohibition in Kansas—rigmarole, little truth in them. The fellow seemed to run on greatly about the detraction and falsehoods alleged against temperance folks. The fact is, he was all wrong, and, only excepting a few cities like the one he writes from, Leavenworth, Wichita, etc., Prohibition has prohibited. The quiet, rural population of this state of Kansas has been greatly benefited by the temperance cause as it has been run. One needs no greater evidence as to which side detraction has been fulminated on than those communications from his prolific pen. There are quite a number of political heads in this state that are so demoralized that truth with them is fiction, for they deny points and facts of history with a subversiv purpose that tends to perturb states, and every philanthropic man or woman who assumes to contravene them is a mark for all the slander they can invent. Being without fair argument to answer their opponent, they stoop to assail character, as a means of support, and for political effect to sustain a sinking cause. When these cormorants are ousted from power and place, and dominance in society, and old corrupt parties are supplanted by a new party on more beneficent principles, then the "purification of politics" may not be an "iridescent dream." The people are getting awake out of their Rip van Winkle sleep of twenty-eight years and dreaming of pleasure, while being robbed by the million, cheated, impoverished, and enslaved through the acts of professed politicians, who hav cast their soporific reasonings toward the masses in order that monopoly may filch from their pockets. Yours, WM. B. LEWIS.

EAST RANDOLPH, N. Y., Jan. 18, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Having just returned home from the revival meeting in progress in the Union church of this small city between the bramble-tipped hills, I will write a little about it. Two white-collared fellows called preachers, from Brooklyn, N. Y., hav been converting a few souls to their way of thinking during the past two weeks. We understand the following persons hav "sought and found Jesus:" Mary Dixon, our artist, a pure and lovable and esteemed young lady, who seemingly could be no better. She got scared under the Jonathan Edwards style of preaching, and her intellect gave way to her emotional nature, and she was captured by hearing about the dreadful and frightful pictures of hell. Poor girl, we pity her, and all such tender souls. Katie More, her companion, a pure-minded little girl, got scared also. Joe Wescott, John Hammel, Fred. Burker, Homer Dixon, Mrs. F. L. Rich, Mrs. Chauncy Helmes, Mrs. Jula Parker, Lizzie Golden, Dora Dow, Frankie Dow, Kittie Crawford, Dud Wait, and Mrs. James G. Benson, all "stood up for Jesus." Amid the tumult of voices and discordant singing the "good sisters and brothers" went forward to the "mourners' seats" and breathed out upon the unwholesome, oppressiv, and poisonous atmosphere the learned words of speech we hav often heard them repeat before—nothing new, no advancement, the same old whangdoodle expressions, synonyms of superstition.

I hate those who put lashes upon the body, and I despise those who put the soul in chains. As a matter of fact, who can reasonably teach what is not known? The 21,757,171 Christians of America know no more about the future than the unlettered savage of the wild West, for both are as ignorant about the whence and whither of our lives as the lonely rivers of the unpeopled waters or the snow-kissed mountains of California. Fear is the jailer of the mind, and superstition is the assassin of Liberty. Religious persons are convicts and within their brain you will always find some weeping sorrow sits that longs to see the bright and happy dawn of joy, a joy they once possessed, until they yielded their freedom, manhood and womanhood, to the slimy coils of superstition. O fellow-travelers, joy and sorrow intermingle in the lives of all, but the less sorrow and more joy the better. The brightest day is dark enough without our adding to its darkness by going to "revivals" and picturing to ourselvs and friends a painful future. Look upon the bright side of life, friends. Death is the inevitable law of nature, but, friend or reader, all that is good and noble is secure from the moldering touch of time, and every generous impulse of the human heart should blossom into loving deeds, and liv to be a pall-bearer at the grave of all the creeds of superstition's night. Banish all fear from your souls, and liv in the enjoyment of the present. The future will take care of itself. Sincerely, R. R JONES.

PRIOR'S CORNERS, Jan. 14, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Through trading with Mr. T. Moffat, of Orillia, Canada, I was loaned a copy of THE TRUTH SEEKER, and hav bought one weekly ever since. I am more and more, as weeks pass by, satisfied that it is doing a great work. Many of the leading articles are eminently qualified to brush the cobwebs of superstition from the minds of all readers, especially honest seekers after truth. Heston's cartoons are beyond all praise. He is a genius of no mean order.

I would by your permission giv to the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER a short account of my experience as a truth seeker. I was born in England of Methodist parents. My grandmother was one of the earliest converts to Methodism in the county of Derby, she having heard John Wesley preach several times. In my teens I joined the Methodist church and was in communion with that church until 1868, when I left England and settled in Canada. While yet in my teens I was made a teacher in the Sunday-school. As a member of the church and a teacher I deemed it my duty to use my best endeavors to be useful. Prompted by this motiv, I listened attentivly to the preachers who from time to time addressed us from the pulpit, who assured us that their word was a counterpart of the Bible, which was the inspired word of God. Of course, being a novice, I believed all they said, and endeavored to conform my life to their teaching. These preachers did not fail to tell us all about Adam and Eve and the woeful consequences of their eating the forbidden fruit; that their loving God held us responsible for our progenitors' sins as well as our own. These assertions rather staggered me, but I tried my best to "bolt the whole hog, bristles and all." And further, we were warned that if these sins were not repented of they would sink us in the lowest hell of fire and brimstone. I became very anxious to keep out of those hot quarters, and did my best to repent as directed. Having repented, as instructed by these self-styled embassadors of Christ, I was told that a further work of grace must take place in my soul ere I could be safe. This consisted in what they termed being justified by faith in the efficacy of Christ's blood. I did my best to exercise the justifying faith insisted upon by these divinely illumined men. At this point I thought I had got to the end of my trouble, when I was informed that there was another step I must take before I could take my place among the blood-washed throng who day and night thronged the streets of the New Jerusalem. This consisted in entire sanctification. Under this sage advice I determined to scale the last hight, and thus hav a full claim to a good lot amongst the sanctified. Thus I did my best to pervert my proper nature, and failed. My duties as a Sunday-school teacher necessitated much scripture-reading to prepare myself for the efficient discharge of those duties. This I conscientiously did, as I also read any books recommended as aids in the task of mastering the difficulties by which I soon found myself encumbered. After years of study and patient determination to reconcile the irreconcilable, I gave up the task; and, to make a long story short, I tried to stay myself at Unitarianism, but found that between "Rome and reason" there is no halting-place. Since I got clear of the thralldom of the creeds I hav found true satisfaction; and I am doing my little best to pull down what for years I did my best to build.

In your paper of the 3d inst. the poem, "A Petition to the Senate and House of Representativs of the United States," is one of the cleverest things I ever read upon the subject touched upon. I suggest that it be printed on fly-sheets and be circulated as thick as autumn leaves. I am,

Yours with much esteem, PERCIVAL TAYLOR.

RED CANON, WYO., Jan. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: A journal so full of truth as THE TRUTH SEEKER lends vivid contrast to a lie.

To see a silly advertisment by some quack of his "cure-all" is quite in time with the money-making instincts of a non-truth-seeking press. Birds of a feather flock together, and traffickers in lies consistently stand side by side in the religious journal, while quite often the bray from the pulpit reinforces the charlatan's quack.

The one pictures vividly the horrors of bodily disease ante-mortem; the other discourses on the pyretic condition of the soul in an assumed post-mortem state.

Both hold in their hands a balm, a "cure-all."

Dr. Quack will sell his universal panacea for $1 per bottle after first advertising to cure you free.

The man that dances under a loud-mouthed bell cries "salvation free" with long-drawn "whangdoodle" utterance. Then he draws a check payable in eternity's bank in return for checks on mundane banks.

Both quacks and preachers learn deftness in the art of fingering the keys of fear in human minds to tunes of hope that boom the earthly and the heavenly nostrum stocks to make the quacks and preachers richer and the people poor. The world's truth seekers hav been its modest men, and as they older grow they see the horizon of the unknown grow wider. Thus they hav not claimed to be infallible. The alchemist, magician, and astrologer were the infallible men of old. They were truth knowers that had never been truth seekers.

The much they knew blocked all their seeking mental wheels.

They showed to the credulous what seemed wonderful, and thus inspired a fear in other minds that checked the search for truth.

Thanks to the truth seekers of the past, we liv to-day in an age of science and business.

The man who claims to-day to hav a medicin that will permanently cure dropsy and asthma without fail deserves the contempt of every truth lover and truth seeker. Science has not solved those problems yet, and such arrogant claims are insults to the toiling thousands of honest truth seekers in the science of pathology—which is daily advancing, no thanks to these charlatans.

Likewise the man who claims to work for nothing insults every honest man that, in tenor with upright business methods, exacts just payment for his toil. This man is not a business man, but a mere pirate on the high seas of business, in short, he is a confidence man.

It ill becomes THE TRUTH SEEKER to publish the advertisments of fakirs.

Observe the catering to popular superstition pertaining to drugs in the advertisment of a quack nostum. "Positivly cured with vegetable remedies." A condition as uncertain as health is here warranted. What could be more evident than the folly of such words?

Observe how a popular superstition gets here a pat upon the back—"Cured with vegetable remedies," in short, a promis not to use that "dreadful," but indispensable, mercury.

All for a few dollars a man poses as a philanthropist, a giver of something "free" to every sufferer. What a generous, self-sacrificing man this must be; how nicely he poses, like other good men we read about, that sell salvation, but do not even provide the bottle, underneath a clanging Sabbath bell. DR. C. E. BOYNTON.

MARTINSBURG, W. VA., Dec. 24, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: As Freethinkers enlisted for the great cause of mental liberty and human freedom, we are gratified to know that Freethought is slowly but surely advancing, and I believe it is only a question of time when thousands of men and women who hav been strongly religious, and are yet, to some extent at least, nominal believers, will accept the principles of Freethought. It would be very true, if there is a God, the assertion of Christians that if God was, with one they would make a majority; but as there is no proof he exists, then the truth is all or anything that is or all or anything that is not. If the gospel is true there is a living personal God, heaven and hell; if not true, then God, heaven and hell, are a myth. Then truth represents nothing, for it would be a myth. It is well known to Rationalists that it is useless and vain to believe in Christianity. Much of its propositions is unjust, and its claim that the gospel is God's authority is unsupported by proof. The fact is, there is not the least evidence to prove that an almighty God, so long believed in by the world, exists. I do not say there is no God, because I cannot prove there is not one, but I do say as a positivist that the evidence is insufficient—I may say, totally lacking, in anything supernatural and miraculous, demonstrated to me, or, to the best of my belief, to the most pious on earth. If there is a God existing, we can never in this life know. Belief and knowledge are different. We can believe in anything without evidence. Imagination, hallucination, and belief are identical. Acting under a delusion comes from believing whether true or not. Knowledge is knowing what we affirm to be true beyond all doubt. We know, if we know anything, that all that exists is of cause and effect. For all the best and most reliable evidence that can be known, the facts of nature and the daily experience of life, must convince the Rationalist and honest inquirer of truth that we do not know and cannot know of the existence of a living personal God. We know the truths of nature, which in its own laws of cause and effect is sufficient for all its great wonders. All that is supernatural is a myth so far as we are concerned. Spiritualism is more beautiful than Christianity as an ideal state of future existence, but alas! we do not and cannot know if its claims are true or not. I hav read a great deal about its claims, but, in the first place, what I object to is that its proposition to the world of its way of its alleged truth being proved by self-appointed mediums and spirit rappings and slate-writings, is all open to suspicion, and many of those Spiritualist mediums hav been proved frauds. I know, if I know anything, that if Spiritualism was true all could know its truth, without going to self-appointed mediums, as plain as the noonday sun. If I cannot myself find out the truth that there is immortality beyond the grave, I am pretty sure no others can. I am in favor of the fullest and freest investigation into all claims that Spiritualists make. I hav no right to oppose either Christianity or Spiritualism through prejudice, for prejudice is ignorance, the meanest and most stubborn trait of human nature. The truth is discovered only through impartiality. Existence is a mystery. If we are to find the truth and not be humbugged and deluded by the claims of Christianity and Spiritualism, we must hav the ability to doubt, and the courage to doubt when there is room to doubt, then we will be true to ourselvs. I know that Freethinkers are the most intelligent, broad-minded, and noble people, necessarily positiv in their intellectual and mental capacity. They sow not the seeds of delusion, knowing that the truth is the all in all. Whether there is a hereafter or not, I am sure the most pious believer does not want to liv and die in delusion. It is very easy to see that faith is powerful enough to satisfy millions of men and women. It makes no difference how much the heavy, cold hands of misfortune fall on them, they lose not faith, but praise God from whom all blessings flow. I do not wish to even think, let alone try, to advise or dictate to any person on any subject that concerns them personally. I wish to be a true Liberal. There must be, as Colonel Ingersoll says, intellectual hospitality. If the world is learning anything, it knows the meaning of religious and civil liberty; that individuality is asserting itself; that man is responsible to himself and his fellow-men. Do what we will, we cannot hurt and injure the unknown and abstract. When we do harm or good, the results fall on ourselvs or our fellow-creatures. Whether life is worth living is clearly an open question. Let us be true to ourselvs and we will be true to the truth.

T. J. CONNERS.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

The First Banjo.

Go 'way, fiddle, folks is tired of hearin' you a squawkin',
Keep silence for your betters, don't you hear de banjo talkin'?
About de 'possum's tail she's gwine to lecter, ladies listen,
About de ha'r what isn't dar and why de ha'r is missin'.

Dar's gwine to be an obe'flow said Noah, lookin' solemn,
For Noah took de Herald and he read de ribber column;
And so he sot his hands to work a clearin' timber patches,
And 'lowed he's gwine to build a boat to beat the steamer Natchez.

Old Noah kept a nailin' and a chippin' and a sawin',
And all de wicked neighbors kept a laughin' an' a pshawin';
But Noah didn't mind 'em, knowin' what was gwine to happen,
And forty days an' forty nights de rain it kept a drappin'.

Now Noah had done kotched a lot of every sort of beast'es,
Ob all de shows a trabblin' it beat 'em all to pieces.
He had a Morgan colt an' seberal head of Jersey cattle,
And druv' 'em board de ark soon's he heard de thunder rattle.

Den such anoder fall of rain it come so awful hebby,
De ribber riz immejitly an' busted troo de lebby.
De people all was drownded out 'cept Noah an' de critters,
An' men he'd hired to work de boat an' one to mix de bitters.

De ark she kept a sailin', an' sailin', an' sailin',
De lion got his dander up an' like to bruk de palin'.
The sarpints hissed, the panthers yelled, till what with all the fussin',
You couldn't hardly hear de mate a bossin' round and cussin'.

Now Ham, de only nigger dat was runnin' on de packet,
Got lonesome in de barber shop an' couldn't stand de racket,
And so, for to amuse heself, he steamed some wood and bent it,
And soon he had a banjo made, de first dat was invented.

He wet de ledder, stretched it on, made bridge an' crews an' apron,
An' fitted in a proper neck, 'twas berry long and tap'rin'.
He took some tin an' twisted him a thimble for to ring it,
An' den de mighty question riz, how was he gwine to string it?

De 'possum had as fine a tail as dis dat I'se a singin',
De ha'rs so long an' thick an' strong, jest fit for banjo stringin'.
Dat nigger shaved 'em off as short as washday dinner graces,
An' sorted ob 'em by de size from little E's to bases.

He strung her, tuned, struck a jig, 'twas nebber mind de wedder,
She sound like forty 'leben bands a playin' all togedder.
Some went to pattin', some to dancin', Noah called de figgers,
And Ham he sot an' knocked de tune de happiest of de niggers.

Now, since dat time it's mighty strange dar's not de slightest showin'
Of any hair upon de possum's tail a growin.
And curi's, too, dat nigger's ways his country nebber lost 'em,
For where you find de nigger dar's de banjo and de possum.

What Do You Think?

What do you think of a duty done,
Earnest and faithful from sun to sun?
Does it not show, amid shadows and sin,
Flashes of light from the kingdoms within?

L'sten, my children; I'll giv to you
A simple record honestly true.
This is the story: One cold spring morn,
Ere days of roses and warmth were born,
A friend of mine in her cellar found
A pretty sight on the cold damp ground:
Just fourte'n chickens downy and white,
Peeping and pecking with all their might,
And every one in a dismal fright;
"There's reason enough," the mistress said,
"For their poor old mother hen is dead."

What do you think the mistress did,
When the frightened chickens ran and hid?

She nestled them soft in her apron's fold,
Out of the darkness, out of the cold,
Then took them up to her own warm room,
Away from the cheerlessness and gloom,
Where many a plant was full of bloom;
She made a nest in her window bright,
And settled her baby chickens white
Safe in the sunny rays of light.

Whom do you think she spoke to then?
A man or woman, a child or hen?

Neither of these, for her dog was near,
An' she knew he knew his duty clear.
So she gently said, 'Now, Curly dear,
These fourteen chickens to you I giv,
What will you do that they all may liv?"

Now, what do you think that Curly said?
He bow-wow-wowed with his curly head,
And quickly sprang to the window nest,
With a look that said, "I'll do my best."
And they crept around his head and breast,
Cuddled down close to his legs and throat,
And went to sleep in his shaggy coat.

What do you think of a dog so good,
To bear the burdens of chickenhood?

He brought them up like a mother true,
And they loved this queer old mother too
As well as chickens can ever do.
And they grew and cackled, and crowed and grew,
And the trials of Curly were not a few.
But they lived and loved through sun and rain,
With friendship that never seemed to wane.
What do you think of a dog like this,
Having no promis of future bliss,
Fearing no hell and knowing no creeds,
Finding reward in doing good deeds?

Chickens and dog hav passed from our sight,
But whenever I see that window bright
I think of Curly's generous sid,
And the moral clear will never fade
While memory holds her golden reign
And I watch this world of saddened pain.

Only a dog, but so kind and true,
Cheerfully finding his work to do,
Not for the sake of a golden crown,
Not for the sake of pride and renown,
Not for the sake of a heaven above,
Only for duty, justice, and love.

Only a dog. Can we do as well?
Children and friends, let the future tell.

C FANNIE ALLYN.

The Sunday Club.

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS: In some households and towns Sunday is the dullest day in the week, because some people consider it wicked to enjoy themselvs on Sunday, or to allow their children to play, laugh, and run about, as on other days, or to allow places of amusement, museums, libraries, and picture-galleries open on Sunday for their neighbor's enjoyment.

Now, I think that Sunday should be the happiest and brightest day in the week, because it is a holiday, the one day out of seven that working people hav for rest and amusement. It is the only time that a great many fathers hav for getting acquainted with their children. It is the only time that the whole family can hav a good time or an outing together. And from baby up to grandma, Sunday ought to be a day to be remembered, and made joyful to all.

Henry Ward Beecher, one of the most tolerant and liberal of Christians, wrote, I remember, a description of the New England Sabbath of his childhood, the sad-colored day of dreary length where the sun scarcely dared to shine, or the children to smile in the strict Calvinistic disciplin of the Beecher household.

And your parents will, perhaps, tell you of the Puritans and the Blue laws that they made to prevent Sabbath-breaking, which they considered almost as criminal as house-breaking.

Even your fathers and mothers who had pious, God-fearing parents, can remember the trial of learning psalms and Bible chapters and being told to "Keep quiet! It's Sunday," and sitting in high-backed church pews and falling asleep in the midst of drowsy sermons, and wishing that Sunday was left out of the calendar. That old saying, "a week of Sundays," must hav been invented, I do believe, by some miserable little, unregenerate Puritan youngster who thought that Sunday was almost endless, and that a week of Sundays would approximate to eternity!

Even yet, in some households the children dread the coming of the day that should be the happiest of the week, but is often made the most miserable.

And in some towns the grown folks dread it too, because the laws and the customs prohibit innocent pleasures and make it a period of unprofitable dulness instead.

Now, I wonder how many young people who read Liberal papers ever thought of a Sunday Club.

Our papers and our American Secular Union hav talked about the need for Liberal Sunday-schools, but, dear me! don't you boys and girls hav enough of school during the week, and don't you want a good time on Sunday? Of course you do.

Then, hurrah for the Sunday Club!

"You never heard of a Sunday Club?"

"What is it for?"

Why, it is to show people what sort of a day Sunday ought to be.

It is to go on picnics in summer, and sleigh-rides or coasting-parties in winter. It is to play games and sing Liberal songs. Perhaps some of "your sisters, your cousins, or your aunts" can tell you stories, and some of you can "speak pieces," hav dialogs and tableaux, as they do in school entertainments, and invite the grown people in to see the fun. It is to make Sunday a "joy-day," and to sing all together:

Of all the days in all the week
I dearly love but one day,
And that's the day that comes betwixt
A Saturday and Monday.

You don't need any by-laws or officers, and if you begin next Sunday afternoon with two or three boys and girls, or as many as you can get, and a "good time"—games, songs, stories—your club is organized.

Now, who will be first to write about their Sunday Club and the names of the young people who belong to it? And won't the father and mother Liberals giv encouragement and help? Of course they will.

Then, hurrah for the young people's Sunday Club.

Be sure to write to the editor of the Children's Corner in regard to the Club.

[A good friend writes the above, and the idea is a good one. The Humboldt Scientific Society, of which the editor of the Corner is president, holds its meetings fortnightly on Sundays. Little science clubs among children and young people cannot fail to be productiv of good.—ED C. C.]

Chats with Correspondents.

C. FANNIE A.—We will hav the face to face talk by and by. Be patient. The little story is excellent. We are pleased with all that you favor us with, and we think it is "extra quality," and no mistake. A book of the style you suggest would be attractiv, and would sell. We would assist in the Corner, of course. Thank you for the manuscript.

JULIA V.—Yes, the cause is gaining ground. Hundreds of occupations are now open to women that were closed to them a century ago. Women are studying in forty-two medical colleges. They practice medicin, law, and engage in various kinds of business. They teach and preach, and acquit themselvs in all that they undertake quite as well as their brothers.

L. L. G., St. Elmo, Tenn.—We hope you hav recovered from your injury ere this. Your communications are always interesting. We are proud of our friends everywhere, and would be glad to meet them all, but, as that cannot be, we may enjoy frequent little chats by means of ink and paper.

M. A. W.—You are very kind, and your suggestion is practical and good. Many thanks for remembering the Corner.

Correspondence.

FOWLER, O., Jan. 10, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav been reading THE TRUTH SEEKER, and thought I would write a few lines to see if they would be accepted. My mother and I are living at my grandfather's this winter. My father died one year ago. It is about one-half mile from our own home. This is a very pleasant little town, with six stores and two churches. There are only a few in this town that take THE TRUTH SEEKER, but my grandpa does. I like very much to read it, but think the pictures are just splendid. Grandpa has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for four or five years.

I am thirteen years old, and go to school nearly all the time—hav missed but two days in the last two terms. At present I only study reading, writing, spelling, history, geography, and physiology.

I am doing lots of crocheting out of school-hours. I hav some very pretty patterns, and if any of the readers would like to exchange samples, I will exchange with them.

I thought I would send a song, and if you consider it suitable, would like to hav you publish it. Yours very respectfully,

LELIA WALKER.

ANOTHER NEW LIBERAL.

GUSTAVUS, O., Jan. 12, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I hav lately had a chance of seeing and reading THE TRUTH SEEKER, and am very much pleased with it, especially the Children's Corner.

I enjoy reading the letters very much, and thinking a few lines from me would be acceptable, I will tell you how I was always brought up to go to Sunday-school until a year ago, when my dear mother died. I then came to liv with Mrs. Clisby, who is a Liberal, and hav had a chance to see and think for myself.

I hav concluded that the church is a humbug throughout, and I think the conclusion is a wise one. My age is fourteen years. I attend district school this winter, and hav five studies. Our teacher, Miss Jessie Dean, fortunately for me is a Liberal, and never misses an opportunity of calling our attention to the inconsistencies and conflicting statements which exist between science and the Christian Bible. As this is my first, I will not tire you with a lengthy letter.

Yours very truly, STELLA M. WARD.

[We feel sure that Stella is a bright, wide-awake girl, and we shall always be pleased to get a word from her. Our kind regards to Mrs. Clisby and Miss Jessie Dean. We honor them for the good work they are doing.—ED. C. C.]

ELM SPRINGS, ARK., Jan. 9, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: As I sat reading the grand old TRUTH SEEKER this morning my eyes fell upon the letters of the Children's Corner, and I thought how long it had been since I put forth my humble efforts in the way of writing a letter to the Corner, and almost before I was aware I took up my pen and began writing. And now as I hav a good start, I will go on with it. Five years hav passed speedily away since, as I said, I first made an effort to write to the Corner, and now I am almost on the threshold of womanhood, at least, old enough to realize some of the responsibilities of life, and I would like to call to the minds of all the children who read the Corner that the future generation depends on us, and we should put forth our firmest strokes in behalf of Freethought, for the so-called Christians are doing all they can to suppress liberty, and they greedily look forward to the day when their superstitious dogmas will again reign supreme. But I feel that we are gaining ground, and the day is not far distant when we will realize a glorious victory. I admire Geo. J. Remsburg's true courage, and I think his frequent letters to the Corner are read with interest by all. He is one of the valuable workers in our ranks.

I hav read all three of your most excellent books, and think they are all splendid. But if I hav a preference it is for "All in a Lifetime." It is so practical, and takes a person through almost every stage of life. There is a lesson to be learned in every chapter, and the way in which a point is carried is interesting, to say the least, and no one could read it without being better and wiser.

But I am taking up too much of your valuable space, and I presume my letter is getting tiresome anyway, so, rather than become monotonous, I will close. With best wishes to you in your grand work and a friendly good-bye to all the children, I am,

Yours sincerely, HATTIE M. DAY.

P.S.—I would be glad to correspond with some of the friends of the Corner near my own age, which is sixteen. H. M. D.

[It is always interesting to note the growth and development of mind and thought. We feel justly proud of those whose first crude letters appeared in the Corner, and who hav steadily grown toward a noble manhood and womanhood. We hope Hattie will not forget the Corner as she passes into the estate of a beautiful womanhood, but will occasionally remember her friends of early days. Thanks for appreciation of our books.—ED. C. C.]

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

The downcast eyes of timid acquiescence hav paid to impudent authority the tribute of a thoughtless yes.—R. G. Ingersoll.

CONTENTS.

A Splendid Judge of a Woman.
The Lady of the Club.
Under Protest.
For the Prosecution.
A Rusty Link in the Chain.
The Boler House Mystery.
The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors.
Florence Campbell's Fate.
My Patient's Story.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

THE
CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:
THEIR
Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit, on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Samples FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N. Y.

SOCIAL WEALTH,

The Sole Factors and Exact Ratios in the Acquirement and Apportionment.

By J. K. INGALLS.

Price, Cloth, - - $1.00.

An Only Daughter Cured of Consumption.
When death was hourly expected from Consumption, all remedies having failed and Dr. H. James was experimenting, he accidentally made a preparation of Indian Hemp, which cured his only child, and now gives this recipe free on receipt of two stamps to pay expenses. Hemp also cures night sweats, nausea at the stomach, and will break a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. Address Craddock & Co., 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa., naming this paper.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs by Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam Should Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Churches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportunity.
As the Clergy Desire Sunday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Our Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Church Institutions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Products of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religious Trap.
Sunday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
Encouragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Church's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Church.
The Church's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denounced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Church.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Drouth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Our Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janus-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Our Country, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conquest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Church of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Result of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Put their Sins.
Jesus Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for True Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxious Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occurrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Churchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossus of New York.
The Political Caliban and the Religious Rogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Question.
The Churches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Trouble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Church, "Don't Hurt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Church True to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Church and State.

Some Allegories.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Outside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via. Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Surprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occupation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolution to Orthodoxy.
The Evolution of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crusade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams, D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths, A. Bierbower, M. Babcock, Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway, Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought, Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A. Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe, Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach, Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages, Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll, President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, PercyBysshe Shelley, Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills, Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster, Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

PIONEER PITH.

THE GIST OF LECTURES ON RATIONALISM.

By CAPT. R. C. ADAMS, President of Montreal Pioneer Freethought Club; author of "Travels in Faith from Tradition to Reason," and "Evolution—A Summary of Evidence."

A compendium of scientific and critical lore. Best handbook for introducing the general reader to the principles and data on which Rationalism is based.

Paper, 12mo, 100pp., 25 cents.

EVOLUTION THEORY.

Three lectures by PROF. THOS. H. HUXLEY.

Paper, 10 cents.

Thirty DISCUSSIONS, BIBLE STORIES, ESSAYS, and LECTURES.

By D. M. BENNETT.

Pap., 700pp., 75 cents.

BENNETT-TEED DISCUSSION.

"Jesus the Lord God, Creator of Heaven and Earth."

By D. M. BENNETT and REV. MR. TEED.

Paper, 20 cents.

BESANT-HATCHARD DEBATE.

BETWEEN

ANNIE BESANT AND REV. A. HATCHARD

ON

Jesus of Nazareth a Historical Character, and the Influence of Christianity.

Price, 25 cents.

BIBLE BALANCED.

Comparing the Bible's Best Teachings and Sayings with those of Philosophers who Lived previous to Bible Authors.

By G. C. DARLING.

Paper, - - 50 cents.

BIBLE FABRICATIONS REFUTED.

Errors Exposed.

By O. B. WHITFORD, M.D.

Price, 15 cents.

BIBLE MORALS.

TWENTY CRIMES and VICES Sanctioned by Scripture.

By J. E. REMSBURG.

Price, 25 cents.

CRIMES OF PREACHERS in the United States and Canada.

By M. E. BILLINGS.

Price, . . . 25 cents.

BUDDHIST NIHILISM.

By MAX MULLER, M.A.

Price, 10 cents.

GOLDEN MEAN in Temperance and Religion.

By JOHN E. BURTON.

Price, 10 cents.

INSPIRATION OF BIBLES.

By JNO. E. BURTON.

Price, 10 cents.

Christianity and Materialism.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 15 cents.

CHRISTIANITY A REWARD FOR CRIME.

By O. B. WHITFORD, M.D.

Price, 10 cents.

CHRISTIANITY from a SCIENTIFIC and HISTORICAL STANDPOINT.

By W. N. MCLAREN.

Paper, 50 cents.

Chronicles of Simon Christianus.

Adventures in the Land of Cosmos. New Scripture (evidently inspired). Discovered by I. N. FIDEL and A. HOOK.

Price, 25 cents.

THE CRISIS.

By THOMAS PAINE.

Written during the American Revolution, and by order of General Washington read to the army.

Paper, 40 cents; cloth, 75.

CULTIVATION OF ART.

ITS RELATIONS TO

RELIGIOUS PURITANISM AND MONEY-GETTING.

By A. R. COOPER.

Paper, 20c.; flexible clo., 35.

THE DARWINS. A Domestic Radical Romance. By Mrs. E. D. Slenker.

Pap., 50c.; clo., 75.

For all of the above books address

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

THE HUMBOLDT LIBRARY

—OF—

POPULAR SCIENCE.

No. 1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. A series of familiar essays on astronomical and other natural phenomena. By Richard A. Proctor, F.R.A.S.

No. 2. Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. (19 illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 3. Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The English Constitution."

No. 4. Man's Place in Nature, (with numerous illustrations). By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 6. Town Geology. With Appendix on Coral and Coral Reefs. By Rev. Charles Kingsley.

No. 7. The Conservation of Energy, (with numerous illustrations). By Balfour Stewart, LL.D.

No. 8. The Study of Languages, brought back to its true principles. By C. Marcel.

No. 9. The Data of Ethics. By Hebert Spencer.

No. 10. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music, (numerous illustrations), By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.

No. 11. } The Naturalist on the River Amazons. A record of 11 years of travel. By Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S. (Not sold separately).
No. 12. }

No. 13. Mind and Body. The theories of their relations. By Alex. Bain, LL.D.

No. 14. The Wonders of the Heavens, (thirty-two illustrations). By Camille Flammarion.

No. 15. Longevity. The means of prolonging life after middle age. By John Gardner, M.D.

No. 16. The Origin of Species. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other disquisitions. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 18. Lessons in Electricity, (sixty illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 20. The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.

No. 21. The Physical Basis of Life, with other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 22. Seeing and Thinking. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 23. Scientific Sophisms. A review of current theories concerning Atoms, Apes and Men. By Samuel Wainwright, D.D.

No. 24. Popular Scientific Lectures, (illustrated). By Prof. H. Helmholtz.

No. 25. The Origin of Nations. By Prof. Geo. Rawlinson, Oxford University.

No. 26. The Evolutionist at Large. By Grant Allen.

No. 27. The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.

No. 28. Fashion in Deformity, as illustrated in the customs of Barbarous and Civilized Races. (numerous illustrations). By William Henry Flower, F.R.S.

No. 29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology, (numerous illustrations). By Andrew Wilson, Ph.D.

No. 30. } The Study of Words.
No. 31. } By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 33. Vignettes from Nature. By Grant Allen.

No. 34. The Philosophy of Style. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 35. Oriental Religions. By John Caird, Pres. Univ. Glasgow, and Others.

No. 36. Lectures on Evolution. (Illustrated). By Prof. T. H. Huxley.

No. 37. Six Lectures on Light. (Illustrated). By Prof. John Tyndall.

No. 38. } Geological Sketches. By Archibald
No. 39. } Geikie, F.R.S.

No. 40. The Evidence of Organic Evolution. By George J. Romanes, F.R.S.

No. 41. Current Discussions in Science. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S.

No. 42 History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock.

No. 43. Darwin and Humboldt. By Prof. Huxley, Prof. Agassiz, and others.

No. 44. } The Dawn of History. By C. F. Keary,
No. 45. } of the British Museum.

No. 46. The Diseases of Memory. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 47. The Childhood of Religion. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 48. Life in Nature. (Illustrated). By James Hinton.

No. 49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.

No. 50. } Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. By Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.
No. 51. }

No. 52. The Diseases of the Will. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald.

No. 53. Animal Automatism, and other Essays, By Prof. T. H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 55. The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 56. } Illusions. By James Sully.
No. 57. }

No. 58. } The Origin of Species. By Charles Darwin. } Two Double Nos.
No. 59. }

No. 60. The Childhood of the World. By Edward Clodd.

No. 61. Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 62. The Religions of the Ancient World. By Prof. Geo. Rawlinson, Univ. of Oxford. (Double number).

No. 63. Progressive Morality. By Thomas Fowler, LL.D., President of Corpus Christi Coll., Oxford.

No. 64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russell Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.

No. 65. Conditions of Mental Development: and other essays. By Wm. Kingdon Clifford.

No. 66. Technical Education: and other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. By J. F. C. Hecker, M. D.

No. 68. Three Essays. By Herbert Spencer. Special Number.

No. 69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze, Ph.D. Double number.

No. 70. Essays Speculative and Practical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 71. Anthropology. By Daniel Wilson, Ph. D. With Appendix on Archæology. By E. B. Tylor, F. R. S.

No. 72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.

No. 73. Evolution in History, Language and Science. Four Addresses delivered at the London Crystal Palace School of Art, Science and Literature.

No. 74. } The Descent of Man, and Selection in
No. 75. } Relation to Sex. (Numerous Illustrations)
No. 76. } By Charles Darwin. Nos. 74, 75, 76 are
No. 77. } single Nos.; No. 77. is a double No.

No. 78. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.

No. 79. Scientific Aspect of some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams.

No. 80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work By Grant Allen. (Double number).

No. 81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two Essays by J. Allanson Picton.

No. 82. Illusions of the Senses: and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six Essays. By Sedley Taylor, M.A.

No. 84. Studies of Animated Nature. Four Essays on Natural History. By W. S. Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 85. The Essential Nature of Religion. By J. Allanson Picton.

No. 86. The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences. By Prof. Wm. Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 87. The Morphine Habit. By Dr. B. Ball, of the Paris Faculty of Medicine.

No. 88. Science and Crime and other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 89. The Genesis of Science. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 90. Notes on Earthquakes: with Fourteen Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 91. The Rise of Universities. By S. S. Laurie, LL.D. (Double number).

No. 92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the Action of Earth Worms. By Charles Darwin, LL.D. F.R.S. (Double number).

No. 93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. By J. Mount Bleyer, M.D. (Special number).

No. 94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 95. The Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 96. A Half-Century of Science. By Prof. Thomas H. Huxley, and Grant Allen.

No. 97. The Pleasures of Life. By Sir John Lubbock, Bart.

No. 98. Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science. By William Kingdon Clifford. (Special number).

No. 99. Nature Studies. By Prof. F. R. Eaton Lowe; Dr. Robert Brown, F.L.S.; Geo. G. Chisholm, F.R.G.S., and James Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 100. Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 101. Æsthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. By Jas. Sully and Geo. Croom Robertson.

No. 102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. By William Nelson Black.

No. 103. The Coming Slavery; The Sins of Legislators; The Great Political Superstition. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 104. Tropical Africa. By Henry Drummond, F.R.S.

No. 105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. By Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. With a Prefatory Note by Prof. Huxley.

No. 106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. By Grant Allen.

No. 107. Ultimate Finance. A True Theory of Wealth. By William Nelson Black.

No. 108. English, Past and Present. Part. I. By Richard Chenevix Trench, (Double number).

No. 109. English, Past and Present. Part II. By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd. (Double number).

Single Nos. 15 cents; Double Nos. 30 cents.
Nos. 1 to 111 inclusive, cloth, plain edges—separately or together—10 vols., $2 per vol
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

BURGESS-UNDERWOOD DEBATE

ON CHRISTIANITY.

Between B. F UNDERWOOD and Prof. O. A. Burgess, Pres. of N. W. Christian Univ.

Paper, 188pp., 50 cts.; clo., 80.

COMMON SENSE.

By THOMAS PAINE.

Written in 1776.

Price, . . . 15 cents.

Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Price, 10 cents.

IS AMERICA THE NEW WORLD?

By L. L. DAWSON.

Price, . . 10 cents.

DEACON SKIDMORE'S LETTERS.

(Zion Hill Baptist.) His Evolution out of Christianity. By D. M. BENNETT. Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

ECCE DIABOLUS.

Jehovah-Worship and Devil-Worship Identical—i.e., Bloody Sacrifices and Burnt Offerings.

By the Very Rev. Evan Davies, Arch Druid of Great Britain.

Price, . . 25 cents.

RELIGIOUS POSITIVISM;

OR, POSITIVIST CALENDAR. Brief Exposition of the Comtean System.

Paper, 25 cents; cloth 50.

Eight Scientific Tracts.

EVOLUTION, DARWINISM, etc.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD and others.

Price, 20 cents.

EPIDEMIC DELUSIONS.

By F. R. MARVIN, M.D.

Price, 10 cents.

Essay on Miracles,

By DAVID HUME.

Price, 10 cents.

ESSAYS AND LECTURES

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.

Paper, 300pp., 50 cents; cloth, $1.

Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

By T. E. LONGSHORE.

50c., 50c. per doz., 25 for $1.

THE UNSEEN WORLD.

By PROF. JOHN FISKE.

Price, 10 cents.

GOSPEL OF ATHEISM.

By ANNIE BESANT.

Price, 10 cents.

GOTTLIEB: HIS LIFE.

A Romance of Earth, Heaven, and Hell.

By S. P. PUTNAM.

Price, 25 cents.

Heathens of the Heath.

RADICAL ROMANCE.

By WM. MCDONNELL.

500pp., paper, 80 cents.

HOLY BIBLE ABRIDGED.

The passages unfit for family reading.

Pap., 30c.; clo., 50.

THE LOGIC OF DEATH,

OR,

WHY SHOULD THE ATHEIST FEAR TO DIE?

By J. G. HOLYOAKE.

Price, 5 cents.

THE LOGIC OF LIFE,

DEDUCED FROM

THE PRINCIPLE OF FREETHOUGHT.

By G. J. HOLYOAKE.

Price, 5 cents.

Secular Responsibility

By G. J. HOLYOAKE.

Price, 5 cents.

GENESIS I, II:

BIBLE NARRATIVE OF CREATION

By A. R. GROTE, A.M.

Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

Godly Women of the Bible.

A History of

ALL THE WOMEN WHO FIGURE IN THE BIBLE.

BY

An Ungodly Woman of the XIXth Century.

Pap., 50c.; clo., 75.

For all of the above books address

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2.Rev.Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 1
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1890 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

Science in Plain Language.

I. EVOLUTION, ANTIQUITY, BACTERIA, ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S E.

II. ASTRONOMY, SUN, MOON, STARS, ETC. By William Durham, F.R S.E.

These handy series of volumes on science—of which the above works form the first two numbers, others to follow—are written in a way that cannot fail to make them interesting to even the most casual reader. They supply a popular need. The price of each is 50 cents in cloth.

address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WETTSTEIN'S

WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7 50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17 50; 15 jewels, $18.50: do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $ 5. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

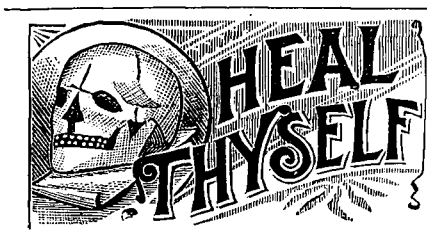
ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.



With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.

124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7 30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,

Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J.F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union

Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.

FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society

Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A.W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Portsmouth, O., Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7 P.M. in Grand Army Hall Lectures, discussions, readings, poems, music and songs. A cordial invitation is extended to all; especially to friends from abroad. Correspondence solicited. J. L. TREUTHART, President. WILL S. ANDRES, Secretary.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

News of the Week.

THE Italian journal L'Italie charges that Archbishop Corrigan of New York misappropriated Peter's Pence to the bribing of New York papers to speak well of him, as a counteraction to the unpopularity which he had gained in his diocese and which threatened his removal.

REV. A. DE FORD has been sentenced at Milwaukee to five years' imprisonment for raising the denomination of bills.

NEBRASKA and Connecticut hav each two claimants of governorship, and are distracted by the struggles of the rivals.

LEO XIII. has written to Dr. Windthorst a eulogy of his zeal in establishing "the German Catholic People's Society" to combat Socialism.

WM. FAULK, of Pittsburgh, Pa., shot his wife on the 23d, and announced that he was Jesus Christ, and had done it for the good of the world.

THE United States Supreme Court has reversed the decision of the territorial court that the offspring of a Mormon polygamous marriage is illegitimate and incapeble of inheriting property.

THE pope, having discovered secret agents of Crispi in the Vatican, has dismissed all Italians from his service and taken foreigners instead. Even the domestics of his apartments hav been changed.

THE pastors and trustees of the Central Presbyterian church of Wilmington, Del., are indignant at the sale of a house and lot adjoining the parsonage to a negro, Robt. Graves, who is a wealthy caterer.

CARDINAL MANNING has delivered some opinions on Socialism, of a value to be judged from the premis that "Society is not of human but of divine origin."

MAUD DENAU, a girl of French parentage in Lockport, N. Y., to marry a Protestant has had to suffer expulsion from the Catholic church and renunciation by her family.

JAMES LICK, the Freethinker who founded the Lick observatory, bequeathed $100,000 to erect a monument representativ of the history and industries of California, and it is about to be reared in front of the new city hall of San Francisco.

AT the next parliament of Canada an effort will be made to abolish the use of the French language in that country. The French Canadians are trying to make their language dominant, as a step toward establishing a French and Catholic nation.

A DISTRICT court has refused the Louisiana Lottery a mandamus to compel the secretary of state to allow the constitutional amendment passed by the legislature permitting a popular vote on extension of the lottery's charter. The case will go to the Supreme Court.

AT Portsmouth, O., on the 20th, a Bible agent found the fifteen-year-old daughter of Rev. C. Branch alone, and made improper advances and offered money. The father on being told broke the agent's jaw, and he was forced to kneel and beg the girl's pardon in the street before a large assembly.

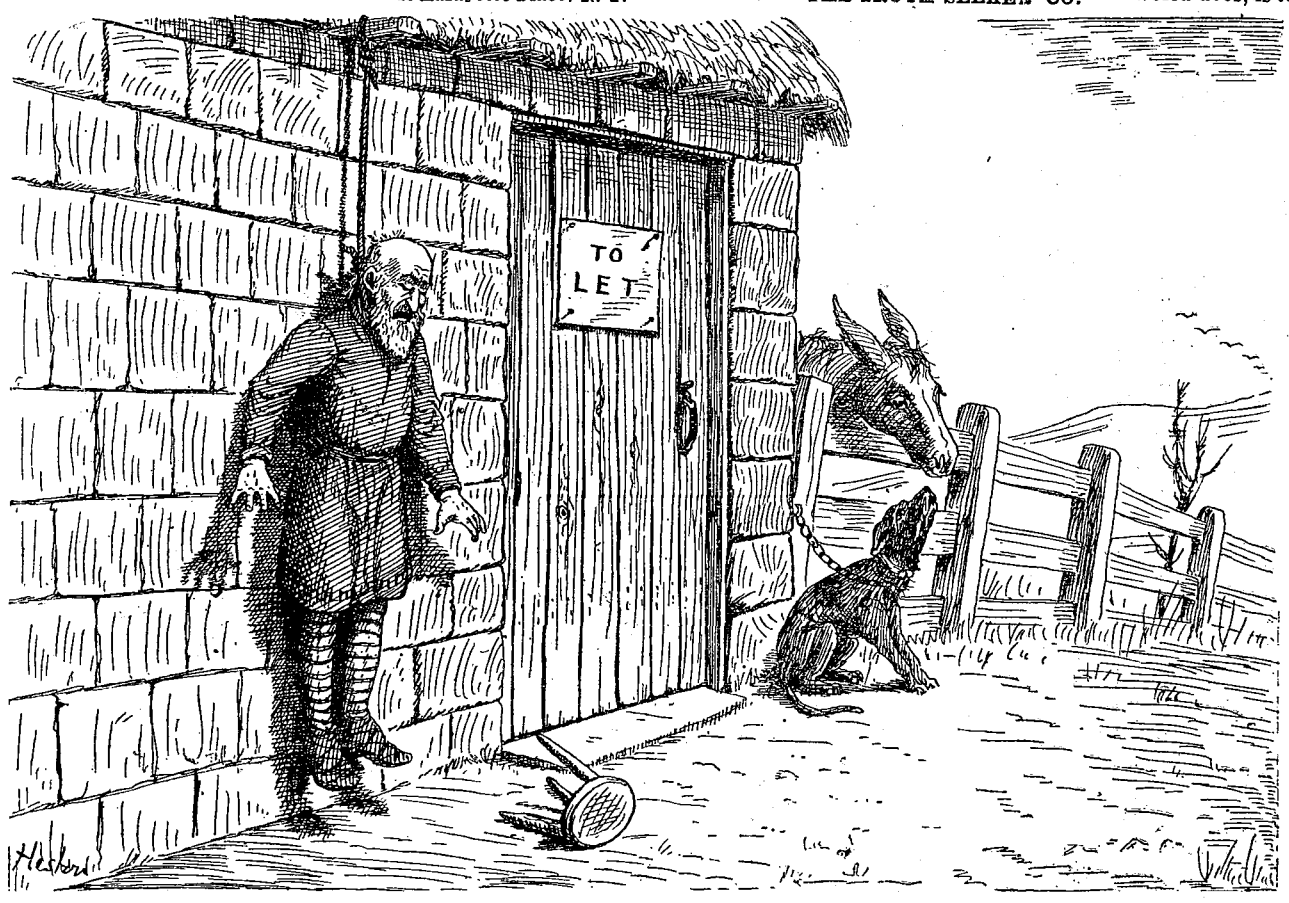
DEMOCRATIC Senators continue to block the passage of the bill for federal supervision of national elections. They say it would take away home rule in every part of the country, and is worse than secession. The legislatures of Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Texas, Tennessee, and Alabama hav postponed appropriations to the World's Fair till the bill has been acted on, intending if it is passed to refuse participation in the Fair. The legislatures of West Virginia, Kansas, and North Carolina hav denounced the bill.

THE action of the present Kansas legislature is watched with interest as indicativ of the course of other states that may fall under Farmers' Alliance control. The Alliance in the Kansas legislature will endeavor to reduce the legal rate of interest, procure state regulation of railroad rates, extend the mortgage stay law two years, prohibit alien landholding, giv mortgagors three years to redeem forfeited land, introduce Australian balloting, and forbid employment of Pinkertons. The senate, however, has but one Alliance member, and will probably stop these measures if they are passed by the house. Similar bills hav been introduced in the Nebraska legislature.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.



THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Givs a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AHITHOPHEL PASSETH IN HIS CHECKS.

And when Ahithophel saw that his counsel was not followed, he saddled his ass, and arose, and gat him home to his house, to his city, and put his household in order, and hanged himself, and died, and was buried in the sepulcher of his father.—2 Sam. xvii, 23.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EGGS FANCY POULTRY 10 VARIETIES. Ten years experience. Price List Free. No catalogue. Pigeons—Blue, Fans and Red Jackobins. J. L. MOCK, 1247 S. HIGH ST., COLUMBUS O.

Gems of Thought.

A WISE man never goes the people's way;
But, as the planets still move contrary
To the world's motion, so doth he to opinion.
—Ben Jonson.

MEN of original powers are prone to act in ways unlike ordinary ways. To do what the world does, is to guide behavior by imitation. Deviating from ordinary usages is declining to imitate. And the noticeable fact is that a smaller tendency to imitate goes along with a greater tendency to evolve new ideas.—Spencer.

IT is the fashion to giv the name of Christianity to the Western morality of this century; but there is as much difference between the morality of to-day and the genuin Christian religion as there is between the north and south poles. The two are the exact antitheses of each other. A moral condition that requires that all men shall be equal before the law, that no man shall be the property of his fellow, and that no man shall hav more than one wife at a time, can hav no connection whatever with the Christian religion, the sacred book of which teaches us to burn witches alive, to buy and sell slaves, to desert our father, mother, brethren, and children in order to join the ranks of the believers, and to take no thought for the morrow, besides encouraging polygamy, adultery, murder, theft, and personal assaults. — Dr. Hardwicke.

THE morality of the Old Testament is of a very low order, embracing as it does such horrible and degrading teachings as the physical and intellectual enslavement of one portion of the community for the special benefit of the other, aggressiv warfare upon inoffensiv and defenseless peoples, polygamy, belief in witchcraft, and a number of other absurdities and barbarities which need only be mentioned to be condemned.—A. B. Moss.

I DO not believe in a slaveholding God; I do not worship a polygamous Holy Ghost, nor a son who threatens eternal pain; I will not get upon my knees before any being who commands a husband to slay his wife because she expresses her honest thought.—Ingersoll.

BEGINNERS.

How they are provided for upon the earth,
(appearing at intervals,)
How dear and dreadful they are to the earth,
How they inure to themselvs as much as to any—what a paradox appears their age,
How people respond to them, yet know them not,
How there is something relentless in their fate all times,
How all times mischoose the objects of their adulation and reward,
And how the same inexorable price must still be paid for the same great purchase.
—Walt Whitman.

THE pathway of Progress will still, as of old, bear traces of martyrdom.—Lewes.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6 To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 6. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY. { New York, Saturday, February 7, 1891. } 28 LAFAYETTE PL } $3.00 per year.

PAGAN AND CHRISTIAN IDEAS OF DEATH.

Notes and Clippings.

THE Russian calendar is twelve days behind time. The Russian government is about twelve centuries behind.

MR. BANCROFT rarely attended church. He was a prominent Agnostic in his religious views. So was General Francis E. Spinner, ex-secretary of the treasury.

A WRITER in the Prohibition Voice utters this reproach upon the old-time Christians: "The basement story of the Friends' meeting-house in London was once rented and used for a wine-cellar. It was once in order and highly creditable for the Methodist local preachers or class leaders to keep a bar."

THE pastor of a church at Cutler, Me., has resigned. He says he boarded himself, swept the church, made the fires, rang the bell; the people whittled in the church, ate peanuts in time of service, fired pistols and threw stones at his house, laughed aloud, and even used profane language in the house of God during worship.

A BILL has been presented in the Kansas legislature giving the right to vote and to hold office to all women of legal age. The women of Kansas hav enjoyed for several years the right to vote in municipal and school elections and to hold some offices. It is claimed that they hav made excellent voters and first-rate officials, and that elections are always conducted in a respectful and quiet manner where ladies vote.

THIS from the Galveston News is the best reason for the single tax that we ever saw in print: "One reason why the churches will be opposed to the Henry George scheme is that if the community were admitted to be entitled to rent for land, the remission of such rent on church property would immediately partake of a positiv instead of a negativ character, as an endowment of churches. And the tax being more considerable, the exception would attract more attention."

"WE are reminded," says a California paper, "of a time-honored custom by reading that each branch of our legislature has appointed a chaplain, and that the chaplains hav prayed that the deliberations of their respectiv bodies shall be directed by the Lord. Two years ago the same prayer was sent up, but did not seem to be in the least effectiv. One Christopher Buckley had more to do with directing legislation than anybody else, and there is no doubt as to his identity. If better results do not follow this year, they had better try something else."

MAJOR BACON, a Georgia lawyer, has discovered that the preachers of that state are required by law to read from their pulpits, four times a year, an act regarding the observance of Sunday. The statute was framed by the colonial assembly in 1763, Section 10 reading as follows: "And be it further enacted, that this act shall be read yearly, and every year, and at least four times in each year before sermon begins; and every minister is hereby required to read the same in his respectiv place of divine worship." The act provides penalties for vice, profanity, immorality, and for not "keeping holy the Lord's day commonly called Sunday."

THE Posthumos family came from Europe several months ago and settled in East Passaic, N. J. They lived in the place until a few days ago, when they suddenly concluded that a witch was persecuting them. One night Mrs. Posthumos aroused her husband and related a horrible dream. To the surprise of both, the report proceeds, he had the same dream. The vision appeared in the form of a washtub, which persisted in dancing over their pillow, and in spilling suds in their eyes. Then both were seized with violent stomach sickness, and when daybreak came they were almost powerless to move from their couch. Since then an infant has blessed their home, but it has never been healthy, and yesterday looked as if its stay in this world would be of short duration. The parents became anxious and called on a neighbor, an aged woman, to advise them what to do. She told them that they were positivly bewitched, and that another old woman, Mrs. Van Zover, living on the Lodi road, was the witch. She ordered the feather bed torn up, that the instrument serving as a medium might be found. The tick was taken into the yard and cut open, and a yellow canary bird fell on the ground. That settled it. The family at once went into hysterics and concluded to move. A truck was hired and the work of moving was at once begun. Neighbors collected around and the entire village was thrown into excitement. The old woman on the Lodi road was cursed and threatened. When she was asked about the charge that she was a witch, she declared that she was innocent. She said she was no witch and did not believe in such beings.

EARLY travelers among the Indians claim to hav found rites and ceremonies strikingly similar to those of the Jews. The Indians worshiped a Great Spirit or a Jehovah. The tribes had their council or medicin houses, which they held most sacred. They had their high priests and their prophets. They followed the Hebrew custom in not allowing the women to worship with the men. Fifty years ago the Sioux exploited the same belief that they are dancing themselvs crazy about now. They maintained that the Indians were the chosen people of the Great Spirit, and that in time they were to triumph over the rest of the world through a messiah. In marriage the Indians had customs which savored of Palestine. They gave presents for their wives. In their bathing and in their family relations they followed with remarkable precision many of the requirements of the Mosaic law. They observed certain laws of purification which the Old Testament teaches. Fifty years ago travelers found no difficulty in discovering the practice of these rites and ceremonies by the Indians. But as the line of white settlement advanced the Indians gave up their old customs. Their forms were laughed at by white men, and many of them were abandoned. The ghost dance, which the Sioux hav been scaring the frontier with, is the old sun dance under a new name. It used to be practiced very frequently as an atonement ceremony. There was once an Indian feast which was very like the annual feast of the passover. Some of the tribes kept a feast with branches of willow and preliminary fasting which bore striking resemblance to the feast of tabernacles. The practice of offering to the Great Spirit the first green corn and the first fruits of all kinds was almost universal among the Indians before they became contaminated with white men.

Communications.

Christianity and Evolution.

THE GOSPELS.

It is now generally admitted by all scholars competent to express a decided opinion on the subject, that the four gospels, which are regarded by orthodox Christians as the only authentic evidence respecting the life and teachings of Jesus, are practically anonymous productions. Nobody knows who are the authors; nor can anybody affirm that he knows where or when they were written.

It is certain, however, that the gospels which we hav, are not copies of the original manuscripts as it is alleged they were written. The original manuscripts are alleged to hav been in Hebrew; the gospels as we hav them are in Greek.

Where are the original manuscripts? Nobody knows. Were the original manuscripts ever in the hands of the Greeks, and if so, does anybody know what became of them? On these two points Christians are silent. They hav no evidence.

The exact date of the gospels as we hav them is not known; it is generally acknowledged, however, that there is no evidence of their existence until at least the middle of the second century.

Well, now, if it cannot be shown that Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John were the authors of these books; if, on the contrary, it can be demonstrated that it is highly improbable that these persons could hav been the writers, we then hav before us for consideration anonymous productions, first shown to hav been in existence in the middle of the second century after the death of the person of whose career and teachings they profess to giv a faithful account.

What sort of evidence is this? Obviously it is evidence which would be rejected by any magistrate or judge before whom it came in the United Kingdom. Or what is the law of evidence in America upon such a point as that under consideration? It must be remembered that we are asked to accept Jesus as our savior upon extraordinary conditions, viz, upon the peril of everlasting damnation if we reject him, while we shall be rewarded with everlasting happiness if we can manifest an unquestioning faith in Jesus the crucified savior.

Thos. Scott, in the introduction to his admirable "English Life of Jesus," observes: "But if the testimony of a complete twelve cannot be had, there still remains, it may be urged, the testimony of four independent evangelists, two of these being of the number of the twelve, while the writer of the second gospel was the personal attendant of Peter, and the author of the third an esteemed companion of Paul. The reply is plain. Peter may hav had a coadjutor, Mark; and Paul a coadjutor, Luke; but this does not show that Mark and that Luke wrote the gospels. In fact, it is quite clear that the three first gospels are founded on one or more common documents. Internal evidence proves that none of the three are writing from personal knowledge; nor in fact had Paul himself any personal knowledge of the human life of Jesus to communicate to Luke, and Mark adds little or nothing to Matthew or Matthew to Mark. The three synoptic gospels are manifestly not three independent narrativs, but merely different versions flowing out of a common tradition."

The first three alleged witnesses are therefore not witnesses at all. They do not record events of which they themselvs were eye-witnesses. For all we know to the contrary, they do not testify to events that were witnessed by any persons of their acquaintance. Their statements are obviously based upon tradition. Now, suppose a person were called to giv evidence in a court of law upon a very important point? Suppose he proposed to giv an account of events which he never saw? What would the presiding judge say? He would be very likely to speak as follows: "How dare you come here, sir, and waste the time of the court upon matters of which you hav no personal knowledge? You are no witness. You merely propose to occupy the court with statements relating to events of which you allege you hav been told by somebody who may be as ignorant concerning them as you yourself. Get down, sir. In this court we only receive the evidence of eye-witnesses." And if it is absolutely necessary to hav the testimony of eye-witnesses in concerns relating to affairs of daily life, is it not equally, nay, more important, to hav the same strong character of evidence upon an issue the proper understanding of which is said to affect our well-being through all eternity?

And now with regard to the fourth gospel. Upon this point Thomas Scott writes: "The matter of the fourth gospel may be regarded as substantially different from that of the other three. There is throughout it the expression of a distinct autborship except in the comparativly few passages which relate to events which are also recorded in some or all of the other gospels. We hav then before us two inquiries—one which must determin the time at which the fourth gospel was written, and another which must settle whether the other gospels are really three narrativs or varying forms of the same narrativ. If for the former it be proved that the time of composition could not be earlier than the middle of the second century, and that it may be later, the testimony of one more witness is lost, for it cannot be the work of John, the son of Zebedee. At best it can but exhibit the impression made by the teaching and conversation of John on the mind of some familiar disciple; and we are left finally to determin whether in the other gospels we hav the testimony of three several persons, each speaking from his own knowledge, and writing of events which had occurred during his own lifetime and from the information of men whom he knew to hav taken part in those events and whose trustworthiness he has had tested."

How does this powerful writer decide these two important considerations?

He decides it by a critical examination of the first three gospels; by comparing their points of agreement and difference; by examining their style—their method of description and narrativ—and this is how he sums up the whole question. He says: "Nothing is more certain than that any number of persons, speaking of events which they hav seen, will describe them each in his own way. The mode of regarding them will vary, the turn of thought and the language will be different in each case; and the narrativ will giv full play to the associations and the prejudices, the intellect, wisdom, or folly, of the speaker or writer. There are, of course, certain cases in which we should expect them to use the same, or nearly the same, words. If they quote from a published document or proclamation, they will quote alike in proportion to their general accuracy of thought. If they record a speech which they may hav heard, their reports will agree in proportion to the strength and fidelity of their memory; but if we found that the letters of three or four correspondents of newspapers, describing the aspect of political affairs in Lisbon, Paris, or Vienna, contained here and there a sentence couched in precisely the same words, we should regard the circumstance as singular and suspicious. If we found two or three consecutiv sentences in each exactly alike, we should conclude that all had copied from some common document, or that the original writing of one of them was plagiarized by all the rest. If in addition to this we found event after event described, and question after question discussed, in precisely the same phrases by each, we should dismiss the matter as too clear for an instant's thought. And yet this is the phenomenon which comes before us in the passages which are common to two or more of the four gospels; such passages being, of course, far more numerous in those which hav received the name of the synoptic gospels to distinguish them from the fourth. No fact could well be more momentous. The supplement to the fourth gospel informs us that if all the unrecorded acts of Jesus were reported the world would not contain the books which should be written. The wealth of material then was infinit. Yet the synoptists relate but a few, and for the most part the same, events, often (we may add) in precisely the same words. On this point no room is left for doubt. Down to the subtlest turns of thought and the nicest details in expression there is a substantial identity, which proves that the narrativs alleged to be those of Matthew, Mark, and Luke are in the main one and the same tale, garnished with a few additional phrases, according to the taste or judgment of the copyists. Thus, then, the witness of the four independent evangelists is reduced at once to the testimony of two unauthenticated narrativs, the one supposed to exhibit the thoughts and convictions of John, the other forming the nucleus of the synoptic gospels. In neither case hav we adequate evidence that the testimony is that of eye-witnesses. Hence, except on the assumptions which insure the victory of bibliolators and sacerdotalists, it is impossible to feel in those narrativs the confidence which we feel in handling the work of a strictly contemporary historian."

But why talk only of the "four gospels?" In the early ages of Christianity a number of other gospels were quoted. What were they? Let us see.

ARTHUR B. MOSS.

Fraud and Delusion.

I know it to be a fact that there is a large percentage of church-members and supporters of churches that do not believe in religion. They support the church as a matter of business policy, but principally fearing its persecuting, enslaving, psychological force or mental influence. What the real source of this mental force is I think is very little understood—whether it is a mesmeric influence exerted by all priests or preachers over their flocks, or they are simply the medium or means of conveying it from the heads of the different churches to their flocks. I am inclined to think from my observation and special investigation on this point that the latter case is the truth—that many of them are held enslaved by it as well as their flocks.

But my attention was called to this point by reading an article in one of our leading magazines on the celebration of Easter in Jerusalem by the Greek church. The correspondent, after giving a graphic description of the masses of pilgrims, both Mohammedan and Christian, assembled there from every country of Europe, and even from America, and the various superstitious scenes and acts gone through, at length describes what is called the pretended miracle of the holy fire, or fire produced by God at the request of the patriarch of Jerusalem at Easter at the church of the Holy Sepulcher. The rotunda of this church apparently was specially designed for this purpose, being left without windows, only very narrow holes in the walls for the light to be seen through, with a faithful guard placed around so that no prying eyes could hav any chance to see what was going on inside. This pious fraud has been successfully carried on every year since the ninth century.

Here then we hav this sanctified head of a Christian church, in presence of the thousands around him from nearly all parts of the world, in this enlightened day and age of the world, enter this darkened building with his box of silent matches or some other means of producing light and fire without much noise, after offering up his prayer to his God to hav him produce the fire. After rising from his knees he makes the fire himself, and hands his candle out through these holes in the wall, lighted from the fire thus produced, to the eager, excited masses on the outside, and continues to do so until the tens of thousands assembled are supplied with one or more lighted candles apiece. The lighted candles are passed around so rapidly that a great volume of smoke is produced, and even the outside air is perceptibly heated, and the whole city, in course of fifteen minutes, is one great blaze of light produced from this holy fire.

Now, there can be scarcely a doubt but that these patriarchs and heads of this Christian church for the last nine centuries were well aware that the Christian religion was a fraud and delusion. But miracles of the present time are not confined to the Greek church; they also constitute a large stock in trade both in the Catholic and Protestant churches, only slightly more conservativ, especially in Protestant churches. There are two conditions necessary to the successful working of a miracle: 1. Ignorance and superstition; 2. Priestly or church mesmeric control of the minds of the masses, holding them enslaved through mental impressions. In this country we very rarely hear of miracles performed by the Catholic church, there are too many rival sects and Freethinkers around to investigate it. But in Catholic countries, especially where the conditions prevail which I hav named, the miraculous holy church and holy wells flourish, such as the Lourdes. Here they will show you hundreds of crutches which they pretend were left by the lame that they claim were healed. Some travelers try to account for the crutches that are left behind at these churches by supposing that there may be some impostors, and that some others are excited to make a desperate effort to walk without them, and thus throw them away.

But if one-half of what is claimed for mesmerism, or electrical psychology, as the higher stage of it is called by the notable Dr. Dodds, is true, we might admit the possibility of some of these cripples being enabled to walk without crutches. Though I radically differ from Mr. Dodds's whole theory of electrical psychology as expounded by him in his course of lectures before the United States Senate. But I admit the possibility of a mental force capable of performing the almost miraculous cures that he claims to hav done—such as to make the blind to see, the lame to walk, and the deaf to hear, this done in course of a few minutes. But he says nothing about the possibility of any person being made blind or lame by the same force. He lays down five different ways of bringing his subjects into contact with this subtle force. But it is evident the main point in each plan is to arrest the attention of his subjects. But if Dr. Dodds had not been a theologian he might hav added one other plan to the five—that is, religious devotion. Of all of the five plans, this one is the most effectual, in isolating and fixing the mind on one idea, and also in bringing it into full sympathy with this subtle force. But as he was not only a theologian, but also activly engaged in the ministry, and consequently activly engaged in forwarding church interests, he would naturally say nothing about this last plan, but instead slyly giv out that only persons of good characters should be made acquainted with these five plans, lest they should victimize some persons for evil purposes. This is how he would cover up the church's dirty, cruel work, knowing well that the church had a monopoly in this kind of business. And his spread-eagleism of electrical psychology was simply a scheme to bring some of those persons under church control who were not as yet mentally enslaved by the church—who still, to some extent, maintained their self-respect and mental independence—under the specious promis and hope of curing defectiv faculties. He helps them by his plans to get rid of these valuable properties of mind, and in all probability fasten a church mind-force upon them that will hold them enslaved to church interests the remainder of their lives.

How very similar to revivalism and the faith cure the miracles of the Protestant churches of the present time; as in hypnotism, the person has to get rid of his self-respect, reason, and mental independence, for they hav to get down on their knees and confess that they are sinners whether they are or not, and profess to believe in something whether they know it is true or not, thus completely yielding their minds to the influence and control of some other leading mind, possessing and assisted by a greater mental force; thus the poor dupes become enslaved mentally instead of receiving any permanent benefit from it. In either of the three cases the essential point, in order to be operated upon by this mental force, is in yielding the mind to be controled by something besides your own will, reason, and intelligence.

Now, it has been freely admitted not only by Dr. Dodds, but by many other persons who hav experimented with hypnotism, that it may be used for evil purposes, such as depriving persons of the use of some of their mental faculties, or forcing them to do things that were very wrong, even criminal acts. Now, hav we anything in church literature to show that it has been used for such purposes by the church? By turning to the ninth chapter of the gospel of John, we find the story of the man that was born blind. When this supposed miracle-working preacher, called Christ, was challenged as to the reason why this man was born blind, he said that it was that the works of God might be manifested by him. In plain language, it is virtually saying that the man was born blind, and kept so, in order that he might hav a chance to work a miracle upon him. It may be the story is a fabrication of some bishop or magnate of the early Christian church, but as it is fully sanctioned by all the Christian churches of the present time as divine truth, the proof is just as strong for my purpose as if it was true. That such things as hypnotized subjects are kept on hand from time to time, we may safely infer from this story—in order to pose them as persons to perform miracles upon, as the churches' stock-in-trade. When such business runs low at the holy wells, sacred churches, faith-cure establishments, and revivals, they may trot out these unfortunate victims of churchly tyranny and cruelty, and restore to them the use of the limb, or organ, or faculty of mind of which they previously, through the mental force of hypnotism, deprived them at some time of their lives.

While the Catholics look on almost with disgust at the miracle of the holy fire performed by the patriarch of the Greek church, they are always ready to swallow down the so-called miracles of their own religion. And precisely so of the different sects of the Protestant church in respect to Catholic or Greek church miracles. Whilst, to an unprejudiced Freethinker, the pretended miracles of all divisions of the Christian church are equal absurdities and impostures. Is it not evident that the heads of the three divisions of the Christian church who are capable of playing such tricky impostures upon their adherents are fully aware that the Christian religion is a humbug and fraud, and a mental delusion?

Mazo Manie, Wis. JOHN LITCH.

The Farmers' Alliance and the Fair.

The national Farmers' Alliance in regular, annual session at Ocala, Fla., passed the following resolution, viz.:

We, the national Farmers' Alliance of America, believing that veneration and obedience for the laws of God are the conserving and saving force of human government, do hereby respectfully request that the directors of the great national fair, to be held in 1892, do not desecrate the American Sabbath by keeping open the gates to the same on the Lord's day.

In reference, and in opposition, to the above resolution, the Norse Farmers' Alliance unanimously adopted the following preamble and resolution at a regular session, Jan. 17, 1891, viz.:

WHEREAS the National Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union adopted a resolution at its recent session at Ocala, Fla., requesting the closing of the World's Fair on Sunday, or, as it was termed, on the "American Sabbath" and "Lord's day," and,

WHEREAS we consider such action not only ill-considered, but unwise, as it is a step to restrict individual rights in the interest of sectarianism;

WHEREAS, Hundreds of thousands of laborers living in Chicago, or within a few hours' ride of that city, would be actually prevented from visiting the World's Fair at all should it be closed on Sunday, be it therefore

Resolved, That we deprecate such action and feel constrained to enter our solemn protest against the proposition to close the World's Fair or Columbian Exposition on Sunday, as a step toward the union of church and state, and an abridgment of the enjoyment of equal rights by all irrespectiv of belief or sect. T. THEO. COLWICK,
Secretary Norse Farmers' Alliance, No. 1,023.

The reader will perceive, from the above, that the National Farmers' Alliance—a grand and noble industrial order, consecrated to the industrial emancipation of the oppressed and downtrodden farmers and toilers of this country—has undoubtedly been taken unawares and imposed upon by crafty ecclesiasticism getting in its work, intended to subserve its secret purposes, the great majority of that body being totally unaware of the true and real import, and entirely ignorant, or at least unsuspicious, of the true purport and ultimate object of this resolution. The Farmers' Alliance is, or should be, a Secular organization, its motto being, "Equal rights to all, and special privileges to none." T. THEO. COLWICK.

Norse, Tex.

The Western Political Revolt Led by Heretics.

From the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

There are certain characteristics among the leaders of the People's party movement in this state which make their success in the recent campaign all the more surprising. If the party continues to prosper, the sentiment of the state must undergo a complete change. The rank and file are years behind the leaders in every principle of the movement. Kansas has heretofore been a state of intense religious feeling. The churches hav been prominently identified with politics and the pastors hav thought it incumbent upon themselvs to deliver political sermons.

The Methodist church has formed the great strength of the Republican party, for its membership has been largely composed of Grand Army men. The German Catholic church has been and is Democratic. This was due to the stand taken by the two old parties on the Prohibition question. All of the Protestant churches, more especially in the cities, were forced to espouse the cause of the Republicans on account of their advanced temperance ideas, and the Democratic fight was necessarily against them.

The men and women who sprung into prominence and managed the campaign for the People's party are, for the most part, Freethinkers and Atheists. Some of them belong to the Unitarian church, and hav such Liberal ideas on orthodox questions that they hav been led into a denunciation of the interference of the church in political matters, and consequently into a fight on the churches themselvs.

Jerry Simpson, who made such a wonderful campaign in the seventh congressional district, had all of the power of the church directed against him. He did not attempt to conceal the fact that he was an unbeliever, but on the stump publicly declared that he gave religious questions no thought whatever, but addressed himself to those which he could understand and hoped to change.

Mrs. M. E. Lease is an Infidel, and she is proud of it. She was by far the most important factor in molding public sentiment in the campaign, and her philippics against the old parties stirred up the masses to such an extent that a calmer discourse would not be listened to. "The day has passed," said she in conversation with a newspaper correspondent, "when it is a disgrace to be an Infidel. It means now that one is a broad thinker, and the people to whom the term is applied represent the advanced thought of the age."

Mrs. Annie L. Diggs, the associate editor of the Alliance Advocate, belongs to the Unitarian church, and so does Frank Doster, who is being groomed for United States Senator. But the day has passed when either recognizes anything more in Christianity than a broad humanity, and both are ready at all times to defend their position. Mrs. Diggs, next to Mrs. Lease, was the most successful campaigner in the People's movement. She is a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, differing with Mrs. Lease on the Prohibition question. Mrs. Diggs believes temperance is a virtue, but her temperance work is a secondary matter, and the religious features of it hav no attraction for her.

Henry, Charles, and William Vincent, three brothers who own and edit the Winfield Nonconformist, and Cyrus Corning, editor of the Workman, an Alliance paper published at Eldorado, are of the same religious belief as Jerry Simpson. Corning and the Vincents hav been labor agitators for years, and hav from the first been recognized leaders in the farmer movement. The appeals made by the Republican central committee to the church-going element on the temperance question and the ready response of the pastors brought to the surface the elements which war on religion.

The persons mentioned are only a few of the more important, but they represent the brains of the new movement. A crusade against the existing order of things had to be made general in order to be successful. The country preachers at first were very pronounced in their advocacy of reforms in politics. They were candidates for Congressional nominations, and in the Sixth Congressional district five out of the seven candidates before the Alliance convention were preachers. But it was not this element of the party which came to the front as the campaign progressed. These same people with their liberal religious views are without exception single tax advocates. The farmers who hav thrust them forward do not comprehend the meaning of the Henry George movement nor do they understand why certain of their leaders are supporting Frank Doster for Senator.

Some weeks ago a man who represented himself as a correspondent of a New York daily came to Topeka and gave it out that he intended to thoroughly investigate the causes of the late uprising. He was extended every courtesy by the politicians, and his paper was watched to see what would be the result of his investigation. As none of his efforts appeared in print, suspicion was aroused, and inquiry revealed the fact that he represented the New York Standard.

Robert G. Ingersoll Nominated for President.

Who shall be president? I nominate Robert G. Ingersoll as the most truly American, after the pattern of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, of whom fifty of the fifty-six were skeptics to Babylon, church and state Christianity, that has "taken peace from the earth," and turned the church and state "into blood," making the war element dominate every other element in the nation.

As a Shaker—a Christian after the pattern of Pentecostal Christianity—of those who would not fight, did not marry, had all things common, and held work to be worship—I am intensely interested in maintaining intact the secular character of the Constitution of these United States, that characteristic of the Constitution which secures liberty of conscience to all classes of people, religious and irreligious, believers or skeptics.

As things now are, I feel continually in jeopardy. I am afraid of these pious, religious politicians and people, and the more pious and sincere they are the more I am afraid of them. If, in legislating to restrain or kill heretics, they really "think they are doing some God good service," is it any the less murder, or will it be any the less death to the murdered heretics? If Thomas Paine were alive to-day, would not every religious person of any church or sect of Christians, except Shakers, feel just as Talmage expresses himself about Ingersoll—that there ought to be civil laws enacted to restrain or kill him and his fellows? As a Christian disbelieving in war, force, coercion, should I not feel bound to use my power in saving souls from an eternal hell hereafter by giving them a temporal hell here? When Roman Catholic "Bloody Queen Mary" of England was asked how she could be so cruel as to hav heretics hanged, drawn, and quartered, or burnt at the stake, her reply was, "I subject them to torture here for a short time, that God may not torture them hereafter throughout all eternity." As a Christian disbelieving in war, force, coercion, or in a hell of fire and brimstone, and believing that I would do to others as I would hav them do by me, I can "do violence to no man."

If all men and women are "born free and equal," how is it that some men set themselvs up over others in the name of some God whom those others know no more about than they themselvs know about him; to compel those others to believe or disbelieve, to do or not to do, as they determin. Ingersoll would say it was un-American, and, as president, even the Shakers would rest in peaceful security, knowing that he would sign no bill of religious legislation about Sunday laws or Sunday papers—or Sunday anything infringing the liberty of conscience of his equals. "Why am I judged by another man's conscience?" Instead of returning the colored people back to Africa, I propose to return these church-and-state, God-in-the-Constitution people—who are seeking the destruction of the only government on earth where liberty of person, press, speech, and conscience is conserved—back to Europe, where they properly belong and not in this gloriously free, American, non-religious republic. With eternal vigilance, "it is liberty or death."

Will there not arise in Congress some statesmen like Ingersoll to oppose all Sunday legislation (which is but the entering-wedge to a final union of church and state), and who, when a World's Fair is settled upon, will insert a clause forbidding any one day being designated as a Sabbath, seeing that every day is a Sabbath to some of the world's people who are to be invited to the World's Fair? Let it not be Buddhist, Jew, or Mohammedan, but purely American, to whom all days are alike sacred to liberty of conscience, of press and person, to the "rights of man," and to "common sense." F. W. EVANS.

Mount Lebanon, N. Y.

TEN persons were killed and twenty severely wounded in a church row at Fœldia, in Roumania. The cause of the disturbance was that a very ugly-looking priest had been assigned to the church by the bishop, notwithstanding the communicants had expressed a wish to the contrary. The priest was told to leave, but would not, and the members resolved to put him out. Police were called, and a general free fight was the result.

HIS infallibility the pope is at present hard up for cash to keep his "divine mission" in working order, and has resolved to charge an entrance fee on all persons visiting the Vatican museums. The official organ of the Italian government, La Réformia, warns the pope not to do so, and says that the government will immediately take charge of the art collection when fees of any kind are charged.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President, . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. W STAUFFER, Vice-President, 1516 Montgomery ave., Phila., Pa.
J. O BENTLEY, Vice-President, . 812 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Secular Union's Monthly Report.

CONTRIBUTIONS RECEIVED JANUARY, 1891.

"Progressiv Thinker," for "Church Taxation" and "Bible in Schools" pamphlets	$ 8 00
John Price, Scappoose, Ore. (Guarantee Fund)	5 00
Ignace Glaser, Bastrop, La. (new member)	1 00
Andrew J. Wadlia, Greeley, Col. (Guarantee Fund).	2 00
A. Schell, Knight's Ferry, Cal., for "Church Taxations."	2 50
George Larson, Levan, Utah (Guarantee Fund)	5 00
A Friend in Virginia (Guarantee Fund)	5 00
Samos Parsons, San Jose. Cal. (Guarantee Fund)	10 00
Newark Liberal League, Newark, N. J., for lecture by Miss Craddock, on "How to Make Freethinkers of the Young."	12 25
Rosseau Hess, Fort Custer, Mont. (Guarantee Fund)	10 00
Elam L. R. Gardner, Troy, N. Y., for pamphlets	1 00
A Friend in New York state (Guarantee Fund)	100 00
Seaborn Kitchens, Sr., Gibson, Ga. (Guarantee Fund)	5 00
Abraham Schell, Knight's Ferry, Cal. (Guarantee Fund)	100 00
T. S. Frisbie, Hartford, Conn. (new member), $5 for Guarantee Fund, and $1 for annual certificate	6 00
Henry Beichling, McAuley, Ida. (Guarantee Fund).	5 00
N. F. Griswold, Meriden, Conn., for "Bible in Schools" pamphlet	1 00
Prof. H. M. Cottinger, San Jose, Cal.	2 00
Joseph Haigh, Chebanse, Ill. (Guarantee Fund)	2 00
F. H. Nicoles, Medaryville, Ind., $2 contribution, twenty-four cents for "Bible in Schools" pamphlets	2 24
Wm. Smith, Geneva, N. Y., for "Bible in Schools" pamphlets	1 00
George N. Hill, Boston. Mass. (Guarantee Fund)	3 00
S. Brewer, Ithaca, N. Y	5 00
Total	$293 99

F. C. MENDE, Treasurer American Secular Union.
(Per I. C. C.)

Philadelphia, Jan. 31, 1891.

That Field Secretaryship.

We giv below an extract from a letter which is a sample of those which we are receiving upon this subject. The writer was present at the Portsmouth Congress, and his opinion, therefore, is of some value. He became sufficiently interested in the American Secular Union to join later on, as a life-member, and to make his two daughters annual members; and the letter given below was the outcome of some correspondence which had been passing between us on a suggestion which he had made for spreading the work of our society:

SPICELAND, IND., Jan. 24, 1891.

MISS IDA C. CRADDOCK, Sec. A. S. Union, Philadelphia, Pa., My Dear Friend: Your very kind and valuable letter was duly received. Will answer that your praise in your former letter of the person you hoped to make field secretary seemed to me equivalent to saying Charles Watts. I hav heard him in debate and lecture, and must say that he is the best qualified for field secretary of any person I know. He is radical in his views, and yet tolerant and courteous to those who differ with him. While I would not detract from the valuable qualities of any other of our lecturers, I certainly feel that Mr. Watts has the qualifications for an organizer more perfectly and harmoniously combined perhaps than any other one of them. He does not offend even his most bitter opponents in debate. There are persons who will attract and convince for a time, and then, perhaps, by a harsh or rash sentence scatter to the winds all the good they had accomplished. He is an honor and a power in the cause, which so much needs such help, and will never bring a blush of shame to the cheek of the most refined. We would be proud of him.

I do not intend any reflection on any person, but must say we ought to hav the choice of the majority. If Mr. Charlesworth had been elected field secretary at Portsmouth, we would be bound to him. But as he was only recommended, and as there were so few members present, the board are certainly under no binding obligations to appoint him. He has ability which will certainly not be ignored, and he will hav no difficulty in finding good work to do; and the vote given him is a valuable compliment to him. . . .

Yours very truly, W. W. WILSON.

Another life-member present at that congress (one of the "old guard") has given us a large contribution, and has cordially expressed his approval of the choice of the majority of the board for Mr. Watts as field secretary. Another member, whose name is withheld for the present, offers us $50 provided we secure Mr. Watts's services. The Portsmouth Secular Union people write us that they are unanimously in favor of Mr. Watts. These are but samples of the growing feeling among our people that our choice of Mr. Watts for field secretary is a wise one.

In view, however, of the fact that the two gentlemen who support Mr. Charlesworth's candidacy hav appealed to the public through the papers, we think it only due to Mr. Watts, as well as to the majority of the board, that a similar appeal for Mr. Watts should be made, and that it should be promptly responded to by everyone who desires that Mr. Watts shall be made our field secretary. We know that his friends, both within and without the society, are legion; and if everyone who feels that the alliance of such a man as Mr. Watts with our society would be desirable will write to us, we shall know with more certainty where we stand. We who want Mr. Watts hav no private axes to grind; we wish before all to be loyal to the best interests of the people who hav elected us to the management of the American Secular Union work; we desire to pursue only that course of action which will result in the greatest good to Liberalism. Between the abilities, experience, etc., of the two candidates, there can of course be no possible hesitancy in preferring Mr. Watts. At least, so it has seemed to five out of seven members of the board. His scholarship, his address as a speaker, his readiness and logic in debate, his fairness to opponents, his popularity among radicals and conservativs alike, his tactful perception of the limit to which aggressivness toward the churches may be pushed on any given occasion, combine to render him just the man to send into the field as the representativ of a work which requires above all a man of such qualifications.

It has been objected by Dr. Foote that lecturers already in the field should be subsidized; and W. S. Bell givs vent to a fear that if a field secretary be appointed, he (the field secretary) will receive all the "reward from the Liberal public," while "the others get nothing." He informs us that all the other lecturers are doing precisely the same work as a field secretary, i.e., organizing Secular Unions. Will Mr. Bell kindly send in his report of the number of Secular Unions which he has organized? Up to date, the corresponding secretary of the national society has received no notice of such. Nor, indeed, has she received notice of Secular Unions organized by any lecturer save Mr. Remsburg and Mrs. Freeman, and in one case by Mrs. Mattie Krekel—for which last, however, no application for charter has been made. It looks a good deal as though the business of organizing auxiliary societies for the American Secular Union had been considerable of a failure, as far as lecturers in the field are concerned; and we think it high time that we hav an agent of our own in the field to look after the business interests of the American Secular Union.

But I would say that we hav already made appeals to the lecturers to support the work of the American Secular Union. One of the first acts of the board, in the winter of 1889–90, was to issue an official announcement in which the following words occur:

> We invoke the assistance of all traveling lecturers and organizers in forming new societies; and in return we will aid them by maintaining a "bureau of information" regarding Liberal societies and activ workers in the cause throughout the United States.

As this brought out not one solitary response, we again issued "An Appeal to the Liberal Lecturer" last summer, in which we begged for their coöperation, and entreated them to at least mention the American Secular Union, and use it as a background for their lectures. Only two lecturers, W. F. Jamieson and Miss Voltairine de Cleyre, responded. Miss de Cleyre and I discussed the matter in a personal interview at some length; and Mr. Jamieson, in a series of able newspaper articles, endeavored to pave the way for some such alliance; and it is probable that, had he been able to attend the Portsmouth congress as he had expected, some steps might hav been taken by him toward the formation of a lecture bureau. The corresponding secretary, in her address before the congress on "Methods of Extending our Work," advocated the formation of such a bureau; but none of the lecturers present at the Congress seemed to care to take the matter up. Only a few weeks ago we had the pleasure of listening to a most able address from B. F. Underwood on "Resistance to the Encroachments of Ecclesiasticism." In that address he urged all Liberals to unite, to organize, to do all in their power to resist such encroachments; he deprecated the lack of union among us, and criticised most ably and effectivly the style of carrying on our periodic gatherings; but singularly enough, he entirely omitted to mention the American Secular Union, or even to hint that an organization already existed for resistance to such encroachments. This, too, although the president and the corresponding secretary of the American Secular Union sat in his audience, and he had been holding a most friendly and instructiv conversation with both just previous to his lecture.

In view of such lukewarmness on the part of Liberal lecturers toward the national society, I would ask, what can be hoped for by inviting them collectivly to become field agents for us?

It may not be amiss to explain to our contributors that the work of a field secretary, such as we contemplate, includes a good deal more than merely "organizing auxiliaries." It includes, among other things of which I will speak later on, keeping them after we get them organized. At present there exist throughout the country a large number of Liberal societies who hold charters from us but with whom we are no longer in communication. It is the exception to find an auxiliary which deigns, after receiving its charter, to report to us what it is doing for the cause of state secularization; it is also the exception to receive from an auxiliary any financial contribution. It is impossible to reach those auxiliaries and stimulate them by correspondence only. We need a man in the field whose whole business will be to travel from place to place to address such societies personally, and to arouse their enthusiasm for that state secularization whose accomplishment is recognized among Liberals as the corner-stone of our religious liberties. The idea that such a business agent would conflict with the Liberal lecturers now in the field is ridiculous, and shows a lack of farsightedness on the part of those objecting which is unworthy a true Liberal. The advent of such a field secretary would really quicken the growth of Freethought in every town, and would pave the way for more lecturers, more radical newspapers, more Freethought literature in that town than ever before. And supposing that it did not result in more dollars, but in less dollars in the pockets of the Liberal lecturers now in the field, is the livelihood of, say, a dozen people, to outweigh the gain to the whole cause of Liberalism? However, as I think I hav shown above, the advent of a field secretary, provided he be a suitable person for the position, would widen the field for the Liberal lecturer, instead of contracting it.

I hav said that there is other work besides organizing auxiliaries. To put it briefly, there are at least four lines of work for which we need a man in the field at present. We wish to reach:

(1) Our auxiliaries everywhere, so as to establish closer relations with them than hav been possible hitherto, in order that we may all work together effectivly throughout the country against the God-in-the-Constitution party.

(2) Those Liberals who hav too little of this world's goods to contribute dollars to the cause, but who would gladly contribute cents, if some regular method were adopted of reaching them.

(3) Those moderate Liberals who stand midway between extreme radicalism and extreme orthodoxy, and who are partially or wholly in favor of state secularization.

(4) Public-spirited men in the community at large, who, though not avowed Freethinkers, are in full sympathy with our principles.

To perfect these plans as we should wish, we need Mr. Watts—or some one equally able and experienced.

In order to get Mr. Watts, we must raise $2 000 for his salary. We feel sure that, once in the field, a man of his ability and popularity will hav no difficulty in collecting not only that amount, but even more, especially if the plan which we hav for reaching all classes of Liberals be put into practice (a plan which we may here say has been already tried in two other national societies, with most surprising results). We propose that all lecture appointments shall be made through the head office of the American Secular Union, and that all collections made by Mr. Watts in the field shall be remitted direct to us by the officers of the society before whom he speaks, so that he shall be relieved from all annoyances of business management, and be able to giv his whole attention to his work of lecturing, organizing, and general quickening of Liberalism in the communities which he visits.

In the present condition of affairs, however, the majority of the board hesitate about engaging any field secretary whatever, until we can see our way financially a little more clearly than at present. We therefore make this public statement of the matter, hoping that all Liberals, both within and without the society, who feel that it would be a help to the cause to hav Mr. Watts as our field secretary, will giv their financial aid toward making his appointment possible. We hope that those who cannot giv large sums will giv small ones. Grains of sand heaped together make up high mountains.

It is due to Mr. Watts that his friends promptly send in their assurances of approval, whether contributions accompany or do not accompany such approval.

We hope that we shall hear promptly from all our members everywhere on the matter of the field secretaryship. We hope that all Liberals who are friends of Mr. Watts, whether in or out of the society, will also feel like giving at least a small contribution toward his salary for this year. If the responses come in as they should, Mr. Watts could be put in the field by April, if not before. Come, friends, how many of you will come forward and help make this appointment of the field secretary a success?

IDA C. CRADDOCK,
Corr. Sec. American Secular Union.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 29, 1891.

Field Secretary—Why One Has Not Been Appointed.

R. B. Westbrook in Investigator.

EDITOR INVESTIGATOR: You say in your editorial of January 14th: "We supposed that the recommendation [by the congress] would be respected by the board of directors at their first meeting, and the secretary would commence work soon after." You seem to hav overlooked the fact that the congress, on motion of Mr. E. A. Stevens, passed a unanimous resolution of instruction to the board not to appoint the person named "until the whole amount of money necessary for his salary should be subscribed." We issued the call for money as directed immediately after we returned from the congress, and only about $500 was subscribed (hardly enough for printing and office expenses), not one dollar of which was specifically for the salary of the person named for field secretary. What could the board do under these circumstances but table the resolution of the two directors, which was to appoint whenever $500 should be subscribed toward his salary?

A few days afterward a proposition was made to appoint Mr. Charles Watts general field secretary, and although the board had no instructions not to appoint any other than the gentleman recommended by the congress until the money was pledged, they felt it prudent to raise by subscription most of the money necessary, before Mr. Watts actually entered upon his work, while they fully believed that the renown, large experience, and brilliant talents of this well-known Secularist would secure enough money from the places he might visit to pay his way. Strenuous opposition to the appointment of Mr. Watts was made by two directors out of the seven, and instead of discussing this matter in the board first, the public press was used for the express purpose of defeating Mr. Watts.

The end was accomplished. The board thought it best to halt for the present and to throw the whole responsibility upon the two directors who had objected to the appointment of Mr. Watts. Now, Mr. editor, here you hav the whole matter in a nutshell. What would you hav the board do? Will you or some of your readers advise us what to do under these perplexing circumstances?

R. B. WESTBROOK, Pres. American Sec. Union.

The American Secular Union.

I hav received a number of communications since the "Open Letter" of the president of the Secular Union to Dr. Foote appeared in THE TRUTH SEEKER, all save one objecting, not only to the matter, but especially to the spirit, manifested in the open letter. I hav refrained from giving my opinion, thinking that perhaps others more capable would speak, but I am forced to the conclusion that, as one of the oldest in years in the society, as well as one of the very oldest in membership, having worked with it and for it when it was known by its original name, "Liberal League" (a name that everybody understood without explanation), I must say what needs to be said as I understand it.

I did not at all understand why the president and secretary, at the congress at Portsmouth, showed such a determination to ignore as directors Messrs. T. B. Wakeman and Dr. Foote, two men whom we all know are "busy men," but in all the fourteen years of the life of the "Union" hav never been too busy to work for the good of the society in evil as well as good repute, giving not only money but hard work to keep the organization in working order.

Our president has been (perhaps is now) a doctor of divinity, and Catholic priests are not the only clergymen who sometimes forget to be just to lay members. What does Dr. Westbrook mean when he says that they hav a man to present as field secretary who is a man of good moral character, and one whom we can safely send into our families? There immediately comes to me the question, Is not the man whom the Portsmouth congress unanimously elected for field secretary a chaste man, and may he not be invited into our families?

I am not in favor of a field secretary.

No one appreciates the great talent of Charles Watts more than myself, and I wish he could be sustained by the public in his work for Secular thought; but let no one suppose he will be, or is, careful about treading on the toes of the church, for in the several times which I hav heard him he has given the hardest blows to that sacred institution that I thought possible till I heard President Westbrook at Portsmouth; his speech put aside even Mr. Watts.

The president said the lecturers bring no money into the Union. If they leave no debts behind them for friends to pay, I am glad, as in my own city two very popular lecturers some few years ago did so, and the friends said pretty hard things about them.

If I remember rightly, we were told at Philadelphia that the secretary we were electing was equal to going out, appointing meetings, and lecturing, and that she would do so if appointed. Of her ability I hav no doubt, but I hav not seen reports of many.

Dr. Westbrook tells us we were threatened with the law at Pittsburgh. Does he not know that Mr. Watts was at that meeting, and was the one who replied to that threat?

Finally, in my opinion, if we think to reconcile the church to our thought and by that means gain their help, we shall find that we shall lose more good help from people who believe in straightforwardness and doing nothing underhanded, than we gain by honeyed words to opposers.

I hav said I am not in favor of a field secretary, but if we hav one let us hav the one appointed by the congress, as Dr. De Lespinasse says in his communication the past week to Freethought.

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 28 291. LUCY N. COLMAN.

Mr. Wakeman Replies to President Westbrook.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER, Sir: In a letter of the 17th inst., published in the Liberal papers, President R. B. Westbrook says, "Strenuous opposition to the appointment of Mr. Watts was made by two directors out of the seven, and instead of discussing the matter in the board first, the public press was used for the express purpose of defeating Mr. Watts."

Sufficient time has elapsed for some explanation of this remarkable statement, but as none seems to be forthcoming, it is necessary to say that it is quite the reverse of the truth—unintentionally, of course. I hav made no opposition, strenuous or other, to the appointment of Mr. Watts, nor has Dr. Foote to my knowledge or belief. We hav been trying to feel our way to that result without unfairness to others. The facts are, in short, these. At the meeting of the board the motion came up to appoint Mr. Charlesworth, as was recommended by the congress. The president objected that it could not be done, because the congress had also voted that he should not be appointed until the necessary fund was raised. It was then found that the amount necessary was within the judgment of the board, and I stated that Mr. Charlesworth had agreed to take the field if $500 was pledged for his family, he taking the risk of raising the balance necessary by his labors. Then it was objected that he was not in harmony with the constitution and purposes of the Union, and not a competent or appropriate person. I stated that the recommendation of the congress was sufficient for us upon those points, but I was quite sure they could be obviated, and I, therefore, moved, "That the appointment of Mr. Charlesworth be laid over until at least $500 be subscribed for that special purpose, and until Mr. Charlesworth shall make such explanations to the board as will satisfy them that he is a competent and appropriate person to receive such appointment."

This was laid over and the president now says has been "tabled." The president then stated that he had corresponded with a gentleman who was in every way competent and appropriate, but whose name he was not then at liberty to giv, and he left us in ignorance and wonderment as to who this remarkable personage could be to take the place of the one the congress had named.

Some week or more after, he wrote to Dr. Foote that it was our old friend, Mr. Charles Watts, editor of the Secular Thought, of Toronto, and president of the Canadian Secular Union. We made no opposition, but were greatly pleased and tried to arrange a way in which it could be done without unfairness to Mr. Charlesworth and others whom the Liberals of the country might also think worthy of consideration under such circumstances. In this view Dr. Foote tried to arrange a plan that might be generally satisfactory, and so put Mr. Watts and many good men and women in the field, and he published it so that such might be the result.

On the 31st of December last I wrote a letter to the president giving my views of the way in which the difficulty could be obviated. As I am now accused of "strenuous opposition" to my friend Mr. Watts, and as that letter contains the only words from me on the subject, I ask that it be sent to me for publication. Let us know the worst.

Yours truly, T. B. WAKEMAN.

New York, Jan. 31, EM. 291.

Will Christians Work with Infidels?

Probably not. If Infidels will join the church and support Christian preaching, Christians will "kindly" permit Infidels to work with them? To hold a Secular congress, or convention, and strive to suppress the free expression of thought, in deference to the views and feelings of a few Christians who happen to "honor" the meeting with their presence, is stultification.

John R. Charlesworth will find the Liberal lecture field broader than any "board," and more hospitable. Judging by a recent article of his, lately published, he ought to be engaged in the lecture field, standing upon his own independent feet. Ever since there was an attempt to gag him, my entire sympathy has been with this young and talented gentleman.

We want no "policy" that will not treat all our lecturers alike. Special privileges for none. We older workers hav been fighting the battles of intellectual freedom all these years without being "anointed" or authorized by any "board." I would say to the younger lecturers, whether Timothys or Johns, "let no man despise thy youth." Enter the lecture field, gather your audiences, and fire away, as the rest of us did. Your chances are better now than ours were then. The lecturers now in the field will welcome you and aid you to secure lecture engagements. We need more lecturers to combat the pretensions of the clergy. I want to see every town and neighborhood ablaze with Freethought lecturers. We need a thousand lecturers where we hav one. We need men and women with plenty of vim and enthusiasm, who will insist upon speaking their own highest, noblest, truest thought. The Liberals of the United States should contribute not a dollar unless it goes to sustain Freethought in every direction. If Christians want to join us on these terms, all right. No compromise with old theology; no parleying; no trimming; no suppression of honest thought to win Christian smiles and favors. If, as some Liberals say, we hav the churches on the run, let us keep them exercising. It will keep us busy and them healthy. Let us accept nothing less from them than "unconditional surrender."

Des Moines, Ia. W. F. JAMIESON.

Charles Bradlaugh's Life and Works.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH.

Charles Bradlaugh was born at London, Sept. 26, 1833. His father, a solicitor's clerk, was very poor, and not able to giv his son even a full elementary education, as indigence compelled him to withdraw the boy from school at the age of eleven. The awakening of the youth to political thought seems to hav been when, at the age of ten, he discovered among his father's books a copy of Cobbett's "Gridiron," which he diligently essayed to comprehend. What may be called his first political act was the hesitating entrance of a chandler's shop and purchase of a halfpenny copy of the "Charter," that famous petition for rights which was then agitating England. At twelve he became errand-boy in the solicitor's office where his father was employed. At fourteen he became wharf clerk and cashier to a firm of coal merchants. Through these years he industriously attended open-air and other meetings for political reform, at which he displayed talent for public speaking, and addressed audiences at the age of fifteen. Rev. Mr. Packer, under whom he held an office of Sunday-school teacher, now solicited some young men, among whom was Charles Bradlaugh, to study for an approaching exhibition before the bishop of London, offering aid in difficulties. Charles, failing to reconcile the four gospels with the Thirty-Nine Articles of the Church of England, asked counsel. The pastor wrote to his parents that their son was pursuing Atheistical inquiries, and also suspended him from his function of Sunday-school teacher three months. The young man now avoided the church in which he could not take his wonted place in the Sunday-school, and spent his leisure in religious debates. He championed Christianity till in 1849 he was forced to admit his defeat in a public discussion on the inspiration of the Bible, and professed himself an Infidel. Rev. Mr. Packer, after consulting with the youth's father, informed the heretic that his employers gave him three days to change his opinions or lose his situation. He refused recantation, and left his place, and his home as well, which had through the same cause become intolerable. At seventeen he found himself alone in the streets of London, with no money and little clothes. He picked up a scanty living as a coal merchant, till his main customer, a baker-woman, was informed by some malicious Christian that her coal-dealer attended Freethought meetings and expressed opinions of the same character. Upon this the good woman declined further coals from an Infidel. "I should be afraid," she said with a shudder, "that my bread would smell of brimstone." As the woman's custom had yielded a profit of ten shillings a week and had been the young man's chief maintenance, he was forced to quit the business. For some time he tried to make a living by various courses, among others that of selling braces. His evenings and Sundays were given to discussions and meetings. His opinions were at this time Deistical, but fast growing to that complete Atheism which he afterward so illustriously expounded. Friendly Freethinkers raised a subscription to ease his necessitousness, but his independence was ill pleased at this. He had, too, been obliged to borrow what was to him the prodigious sum of £4 15s. So one morning in 1850 he silently left his house and friends, determined not to return otherwise than independent. Strolling from street to street, he encountered a poster soliciting recruits for East India service. Enlisting, he was transferred to a regiment destined to

(Continued on page 92)

Communications.

Recent Gems from the Religious Press.

The Christian Union, in answer to an inquiry in regard to answers to prayers, says:

The promises of Christ cannot be treated as commercial contracts. The letter killeth. Understand that God wants to help you. Ask anything, from a child's top to a divine and radiant comfort at the grave where the loved one lies buried, and he will hear and answer you, only be sure that you are not selfish in your praying, and also that you ask it in my (Christ's) name and for my sake, which will help to glorify my name and to promote my cause.

The promises of Christ cannot be classified with a commercial promis to pay on a certain day a sum of money; in other words, his promises put in the form of a promissory note will go to protest. They hav long since been protested, and repeated applications hav only caused a repetition of the same answer, "No funds." If the promises of Christ cannot reach to the altitude of a merchant's promis, we would ask, What are they good for, anyway?

"The letter killeth." This means, a literal interpretation of scripture kills it, and so it does, and it has been dead for hundreds of years, and ought, in all decency, to hav been buried long ago. Its ossified remains remaining above the earth is an outrage on good taste, and inimical to the public health. "Ask anything you want for my sake." That is, be sure you want nothing for yourself when you pray for something, only for Christ and his glory. And then you will get it, and can use it for yourself. But if you should ask it on your own personal account, and say nothing about Christ, it would be selfish, and you would get severely left.

This infantil twaddle comes from Dr. Lyman Abbott, who is certainly old enough to know better.

The New York Tablet, yielding to the permanency of the French republic as evidenced by Cardinal Lavigerie's declaration in its favor, reads a lesson to that portion of the episcopate and clergy who hav heretofore identified themselvs with the fallen fortunes of the monarchial pretenders.

"There is nothing," says the Tablet, "inimical to the Catholic church in republicanism, and the converse proposition is equally true."

This is true, and "pity 'tis 'tis true." Rats will desert a sinking ship, and the clerical vermin and barnacles that hang on to the monarchies and republics of the world are the first lickspittles to welcome the advent of a new régime and kiss the hand, though red with blood, that wields the governing power.

Their contract with governments is a reciprocal one, so much patronage for the church for so much subservience to unjust laws by their poor, deluded, ignorant followers. A churchly politician is devilish sly.

The Christian at Work, in an editorial captioned, "The Danger of a Little Learning," soundly berates Howard MacQueary for daring to represent himself and having the audacity to entertain a thought outside of the cut and very dried formula of church mythology. The idea of a minister denying that heaven is a place and calling it a state; that Christ had a father and mother the same as we all hav; doubting the resurrection of the body of Christ and saying that it was only his spirit that rose from the dead. Such views as those coming from a young rector giv birth to the horrible suspicion that he has actually commenced to think, and if allowed to proceed unchecked may (heaven forbid) set his parishioners to thinking also. He should be summarily dealt with. The church should dismiss him at once. His usefulness is gone. He was a piece of church machinery, built at a theological seminary, warranted kind and gentle in harness, but he turns out to be a kicker, and altogether too fast for his dog-trotting associates. Cut off his head.

The Christian Intelligencer, in a not over intelligent article, remarks that "our age is characterized by investigations into the methods of God's working in creation with a greater zeal than was ever known, and with results larger than were ever attained."

If anyone has detected a God acting as general "superintendent" of the universe, giving orders to supernumeraries, and assuming all the powers of ownership of the whole business, and will bear witness to the fact, he will be liberally rewarded by hosts of people who hav complaints to file in the general office.

A large majority of these complaints are against a person called a Special Providence. Favoritism, inattention to duty, gross carelessness, brutality, are among the minor offenses laid at his door. We cite a few in detail. He impresses a parson that he ought to change his church and get a better salary, after wrestling with him for days and nights until he yields, while, at the same time, a train full of innocent people are plunged down to an agonizing death by reason of a misplaced switch, or a rotten bridge. He allows the czar of Russia to commit untold brutalities upon thousands of his subjects in Siberia, while some Methodist exhorter has "got the spirit for the use of a prayer-meeting." But still the Intelligencer says investigations into this Special Providence's doings are meeting with large results. Will the editor of that paper mention just one and we will subside?

The Christian Inquirer, speaking for God almighty, as usual without credentials, says: "Those who question the efficacy of prayer doubt the truthfulness of God." John Foster says (probably after an interview with God almighty in which the latter told John just how he treated prayerful petitions, etc.) that though God has certainly predetermined what he will do and his purpose cannot be changed, yet in many instances he has predetermined it to be done in answer to prayer, and not otherwise. That is, God has predetermined what he will do in case some one else does a certain thing. In other words, his determinations all hav a string to them which if pulled makes them a verity, if not pulled they become nil. It is enough to giv an ordinary God a headache to be compelled to prepare a lot of determinations ahead, drop down the strings, attach them to his coat-tail, and await the pulling. And we hesitate to call John Foster a beautiful liar, because we never saw his photograph.

The Illustrated Catholic American publishes twenty-nine "Dont's for some church-goers." Five of these "dont's" hav the true Christian business ring, and we repeat them:

Don't fail to pay your pew-rent in time.
Don't drop your money, it causes distraction.
Don't forget the command, contribute to the support of your pastor.
Don't let the contribution-box pass without contributing your quarter or dime (no pennies).
Don't forget to take along extra money on the Sundays when a collection is taken up for the orphans or some benevolent society.

We beg leave to add a few more dont's, which hav probably been inadvertently omitted:

Don't ask why coroners are not called in to investigate sudden deaths which occur in nunneries.

Don't question the spiritual source from which emanates the rosy color of the priest's nose.

Don't ask to see the financial accounts of the church.

Don't ask why the little sisters of the poor wagon stops occasionally at a brewery to get a keg of beer.

And last, and above all things:

Don't imagin yourself capable of a thought unfathered by the church. Should you do so hell will overtake you.

The Churchman strongly objects to the query, "Was Christ a Buddhist?" which heads an article published in the January number of the Arena, from the pen of Felix L. Oswald, M.D., Ph.D. The Churchman says: "Its style is offensiv. The heading, 'Was Christ a Buddhist?' is one which no writer with the first instinct of a gentleman would choose to use in a Christian country, and if the doubly doctored Felix Oswald did not know it, the editor of the Arena ought to hav told him so."

Felix, you are offensiv and disagreeable. We call your article a farrago of second-hand trash. We are well aware that this is an age of free thought and free speech, but that is no reason why you should not behave yourself like a gentleman. Besides, you are insufferably vulgar. You hav offended refined susceptibilities, you hav disturbed the musical yet monotonous cadences of a young rector's voice in his reading of the collect to reciprocativ young ladies and eminently respectable old gentlemen. You hav dared to inferentially classify Christ with mankind by accusing him of its pet folly, the acceptance of a groundless superstition called religion. Don't you dare to ever step foot into my Episcopal church. If you do, I will hav you pelted to death with chocolate caramels and tutti-frutti.

The Christian Herald reproduces the Talmagian yawp weekly.

On January 4th, this worthy successor of Ananias accidentally told part of the truth when he said "that never since our world was swung out among the planets has there been such an organized and determined effort to overthrow righteousness and make the Ten Commandments obsolete and the whole Bible a derision."

At present righteousness is overthrown, the Ten Commandments are obsolete, and—for the purposes to which it has been put—the Bible is justly held in derision by intelligent people.

The spectacle of white-necktied saints with elongated visages peddling out salvation as a business is happily fast receding before the steady march of reason and common sense. The one essential truth of the universality and eternity of matter from whence all existences necessarily sprung is dawning upon the world. The acceptance of this incontrovertible truth will divert to more useful channels the immense sums of money, the energy, and the time now expended in promulgating a false and silly superstition. Man will then see the real beneficence of the earth, and come to realize his duty to his fellow-man.

From the general tone of the religious press it is evident that the Christian world has taken the alarm. Let's on, courageous friends; our watchwords, truth, victory!

The Independent devotes a page to biblical extracts and comments to prove that it is wrong to hav the Columbian Exposition open on Sundays. Under the provisions of the Constitution of the United States we honestly believe no warrant will be found for the enactment of special laws, such as Sunday laws, prohibitory laws, or any law that abridges the liberty of the citizen in the enjoyment of his right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, so long as in the exercising of this right he does not invade the same right of his neighbor. With the old Mosaic or Bible laws we hav nothing to do. They may or may not hav been needful in those ancient days. What we hav to deal with is the present attitude of certain fanatics who seem determined to deprive certain people of the right to enjoy a visit to the Exposition on a Sunday.

Liberal, generous men will say at once, let it be open. But liberality or humane feeling is not an ingredient of church policy. Commandments, restrictions—which do not restrict—and bossism is the pervading principle which actuates the church, and it behooves every lover of liberty and justice to oppose the encroachment of this detestable despotism into the secular affairs of the people.

The Observer goes into a paroxysm of indignant virtue over the opening of a new theater in Norwich, and quotes an epitome of a denunciatory sermon preached by Leonard W. Bacon against the morals, social life, and lax principles of the town. Is it not a Christian town? It must be—Leonard W. Bacon preaches there.

If the reverend gentleman is so shocked at comic opera and the ballet, why not take some plays from the Bible? There is the history of Susanna and the two naughty elders. There is Solomon with his concubines a hundred or more; there is the artless David who sent poor Uriah to his death that he might get his wife. Certainly there is dramatic material enough here for a nice religious drama, which the Sunday-school children would certainly enjoy.

They must hav some diversion, why not giv them this?

The Hebrew Journal, under an editorial headed "Hardening the Heart," very sensibly observes, "Backward we trace the causes of crimes to the social conditions which created or encouraged them, which made it difficult for those enmeshed in the net of felony to escape from the environment within which fate had placed them. The recognition of the fact that crime is the development of previous conditions, which must be changed in order to develop any radical remedy for crime, must first take place before we can hope to produce a diminution of evil." Our Christian civilization punishes the effect in the person of the unfortunate criminal, but never seeks the cause. Like bailing water from a leaking boat and never stopping up the hole, our crop of criminals never fails.

Only the abolition of superstition will thoroughly cure this shame and disgrace of the race.

The Freeman's Journal comments on the "Decay of Protestant Belief," and quotes in part from an interview with the Rev. A. W. Momerie, in King's College, England, which in substance denies the existence of the orthodox hell, speaks of miracles as seen only by those who expect to see them, and says Christ did not wish to establish a religion of creed or ritual, but of conduct. Also denying the bodily resurrection of Christ and the inspiration of the Bible. We should judge from the foregoing that the Rev. Mr. Momerie holds very little in common with the established church, and that the matter of his being ousted is a question of a few brief days. His case is analogous to that of the Rev. Mr. McQueary, of Ohio, on both of whom the Freeman's Journal bestows the honorary title of recruiting agents of Infidelity. Next!

The Evangelist publishes a letter from Douglas P. Putnam, who advises a brother parson not to analyze too much. Don't try to square one chapter of the Bible with another. If that is tried a bungle will be made of it. Don't look for Calvinistic orthodoxy in the Sermon on the Mount, etc.

Freethinkers hav cause for great rejoicing for the many evidences inside of the church, that are daily cropping out, of an unsettled doubt in the minds of preachers, which is surely an omen of certain collapse of superstitious dogmas and religions. No honest, thoughtful man in the light of this intelligent age can long remain in the church to patch up its absurdities and become its perpetual apologist.

WM. ALLEN SMITH.

How Mr. Harman Views His Second Sentence.

TO THE EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS OF THE UNITED STATES: On Thursday the 15th ult., in the federal building at Topeka, Kan., John F. Philips, United States judge for the Western District of Missouri, rendered an elaborate decision in the case of the United States vs. Moses Harman charged with the alleged crime of mailing obscene literature. The reading of this judicial opinion occupied about forty minutes and at its close the accused was sentenced to imprisonment at "hard labor," for one year, presumably in the Kansas state prison. No opportunity was given the prisoner to say a word in his own behalf. He was not asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced against him, and, acting on advice of counsel, no demand was made by him for opportunity to say a word for himself. One reason, and perhaps the chief reason, for Mr. Overmyer's acquiescence in this practical denial of an "inalienable right"—a right that the most despotic of judges are in the habit of granting unasked—was the fact that he, Overmyer, had an important case, a murder case, to attend to in another court at 2 P.M. of the same day, and it was necessary that he get through with his business in the United States court as soon as possible. He therefore contented himself with taking the necessary steps looking toward an appeal on writ of error to the United States circuit court. Pending these proceedings, which may or may not be successful, the prisoner is at liberty on his own recognizance, the United States marshal saying to him, "Go about your business, as usual; when I want you I know where to find you."

Last April the writer of this was sentenced to five years' hard labor in the penitentiary at Lansing, Kan., and actually served four months of that time, when he was released on a writ of error, and is now waiting under heavy bonds a new trial on appeal to the United States circuit court. This sentence of five years was imposed for the alleged crime of publishing a plainly worded protest against a worse than brutal outrage committed by a husband upon the person of a sick wife, a crime against which our laws afford no adequate remedy. This protest is known as the Markland letter. When near the time of trial for mailing the protest, another letter on the same subject, written by Dr. R. V. O'Neill, of New York, was published in Lucifer. The object of this second letter was a vindication of the first. Its whole aim and purpose was to show the necessity of thorough work in exposing the brutalities and barbarities to which many wives and mothers are subjected by worse than brutal husbands. To better illustrate this necessity Dr. O'Neill cited forms of vice the very existence of which is commonly thought too shocking to be mentioned or even alluded to. Dr. O'Neill did not mince matters, but went straight for these evils in language not to be misunderstood, but yet without the use of what are commonly called vulgar or obscene words.

For the publication of this second letter I was immediately arrested and held to answer at the ensuing term of the United States district court. The same court that sentenced me to five years for mailing the Markland letter found an indictment against me on three counts for mailing the O'Neill letter. After various delays the case was submitted to Judge Phillips of the Western district of Missouri, the defendant having waived his right to be tried by jury, with result as stated.

Coming, as this sentence does, as the culmination of a long line of similar encroachments upon the right of free publication, I ask you if the law of self-preservation does not warrant you and prompt you to inquire where these invasions are to lead, or whether there is any limit to these acts of suppression and censorship. The freedom of the press means the freedom of the persons who conduct or represent the press. If a publisher must forever run the gauntlet of a secret and irresponsible postal censorship, then we hav an end to the freedom of the press—that freedom which is guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States in language the most unmistakable.

It is constantly urged by the defenders of the postal laws under which I hav been prosecuted and sentenced that while the Constitution guarantees freedom of the press it does not sanction "license" or "licentiousness." If by this is meant that every publisher must be responsible for the abuse of his constitutional right of freedom of the press, then there can be no reasonable objection—the only question being as to whom or to what the publisher is amenable for his acts. If the same rules were adopted here as in other kinds of business there would be little or no trouble. If each publisher were held responsible to the persons he may injure by exercising the freedom of the press, then there should be no objection; but if held amenable to an arbitrary and irresponsible government censorship, as now, the door is at once thrown wide open for an unlimited amount or number of abuses and of class discriminations.

Believing these postal laws authorizing a censorship of press and mails to be unjust, despotic, arbitrary, and un American in character, I ask you to giv this matter your earnest and early attention, to the end that a stop may soon be put to these abuses of power, through or by means of an indignant protest from the liberty-loving and justice-loving people of America. MOSES HARMAN.

The New Learning.

On Psychical Phenomena she spoke out with decision,
Talked about the Ancient Mystics and the modern ones as well;
She discussed the Stellar Theory and the Tripartite Division,
And the character of Shelley, and the Theosophic Smell.

Anon she touched on Politics, on Egypt's vanished splendors,
On Aryans, Euripides, and Rousseau's moral tone;
She quoted scraps of German, using freedom in her genders,
And she mentioned Renan's latest with an accent all her own.

I listened and I marveled, for I've scholars known in plenty
Who've struggled all a long life through to master one domain,
And here I found a maiden, fond of dancing, pretty, twenty,
Whose province was all learning, and who found it smooth and plain.

I loved her, and to love her was a liberal education;
I shyly dared to ask her how I might grow wise as she.
I was but a humble Wrangler, so I spoke with trepidation;
She marked it, and she sweetly smiled and thus encouraged me:

"Oh, the matter's very simple! You hav but to do as I did;
Go and hear extension lecturers, peruse the monthly Stead;
Join a Furnivall Society or two, by them be guided,
Of proper names and tendencies repeat all you hear said.

"Two lectures on the Cosmic Soul and three on Man's Relations,
One on Dramatic Genius in England, Greece, and Rome,
A Tudor Exhibition and a Story of the Nations,
With a visit paid to Stratford or the Robert Elsmere Home,

"Will make you almost perfect in the ways of the New Learning,
That teaches us to to talk of things we scarcely know by name;
But you mustn't waste your time on books, like persons undiscerning,
Except about the washing-bills and sins of men of fame.

"'Browning? Read him?' I've not read him, but I've heard a well-known critic
Giv his views about Sordello to the Ladies' Culture Classes;
And a magic-lantern picture at last Tuesday's Analytic
Shewed the meeting 'twixt the lover and the wife in 'Pippa Passes.'

"Now try this plan and quickly 'mid the wisdom of the ages,
You'll learn the true enjoyment that the love of culture brings,
Find our Being's real Inwardness before you in the pages
Of the Shilling Oxford Primer on the Origin of Things."

—St. James's Gazette.

He Worried About It.

"The sun's heat will giv out in ten million years more."
And he worried about it;
"It will surely giv out then if it doesn't before,"
And he worried about it;
It would surely giv out, so the scientists said
In all scientifical books that he read.
And the whole mighty universe then would be dead,
And he worried about it;

"And some day the earth will fall into the sun,"
And he worried about it;
"Just as sure, and as straight, as if shot from a gun,"
And he worried about it;
"When strong gravitation unbuckles her straps
Just picture," he said, "what a fearful collapse!
It will come in a few million ages, perhaps,"
And he worried about it.

"The earth will become much too small for the race,"
And he worried about it;
"When we'll pay thirty dollars an inch for pure space,"
And he worried about it;
"The earth will be crowded so much, without doubt,
That there'll be no room for one's tongue to stick out,
And no room for one's thoughts to wander about,"
And he worried about it.

"The Gulf Stream will curve and New England grow torrider,"
And he worried about it;
"Than was ever the climate of southernmost Florida,"
And he worried about it.
"The ice crop will be knocked into small smithereens,
And crocodiles block up our mowing machines,
And we'll lose our fine crops of potatoes and beans,"
And he worried about it.

"And in less than ten thousand years there's no doubt,"
And he worried about it;
"Our supply of lumber and coal will giv out,"
And he worried about it;
"Just then the ice age will return cold and raw,
Frozen men will stand stiff with arms outstretched in awe,
As if vainly beseeching a general thaw,"
And he worried about it.

His wife took in washing (a dollar a day),
He didn't worry about it;
His daughter sewed shirts the rude grocer to pay,
He didn't worry about it.
While his wife beat her tireless rub-a-dub-dub
On the washboard drum in her old wooden tub,
He sat by the stove and he just let her rub,
He didn't worry about it.

—S. W. Foss, in Yankee Blade.

God as an Engineer.

On the above subject, Sereno E. Todd, of Orange, N. J., recently delivered an address, from which a few paragraphs are herewith quoted:

The kind and affectionate apostle, John, taught his followers that "God is love." Now, if we can understand what love is, we know what God is. You love your wife and children. Love is an affection or passion of the heart. Then, love is not material, is not composed of matter. You all know what a shadow is. It is not composed of any substance.

Ask a mathematician for a definition of a mathematical point, and he will tell you it is simply a point having no length, no breadth, no hight, no depth, but simply a point without extension. Such a point is simply nothing. People are wont to think that it is a palpable absurdity to think of, and talk about, something that is not material, and which has neither length, breadth, hight, nor depth, nor material extension. We talk of the depth of love and the hight of excitement, which must be understood as figurativ. Love has no hight, no depth, nor extension, in a mathematical sense. Hatred, envy, malice, kindness, patience, faith, hope, charity, and mathematical points, are all considerations, or objects of contemplation, which hav a veritable existence, and play a very important part in all the affairs of mortal life; and yet, they are nothing. We cannot handle them. We cannot touch them. We cannot put a finger on one of them and say, I hav it. Yet, all these little nonentities move the material world.

Contemplate for a moment what love has done, and the wonders performed by it every day. But can you put your finger on love, and show it to your child? Reflect for a few moments what hatred has done, and the woe, the sorrow, the anguish, and the misery that hav filled our beautiful world with wormwood and gall. Yet, can you put your finger on hatred and tell a broken-hearted mother and her sorrowing children that here is that thing that sent their dear protector to an untimely grave? Hence we perceive that it is a very easy thing to talk about and to contemplate things that are not material, but which are entirely spiritual. "God is spirit." We hav just noticed that love is a spirit. Hence, we perceive that it is not difficult for us to contemplate things or existences which hav no length, no breadth, no hight, depth, nor extension.

Ordinarily orthodox people despise Materialists. They think a Materialist is as bad as, or even worse than, an Infidel. If a man is a Materialist he is gone utterly to the bad. There is no salvation and no hope for him. The poor soul must wail with the lost for ever and ever, where "the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." Now, consider again, what gross Materialists we all are. Ages upon ages ago godly people materialized everything more than we do. They believed that our cosmos, the universe, was like a huge three, four, or five, or seven story building, or an immense flat, one of which embraced all that exists on the earth, while directly below our flat was another flat, or flat three, of fire and brimstone, and above our flat was the first heaven, and then above this came the second and then the third heaven. St. Paul alludes to the third heaven, in 2 Cor. xii, 2. If there was a third heaven there must be a first and a second. I well remember, when I was young and life was new, how we used to sing:

From the third heaven, where God resides,
That holy, happy place, etc.

Is this not magnificent Materialism? Many excellent Christians hate and despise Colonel Ingersoll because he is such a gross Materialist. Can we find an intelligent Materialist who can excel Christians in their Materialistic notions of God and of heaven? Whoever wrote the book of Genesis was a true and thorough Materialist. See how he alludes to God in the third chapter and eighth verse: "And they heard the voice of the Lord God walking in the garden in the cool of the day;" and the Lord, like an ingenious and skilful engineer, having just finished our magnificent earth, calls to Adam to come out of his hiding-place and giv an account of what he and Eve had been doing. Then again, contemplate this wonderful engineer standing on old earth with one foot on the sea and the other on the land, and taking a huge lump of nothing in his hands, and working it over and over, as a boy makes a snowball, and then tossing it away up, far above the third heaven, where it has ever since remained. Then see how quickly he made the silver moon, which he tossed gently into space, directing her to spin around old earth.

When Mark Hopkins, an illustrious professor of theology, died recently, I well recollect how orthodox editors extoled and eulogized this great and noble sky-pilot, because, as they expressed it, "he was a firm believer in a personal God!" He believed that God has eyes, ears, hands, feet, fingers, and toes; and that he has also a nose, which he blows occasionally, just as any other man does; and when he does blow his nose, the universe trembles. Read Ps. xviii, 15, and contemplate how the earth trembled when the great engineer simply blew his nose! How must old earth hav shrunk away when the great engineer tooted his steam-whistle!

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY

28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - FEBRUARY 7, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ARTICLE

By HON. A. B. BRADFORD,

ENTITLED

The Disadvantage of Specialism in the Advocacy of Reform.

It is a view of our work which should lead to thought and discussion among the Freethinkers of the country.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

CHARLES BRADLAUGH died at six o'clock on the morning of January 30th. The immediate trouble was heart weakness, brought on by the long illness of last year. Mr. Bradlaugh was prostrated on the 14th ult., the attack then nearly finishing his life. Hope of his recovery was entertained until the very day of his death, but the case was recognized as very serious, continued sleeplessness exhausting the patient. He bore his sickness with characteristic fortitude and passed away as became a philosopher and brave man. England loses much by his death. Her Freethinkers and workingmen lose a noble champion who has won for them many substantial victories.

On learning of the national disaster the Manhattan Liberal Club passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, The news which reaches us across the Atlantic of the death of Charles Bradlaugh to-day in London suggests to every advocate of Freethought and every lover of humanity and the progress of the human race the debt which all mankind owe to this apostle of liberty; and

WHEREAS, It is peculiarly fitting that the Manhattan Liberal Club of the city of New York should express its high estimate of the services rendered by Mr. Bradlaugh toward the destruction of the lingering remnants of religious superstition and peculiarly his valiant warfare against the religious test oath in Parliament; therefore be it

Resolved, That this club now expresses its appreciation of the lessons which the life and services of Mr. Bradlaugh teach all who desire the improvement of their kind; that any amelioration of human society must be preceded by the emancipation of man from the bondage of ecclesiastical and religious superstition.

Resolved, That such a life as that of Chas. Bradlaugh teaches us the infinit superiority of that immortality which the human race sooner or later awards to those who hav lived and died in its behalf, to that selfish and miserable personal desire for eternal existence which most of the religions of the world hav hitherto held forth as the highest aspiration of the human soul.

What They Say About the Picture Book.

From the Agnostic Journal.

The "Freethinker's Pictorial Text-Book," as far as the illustrations are concerned, is a reproduction of a number of Watson Heston's cartoons which hav appeared on the front page of our excellent contemporary, THE TRUTH SEEKER, of New York. If Mr. Heston were only as deft in artistic execution as he is fertil and clever in conception, the "Text-Book" would be valuable as a work of art, besides being interesting as a bombshell aimed at Christian ignorance, superstition, and bigotry. Our artist is a man with exceptional fertility of invention, and it seems to strike him as if by inspiration how to make various phases of "religious" fatuity grotesque, ridiculous, whimsical, or absurd. On the page facing each picture are apt and carefully selected citations from numerous Liberal writers, each page of citations having an illustrativ bearing upon the engraving which it faces. Parents of Liberal views would do well to present this interesting picture book to their boys and girls in order to foster and intensify a detestation of priestcraft and all that pertains thereunto.

The American Secular Union.

We print in the Secular Union department this week several communications of more than passing interest. The Union seems to be in difficulties, for which we are truly sorry, for it is an organization THE TRUTH SEEKER has helped much and from which it has hoped much. There is need of it now more than ever, but there is still more need, if it is to be of any use to Liberalism, of undivided counsels and a constitutional and coherent plan of action. Whether one man or another should be a "field secretary" is of less importance than whether we shall continue to hav a Union at all, what that Union shall do, and whether it returns an equivalent for its cost. Two of these points, however, we can leave for the present, and consider the pressing issues of the present controversy.

First, as to the personal issue in Mr. Charlesworth's case. It seems not to be understood generally, and certainly has not been accurately stated by any of the writers on the subject. The motion to appoint him field secretary was made at the Portsmouth congress by Dr. Greer, of Chicago. Some one also made the same motion relativ to Mr. Andres, who declined the honor. Mr. Charlesworth was not present, but probably would not hav declined had he been in the hall. When the motion was made the president said that under the constitution the board of directors would hav to appoint employees. Some of the members of the congress didn't like this, and began to cast about for parliamentary methods to get around the difficulty, and it was as plain as a mountain that the congress desired to put Mr. Charlesworth into the field. Some questions were asked the president as to the constitution, and he reiterated his decision that the board only could deal with the matter—but, he said, in his pleasantest manner, the board would no doubt feel bound by the recommendation of the congress. The motion to appoint was then amended to read recommend; it was unanimously adopted, and the congress thought the matter settled.

Second. Shall we hav a field secretary at all? In our opinion, No. We do not think it would be wise to put a man into the field under the conditions now existing—certainly not at $2,000 per year and expenses, which would be fully another thousand. The plan was tried once with the same person, and, if we recollect, with not complete satisfaction to the supporters of the Union. It is doubtful if the money could be raised, and it is equally doubtful if the expenditure of so much in one direction would be sanctioned by common sense. And we do not believe the Liberals care to, or will, contribute about three thousand dollars for one lecturer and nothing for the others. Certainly it would be neither fair nor just.

Third. As to the work of the Union. This, it seems to us, should not be so much in organizing societies as in maintaining a headquarters from which to watch the progress of events, to prevent religious legislation, and to secularize existing laws. Auxiliary societies do not support the Union; indeed, they rarely put themselvs forward as organized opposition to unfavorable legislation. Local business influences prevent. Individuals support the Union, and individuals hav done all that has been done to enforce the Nine Demands. The Union president and secretary should watch Congress and go before its committees when occasion requires. They should keep their eyes upon state legislatures and prevent the enactment of religious laws; at least make a protest, if they can do no more. They should be prepared when men are prosecuted for breaking Sunday laws or for committing "blasphemy," to defend them, concentrating the whole influence of the Liberals of the country upon one point if necessary. They should, when the way is opened, go into new places and set forth the objects of the Secular Union. They should prepare comprehensiv pamphlets and brief tracts upon each one of the Nine Demands, and see that this literature is distributed where it will do good. There is urgent work to be done just now—opportunities presented—in Texas, California, and Oregon on the Sunday question. In Maryland and Pennsylvania for church taxation. In Illinois against blasphemy laws, for, in order to squelch Christ Schweinfurth, it is proposed to pass a law in Illinois imprisoning men for alleging divinity of themselvs, and at the same time enact statutes against blasphemy. The Union headquarters should be the center from which to help local effort prevent all these things, to guide the campaign, or to do the fighting when there are no local warriors. "One man can chase a hundred, and two put ten thousand to flight," if the one or two go at it in earnest and are backed by a few thousand with the sinews of war, as the Union would be if it took the field against the enemies of freedom. Look at the little Seventh Day Adventist organization. At its last convention it had no more delegates than did the Secular Union Congress, its receipts last year were only some two thousand dollars, yet it had distributed hundreds of thousands of documents against religious legislation; obtained hundreds of thousands of names on petitions against Sabbatarian bills; been heard in the committee rooms of Congress, and chased the Sabbath Union's lecturers out of half a dozen states. The Washington Secular Union, with only a few hundred dollars, by well-directed work taxed the churches, got a nearly secular constitution, and in the court at Seattle thrashed a lot of Sabbatarian fanatics out of their boots. THE TRUTH SEEKER, with still less money in its Literature Fund, took a hand in the proceedings of several political bodies, helped the local fighters, and made the paths of the Sabbatarians thorny indeed.

These contests were ones in which the Secular Union should hav been prominent. The Nine Demands demanded it. It required no "field secretary" to engage in them; the president and secretary are amply qualified to go before any congressional or legislativ committee and uphold the Union's principles. If they needed aid they could easily procure it, and they would hav, in such work, the whole Liberal public back of them with cash and encouragement and every Liberal paper doing its level best to help the work along. The Union was formed for these purposes, and it ought to stick to its business.

The support of the Union always has come from the Infidels of the country, and it must of necessity, financial if no other, be what the world will call an Infidel organization. And so be it. Instead of detesting the word Infidel the Union should be proud of it, and call the attention of Christians to the fact that Infidels are the only ones who will work for justice and to maintain American principles. Let the Union say to the churches, "You hav made our work; you seek to perpetuate and add to your infamous tyranny, and if we are Infidels because we oppose you, then Infidels we are and will be." And there is but little use in chopping the upas-tree down to the ground if the roots are left to grow a dozen others.

We propose that the discussion on "field secretary" be discontinued and that the Union go to work for the objects for which it was organized. The dispute places Messrs. Watts and Charlesworth in a very undignified position, threatens the peace and happiness of the Canadians, and we do not think that any of the parties like it.

For Plowing on Sunday.

At Memphis, Tenn., on the 14th ult., before the United States district court, the case of R. M. King, the Seventh Day Adventist who has been imprisoned by the state court for working on Sunday, was taken up on a writ of habeas corpus. The facts are that Mr. King was indicted in his county court for quietly plowing corn on a retired part of his farm, on Sunday, and was fined $75 and costs for his offense. By advice and help of his fellow church-members, he appealed to the supreme court of the state, which affirmed the decision of the lower court. On the refusal of Mr. King to pay the fine assessed, he was placed in jail, but was released on a writ of habeas corpus, which was made returnable in the United States district court at Memphis, Tenn., the second Monday in January, 1891. In the mean time, the services of Hon. Don M. Dickinson, of Detroit, Mich., were secured by the Adventists to assist in the case, with the design of carrying it, if possible, to the Supreme Court of the United States, there to test the constitutionality of Sunday laws in the various states of the Union.

Mr. Richardson, counsel for Mr. King, opened the case by setting forth the facts of his arrest and conviction for Sabbath breaking, alleging that he is imprisoned and restrained of his liberty in violation of the Constitution of the United States, and especially in violation of article 1 of the Fourteenth Amendment: "No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privilege or immunities of the citizens of the United States, nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." Don M. Dickinson explained that the contention of the defense was that King had not been convicted in accordance with the law of Tennessee; that there was no law or statute authorizing his conviction, and hence he was illegally restrained in violation of the Constitution of the United States.

The indictment on which King was arrested was then read. It charged the offense of plowing on Sunday, the repetition of which under common law became a common nuisance. The petitioner's counsel held that no such statute existed.

Judge Hammond, before whom the argument was made, held that he had not the jurisdiction to pass upon the decision of either of the state courts, but counsel for the prisoner contended that the Supreme Court of the United States gave him such jurisdiction; that if under a mistaken apprehension of the law by Judge Swiggart, of the Tennessee circuit court, and the supreme court of Tennessee, this man was illegally convicted, and it could be shown that no such law existed at all, then the federal court had jurisdiction to pass on whether or not this man was restrained of his liberty against the law of the land.

Mr. Dickinson, in his argument, occupied an entire day in showing that the Fourteenth Amendment of the United States Constitution had been violated by the arrest of Mr. King. Mr. Richardson presented the religious side. He did not confine himself to the question of whether or not his client had been convicted under due process of law, says the Memphis Scimetar, "but in the most learned manner branched off into a general disquisition on Sabbath laws and religious intolerance, and showed a vast amount of research and information on the subject. He went back to the days when Christianity was in its infancy, quoted the early Christian fathers in support of the theory that the seventh day was observed as the Sabbath for centuries after the birth of Christ, showed how the first day was adopted and became the Sabbath fixed by law in the reign of the first Christian emperor and renegade, Constantine, and defied anyone to produce the slightest divine authority for the innovation. It was true, he said, that the majority of Christians had accepted it, but there remained sects, such as the Adventists, who chose to accept the teachings of the word as their guide in preference to the laws of man, however sanctioned by time or custom. To deprive these people of their right of conscience was an outrage, a violation of the Constitution of the United States, and particularly of Tennessee, in which state during the unprecedented religious revival in the early part of the century, what was known as 'sectarian equality' was so earnestly contested for."

A significant feature in this case was the appearance of the "Protestant Pastor's Association" as prosecutors. The state authorities were negligent in securing counsel to represent the sheriff upon whom the writ of habeas corpus was served, and after two days' delay that official secured Mr. Collier, an eminent lawyer, to represent him. The "Protestant Pastor's Association" then employed another eminent lawyer to assist Mr. Collier, thus, says a report, "securing as strong a combination as possible under the circumstances in favor of the prosecution." And this "Protestant Pastor's Association" proposes, if the case be decided in favor of Mr. King, to take it to the United States Supreme Court should the state of Tennessee fail to follow the poor Adventist to the utmost limit of its ability to persecute. This vindictiv conduct is pretty strong evidence that something besides a "civil Sabbath" is desired by the Protestants who advocate Sunday laws.

This case has excited considerable interest, but not so much as its importance demands. The judge said frequently during the trial that it was an important one, and he reserved his decision to giv it careful consideration. It is expected by Mr. King's counsel that the result will be favorable; to which hope we add ours that in that case the "Protestant Pastor's Association" will carry out their threat to take the case before the highest court in the land. A thorough exposure of the Protestant fanatics' objects is as much needed throughout the country as an exposure of the object of the Roman Catholic church.

Mr. Bradlaugh Vindicated.

While Charles Bradlaugh, the English Freethinker, Atheist, Secularist, and member of Parliament for Northampton, was lying unconscious on his sick-bed, on January 27th, the British Parliament performed toward him a tardy act of reparation.

To understand it clearly it is necessary to go back nearly eleven years. In the early part of May, 1880, Mr. Bradlaugh presented himself at the Table of the House of Commons, as a member duly elected from Northampton, and claimed to be allowed to affirm, as a person for the time being by law permitted to make a solemn affirmation instead of taking an oath, stating at the same time the legal grounds upon which he made the application.

The Speaker of the House refused to decide the question, and a committee was appointed to canvass the case. On the 20th of May, this committee reported that, in their opinion, Mr. Bradlaugh, under the laws quoted by him, could not be admitted to make such affirmation or declaration instead of an oath in the House of Commons.

Subsequently, another committee was appointed, as Mr. Bradlaugh had offered to take the oath which the House prevented him from doing, and on June 16th this second committee presented its report, which concluded in these words: "Your committee accordingly recommend that should Mr. Bradlaugh again seek to make and subscribe the affirmation he be not prevented from so doing." And Mr. Bradlaugh has since been a lawmaker of England.

On the 27th of January, 1891, the House undertook to right itself before the world for its tyrannical acts toward Mr. Bradlaugh, and Sir William Guyer Hunter, M.P. for Hackney, moved that the resolution of the House forbidding Mr. Charles Bradlaugh to take the oath or to affirm, be expunged from the records, as subversiv of the rights of electors. The solicitor-general opposed the motion, saying that it was not in accordance with the traditions of the House. The record, he said, was historical and could not be effaced in this manner.

Mr. Gladstone supported the motion to expunge the resolution from the records, claiming that it was an excess of jurisdiction in an assembly like the House, holding almost unmeasurable power without appeal. Excess of jurisdiction, said Mr. Gladstone, was the greatest fault such an assembly could commit, leaving on record an error which might be turned to evil account in evil times. To see that the House did not trespass over the limits of its functions was one of the highest and most sacred duties. He suggested that the motion would be acceptable to everybody by omitting the words "subversiv of the rights of electors."

The Hon. Sir Henry Stafford Northcote, M.P. for Exeter, advocated the acceptance of the suggestion made by Mr. Gladstone. The Right Hon. William Henry Smith, first lord of the treasury, expressed the general sorrow which was felt at the illness of Mr. Bradlaugh, and the motion, as amended, was passed.

The result, we are told, was greeted with hearty cheers, as it certainly ought to hav been, though no cheering now can efface the wrong done the victim of that resolution.

When this scene took place Mr. Bradlaugh was near the grave, and could not be told of his vindication. The situation brings back vividly the ringing words he uttered in protest against his exclusion and the brutality accompanying it. He stood at the Bar of the House, recalling to the members the scene on the 3d of August previously when a mob set upon him, fourteen to one, and forced him from the hall. He concluded his speech in these words: "It was hardly generous, hardly brave, hardly worthy of the great House of Commons, that those sending out to the whole world lessons of freedom, liberty, and law, should so infringe and so stamp them under foot. I had no remedy in any court, or I would hav taken it. With all respect to you, sir, and the officers of this House, if there had been any possibility of trying at law against the mighty privilege of this House, I would hav appealed to that possibility. Let me now, before I finish, ask the ear of the House for one moment. It is said it is the oath and not the man; but others, more frank, say it is the man and not the oath. Is it the oath and not the man? I am ready to stand aside, say for four or five weeks, without coming to that table, if the House within that time, or within such time as its great needs might demand, would discuss whether an Affirmation bill should pass or not. I want to obey the law, and I tell you how I might meet the House still further, if the House will pardon me for seeming to advise it. Honorable members hav said that would be a Bradlaugh Relief bill. Bradlaugh is more proud than you are. Let the bill pass without applying to elections that hav taken place previously, and I will undertake not to claim my seat, and when the bill has passed I will apply for the Chiltern Hundreds. I hav no fear. If I am not fit for my constituents, they shall dismiss me, but you never shall. The grave alone shall make me yield."

The House yielded before the grave claimed him, and for ten years he has sat with the men who once excluded him, the superior of most of them in brains, industry, and all the noble qualities found in men.

Editorial Notes.

A GREAT many origins of the late fracas with the Indians hav been discovered, but the following from the Progressiv Age, a Prohibition journal, has the merit of being the shortest of any of them: "An Indian killed a cow and was arrested for it. He resisted arrest and proved that the cow was his own. In the melee that occurred the agent took fright, ran away, and telegraphed for troops. Thus began the latest Indian war."

THE sapient legislature of Illinois, under the guidance of the Protestant clergy, propose to make it a penal offense in that state to claim to be Christ, or to be personally divine. The proposed statute is aimed at "Christ" Schweinfurth, but do the clergymen consider that it will prevent the second coming of Christ, if he reads the Illinois papers, or land him in jail when he arrives? In this absurd law it is proposed to incorporate a stringent section against blasphemy, and the Freethinkers of that state will do well to be alive and activ. Why not present all the legislators with a copy of Colonel Ingersoll's defense of C. B. Reynolds, and besiege them from every corner until they refuse to pass such laws? Let them know there are some folks besides clergymen and Christians in the state.

A SECRETARY of the American Sabbath Union writes to the organ of the Sabbatarian party that through his ante-election efforts the delegation to the legislature from southern California are Sunday people who will be ready to vote for Sunday laws. "A strong man," he says, "has been engaged to prepare and introduce a bill, and a vigorous effort will be made to secure some form of Sunday legislation in the near future." This "near future," however, is not so imminent as the fact of a large number of Sabbatarians in the legislature would indicate, for "as but little has as yet been done throughout the northern part of the state, it may," he goes on, "take two years more of hard work before we get a Sunday law." And then perhaps they will not get it, for the more the people understand the question the less likely they are to be catspaws for the preachers.

COLONEL INGERSOLL closes the Press Club course of lectures at the Broadway Theater on March 22d. His subject, according to the Dramatic Mirror, will be Shakspere. To this announcement Mr. Fiske, the editor of the Mirror, adds: "All through his career Ingersoll has looked forward to the time when, resting from his theological contentions, he should be able to giv the best that his lustrous genius afforded to a grand eulogy of the colossal William. That time has come and the fruit of all the thoughtful study and profound reflection devoted by this matchlessly eloquent Shaksperean to the works of the bard has been gathered into a discourse that is as sublime as its subject. I had the privilege of hearing a portion of this magnificent oratorical tribute recently, and I advise every lover of Shakspere and every admirer of splendid rhetoric and poetic enthusiasm to hear the lecture." Mr. Fiske, who enjoys the acquaintance of the colonel, continues in a newsy and reminiscent vein: "Colonel Ingersoll, by the way, left for Montana last night. He will be absent several weeks, engaged in a big will contest involving fifteen millions. It is probable that he will lecture in Spokane, St. Paul, Chicago, and several cities on his way back to New York. Did you ever hear why the colonel strenuously objects to being 'introduced' to an audience when he mounts the rostrum? Several years ago he lectured in Jamestown. The mayor, a worthy man of German descent, and an ardent Ingersollian, was extremely desirous to present the orator to his townspeople. His admiration, however, was greater than his gifts as a speaker. Overcome by the weighty character of the ceremony he stuttered and stammered and looked the picture of nervous discomfort. Finally he wound up his remarks with: 'And now, ladies and gentlemen, I hav the—er—honor to introduce the orator, whose name is known from—er—from ocean to ocean—that is to say, it is a household word—Mr.—Mr.—Mr.——' 'My name's Ingersoll,' prompted the colonel, realizing that in the mayor's confusion the household word had vanished from his memory. The house roared, of course. After that Ingersoll put his foot down on public 'introductions' of any description."

Letters from Friends.

DELTA, COL., Jan. 12, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER is a paper that I could not do without. The church has a greater foothold here than the Liberals, but Mr. C. B. Reynolds brightened some of their sluggish minds. Our cause is a grand one, so let us work for it. ANDREW C. JENSEN.

NEWARK VALLEY, Jan. 19, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Skeptics and Freethinkers bear the same relation to Christianity that detectivs do to crime.

The following I consider nature's axiom: Space, substance, duration, and law, are coexistent, coextensiv, and inseparable. They are eternal. E. W. COUNCILMAN.

IOWA CITY, IA., Jan. 15, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am, as you know, an old subscriber to our dear old TRUTH SEEKER, and expect to be so as long as I am able to pay for my ticket. It affords me comfort and pleasure to read your editorials, as well as those grand contributions from its friends and readers. And allow me to offer to one and all of them my profound gratitude, Brother Heston included. Yours for truth and right, J. J. DIETZ.

TOPEKA, KAN., Jan. 15, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I sent a telegram this afternoon to say that Judge Phillips had rendered decision by sentencing me to one year in the penitentiary for mailing the O'Neil letter. Three counts—four months on each count. No opportunity was granted me to say a word for myself, and acting on advice, I did not ask leave to do so. We are taking steps for writ of error or appeal to Caldwell's court. I am out on my own recognizance. Will write more soon. M. H.

NAPLES, N. Y., Jan. 17, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I wish I could send you some new subscribers. I think if more would read the paper the community would be better for it. I hav read your paper with a great deal of interest, and especially Mr. Peck's articles, as I hav known him all my life, and know the respect felt for him in this community. He is an old pioneer in the cause, and his hard study and labors for the truth hav been appreciated, and are beneficial to us all. With best wishes to your paper and cartoons, Truly yours, G. H. WELLS.

PORT ANGELES, WASH., Jan. 15, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I send you to-day a petition to keep the Chicago Fair open on Sunday. It contains about three hundred and eighty names. I am sure I could get many more if I could spare the time. I got a thousand circulars printed at the Freethought office and hav distributed seven hundred of them here. I will send you one.

There is no snow here. The ground is not frozen, and flowers are in bloom out of doors. Houses are being built, streets being graded, and work is also being done for waterworks and electric lights. FRANK MORSE.

QUINCY, O., Jan. 7, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: You will find inclosed $7, for renewal and two new subscribers. We hav quite a variety of brands of religion, all more or less jealous of one another, and at the same time nearly all working into the hands of Catholicism. I look upon Catholicism as one of the darkest-laid schemes ever instituted by man, working twenty-four hours every day, with but one object in view, and that almost in their grasp. When I think of the ignorant thousands that are landed upon our shores, I am almost ready to say, Good-bye, land of the free and home of the brave. J. M. PUTNAM.

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 21, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: In THE TRUTH SEEKER of Jan. 3, 1891, Wm. Ulrich mentions a point he says he would like to see met. It is a point I hav thought of often: If the people (the state) hav a right to make laws to command us what we shall learn (teach) in schools, hav they not also a right to command us to teach the Bible in the schools?

Now, in the first place, all those who advocate reading the Bible in the schools teach that the laws laid down in that book must be obeyed in preference to the laws of the state whenever they conflict, which is treason to the state. It is true that the Protestants do not make this a part of their creed, because some of them see the inconsistency of authorizing treason to their own laws, but the Catholics make it a positiv law that the child must be taught that the state law must yield to the laws of the church in all cases, and establish parochial schools to teach this doctrin and to break down the public school system if possible. Now, if this can be tolerated, then treason to the state can be taught in our universities, and Anarchy in its worst forms would be the result. Therefore, I hold that to establish parochial schools is treason to the state, and reading the Bible the same thing in a less degree. JNO. DOWNES.

STITZER, WIS., Jan. 12, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav passed through a very strange experience, which has seriously afflicted me. Through deceptiv evidence I firmly believed I had made a valuable discovery in a mechanical arrangement of a power-generating machine. In passing through this experience, which has cost me $200, I was hypnotized to believe an absurdity. This demonstrates to me clearly and unmistakably the condition of a God-worshiper. He sees God in the clouds, and hears him in the wind. This is the condition of a hypnotized savage. However fashionably he may be clothed, he is a savage in mind, so far as religious belief influences him. The savage can go on with the dance without any knowledge of scientific truth. But the civilized man without scientific knowledge does not exist. Therefore it is much easier to be a fashionable savage than it is to be a civilized man. Science is the mark of a civilized man, and witchcraft is the mark of a savage man. It is much the easier to educate the human mind in the belief of witchcraft, therefore it is expedient where the majority rules. The end justifies the means; this is the policy of the priest. The end is money and power. Truth and science hav no hand in the game. Let the hypnotizing God-worshiper step out of the light of science, as therein he is the enemy of mankind. WM. A. GRISWOLD.

DISCO, MICH., Jan. 20, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I send you an advertisment clipped from Talmage's paper, the Christian Herald, which some one sends me free. The advertisment has been running in the paper some time, and is as full of humor for me as anything they could publish in that paper. It certainly seems as if it was worthy of a notice in your columns.

Respectfully yours, FRANCIS R. PAYNE.

CHURCH WINE, or absolutely pure unfermented GRAPE JUICE (without addition or subtraction), BROOK LAWN FARM BRAND. Nature's Greatest Delicacy. Givs life, vivacity, color. Is more nourishing than beef. Makes cheeks of velvet, muscles of iron. No table complete without it. Spurious imitations hav compelled the adoption of the distinctiv title which is our registered Trade Mark. Works, Brook Lawn Farm, Esopus-on-Hudson. Presses and casks the largest in the world. To be had in New York City at Hudnut's, Caswell, Massey & Co., Kneuper's, Milhaus' Sons, Acker, Merrill & Condit, Jackson & Co., Charles & Co., Schoonmaker, and others. Pts., $4; Qts., $7—per case of 1 doz. Brook Lawn Farm Co., 101 Park Place, New York.

FORBIDDEN FRUIT

CULLMAN, ALA., Jan. 19, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav been hard at work converting believers in Bible myths and hav thus far had success. I hav formed both friends and enemies by it. But my enemies can no more than kill me. If they do, they cannot eat me. I received a letter from Rev. Mr. Remsburg, stating he will stop over and giv us a Secular lecture. And I want Mr. Remsburg to hit them hard—hit them right from the shoulder. I see where one of our lecturers had his own hotel bill to pay. We do not want it to occur to our man in such a way. But one thing I must say, and that is this: I read in the Ironclad Age that a pope, or some lunatic, is having cars built by the Pullman Car Company with pulpits in them, in order to move the church to suit the cash. My advice to him is to go in with C. W. Coup's great railroad show. Then they could keep up expenses. If one would not pay, the other would. One show is wax images and the other wax imaginations. I must say that the pope ought to pay double rates, because if a man is able to hav Pullman cars built in order to draw nickels and dimes out of the poor people he is able to furnish his own expense. We will name those cars the Rolling Savings Bank, because all that he takes in will surely be saved, and saved beyond resurrection. Every church-member ought to think twice before letting the nickel fall, because, as in the Bible casting bread upon the waters it's gone bread, so it is with every nickel they drop.

I remain as ever, sincerely yours, HENRY BETS.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH., Jan. 19, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I attended the church of Christ on Lyon street yesterday. The sacrament was administered after the services. To all appearances they hav a powerful church, for it was well filled. Before the taking of the bread and wine I think fully one-half of the people withdrew. To their honesty be it said, one-half of those that did remain did not partake of the bread and wine, myself being among them. Those that did partake were as honest as those that did not partake. Those who did should hav some knowledge outside of themselvs—as all hav this knowledge equally alike, or God cannot be just. Any person having this knowledge will do the world a favor by making it known in some way, as this is an honest trial between the honest in the church and the honest outside the church. There is still another division to be made among the people that did partake. According to the Bible, "Not everyone that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, but he that doeth, is the one." I claim to belong to this number. I could not get one in that congregation to recognize me. Why? Because I was denied the right to speak an honest truth in that church. I say we must demand the right to speak in these churches, as they belong to the whole people. If we cannot get this demand, let us tax them out of existence, and every other wrong with them, and let every honest person rule in their stead, which is all those that do right, which I think would be three-fourths of the people, and should be all, and will be when this dishonest practice is done away with.

CHARLES SACH.

HARWICH, MASS., Jan. 15, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $3 for THE TRUTH SEEKER and twenty-five cents for the ANNUAL. Were I a man of leisure perhaps I could procure a new subscriber, but under present circumstances I despair of it. The illiberal Liberals in this town, of which there are many, take no interest in either Christianity or Liberalism now. But I do think if some good lecturer should stir us up we should hav a "revival." Christianity has been on the decline here for quite a while, theoretically, and Liberalism on the decline practically. I am very much pleased with THE TRUTH SEEKER, but I hope the anti-Spiritualists will study discretion in their contributions against Spiritualism. Spiritualists are with us, and hav done much in pulling down the strongholds of superstition. People love money, and it is but natural that they should be mean in palming off their frauds as genuin phenomena. Perhaps I may be thought to be a Spiritualist. I wish I had evidence enough to fully believe it; I would not be ashamed at all to tell of it. This one thing I do know: that we are spirits now. The only question with me is whether we preserve or continue our identity. And this question I would ask, Would it be any more phenomenal or wonderful that we continue to be spirits than that we are spirits now? Who knows? On the whole, I do not think it worth while to be very clamorous against the idea of Spiritualism when we are in danger of being swamped by the demon of Christianity that threatens destruction of the country and is licking its chops of intolerance in anticipation of blood.

I am perusing a book entitled, "Notes on Ingersoll," by Rev. L. A. Lambert—a cunning manipulator of words, who has memorized some of science, I should judge; but his greatest effort seems to be in trying to belittle Ingersoll.

With best wishes for the cause of truth, etc.,

B. F. ROBBINS.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Jan. 16, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Having been converted to THE TRUTH SEEKER doctrin some two years since, and still holding on, I thought I would like to tell the readers of the letter column about the case of a boy whom I went to see yesterday, living in Passadena, a beautiful suburb of this city. His name is Johnnie Strang. About ten days ago he broke his arm, and is still kept by his fanatical parents without medical attendance, the bone remaining unset and the arm frightfully swollen. The parents cry mightily to the Lord night and day, and pointing out the fact of their great faith, ask that the arm may be healed. But so far the mighty God remains apparently deaf and there "comes but the echo of their own wailing cry." And still the united efforts of their neighbors, police, and officers of the Humane Society, hav failed to induce the deluded wretches who call themselvs parents to allow their own son to secure such attention as may save his arm, and it is apparent that this will be another addition to the already long list of men and women who hav been crippled and ruined for life by superstition. I believe these parents to be responsible, and hope they will be severely punished by the law to prevent cruelty to children. The result will probably be that this boy of eleven, who now declares his belief that God will heal him in his own good time, will liv to curse not only the God he now believes in but his misguided parents also, and, being quite intelligent, will perhaps one day become a powerful Secularist.

By the way, I hav been ten months in this city and cannot discover whether or not there is a Secular Union here. If there is, will some of the members please advertise it in the Times? And if not, I mean to start an organization myself.

MADAM HERMANN.

POCATELLO, IDA., Jan. 21, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read Brother Jno. W. Abbot's article in THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 17th, in regard to the Farmers' Alliance and Liberalism, with much interest. My opinion is that it is a great pity that such a grand party should start with a God as rightful sovereign of nations, from whom all just government is derived and to whom all human enactments ought to conform. They had better all join the Mormons. If we hav got to be subject to a God it must be the biblical God, and I know of no other church that comes as near living up to that God's commands as the Mormon church. From what little experience I hav had in this world, the people hav come pretty near ruling this world without any interference from God. We as a laboring class hav been depending on that powerful God too much and too long for our own good and comfort, and allowed the sharper to gain the inside track on us. I hav been identified with the labor cause for years, and I hav found that it really is the Liberals that do the biggest part of the work. The ones that put their burdens on God to carry generally hav to go to church or Sunday-school when they should attend a labor meeting. We hav our hands full in fighting for our rights from the earthly money-gods; let us not hav any more. Do to others as you would they should do unto you, and God would be worse than a brute if that would not satisfy him.

I am under obligation to Brother N. S. Johnson, Sioux Falls, S. D., for books printed in the Danish language. Brother Johnson is a good writer. I hav read his book entitled, "Is the Bible the Word of God?" with much interest, and would recommend it to all Scandinavians who cannot read English. The cost of the book bound is $1. "The Priest and the Freethinker" is also worthy of mention, and reads like a novel from first to last. It has nearly a hundred pages, is bound in paper, and sells for twenty-five cents.

I hav the promis of a new subscriber to THE TRUTH SEEKER, and hope the others will also get one each.

O. PAULSEN.

BREATHEDSVILLE, MD., Jan. 22, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: To let you know that I am in full accord with you, and the noble cause THE TRUTH SEEKER represents, I herewith inclose $7.10 for the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" and other books as mentioned. This is all for my individual use, although my eyesight is still poor so that my family has to do the reading for me; but as they all enjoy it, it is no hard task for them. I think the cause is gaining ground, though I could not find a new subscriber this time, owing to the influence of public sentiment, which makes persons fear persecution. And let me say right here that a person who has any dark spots on his past record does well to go slow in this cause of Liberalism, because we do not propose to be responsible for them, or cover them up for them by any wiping-out process, further than living a truer and better life in the future. It won't do for a father and mother who hav a son in the penitentiary truly and justly convicted of a serious crime, and whose other children are not much better by common consent, to advocate our cause; while they cannot only advocate the church doctrin, but join the church and get help and praise for it, as being still much better than the honest outsider. We can expect only honest men and women to join our ranks and remain with us; because we hav no dishonest inducements to hold out to them, such as forgiving debts without paying dollar for dollar in hard cash, and making the best persons out of them after they hav committed every crime in the dark calendar and must end their lives in open air suspended from the hangman's platform. We can only say, Be true and just, for the sake of truth and justice, and be honest, moral, and virtuous for the sake of honesty, morality, and virtue, and these noble qualities, prized by all, will make you useful men and women in every community, admired by all. Therefore, as most men and women hav been so raised as to rely on a wiping-out process, and now need such a process very much to make themselvs respectable, they take a short cut to the church and hav it done for them rather than subscribe for a journal that honestly tells them they, and they only, can make themselvs better by proper lives in the future, while their past history remains as they made it. Yes, every rascal is interested in having people believe in the wiping-out process, and therefore is a Christian naturally; because the church proposes to do this dishonest act of excusing people from all wrong done to others without making it right.

JOHN M. GROH.

NEW CAMBRIA, KAN., Jan. 19, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I think a good plan for Liberals to adopt is to make up their minds during the time intervening between political campaigns just how much religious encroachments they will put up with in the party to which they expect to belong. It is best to decide while no campaign is on; then you know you hav arrived at your conclusion coolly and deliberately. A man has no sense in the excitement of a political campaign. He is ruled by prejudice, hatred, and animosity, and never allows his reasoning faculties to assert themselvs, which all Liberals claim to be governed by. So it is better to settle a few preliminaries in your own mind while left entirely to yourself.

Now let us see if a Liberal can be satisfied with the present administration from a Liberal standpoint. Under the Comstock, Harrison, and Wanamaker régime, it simply places all reform literature at their mercy. Just a short time ago Wanamaker attempted to suppress a Grange paper known as the National Farm and Fireside, published at Washington, D. C. What for? For advocating the pure lard and pure food bills, which if passed would alienate some very rich capitalists from the Republican party. Let this be taken in connection with the Force bill which President Harrison is so anxious to hav passed. And besides, I can convict him of a usurping spirit, for I heard him say in a speech in Canton, Ill., in the campaign of 1876, that if Tilden was elected he would not be allowed to take his seat. Is it not plain that the Republican party seeks to perpetuate itself in power? And hav you not also noticed that Comstock and his gang made very few arrests during Cleveland's administration? Does this not go to show that Comstock, with his modern Inquisition, is altogether more activ under a Republican administration? And has not Comstock given the thumb-screw one more twist since the "grand old party" has been reinstated, by passing a law that belongs to Russia's form of government, by empowering "Holy John" or any of his successors to suppress anything that he in his holy and infallible judgment sees fit? With Reid, Heywood, and Harman suffering at their hands, with whole editions or issues of their paper suppressed, can you not see the "handwriting on the wall?" The Republican party passed all the laws by which these bigots act, therefore are wholly to blame for the reëstablishment of the Inquisition, and if they keep on retrograding at the rate they hav begun they will outstrip Torquemada in a very short time. Tyranny is like the slimy serpent; it gradually but surely embraces you in its coils. It gets you to help it to creep in upon your liberties one by one until it holds you fast, as the serpent does the bird it charms? I hav not voted for either one of the old parties since 1884, but what if I had?—what has that got to do with it? The question is, Hav I told the truth? While the Catholics hav filched from the public treasures through the Democratic party, I challenge anyone to show where they hav even attempted to hav a law passed through that party to deny anyone his liberties.

Now, I do not believe I am the only one that has noticed how things are drifting. There hav been various reasons assigned why the administration was so woefully defeated in the recent election, but I sincerely believe that when Liberals saw how Reid, Harman, and Heywood were treated it opened their eyes to the danger ahead, and I think this is at least one of the causes for such a Waterloo.

In closing, I want to say the present administration has established a dangerous precedent when it has given the postmaster-general the power it has. Does it not look as though "Infidel literature is in a fair way to be stamped out?"

JOHN W. ABBOTT.

PORT HURON, MICH., Jan. 21, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I see in your paper that some of the Liberals are advocating the course of the Prohibition church people, which seems to me inconsistent in all those who want to see the time come when the false doctrin of the fanatics has passed away, never to return again. Alcohol is the only weapon that a Liberal has to defend himself from the attacks of sky-pilots and their followers. These deluded people claim that their churches make people better, while statistics show beyond any doubt that Christianity fills the jails, prisons, poorhouses, and insane asylums. The question is often asked of me, What would we be without the church influence and the Sunday-schools? My answer is, What are we with all of these religious creeds? Let us look right here at the facts in the state of Michigan, and what is true of our state is a fair state of facts in all other places. In 1840 the population of Michigan was a little over two hundred thousand, and in Jackson state prison there were twenty-five convicts. In 1890 the census givs us a little over two million of people. Mathematics never lie, and these figures show that our population has increased ninety per cent, by allowing two hundred thousand in 1840 and two million in 1890. In 1890 we had eight hundred convicts in our prison, which is an increase of 968, seventy-five per cent; and what is more striking, the churches hav increased in the same ratio that the criminals hav multiplied. It is stated that liquor destroys sixty thousand persons every year, and I will inform our Liberal friend that liquor never killed a man worthy to liv, and its ravages are strictly confined to those who claim to be the followers of the lowly Jesus. It seems to me that the saloon is one of nature's weapons to wipe out the churches that curse our fair land at this date, and no Liberal should try to stop nature's work. When a man has brains enough to throw off the church yoke, whisky will do him no harm, as he will handle it with care or let it alone. When one of these Christians is caught breaking the laws, they cry, Whisky did it, when in fact it had no more to do with the crime than the beefsteak the culprit ate for breakfast. It is claimed that women and children suffer because of the liquor traffic. I will admit this to be true. But when the steamer Lady Elgin sunk on Lake Michigan in 1860 two hundred and fifty women and children were destroyed in twenty minutes. This was the water traffic. Nature is cruel to our understanding because she says in thunder tones, Obey my laws or be punished. She has no tears, affection, or sympathy, and the religious creeds taught in the country cause all the woes which afflict the human race today. Abolish the church and the occupation of the saloon men is gone forever. It will only be a question of time when the taxpayer will not be able to feed the horde that the church breeds, and as self-preservation is the first law of nature, the church hypocrits will be slaughtered without mercy. Let the whisky kill off five hundred thousand a year, and the honest Liberals will not be taxed to support the offspring of church hypocrits. Is our Liberal friend aware that whisky kills off one-half of the Catholic priests in this country? No Liberal will ever suffer from the liquor traffic, and as the church pays no taxes, the revenue derived from its sales is partially made up by the tax on liquor which they consume. The church teaches that a man can escape all the penalties of his wrong-doing, while the Liberals maintain that everyone has to answer for himself, no repentance, and the penalty is in proportion to the crime he has committed. This is according to the law of nature, no escape, and all Liberals admit it. Therefore it is unwise to drop the most potent weapon we hav to fight the church followers with.

W. E. LEONARD.

VINELAND, N. J., Jan. 12, 291 A.S.

MR. EDITOR: In THE TRUTH SEEKER of the 10th inst., under the head of "Relations of the Sexes in the Age of Reason," George Wilson's comments strike me as so profound and practical that a responsiv echo presses for conveyance. I think investigation that rightly weighs causes, notes results, and forecasts conditions that would accrue in a passably sustained monogamic system, would accredit his conclusions as philosophic. An age of reason or of any high attribute must be ushered in by evolutionary operations through numbers with beneficent intentions until populations are so imbued with sentiment and belief that conviction is manifest in practice. The evolution of monogamic suitage (a word to supersede marriage) has already proved practical in theory, nearly the world over. Its favorably acknowledged results on general character impel even varietists (it now appears) to forbid open plural practice, though claimed as an enactment of religious conscience by Bible saints. Influences of dual unions where known to prevail are decidedly more conduciv of happy order, physical health, integral balance of cerebral functions, hence of mental pursuits and worthy enterprise, than influences of secret plurality. And they do not imply lifelong, unloved servitude. The hypocrisy system makes varietists who want no divorce, but fixed home-slaves, while they dissipate to their own loss and final regret. Any part of the organism used excessivly draws from and weakens all other parts. Now, as we are seeking the reason and justice age, educational methods should be constituted to serve that end. The young and the ignorant adults of both sexes should be endowed with full knowledge of their social natures, with discrimination between uses and abuses that would giv them nice care and pride in conserving nervous, muscular, and brain powers for wise purposes in ripe, discerning years. Mr. Wilson is right—boys can be taught to aspire to rounded, beautiful forms, to understand life's laws, and prefer healthy pleasures and chastity's rewards. Girls simultaneously taught would form a mutually upholding auxiliary. This line of culture should be indispensable. If common schools cannot supply it, the lyceum, club, or mission should. On equipping Mrs. Chandler for a moral educator I bespoke special attention to the young, but their educator seems not yet to be educated. What is plainly first and most needed is poised womanhood. Sickness, long labor with little strength, ceaseless failure, loss of beauty, of zest in action, do not call women to a strike for true life; and what shall arouse them from the stupor of submission to various sordid and betraying tyrannies which hav deluded their reasons and dictated their doings till very few of them know what is really womanly, what is manly, what is duty to self, posterity, or collectiv races? Ostracism, the invisible police of all tyrannies, seems to be the god they serve, the only law they heed. While this holds their feet in superstitious mire, their heads in a dense popular haze, what unfound power can clear their vision and convince them that they will be every way brighter, stronger, happier, and hav ability to rightly guide the rising generation, if they will rebel against that vicious control, defy its scarecrow scandal, and guide themselvs, or be guided, into a rational course of wholesome humanhood? This done and the Gordian knot of degradation is severed, the riddle of revolting depravities is solved, parentage may be purged till pure heredity honors humanity. If women will be free from petty, pueril, and infamous frauds, become self-reliant, there will be no need of great movements for suffrage, temperance, and morality. They will settle the question of social relations; will not admit partial standards of honor that make them outcasts for that which makes men experts—not just that either, but for the first beguiled step toward men's skilled experiences. They will not suffer the trials of promiscuity; and while hygiene is helping all, and sanitation is regulating general excess, men will see clearer, comprehend women better, and accept the enjoyment of higher grade happiness. Exceptions to the order on both sides will needs be limited to the degree of balance found in their mutuality, and all will know they are working out their long-sought liberty.

If this hasty, forward-looking fragment does not accurately hint on all points, it is nevertheless not mainly a dream.

M. E. TILLOTSON.

NEOLA, IA., Jan. 24, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hate to take up the space in your columns with such feeble and uninteresting matter as I am able to giv, but I want to reply to Friend B., of Fort Worth, Tex., in the January 17th number. Now, as regards the number of inhabitants in 1890 compared with 1880, we are governed by the state enumeration, which is much less in 1890 than in 1880 in Iowa. In Kansas I did not say there were less, taking the state in whole, but less with the exception of a few of the large cities. I find in traveling through the state nearly all the small towns are lots of vacant buildings. Towns that had four thousand inhabitants four years ago hav now only two thousand, and so on. If I am credibly informed, hundreds of emigrants at Castle Garden hav been steered away from Iowa and Kansas to different parts of the states just on the grounds of Prohibition. Now, whether this is true or not as regards the population, it is no argument for Liberals in support of Prohibition either way. We as Liberals should not argue any subject from a financial standpoint. It is the justice of the thing. Hav we any right to claim Liberality as long as we try to infringe upon the liberty of others? Because it is wrong to indulge in liquor as a beverage, which I believe as firmly as anyone, I do not propose to say, You shall not. There are lots of indulgences which are wrong that it would be unjust to prohibit. If I had the power to prohibit all injurious indulgences at one stroke, I would be a tyrant if I usurped that power. That is too much like the practice of the churches. They want to dictate to everyone. We as Liberals should cease using forcible measures. Love and reason are all we would need if it was not for our protection against those that choose to rule over us by force. If we were all true Liberals we could do away with all laws to punish crime and also with all laws to force the collection of debts. Friend B. says that we do not make fire-arms to kill each other and commit suicide. If that is so, what are revolvers made for, which are fast coming into general use in all our large cities? There are more people killed by revolvers than by liquor, but not one word do I hear in favor of doing away with the manufacturing of them. B. also says they do not try to prohibit the manufacture of alcohol for scientific and medical purposes. Then I do not understand the law, for in Iowa it is a perfect success as regards the manufacturing. B. says also, What a happy town Neola must be with free whisky! I can tell you for a fact, it is a great deal happier than it was when the Prohibitionists tried to enforce the law. There is not the contention and enmity of feeling existing in the community; and no more drunkenness; no more whisky sold, but more beer, and not near the county expense. As I said in my other letter, this is not a free country as long as any man is prohibited from making and selling any article that the people demand. B. said that resembles Anarchy. If so, I am an Anarchist. But I am not a drunkard, nor am I a frequenter of saloons, nor do I keep it in the house. But when my wife wants a little to make mince pies I do not like to hav to be put under a Christian oath and undergo a surgical operation and then pay two or three prices for it. I do not use tobacco at all, and am very temperate in the use of tea or coffee. But I will never vote to make a law to compel any man to refrain from the use of any luxury he sees fit to indulge in; and to be plain, I do not think any man has any claim to be Liberal that will. B. says further, that if some of the people hav left the state because they could not get enough whisky and beer he conjectures that those that are left will not much regret their absence. It is with that the same as it is with the Sunday laws. It is not always those that want to work on Sunday, or those that want their liquor, that oppose the law; the most it is the principle of the thing that makes it repulsiv to every liberty-loving man. And it does astonish me to hear those that profess to be Liberal advocating any measure that had its origin in schemes of the priesthood and was got up for the sole purpose of giving them more power. Prohibition had its origin in the Methodist church for the sole purpose of establishing a third political party on the basis of religion. They saw that they were fast losing their power in the legislature. But with Harrison and Wanamaker they are pretty likely to enforce the Comstock law at least.

D. W. WHITNEY.

(Continued from page 85.)

Ireland. The bounty of £6 10s. enabled him to discharge his debts. Thus, says an English biographer, Adolphe Headingley, "he left the circle in which he had struggled so arduously, after paying every debt he owed, his mind a little embittered by the failure of his endeavors, but strong in the consciousness of his own fearless honesty of purpose, satisfied that no dread of loss, of poverty, of hardship, had ever made him deny any of his opinions. He might be mistaken; his lectures, his doctrins, might prove injurious to himself and the community at large; but in any case he had always fought for what he believed to be right and true. He was not guilty of 'trimming' to meet the exigencies of his position; he could not be suspected of hypocrisy. All he had done was diametrically opposed to his material interests; and if he had failed to earn his living, it was because he had devoted himself too much to public work which he conceived to be for the public good." His fellow-recruits, who were coarse and violent fellows, on the voyage over broke into his baggage, and on finding a Greek lexicon and Arabic vocabulary fell to a wild game of football with those volumes, from which their owner received but their fragments. Ridicule was poured on the scholar, so diverse in character from his comrades; but their contempt was in great measure dissipated when, at an attempt of the captain to wrong the soldiers, Bradlaugh stood forward as spokesman for the injured with a fearlessness and vigor that carried success and challenged respect. The whipping of one of his teasers finished the dispersion of their slight opinion, and he became a favorit. "Leaves" was the friendly nickname given him, from the double reason that he was perpetually poring over books and adhered to the drink prepared from tea leaves as his sole beverage. As he became a teetotaler at the same time he became an Atheist, he described that passage in his life as "giving up both beer and the Bible." He continued a teetotaler till in later life he was commanded urgently by a physician to imbibe weak claret. He often haranged his fellows on temperance, and spoke on the subject at public meetings in the vicinity. On the nights when he was denied leave to go to the meetings he was let down from windows by means of blankets in the hands of the soldiers, and the arrest which awaited his return he patiently endured in preference to the loss of an opportunity to denounce intemperance. He could not convert all his companions to complete Freethought, but improved some overweening and discourteous passages in a sermon at the church to which the regiment was marched Sundays, to administer to the pastor such a rebuke as all his presumptuous brothers need. He wrote to the preacher a letter requesting substantiation of his errant assertions, and the next Sunday waited with his comrades the uncourteous retort to be expected, at the first word of which three hundred dragoons unbuckled their swords and let them fall with a clang that disconcerted and threw out the impertinent censurer. Bradlaugh was summoned to account, but the arrival of the duke of Cambridge for a grand review occasioned a diversion, and the young Anti-christian escaped what might hav been a serious sequel. A small legacy soon enabled him to buy a discharge, which was given with the highest commendations.

Returning to London, Bradlaugh had difficulty in obtaining work, finally becoming errand-boy for a solicitor at ten shillings a week. This employment was fortunate as supplying the legal information with which he fought his way through after life against the opposition of all the established and conservativ interests of the kingdom. With unweariable diligence the young man now engaged night-work as clerk to a building society, began the writing of reform pamphlets, and entered upon the delivery of numerous lectures. In 1854 he married the daughter of Mr. Hooper, a working plasterer, who had admired the speaking of his future son-in-law, and who lived to hail with joy his entrance to Parliament. Christians unsuccessfully essayed to destroy his prosperity by anonymous letters to his employer denouncing his religious opinions.

The course of the young man was singularly noble and undesigning. The Secular party which is now so powerful in England then had scarcely an existence. The Secular cause was the last to promis political or other hope to an aspiring young man. But Bradlaugh, without the slightest consulting of his own interests, threw all that he possessed of time, means, and credit into the cause that he deemed just. All his income above living expenses he sacrificed to the costs of lecturing, which were heavy in bill-posting and traveling, or to the publication of reform pamphlets.

Bradlaugh now began to put in use the knowledge of common law, and particularly the knowledge of laws affecting rights of assembly, publication, and petition, which he had acquired. By this information he was in innumerable instances able to vindicate workingmen and political and Freethought propagandists in oppressions by the tyrannical classes. One of the first cases of this nature came about from an attempted revival, in June, 1855, of an act of the time of Charles V. for the suppression of all trade on Sunday. The workingmen, obtaining their money Saturday night and finding little convenience for purchase otherwise than on Sunday morning—and desiring, too, to buy indulgent trifles for their children on the walks of their only holiday—were to be denied these liberties. All stores were to be closed, and shaving and newspaper sales stopped. Indignant workingmen were convoked to an open-air meeting in Hyde park to view the rich and respectable employing their horses and coachmen in drives, while the wagons of grocers' delivery and the like were tied up that they might not desecrate the Sabbath. A great multitude gathered, and hooted at the pleasure-drivers in alarming fashion. Next, posters and handbills were issued, of which this may serve as a sample:

Hyde Park.—On Sunday the open air fête and monster concert, under the patronage of the "Leave-us-Alone" Club, will be repeated on Sunday next. The "private property" (vide Inspector Bligh's speech) will be open to the public on the occasion. Hot water for parties supplied by Lord Robert Grosvenor, who is in plenty of it. Dinners, pale ale, wines, and spirits of the choicest quality will be provided at the West End Clubs during the hours when the Licensed Victualers' houses are closed by law. Admission gratis to members of the legislature, the clergy, bishops, etc.

This piece of verse was also extensivly placarded:

Sublime decree! by which, our souls to save,
No Sunday tankards foam, no barbers shave;
And chins unmown, and throats unslaked, display
His lordship's reverence for the Sabbath day!

The police commissioner forbid a repetition of the meeting on the next Sunday. Bradlaugh and others maintained that the people had as much right to meet in Hyde park as aristocratic organizations like the Four-in-Hand Club, and resolved to push the project. The meeting was held; the police committed outrages; riots ensued; and arrests were many. Bradlaugh came to the front in the assembly, though doing no violence; and at the trials he made commendable defense of the rights of the accused. This was the first in a series of struggles of the people to maintain their right to assemble in the parks. The rich can always hire halls for ventilation of their political interests, but the masses are often unable to do so, and if they were denied use of the parks many of their political grievances would pass unagitated and unredressed. "If the poor wish to make their voices heard," says Headingley, "they must preserve the right of meeting in the parks." This right Mr. Bradlaugh has ever been foremost in asserting for them.

In June, 1858, Bradlaugh held his first formal and public theological debate, with Rev. Brewin Grant, B A. At about this time he edited a radical paper called the Investigator, which, however, failed in 1859. In this year he entered into defense of Edward Truelove for publishing the pamphlet, "Is Tyrannicide Justifiable?" Debates with clergymen and other Christian champions now grew thick upon him. The England of that period was not the England of to-day. Gross personal abuse and slander assailed him everywhere. A specimen of the placards profusely issued against him, selected from the ludicrous in preference to the libelous class, is this:

Grand discovery! To be seen to-morrow, Sunday, not one hundred miles from the Public Hall, a fine specimen of the gorilla tribe, standing seven feet six inches in hight, imported into England from Sheffield, the capital of the Hollyhock settlement, in the interior of Africa, and brought to this town for public exhibition by Mr. F. Greenfield. This gorilla is said to be one of the finest of its tribe. It presents a bold front, is impudent in its demeanor, and growls fearfully at the approach of a debt collector, magistrate, or any government officer. Having been some time in England under an assumed name, it has acquired a smattering of the language, and will address visitors on the origin, progress, and future prospects of the gorilla tribe. As the animal will be properly secured, parties visiting need be in no apprehension of danger.

The town ornamented by this Christian argument was Dewsbury. At many places the lecturer was mobbed. Jeers and insults were his frequent reception. Missils of about every description were experienced by him. Water, lime, mud, stones, and brickbats were weapons of frequent employment. Often he got pressed into an angry Christian mob and struck and kicked. Several persons spat in his face. Howling hordes accompanied his progresses from depot to hall and hall to depot, or surrounded his hotel. "Kill the Infidel!" "Murder the Infidel!" were cries familiar to his ears. Often he had to remain in a hall long after the lecture was over, that the mob might disperse and it become safe for him to enter the street. At other times he would be smuggled out through cellars, back-ways, adjoining houses, etc. The clergy were the activ inciters of most of these outrages. An extract from one of the lecturer's protests in the National Reformer reads thus:

I may be wrong, but I shall never be convinced of my error by a mob of true believers yelling at my heels like mad dogs, under the leadership of a pious rector's trusty subordinate, or hammering at the door of my lecture-room under the direction of an infuriate church parson. I object that in the nineteenth century it is hardly to be tolerated that a bigot priest shall use his influence with the proprietor of the hotel where I am staying, in order to "get that devil kicked out into the street" after half-past ten at night. . . . I hav also a word of advice to the mayor of Wigan, who appears to be a respectable, red-faced, dumpty sort of shopkeeping person, and who, as I am credibly informed, used threats about stopping my lectures by force of law. My advice to you, Mr. Mayor, is contained in one word—try.

Sometimes the persecuted Secularist would face the mob dogging his steps and invite them to giv fair play and let two of their best men step forward to meet him. He was six feet in hight, big boned and strongly built. No one ever accepted his challenge. Several times he was arrested and locked up in a cell. Wherever the local bigots could, they would put on the authorities to stop his lecture; the police would lay rough hold on him; then if he opposed their violence he would be charged with resisting officers. Testimony of his friends would be rejected because of their being Atheists and incompetent of the oath. At Davenport, police interruption of his lecture, with legal consequences as just described, drew from the press of the country such utterances as this of Punch:

[By the fact of] magistrates becoming judges of controversy, and the policeman enforcing their decrees, the office of the justice of the peace will become a holy office indeed, and the constabulary will rise into familiars of a British Inquisition.

Bradlaugh carried the Davenport case to a higher court, only to meet an adverse decision, and fall under heavy costs.

At the rise of the struggle of the Italians to form a united and progressiv nation, free from papal tyranny and restraints, Bradlaugh manifested warm sympathy with the cause. He became a valued and helpful friend of the leaders, Garibaldi and Mazzini. On one of his frequent trips to Italy the police got wind of his having received a packet of political letters. His steamer touched at Civita Vecchia, and a boatload of papal gendarmes came on board. Eluding their endeavors to lure him from his boat, when he would hav been on Roman soil and under papal laws, he also refused the threatening demands for his papers which they next made. The papal police treated his English passport with contempt, and prepared to break open his portmanteau. Bradlaugh drew a heavy naval revolver and aimed it at the nearest of the pope's soldiers, saying he would blow out the brains of the first one who approached the property. Probably they would hav rushed on him and carnage would hav ensued, when an American who had looked on grew so delighted at "the Britisher's pluck" that he seized a chair, and, whirling it about with terrific force, took a stand by Bradlaugh, crying, "I guess I'll stand by the Britisher!" The soldiers of the Papal States went ashore for reinforcements or other instructions, and Bradlaugh and the American induced the captain to steam off before the gendarmes' return.

Bradlaugh soon became involved in his first public struggle for the securing of the right of Atheists to testify. In a suit over a sum of money he was refused as a witness. Here he began that protracted fight for repeal of the unjust statute which he eventually won, after great expense to his own purse.

The lawsuits in which Bradlaugh bore part are not easy of enumeration. One of his first was against a Rev. Sydney Gedge, who had revived a legal privilege, dropped by his predecessor, of distraining for church rates. He seized the property of his poorest parishioners, even such trifling articles as warming-pans, pieces of bacon, and note-paper. Bradlaugh addressed him several letters in the National Reformer, one being in this amusing strain:

Rev. Sir,—I congratulate you on your adherence to the Jewish and Christian principles, as especially advanced in your new attempt to spoil the Egyptians resident in your parish. I hav read with satisfaction your notice threatening to enforce payment of your vicar rate. It is a fair evidence of the love you entertain for your flock. The more cash you can collect from them the less attractions will they find in the world and its vanities. . . . You are a good and faithful shepherd, doubtless, but you hav more regard for the wool than for the sheep, and hav an open eye to the shearing.

The clergyman in anger slandered his rebuker, who then prosecuted him and won the verdict.

In 1863 Bradlaugh was compelled by ill health to resign the editorship of the National Reformer, which he had founded at the fall of the Investigator. After a period of rest, however, he resumed it, and raised the paper to be one of the foremost organs of the world for the diffusion of Freethought and the defense of human rights.

In 1866 the Reform League was forbidden to meet in Hyde park. Bradlaugh, to whose cherishing care and effort this great organization largely owes its early existence, held that it had a right to meet there. The people assembled, and, despite the resistance of the police, carried away the fence and entered.

The cause of Ireland enlisted the sympathy of this great reformer, and he was of much service in the councils of its leaders, discountenancing violence, and procuring excision of Catholic sentiments and schemes from its declarations and designs.

When the National Reformer had been in existence eight years the conservativ government party attempted its suppression. The statute under which this attempt was made was an ancient one, very dangerous to all publications for the people that might be radical either in politics or in religion. Bradlaugh for a long time maintained a gallant fight against the Crown. He twice secured the repeal of the menacing statute by the Commons, but each time the action was rendered null by the dissent of the House of Lords. The prosecutors at length gave up the fight against Bradlaugh's courage and power. "Thus," says an English writer, "the last shackles that limited the freedom of the English press hav been removed. To Bradlaugh appertains the honor of having fought the most recent battle in defense of a liberty dear to the heart of every Englishman."

It was at this time that Bradlaugh was invited to stand for Parliament. After several defeats by the combined forces of the pulpit and aristocratic privilege, he was elected, and since then has been repeatedly returned by the same constituency.

The struggles of Bradlaugh to occupy his seat in Parliament though not recognizing the Christian oath, are recent and well remembered, and do not need recapitulation. It will be recollected that he was expelled from the House by force several times, amid dreadful disturbances.

The New Hall of Science in London is a commodious structure that owes its erection to Bradlaugh's bounty and endeavors. To the large hall are attached a club and an institute and a minor hall. Lectures, science classes, and other excellent exercises are held here.

About 1870 the pressure of Bradlaugh's debts, which he had contracted by his unending litigation for the gaining of the rights of the oppressed, became such that he took a resolution which evinces the self-sacrificingness and probity of his character. He broke up his home of wife and daughters and took lodgings for himself alone at 25 Turner street, so poor that the rent was but three shillings and sixpence a week. Here he lived for some time with his books and his work, writing, editing the National Reformer, answering lecture calls, and laying aside cent by cent toward the liquidation of all claims on him.

In the contest between the French government and the Commune Bradlaugh mediated for leniency to the Communists.

Monarchy in Great Britain was the recipient of severe attacks from the subject of this sketch. Throughout England and Scotland he lectured on the advisability of deposing the reigning family, and in his famous "Impeachment of the House of Brunswick" showed the justice of so doing. The extravagance of the royal family he often denounced and resisted. His great ambition was to republicanize England, and he probably would hav been its first president.

Republicanism everywhere found Bradlaugh's hearty support. At the time of the Carlist disorders in Spain he visited that land in the cause of liberty, doing so at the risk of his life, and having adventures some amusing and some perilous. The wronged everywhere were championed by him. The natives of India received such unremitting advocacy from him in Parliament that he became known as "the Indian member." At our civil war he addressed audiences on the rightfulness of the federal cause and the evils of slaveholding.

Laboring men found in this great Freethinker a warm friend of their cause. In Parliament he secured the establishment of a labor bureau, and many other measures in their favor. He made it a practise to giv legal and other advice free to all poor people who would call. He was an opponent of Socialism, deeming it despotic and repressiv of talent. His tenets were republican and individualistic, leaning toward extreme liberty and Anarchy. He published many appeals for oppressed tenantry, and advocated complete change of the present system of land ownership.

In 1873 Bradlaugh paid America the first of three visits. He received honors from Wendell Phillips, Charles Sumner, William Lloyd Garrison, and others. The title under which the Herald announced his arrival was: "Charles Bradlaugh, the future president of England, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel." The Tribune concluded its account thus: "In a crisis the world would probably hear a great deal more of Charles Bradlaugh. As Mirabeau observed of Robespierre, 'This man will do something; he believes every word he says.'" Papers under religious influence spoke of him about in the tone of the Newark Morning Register, who described him as "a pestilent fellow," who wished to hav "an unlimited number of heads, royal or semi-royal, elevated upon pikestaffs, or grinning from London Bridge." The Congregationalist abused him bitterly. Clippings from his Antichristian works were sent the lecture bureau that employed him, in hope that his dismissal would be effected.

In 1875 Bradlaugh and Mrs. Besant published the Malthusian work, "Fruits of Philosophy." Prosecution for selling this treatis upon prevention of undesired children was at once started. The two reformers fought long, and eventually conquered. The book is sold today.

Few men were more loved. It was his boast that he could summon an army of one million men to level Westminster at his command. His honesty and ability secured him an attentiv hearing in the House such as few enjoyed, and won the friendship even of his political opponents. "I do not believe," a member who is also an editor recently wrote, "that there is a more upright or more conscientious man alive to-day than Charles Bradlaugh. I hav often seen him take up a course which was directly opposed to his own interests, but I hav never seen him do any underhand or unfair thing. His word is absolutely to be trusted. He cannot be cajoled or bullied into doing what he believes to be a dishonorable or even unfair act. He is perfectly candid, straightforward, and aboveboard in all his transactions."

A New Book by Helen H. Gardener.

A THOUGHTLESS YES.

The downcast eyes of timid acquiescence hav paid to impudent authority the tribute of a thoughtless yes.—R. G. Ingersoll.

CONTENTS.

A Splendid Judge of a Woman.
The Lady of the Club.
Under Protest.
For the Prosecution.
A Rusty Link in the Chain.
The Boler House Mystery.
The Time-Lock of Our Ancestors.
Florence Campbell's Fate.
My Patient's Story.

Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, $1.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

THE
CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:
THEIR
Crimes and Persecutions.

8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.
USE THE
LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK
In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Col. Kelso's Works.

The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.

Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Brain and the Bible.
Conflict Between Mental Science and Theology.
By EDGAR C. BEALL.
Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.
Unanswerable. Price, $1.

Creed of Christendom.
Its Foundation Contrasted with its Superstructure.
By W. R. GREG.
Complete in 1 vol., 12mo, 399pp., $1.50.

WHICH:
SPIRITUALISM OR CHRISTIANITY?
By MOSES HULL (Spir.) and
REV. W. F. PARKER (Chris.).
Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

HEBREW MYTHOLOGY;
OR,
The Rationale of the Bible.
Holy Scriptures Treat of Natural Phenomena Only.
By MILTON WOOLEY, M.D.
8vo, 613pp., - - - - - $2.50.

Faith and Reason.
ACCOUNT OF THE
Christian and All Prominent Religions Before and Since Christ. Extract from Sacred Books of the East.
By H. R. STEVENS. Price, $1.50.

Nature's Revelations of Character.
Physiognomy Illustrated.
By JOSEPH SIMMS, M.D.
Individual traits indicated by the temperaments and features.
260 woodcuts. 8vo, 650pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.

AMBERLEY'S LIFE OF JESUS.
His Character and Doctrines.
From the "Analysis of Religious Belief."
By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.
Paper, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents.

REVELATIONS OF ANTICHRIST.
PROVING
Jesus Christ Did Not Exist in the Reign of Tiberius, but a Jesus was Hanged a Century before, and Peter and Paul died before the Christian Era.
Full index, 446pp., - - - $1.50.

THEOLOGY AND MYTHOLOGY.
AN
Inquiry into the Claims of Biblical Inspiration and the Supernatural Element in Religion.
By A. H. O'DONOGHUE.
Price, - - - $1.

NATHANIEL VAUGHAN.
A Radical Novel of Marked Ability.
BY FREDERIKA MACDONALD.
404 pages. . Price reduced to $1.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT the DEVIL.
AND
OTHER BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES AND ESSAYS.
By CHARLES BRADLAUGH.
With Portrait and Autobiography.
Extra cloth, gold back and side stamp, 12mo, 260 pp., $1.25.

MONKS, POPES, AND THEIR POLITICAL INTRIGUES.
By J. ALBERGER.
376pp., $1. Soiled copies, 50 cts. and 75 cts.

POPES AND THEIR DOINGS.
ACCOUNT OF
Vicars of Christ and Vicegerents of God.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

CASE AGAINST THE CHURCH.
A Summary of the Arguments against Christianity.
Price, cloth, 50 cents.

NEW DISPENSATION.
By D. W. HULL (Spir.).
Price, - - - - - - 15 cents.

ECONOMIC EQUITIES:
A Compend of the Natural Laws of Industrial Production and Exchange.
By J. K. INGALLS.
Price, 25 cents.

THE JEWS AND THEIR GOD.
"The Jews and their God stood on the lowest plane."
Price, 10 cents.

LITERATURE OF THE INSANE.
By F. R. MARVIN.
Price, . . . 5 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

MYTHS AND MYTH-MAKERS.
Old Tales and Superstitions Interpreted by Comparative Mythology.
By JOHN FISKE, M.A., LL.B., of Harvard College.
Price, $2.

BEYOND THE VEIL.
Claimed to be Dictated by the Spirit of P. B. Randolph, aided by Swedenborg, through Mrs. F. H. McDougall and Mrs. Luna Hutchinson. [Spir.]
Steel Engraving of Randolph. Price, $1.50.

THE KORAN.
A New English Edition of the Koran of Mohammed, to which is added the Life of Mohammed, or the History of that Doctrine which was begun and carried on by him in Arabia.
SALE'S edition. Price, $1.50.

HUME'S ESSAYS.
Essays and Treatises. Autobiography and Dialogues on Natural Religion.
By DAVID HUME. Price, $1.50.

SUPERSTITION IN ALL AGES.
By JEAN MESLIER (born 1678),
A Catholic Priest who Renounced Christianity.
Portrait.
Price, pap., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Man's Nature and Development.
By HENRY G. ATKINSON, F.G.S., and HARRIET MARTINEAU.
Price, - - - - - $1.50.

Infidel's or Inquirer's Text-Book.
Thirteen Lectures on the Bible.
By ROB'T COOPER. Price, $1.

Origin and Development of Religious Ideas and Beliefs.
By MORRIS EINSTEIN. Price, $1.

LIFE OF THOMAS PAINE.
With Explanatory Observations on his Writings.
By GILBERT VALE. Price, $1.

A BUSINESS MAN'S SOCIAL AND RELIGIOUS VIEWS.
From a Poor Man's Standpoint. Price, $1.

KNEELAND'S NATIONAL HYMNS
Price, cloth, 35 cents.

LETTERS TO EUGENIA.
A Preservative Against Religious Prejudices.
By BARON D'HOLBACH.
Price, - - - - - - $1.

CAREER OF RELIGIOUS IDEAS.
Ultimating in the Religion of Science.
By HUDSON TUTTLE. [Spir.]
Price, paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

LIFE OF PAINE.
By J. E. REMSBURG.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75 cents.

Mortality of the Soul and the Immortality of Its Elements.
By A. S. DE PELLEGRINI.
Price, - - - - - 15 cents.

JEHOVAH UNVEILED.
Character of the Jewish Jehovah Delineated.
Price, 35 cents.

MORAL PHYSIOLOGY.
A Treatise on the Population Question.
By R. D. OWEN.
Price, - - - - - 35 cents.

AN HOUR WITH THE DEVIL.
By D. M. BENNETT.
Price, - - - 10 cents.

IF, THEN, AND WHEN.
Church Doctrines.
By W. S. BARLOW. [Spir.] Price, 10 cents.

The Liberty of Printing, and Reply.
By HURLBUT and WAKEMAN.
Price, 10 cents.

ICHABOD CRANE PAPERS.
Daringly witty and inexpressibly laughable onslaughts on Christianity.
Price, 10 cents.

BLASPHEMY AND THE BIBLE.
By C. B. REYNOLDS.
Price, 5 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

MATERIALISM AND CRIME.

By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 5 cents.

AN OUTLINE OF THE
French Revolution
ITS CAUSES AND RESULTS.
By W. S. BELL.
Paper, 12mo, 25 cents.

MORTALITY OF THE SOUL.
IMMORTALITY OF ITS ELEMENTS.
By A. S. de Pellegrini.
Paper, - - 15 cents.

PHILOSOPHY of SPIRITUALISM
AND TREATMENT OF MEDIOMANIA.
By F. R. Marvin, M.D.
Cloth, . . . 50 cents.

POCKET THEOLOGY.
By VOLTAIRE.
Terse, witty, and sarcastic definitions of theological terms.
Price, 25 cents.

PRIESTLY CELIBACY EXPOSED.
By REV. G. T. FOX, M.A.
15 cents.

PRO AND CON OF Supernatural Religion.
Have We a Supernatural, Inspired, Miraculous Religion?
By E. E. GUILD.
Paper, 20 cents; cloth, 30 cents.

PYRAMID OF GIZEH.
Ancient Egyptian Civilization and Hebrew Narrative in Genesis and Exodus.
By VAN BUREN DENSLOW, LL.D.
Price, 15 cents.

QUESTION SETTLED.
BIBLICAL and MODERN SPIRITUALISM.
By MOSES HULL.
Price, 60 cents.

Rational Communism,
THE PRESENT AND FUTURE REPUBLIC OF NORTH AMERICA.
Advocates associate life and employment as a preventive of vice, crime, poverty, etc.
By A CAPITALIST.
Paper, 493pp., 50 cts.; clo., $1.

Relation of Witchcraft to Religion.
By A. C. LYALL.
Price, 10 cents.

Fruits of Philosophy.
POPULATION QUESTION.
By Dr. Knowlton. Edited by Charles Bradlaugh and Annie Besant.
25 cents.

TRUTH. A Poem. By E. N. Kingsley. 10 cents.

POVERTY: Its Cause and Cure.
How the Poor May Attain Comfort and Independence.
By M. G. H.
Price, . . 10 cents.

Religion of Inhumanity.
With a Glance at the Religion of Humanity.
BY FREDERIC HARRISON.
Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION:
The Gibraltar of the World, as Now Constituted.
By George T. Bondies.
With
Exceptions to the Character of Christ as a Gentleman.
By W. T. Purviance.
25 cents.

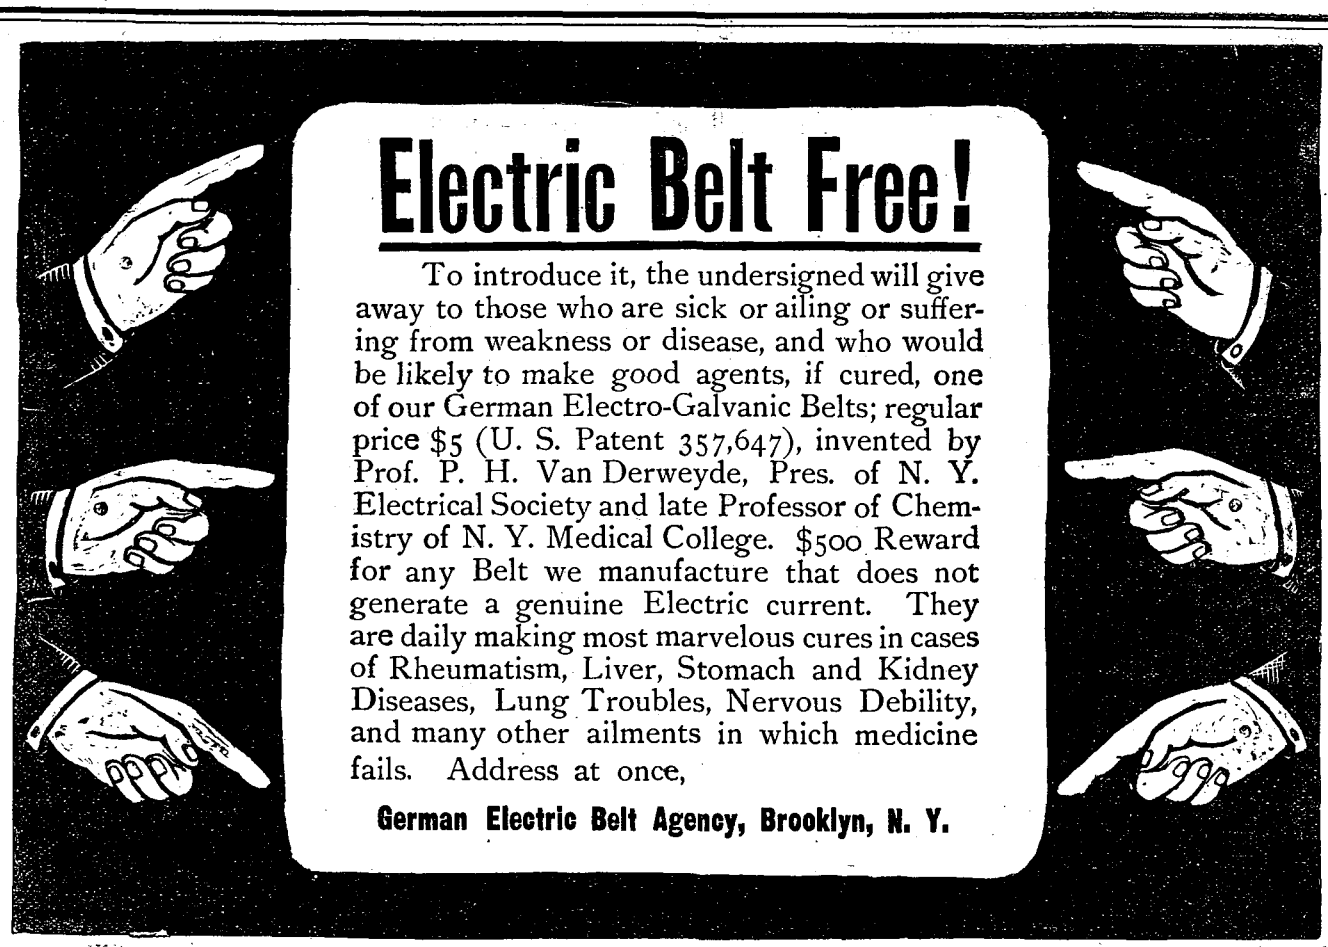

IMAGE BREAKER.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Six Lectures.
Decline of Faith.
Protestant Intolerance.
Washington an Unbeliever.
Jefferson an Unbeliever.
Paine and Wesley.
Christian Sabbath.
Each, 5 cents; bound, pap., 25 cents; per doz., 40.

SABBATH BREAKING.
By JOHN E. REMSBURG.
Price, 25 cents.

St. Matthew Before the Court
FOR THE CRIME OF FORGERY.
By SECULARIST.
Price, . . . 10 cents.

SEMITIC GODS AND THE BIBLE.
Including Allah, Jehovah, Satan, Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, Bible.
By D. M. BENNETT.
(From Vol. II. "Gods and Religions.")
333pp., pap., 60 c.; clo., $1.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.
MEN, WOMEN & GODS.
BY HELEN H. GARDENER,
Introduction by
ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.
Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.
The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.
Photographs of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents.

THE UNIVERSE ANALYZED
BY JOHN R. KELSO, A.M.,
Author of "Deity Analyzed," "The Bible Analyzed," "The Real Blasphemers," "Spiritualism Sustained," etc., etc.

The latest and best work of an analytic thinker, who is gifted with those rare powers that render the subtlest conceptions the easy property of the ordinary mind. The book contains many ideas that will be new to the world and productiv of good in furnishing food for thought. We trust it will hav the immense distribution it so richly merits.—[The American Idea.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

J. D. SHAW'S PAMPHLETS.

The Bible—What Is It? A pamphlet containing eight chapters in refutation of the assumption that the Bible is a divine book of pure thought, and correct in all its utterances. Price, 25 cents.

Studies in Theology. A clear exposition of the biblical story of man's creation and curse, theologically denominated "the fall." Price, 10 cents.

Liberalism. Treating the subject from a negativ and affirmativ standpoint, showing what it is not and what it is. Price, 5 cents.
tf

How Can We be Saved?
Was Jesus Supernaturally Conceived, and Did He Rise from the Dead?
$100 Reward.
Paper, 10 cents. For Sale at This Office.

MARTYRDOM OF MAN.
A COMPENDIUM OF UNIVERSAL HISTORY.
By WINWOOD READE.

It is really a remarkable book, in which universal history is "boiled down" with surprising skill.—[Literary World.

You turn over his pages with a fascination similar to that experienced in reading Washington Irving.—[Inter-Ocean.

His history has a continuity, a rush, a carrying power, which reminds us strikingly of Gibbon.—[New Haven Palladium.

The sketch of early Egyptian history, in the first chapter, is a masterpiece of historical writing. He has a style that reminds us of Macaulay.—[Penn Monthly.

Eighth edition. Extra cloth, 12mo, 543pp., $1.75.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.
AN ADDRESS
By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,
DELIVERED BEFORE THE
New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.
The only Complete and Authorized Edition.
PRICE, TEN CENTS.
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Miss Wixon's Works.
All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.
Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 333pp., $1.25.
Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards, $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Cosmian Hymn Book,
A COLLECTION OF
Original and Selected Hymns
(Words and Music)
For Liberal and Ethical Societies. For Schools and the Home.
COMPILED BY
L. K. WASHBURN.
PRICE, . . . $1.50.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

FOR HER DAILY BREAD.
A NINETEENTH CENTURY NOVEL.
Preface by R. G. INGERSOLL.
For Her Daily Bread is the story of two young girls and a younger brother who were left parentless, with little money, fair education, and much courage, to make their way through the world by going to Chicago. The author is also the heroin. The narrativ is, in the main, a history of a working girl's life and experience in the city of Chicago among bluff business men, kind-hearted folks, and disreputable hypocrits. It is just such a story of human life as we should expect Colonel Ingersoll to be interested in; and whatever he admires and appreciates is sure to be worth the attention of the rest of the world. Price 25 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

The Modern Science Essayist.
Ten Cents Each.
1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

L. K. Washburn's Works.
Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.
The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.
The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.
Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.
Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.
Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents
Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.
The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.
Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

SCIENCE VERSUS RELIGION,
OR, THE
Conflict between Reason and Superstition.
BY T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.
Price, 10 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DROPSY Treated free. Positively CURED with Vegetable Remedies. Have cured many thousand cases pronounced hopeless. From first dose symptoms rapidly disappear, and in ten days at least two-thirds of all symptoms are removed. BOOK of testimonials of miraculous cures sent FREE. TEN DAYS TREATMENT FURNISHED FREE by mail DR. H. H. GREEN & SONS, Specialists, Atlanta, Ga.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2.Rev.Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Bible-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1891 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

Science in Plain Language.

I. EVOLUTION, ANTIQUITY, BACTERIA; ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S.E.

II. ASTRONOMY, SUN, MOON, STARS, ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S.E.

These handy series of volumes on science—of which the above works form the first two numbers, others to follow—are written in a way that cannot fail to make them interesting to even the most casual reader. They supply a popular need. The price of each is 50 cents in cloth.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WETTSTEIN'S
WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silver-ine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $25. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. all such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

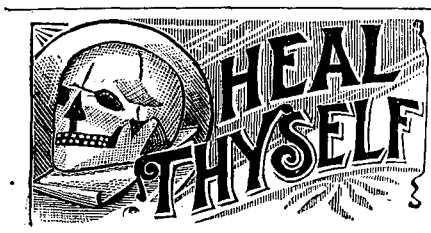
ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.



With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales, SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.
124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7.30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.: LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union
Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.
FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society
Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. Mrs. R. M. BERRA, Pres.: J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

Portsmouth, O., Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7 P.M. in Grand Army Hall. Lectures, discussions, readings, poems, music and songs. A cordial invitation is extended to all; especially to friends from abroad. Correspondence solicited. J. L. TREUTHART, President. WILL S. ANDRES, Secretary.

TRY-SQUARE:

OR,

The Church of Practical Religion.

BY REPORTER.

This is the history of an attempt to found a church without superstition, and its success. Uncle Job Sawyer, the pastor, having established his pulpit, uses it to discuss all the vital questions of human concern, religious, political, and otherwise. The book is written in well-chosen language, and easily understood. There is just sufficient narrativ about it to interest the reader and hold his attention while the truth is being brought to his mind.

For sale at this office. Price, $1.00.

News of the Week.

PORTUGUESE republicans attempted to overthrow the monarchy, but failed from lack of concert. Oporto was the only place where the insurgents rose. A number on each side were killed or wounded. The government has closed all republican clubs and suppressed all republican papers.

CARTHAGE, Ill., reports itself haunted by a ghost.

CARDINAL GIBBONS is mentioned for the next pope.

TYNDALL, the eminent Freethinker and scientist, is dangerously ill from inflamed veins.

THE turning of the first spadeful of earth in work for the World's Fair took place on the 27th ult.

THE Atheistic political party in Belgium is working for universal suffrage, against Catholics.

A CONSUMPTIV lady who was treated at Berlin with Koch's remedy, has died of blood-poisoning.

THE belief that insanity is increasing is contradicted by the New York state commission, which says it is decreasing.

CHIPPEWA Indians at the Red Lake reservation, Minn., hav begun ghost-dancing, and whites ask protection.

AT Mount Pleasant, Pa., on the 27th ult., over one hundred miners were suffocated or burnt to death by a gas explosion.

MISS DREXEL, daughter of the late banker, will take her final religious vows on the 12th, and dedicate her income of $500,000 a year to her order.

WM. WINDOM, secretary of the treasury, on the 29 h ult. died suddenly of heart disease at a banquet at Delmonico's, New York.

A MAINE school committee ordered Bible-reading, and a Catholic pupil refused. She was expelled, and has lost a suit for damages in the supreme court.

INGALLS proposes a series of religious exercises at the Columbian Exposition, participated in by the most eminent clergymen of all Christian countries.

BY the taking up of the reapportionment bill in the Senate, the bill for federal electoral supervision has been displaced, and may not be revived, as the end of the session approaches.

AT Carbon Hill, Ala., white miners are rioting and attempting to drive away colored colaborers. They hav shot eight or ten. Two regiments hav been sent there by the governor.

A LAW to suppress drunkenness will be enacted in Germany. The young emperor has long antagonized liquor. Drunkards will be fined or jailed, and saloonkeepers who encourage inebriety will be fined or deprived of licenses.

EVERY observer in our Indian country says that the Indian department and agents hav been flagrantly dishonest and vile, and hav swindled the savages and caused all the wars. The government will probably make a change now, and may put the care of the Indians in military hands, each agency to be under a captain or other officer.

AT the close of services at the Methodist Episcopal church of Wheeling, W. Va., on Thursday the 28th, Rev. Dr. Brown, who had been lamenting the slim attendance, was informed that a dance was in progress at the house of Salva Ford, a member of the church. The minister and two or three elders went to the house, forced their way in among the dancers, and opened a prayer-meeting, speedily clearing the floor and stampeding the band.

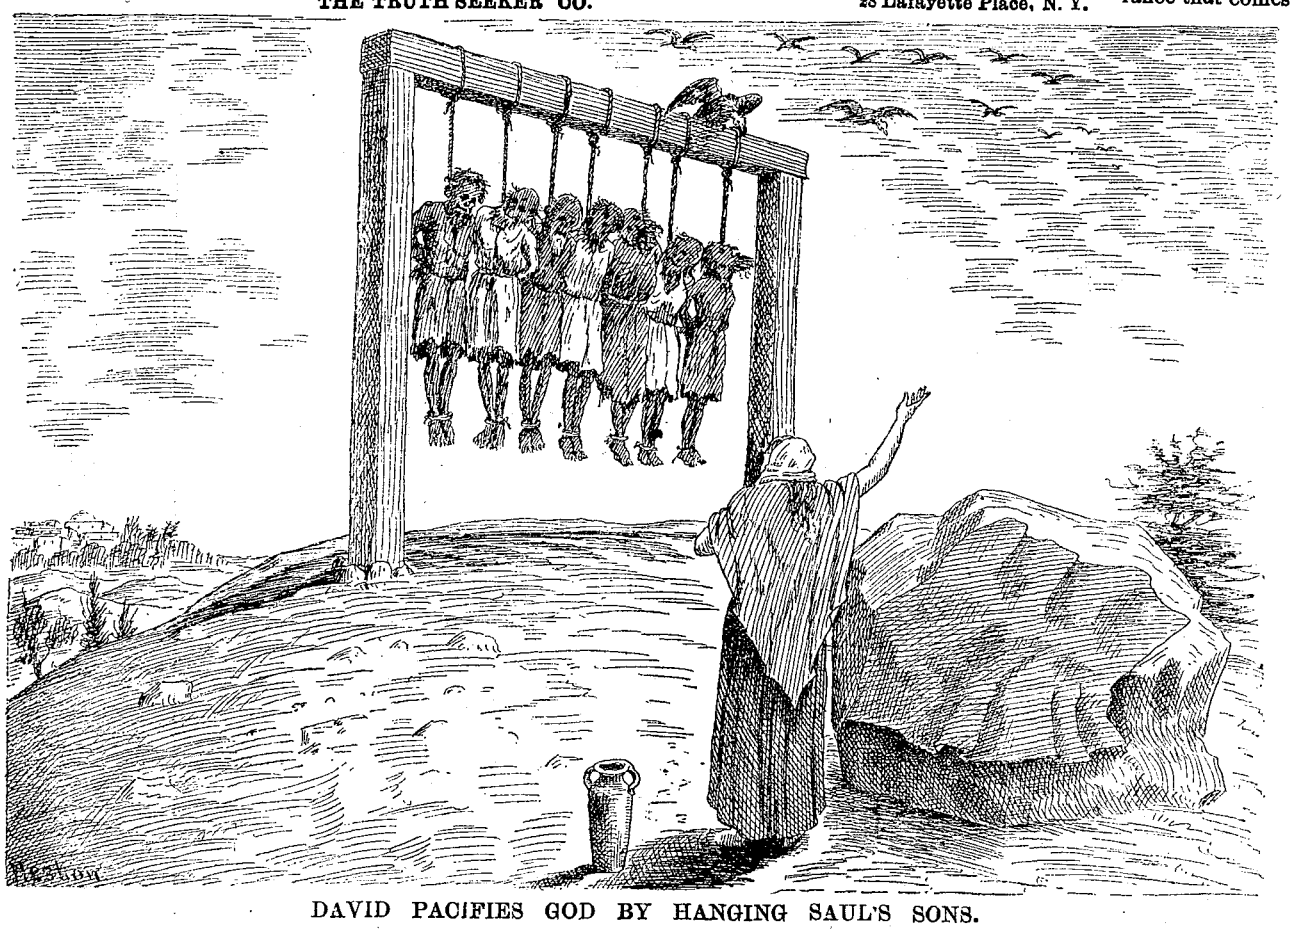
THE organization of a Roman Catholic political party in the United States, like that of Germany, is proposed. Among the objects will be resistance of "the taxation of church property, the prohibition of parochial schools, the regulation of Catholic corporations on non-Catholic lines, and a hundred other schemes aimed at Catholics." It is to hav counterparts in France, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Spain, Portugal, Mexico, and the South American republics. "A deaf man," says a Catholic spokesman, "can hear even now the tread of its disciplined voters marching."

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Gives a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.



WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,

28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

DAVID PACIFIES GOD BY HANGING SAUL'S SONS.

But the king took the two sons of Rizpah . . . and the five sons of Michal. . . . And he delivered them into the hands of the Gibeonites, and they hanged them in the hill before the Lord. . . . And Rizpah . . . suffered neither the birds of the air to rest on them by day, nor the beasts of the field by night.—2 Sam. xxi, 8–10.

Gems of Thought.

SHUT not your doors to me proud libraries,
For that which was lacking on all your well-fill'd shelvs, yet needed most, I bring.
—Walt Whitman.

THERE is an abecedarian ignorance that precedes knowledge, and a doctoral ignorance that comes after it.—Montaigne.

SCIENCE itself is in travail. Assuredly some mighty new birth is at hand.—Lewes.

ENGLAND will not be habitable long unreformed.—Carlyle.

ON the assumption that the Bible is God's word, the moral difficulties are a thousandfold more difficult of explanation than all the scientific and historical ones put together. We hav a God who sanctions and givs encouragement to the most horrible of crimes; who promotes wars against inoffensiv and defenseless peoples; who favors slavery, smiles approval upon polygamy, and connives at atrocities the most abhorrent and revolting that we hav any record of in the history of the world.—Arthur B. Moss.

THE Pentateuch is filled with anathemas, with curses, with words of vengeance, of jealousy, of hatred, and brutality. By reason of these passages, millions of people hav plucked from their hearts the flowers of pity and justified the murder of women and the assassination of babes.—Ingersoll.

ALL things are subject to law, from the raindrop to the loftiest conception of the human brain. There is no supernatural interference. Therefore, as there are no miracles, there need be no prayer.—Robt. C. Adams.

NOBLE let man be,
Rich in help and good.
For that alone
Distinguishes him
From all the beings
Whom we know.

For unfeeling
Nature is to all;
Alike the sun shines
O'er the evil and good;
And to the evil-doer
As to the best gleam
The moon and stars.

Under eternal, brazen,
Mighty laws
Must we all
Our being's
Circle complete.

Man, and he alone,
Can dare the impossible;
He distinguishes,
Chooses, and judges;
He to the moment can
Continuance lend.

—Goethe.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EGGS FANCY POULTRY IO VARIETIES. Ten years experience. Price List Free. No catalogue. Pigeons—Blue, Fans and Red Jackobins. J.L. MOCK, 1247 S. HIGH ST., COLUMBUS O.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 7. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, February 14, 1891. {28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

TRYING TO COAX CHRISTIAN CRIPPLES OUT OF THE MIRE.

Notes and Clippings.

THE Minneapolis people want to induce Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and the Hon. Ignatius Donnelly to hav a joint debate about Shakspere.

THE position which Bradlaugh had won for himself in parliamentary life in a few short years and the respect in which he was held by all parties is remarkable, and a strange contrast to the bitter persecution and calumny which he endured ten years ago. No private member of the House of Commons introduced and passed so many bills for the benefit of the public as he. It will be difficult to replace him.—Sun.

To the parish priest at Cronstadt, Russia, is imputed the power of working miracles. So great is the faith in him, says a correspondent, that several times a week he is invited to St. Petersburgh for the purpose of praying with the sick. He never touches the patients or those for whom he is asked to pray, and he claims no power of his own to alter the course of nature. His service begins and ends in prayer. Marvelous are the stories related of the results that hav followed his intercession.

A DISPATCH from Lima, O., says: Joseph Steiner, a member of the Mennonite church, living near Bluffton, was sent to jail to-day by Judge Ritchie for contempt of court, through his refusal to serve as a grand juror on account of his religious creed. He appeared with a letter from his pastor explaining why he could not conscientiously perform the duties of a juror. The judge said he did not think any religion taught a man to refuse to do his duty as a citizen and, after allowing Steiner plenty of time to reflect, sentenced him to pay a fine of $10 and serve ten days in jail.

IN this midwinter of 1891 a mighty wind sprang up. It took the graceful finial of the Court street Baptist church spire, in Auburn, Me., and bent it over due south. There it was left, an awkward sight, giving the church a sort of tipsy appearance, suggesting that it had been on a spree, and that its finial was cocked over its left ear. Of course it made folks regretful. The church decided it unbecoming. It was decided to hav it fixed. The weeks passed and the wind shifted. The south wind saw the sight and regretted that so becoming an ornament should go out of shape. It evidently decided upon immediate repairs, and it puffed its cheeks and gave a mighty blow, so quietly and so to the exact limit that it blew the finial back to its direct perpendicular, and lo! in the morning and the evening of the same day the finial was as straight as a schoolmaster. People now crane their necks to look at it, and they say, "A miracle."

JOHN SWINTON says: "I notice that Walt Whitman, the aged American rhapsodist, is again using his brain and pen, notwithstanding his paralysis of nearly twenty years, that was brought on by his services in the military hospitals during the war. Those services hav recently been slighted, and that unfairly. I can testify that for at least three years he spent nearly his whole time day and night in waiting on the wounded soldiers in the hospitals around Washington. I often saw him there, and I must say that his devotion to his work was unsurpassable. I hav not yet forgotten one of the nights in which I accompanied him on his rounds through a hospital filled with those wounded "young Americans" whose praise he afterward chanted. There was a triple line of cots, and every cot had its tenant. On every face, however wan, there was a smile of welcome when Whitman appeared, and his presence seemed to light up the ward. They called him, whispered to him, gazed at him, touched his hand, or embraced him. He did things for them which doctor or nurse could not well do. To one he gave a few words of cheer; for another he wrote a letter home; for another he would offer to go an errand; to others he would giv an orange, a pipe with tobacco, a few comfits, a postage stamp, or a sheet of paper with envelope; to another he gave a manly farewell kiss. The lights had gleamed for hours in the hospital that night before he left it, and as he passed out of the door there were voices calling, 'Walt! Walt! Come again!' His little basket, which had been filled with all sorts of odds and ends for the stricken men, was empty. Such services he rendered until the close of the war, when he was prostrated by hospital malaria. It is not necessary to admire Walt Whitman's poetry, but every one who knew his work for the soldiers in the hospitals must praise it as warmly as Abraham Lincoln did."

A WRITER from the Sioux country on the subject of the medicin men, says: "The queer resemblances between the Indians and those Hebrew bands of whose history the Old Testament is a record, hav often been pointed out, but the writer has never seen attention called to the similarity of certain of the Hebrew incidents to the common practices of Indian medicin men. In their early history the Hebrew leaders were continually holding converse with the almighty. They went apart from their followers, up in mountains or in secret places, and talked with Jehovah. That is precisely what the medicin men do to-day, or pretend to do. Every man who knows the Indians knows that during all this messiah craze the medicin men of the various tribes hav with great formality prepared to talk with Gitche-Manitou, or whatever they happen to call the good spirit. In some tribes they hav built little wick-i-ups of saplings and leaves, and hav gone into them and held conversations that were audible, though not intelligible, to the red men listening outside. The savages hav heard the medicin man's voice and then hav heard the voice of some other person replying to him in a jargon they could not unravel. In other tribes the medicin men hav merely reported having held such conversations, precisely as the Israelitish leaders did. It is not for us to say that the grounds for such reports of the words of the almighty were as slight in one case as the other, but it is true that the Indians hav believed that their priests hav really believed such conversation took place. Those who hav followed Sitting Bull's history know that his tribe hav long been divided as to his power. One contingent has held that his 'medicin' is no good, by which they mean that if he ever had genuin power to converse with spirits that power has left him. This often happens. Medicin men hav their day and their decline, and he is a very sagacious Indian who can keep up aith in his ministrations for many years at a time or until he dies."

Communications.

Cardinal Fallacies of Gnosticism.

Like some bewildered slave that Mockery has throned and crowned.

Inferences from the analyses of subjects extrinsically simple and contemptible from familiarity, as well as the subjects themselvs, are difficult of presenting in a manner not intimativ of the ridiculous. In exposing these fallacies in a simple, homelike way, without attempted style or diction—for the best of all reasons—or verbal mystifications, I ask the reader to eliminate as far as possible all tincture of prejudice in favor of ingrained ideas, and in that court of final appeal, the intellect sublime, impartially test the fundamental validity founding the arguments. My difficulty is to state a thesis so clear and simple that its meaning be unequivocal. And this, unlike the difficulty of the technologist struggling merely to render his idioms to current terms, is a transcending one; for not only does ambiguity lurk in verbal combinations, but it is, that an individual word may—and does—symbolize different meanings to different minds. As for constructing a self-evident thesis, that indeed is an honor I should rather decline, if only for the reason—though there is a greater—that the question, Self-evident to whom? is an irresistible one. I do not claim that words can exhaust the possibilities of thought. I do not admit that thoughts may coextend the Illimitable, the boundlessness of fact, but conversely contend that were that possible, and should the absolute truth of certain ultimate conclusions herein reached be eternally formulated, millions of minds would itch to refute the reasoning, though undoubtedly the refutations would prove mutually obliterativ. I fear not, however, that the reason of man can show Agnosticism as here interpreted, inconsistent with itself, as I attempt to show of Gnosticism.

A consideration of the first fallacy is incidental to an exposé of the second. The second numbers its exponents by hundreds of millions, and is all but universal. The third is in decline. Under the magnetism of reason its postulates sweep to oblivion like days of old, but still the name of its victims is Legion, although the inference is that they will eventually be reduced to a mere contingent, whose name in turn—to use a figure of speech—will be "Dennis," and the fallacy itself be considered an absurdity outlying the vortex of human credulity.*

FIRST FALLACY: LITERAL OMNIPOTENCE.

Do you believe in an Omnipotent God? The reservation of many in this century, capable of maintaining a reserve, will be in effect that they do. And it is a fact, they do.

But it is also a fact that their reflection on the subject has been extremely limited; for belief in literal Omnipotence is an impossibility of correctly revised thought. The idea that any power existing or imaginary could at the present time change the true history of the past is unbelievable, even unthinkable.

This alone destroys literal omnipotence, and were not such exiguity unfashionable (I am a slave to fashion) I might pass to the next fallacy, but,

> 'Twas ever thus from childhood's hour,
> I've seen my fondest hopes decay.

Familiar impossibles, such as the limitation of space, etc., being stereotyped in countless philosophies, I refrain from piling on the agony, but suggest the potential question, applicable only to those professing belief in a literally Omnipotent power: "Can that power construct a thing so heavy that he could not raise it?" By which the one questioned is so involved that if he answer affirmativly he tacitly admits that the power could not raise it, or if he answer negativly, which is often done, he not only concedes that in this particular the power is impotent, but he also implies that that which is easy to almost any boy is impossible to Omnipotence. Now what do you think of the question? Perhaps you wickedly think, damn! or expletivs of similar eloquence. If so, then between your free phraseology and my own way of thinking there is positiv similitude. But if you are my long-faced Christian friend, then intuitivly and empirically I know your opinion, and reply, "No, you are mistaken; the mutually destructiv answers of intelligent people prove the question neither pueril nor captious." It may to the casualist seem frivolous or a play on words, but when retentivly held in reflection, a competent reasoning faculty realizes it to be one of the deepest of thoughts, involving as it does the idea of self-transcendency.

Knowing by experience the vigor of adverse contentions that the words "self-transcendency" represent no real thought, but simply imply unquestionable impossibility, it may not be impertinent to ask: Does the word self present no thought? Does transcendency convey none? Or is it exclusivly the resulting combine that not only fails to materialize into one of the subtlest, or if you will, one of the vaguest of ideas, but which expresses absolutely no thought? And if it does stand for nothing in your mind, how do you know that other minds are so constituted as not to perceive a meaning? Or, if it represents nothing, how can you know it to be impossible? What is impossible? It must be something of which you predicate impossibility. It will not do; your assumption implicitly assumes what it ostensibly repudiates. Some contend that though not meaningless, the idea of self-transcendency is so simple that the accomplishment of what it means is readily discernible as an absolute impossibility. If this be so, then the fallacy of literal omnipotence is manifest and my main object effected, while the collateral issue, my position that the idea of self-transcendency constitutes one of those ultimate reflections bounding the limitations of intelligence, must be seriously affected. I will not reinforce the argument against omnipotence, which (the omnipotence I mean, not the argument) was from the first too weak to be interesting. "But," let me ask, "is it so palpably obvious that self-transcendency is impossible?" All analogy as far as I know, without exception, suggests causation; and reflection finds no rest but in the generalization of a "First Cause." From the fathomless intellect of a Herbert Spencer, back through the vista of ages, the necessity of committing ourselvs to the hypothesis of a "First Cause" has been recognized. Concerning the Ultimate Cause, Mr. Spencer uses these approved words: "Thus the First Cause must be in every sense perfect, complete, total; including within itself all power and transcending all law. Or to use the established word, it must be absolute." Now I leave it to Unadulterated Logic, if self-transcendency and everything else may not be included in this unlimited power. If it be a law that a power cannot transcend itself, and if the Transcending Cause, as being above that law, can transcend all law, then may it not transcend itself; thus proving the law relativ, not absolute? But in consigning to hades this abominable intricacy, I extend a cordial invitation to anyone to demonstrate or even intimate how he knows that self-transcendency is impossible. And after if not before accomplishing this, he may realize that self-transcendency is not to be utterly sneezed at. The validity of my argument being dependent on neither the possibility nor impossibility of self-transcendency, I propose not, dogmatically or otherwise, to establish nor intricate on which side of this highly practical question lies the balance of probability or certainty of truth. This the magnates of Gnosticism may arbitrate to the eternal advantage of admiring millions, and bearing in mind that in the solution of complex, highly abstract problems, the majority are generally wrong, they may logically and complacently conclude that if they decide the reverse of what they religiously believe, they will probably decide rightly.

Although the "potential" question is unanswerable, answers are generally attempted. Here are specimens taken from life: Mr. L. answers "Yes"—Mr. B., "No." Mr. H. B. answers, "Yes, the Omnipotent could construct a box so heavy that he could not raise it—he would not desire to, but he can do all things he wishes." Mr. R. answers, "No, he could not, he would not wish to; but he can do all he desires to." Without showing the folly of such replies, the question might simply be put: Can the power construct anything he could not raise even should he desire to? Mr. Gambetti answers, "Yes, he could construct something of incalculable weight and then make himself too weak to raise it." "O domine deus speravi in te," or words to that effect.

One of the least palpable answers is that the question itself is absurd for introducing the unthinkable idea, self-transcendency. But this answer destroys literal omnipotence, for if a power cannot transcend itself, it cannot do literally all things. And as for the question being absurd for introducing the idea, the clinching rejoinder is that as the question applies only to those professing belief in literal omnipotence, it is they who implicitly and primarily introduce the idea by maintaining literal omnipotence which must include self-transcendency. And of them it is evident that by the continued recognition of the omnipotence theory which they hav destroyed and which therefore does not exist, they themselvs perform the feat of self-transcendency. For first they postulate literal omnipotence. Then in contending that the question is absurd for introducing the self-transcendency idea, they imply a belief that self-transcendency is impossible and so annihilate their own unexpressed theory of the possibility of all things, which is an obvious corollary to their expressed doctrin of literal omnipotence. Now a theory annihilated is one that does not exist, a non-existence. And yet they continue to maintain this theory. A theory can only be maintained as existing. So they maintain the existence of a non-existence. If this is not an abnegation of sanity, a transcendency of self and of all laws of thought (I appeal to high heaven): what is transcendency?

SECOND FALLACY: CO EXISTING OMNIPOTENCE AND VOLITION.

As literal omnipotence is literally unthinkable, let omnipotent and omnipotence signify all supposable power. And in this sense: Do you believe in an omnipotent being? Do you believe in the reality of sin? Nine hundred and ninety-nine of a thousand in this century, capable of an opinion, will answer yes to both. And yet they are mutually exclusiv beliefs, and whoso answers both affirmativly transcends himself. If an Omnipotent exists, sin and volition do not, and vice versa. You doubt this, or rather you know its falsity and demand a sustaining demonstration? It is simple. And yet, I ask your concentration, not superficially to the argumentation, but applying the principles of ratiocination, and at least mitigating recalcitrant prejudice dispassionately refute the reasoning—or verify it. An Omnipotent must be omniscient,* at least in regard to the present and the future.

Now it is a fact of which the negation is Unthinkable, that if the future be known, then the future must transpire exactly as known. Therefore, if it be known (to human or divine consciousness), mark! I use the most potential word in the language, if, it be known that a man will commit a certain act, then it is a fact absolutely susceptible of no simpler demonstration that he must commit that act, for if he does not it would be evident that it was not known that he would. For the sake of iteration I say, if he does not commit the act, would not that (I appeal to high Omniscience) prove positivly that it was not known that he would commit it? But if it be-known that he will commit the act, then you must perceive that it must transpire that he shall or will commit it. And if it must transpire that he shall commit it, then he-must commit-it. There must be no volition in the case. And if there be no volition, there must be no sin. [Now, I do not expect a Gnostic to see this; it would be asking too much. To him the reasoning is nothing more than metaphysical mud. Thus are we diametrically constituted, and what to one seems the most palpable truth, to another is veritable trash.]

Naturally, by reversion, it is demonstrable that if there be sin there must be volition, and if volition there must be no omniscience, and if no omniscience there must be no Omnipotent being.

IS THE LOGIC EVADIBLE?

If, in spite of the logic, you endeavor to conceive volition with omniscience, you are brought up quickly. The moment you attempt to reason, that "though it may be known how a man will decide, he may (in some indefinit way) arrive at that decision by the exercise of his own volition," you are checked by the thought from which there is no escape and which overpowers all other pertinent thoughts, namely, if it be known how a mind will decide, then such decision is imperativ.

It is impossible to imagin volition compatible with omniscience even as attributes of one and the same being, human or divine. Assume a divinity endowed with prescience. Then relativ to his own future he must be already fully cognizant. And if his future is known, it must transpire exactly as known, and so he must be incapable of volition. All attempt to conciliate must, from the very nature of thought, be preëminently invalid and equally vicious. True! you may think the man may hav shuffled on this mortal coil with sin, a mortgage of profoundest hell, on his soul. But if he be so conditioned, you may paste it in your hat that it is no sin of his, notwithstanding the theologic dogma, "original sin;" for it must hav been gratuitously conferred (the irony of the word) upon him either by chance or by design. No other hypothesis is thinkable except that fetal existence may be a sentient, responsible phase of being; and even then the idea of preëxisting knowledge renders void all attempts to conciliate. Those who would go back beyond this period, that is, previous to fetal life, are reminded that the existence of anything there even analogous to mind, to say nothing of sentiency or responsibility, is but a vague, destitute theory, and even were it a truth it would not conciliate omniscience and volition. Consciousness retrograding through cycles of conceivable time must ultimately admit the possibility of but four apparently distinct hypotheses: either omniscience preëxisted the intent to sin—or vice versa—or they had simultaneous beginning—or they always were. Analyses of these alternativs, possessing a metaphysical interest only, are omitted. From which it may seem that the argument, not being fully exhaustiv, fails to establish conclusivly, as absolutely certain, what it undertakes to prove. To which the answer, that it does logically establish the proposition against all arguments unprochronistic to fetal life; which is all that was attempted. The idiosyncrasy which would seek to harmonize omnipotence and volition by improvising a hypothetical intent to sin, further

---

* The word Gnostic and its derivativs I use in their natural etymological and traditional import. Thus, a Gnostic must define himself, one who knows. An Agnostic defines him, one who believes he knows. A Gnostic defines an Agnostic, one who professes to know nothing. An Agnostic defines himself, one who believes the human mind incapable of absolute knowledge. These definitions are indorsed by an eminent and impartial authority, Dr. Paul Carus, one opposed alike to Gnosticism and its antithesis.

*If literally all knowledge is not supposable, let omniscient refer only to all supposable knowledge.

back than embryonic existence, it is not within the present scope to refute. And as for establishing anything with absolute certainty, the metaphysical mind realizes nothing with more vividness than the futility of such an attempt. Indeed the theory of certainty, being the cardinal fallacy of Gnosticism, is explicitly exposed in the following section.

THIRD FALLACY: HUMAN CERTAINTY.

How vast is the proportion of those who profess and really believe that they know certain things! It is indicativ of the generalness of the fallacy that an Agnostic is popularly considered an eccentric. But as Sir William Hamilton has said: "How indeed it could ever be doubted that thought [itself] is only of the conditioned, may well be deemed a matter of profoundest admiration."

Now we all know or should know that the word "know" is twofold in its principal interpretation; the duality consisting of, first, a positiv, absolute knowledge transcending all conceivable contradiction; and second, of a relativ degree of certainty (?) or assurance. Here language is at fault, the fault of imperfect development. De Quincey says, "All languages tend to clear themselvs of synonyms as intellectual culture advances, the superfluous words being taken up and absorbed by new shades and combinations of thought evolved in the progress of society." Which is very true. But in this case the desynonymizing process is dispensable, and in fact a synonym or independent word is quite in order. The not-so-new-as-you-might-imagin shades and combinations of thought are too much for the one word "know," and a change may be advisable, not from any difficulty of discerning between the radically different meanings, but because this will not generally be done. If we reserve the word to convey its primary meaning, then some other word should be used to indicate degree of assurance. In the latter sense it may truly be said that we know, and even the Agnostic may and does use the word with perfect consistence. But in this section, except in italicized instances, I use the word "know," and for consistency, its derivativ, "knowledge," though the latter in the early evolution of language became synonymous with "learning," in their primary, legitimate sense, which implies absolute certainty. And let us, avoiding the supersensible, consider from the precincts of reason this startling Gnostic theory that certainty is an attribute of human consciousness. It amounts of course to an implicit (almost explicit) denial of an omnipotent being. For if a man knows a thing, it is evident that he cannot be mistaken about it, and if there be even one point upon which the creator cannot make a man mistaken, he is not omnipotent. (A common objection which seems too vulgar to mention is that though the creator could, it does not follow that he would make one mistake. Upon which the stricture, neither does it follow that he would not, but as he "could," it follows, one may be mistaken, consequently cannot be certain.) Consider the case in which a man explicitly deceived as to the ultimacy of immediate intuition and accepting the unsophisticated testimony of consciousness to self-existence as unquestionable, claims to Know that he exists. If a man know that he exists, then besides knowing that it is impossible for the Eternal to make him mistaken on that point, he must also hav to a certain extent a knowledge of the future. For he must know that on a certain day, on all future days in fact, the Semipotent will not, cannot, truthfully demonstrate that he the man was mistaken. Now a knowledge of the future, notwithstanding we are accustomed to think we possess it to a limited extent, is not less than a divine attribute, even if it be possible to omnipotence any more than self-transcendency. So we see that he who claims to know that he exists, not only implicitly denies the existence of an Omnipotent, but also, by implication, by assuming a partial knowledge of the future, sets himself in glory above his peers, a God or more-than God.

Here is an ostensible disproof of the certainty theory. It is metaphysical and consequently, also inconsequently, not so good as our own proximate demonstration that will shortly be sprung on the persisting truth seeker.

The fundamental condition of all consciousness emphatically insisted upon by Mr. Mansel in common with Sir Wm. Hamilton and others, is the antithesis of subject and object. But now what is the corollary from this doctrin as bearing on the consciousness of self? The mental act in which self is known, implies, like every other mental act, a perceiving subject and a perceived object. If, then, the object perceived is self, what is the subject that perceives? Or if it is the true self that thinks, what other self can it be that is thought of? Clearly a true cognition of self implies a state in which the knowing and the known are one, in which subject and object are identified; this Mr. Mansel rightly holds to be the annihilation of both.

W. W. CARRINGTON.

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

Looking Forward.

Mr. Bellamy's book entitled, "Looking Backward," is certainly a valuable and interesting endeavor to incline the reader's mind into a reflectiv state on the past history of the world and also its possible future. Happily, published histories are a great aid to the thoughtful. The world has passed through many strange events and epochs. The despotism of priestcraft and superstition is passing away and greatly modified. It is no longer possible, as of old, in New England, for a man sawing asunder a barrel to produce two tubs to be burnt as a wizard. The printed histories of the past show the timidity and caution of our ancestors in popular developments. But slowly the wave of unfoldment has been surging onward like the mighty ocean on the shores of time, and we are constantly called to witness the new, present fact, in place of the misty conjecture. The awful pealing thunders of Horeb and Sinai hav been toned down to be useful in lighting our darkened highways and byways, and the question now is, "What next?"

Our Bible societies in the issuance of their book of conundrums are finding ready employment for its army of priests, which the unfoldments of science are so gently lowering down to common sense that they will hardly know when they touch bottom.

Looking backward, history shows too plainly the wanderings and strugglings of man on the untrodden surface of creation, but alas! none can imagin the untried bogs and pitfalls into which humanity has yet to stumble.

With our lawmakers it is under consideration whether hypnotism is not a dangerous influence in the hands of unscrupulous operators. It is thought possibly many are now in our state prisons who hav been hypnotically impressed to commit crimes. The writer knew a powerful operator who could impress his sensitiv, male or female, to do most absurd things and express themselvs ridiculously while under insensible control. He could also leave an impression on the mind of his subject after he or she was supposed to be brought back into their normal or natural state.

On one occasion I was present when he made his sensitiv (a gentleman) entertain the assembled company with a comical impression. He impressed the sensitiv to cast his eyes upward and gaze on the ceiling, which he did, and suddenly burst out laughing. He was asked by the operator what he saw to laugh at. "To laugh at? To see a clergyman walking on the ceiling head downward." "Well, this beats me! Now, how is that done?" "Simply enough," said the operator; "on the principle of suction—suction, as a common house-fly walking." "Well, I'm blamed if he is not one of the greatest suckers I hav ever seen! But then, he is a fair specimen." Who will deny that hypnotism is a dangerous and insidious power in the hands of unscrupulous people?

D. BRUCE.

A Remarkable Document.

The friends of Mr. Ezra H. Heywood, who was convicted last June upon a trumped-up and entirely groundless charge of "obscenity," hav prepared a petition for his pardon, which will be presented to the president of the United States early in the present month. This petition is signed by about fourteen hundred persons, many of whom are in earnest sympathy with Mr. Heywood in his efforts to purify and enlighten his fellow-men.

From Princeton, the town of Mr. Heywood's residence, come petitions signed by the chairmen of both the Republican and Democratic town committees, as well as by ex-postmasters of Princeton Center, East Princeton, and Princeton Depot, and the present postmaster of one of the Princeton offices. Many of the signers on the Princeton petition are, or hav been, persons holding office of trust in that town. This petition contains also the names of the librarian, the dentist, the physician, and the heaviest tax-payer. This last ought to hav great weight with the powers that be, in such a case. The petition from Rhode Island bears the name of Elizabeth B. Chase, who is known far and wide for her anti-slavery, woman-suffrage, Prohibition, and other reform labors. It also bears the name of the treasurer of Brown University. From Connecticut a petition comes headed by Rev. John Kemball, whose services to humanity are too well known to need mention. On a petition sent from England is the name of our own beloved countrywoman Elizabeth Cady Stanton and her daughter Mrs. Baltch. Annie Besant, so long associated with Charles Bradlaugh, and who, with him, contested the right to publish and sell "Fruits of Philosophy," is also a signer of the English petition. The petition from Scotland is headed by a clergyman of the established church, Rev. John Glass, of Old Greyfriars, Edinburgh, one of the oldest churches in Scotland. The Canada petition is headed by Robert C. Adams, president of the Canadian Secular Union. The signers of the petition in Boston and vicinity represent various intellectual activities and personalities, and the unity of purpose expressed in their signatures is a marked feature of the petition. Here we see the names of well-known antislavery workers who gave to New England a higher sense of morality than was conceived of before their times and work, and whose integrity of character and purpose none will question. To-day nothing swerves them from their "righteous convictions," and in this spirit they hav affixed their signatures. The petition has been circulated in the seminary at Belleview, N. J., and is signed by the teachers there. We note also the names of Andrew Jackson Davis, a man universally known throughout the United States; Louis Prang, whose art work has done so much for the adornment of the humbler homes of our country; Rev. Alonzo A. Miner, the venerable and clear-headed father of Universalism in New England; the venerable William Henry Burr, of Washington, who cast his first vote for William Henry Harrison in 1840; George N. Stearns, of Chicopee, Mass., who, when he was United States district attorney in Boston, refused to be made a catspaw to do the dirty work of the Vice Society; James Redpath, T. B. Wakeman, E. B. Foote, Jr., M.D., Hugh O. Pentecost, Lydia Eve Blackstone, and others equally well known.

Judge Carpenter, who imposed the vindictiv sentence upon Mr. Heywood, on being told of the number and character of the signers of this petition, is reported to hav said in his Podsnapian way, "Oh, that doesn't amount to anything. You can get anybody to sign petitions." But Judge Carpenter formed his judgment about this as hastily and inconsiderately as he did about other matters, and he did not stop to reflect that such a petition in such a case could come only from those who were familiar with Mr. Heywood's work and to a greater or less extent recognized the utility of it.

Moreover, a number of the signers hav taken pains, in addition to merely signing the petition, to express over their signatures their views of the outrage of which Mr. Heywood has been made the victim. Mr. William J. Bowditch, of Brookline, Mass., who was present throughout the trial, says, "His trial was really a farce. His punishment has been sufficient, even if he had really done wrong." Israel Betz, M.D., of Oakville, Pa., writes, "I hav read Mr. Ezra H. Heywood's Word, a monthly paper published by him, since its first issue in 1872, and hav a file since its first issue which I price very highly. I wish that I understood it better. This paper is one of the most unique publications that America has yet produced. While Mr. Heywood's ideas of literary expression may be at variance with prevailing standards, yet I see nothing more harmful nor obscene in that fact than I do in medical journals or occasionally in the daily press. This paper, to my knowledge, has a very small circulation, which would be the reverse were it devoted to catering to prurient tastes. I speak as a medical practitioner of over twenty years' standing, of that branch of the profession known as the regular." Thomas Palmer, D.D.S., of Fitchburg, Mass., writes, "I hav known Mr. E. H. Heywood from boyhood. He has always been a radical reformer, and may hav published some things you and myself might not think proper in his paper. The paper has only a circulation among reformers who know how to judge of reformatory movements. Mr. Heywood is the last man who would publish anything injurious to youth. I hav always read his paper, and know all that has been printed, and it has always been to establish some reform he has been interested in and not for evil purposes—far from it. Hoping this petition may be received favorably, etc." C. M. A. Twitchell, of 319 Washington street, Boston, writes, "That the petitions being sent to Washington may move the heart of our president to an act of justice toward a noble man is my sincere prayer." Dr. C. H. Sims, of Charlestown, Mass., writes below a long list of signatures that he was instrumental in procuring: "The above names comprise some of the best citizens of Charlestown. Most of them liv within a few blocks of the prison and must endure the thought that a lifelong advocate of physical, mental, and moral freedom is suffering and serving an unjust sentence so near their comfortable homes." Mr. Theodore D. Weld, an early Abolitionist, now eighty-eight years of age, of Hyde Park, Mass., says, "In writing my name to this petition, which I do with all my heart, I wish to say that I do not remember to hav read any of the writings of Mr. E. H. Heywood upon the subject of sex. True, for many years my ears hav been dinned with the clamor against them as grossly obscene and even pandering openly to lust. Though not personally acquainted with Mr. Heywood, yet some of my dearest friends know him intimately (especially my beloved, lifelong friend and brother, the late Elizur Wright). From them I learn that the life of Mr. Heywood has always been a model of personal purity, and that the popular hue and cry against his writings is but the clamor of a mawkish prudery claiming to preside par excellence over the morals of the public."

Mrs. Abbie Knapp, of Dowagiac, Mich., writes, "From my standpoint no pardon can atone for the injustice done those two men, Harman and Heywood."

In the face of such testimony from such sources the canting cry of "obscenity" operates like the boomerang upon those who set it in motion. The brightest and best of earth's children see no obscenity in Mr. Heywood, nor would such creatures as Judge Carpenter see any such thing, were it not that the prurient fancies of their own foul minds are reflected back to them from Heywood's purity.

E. W. CHAMBERLAIN.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President. . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. W STAUFFER, Vice-President, 1516 Montgomery ave., Phila., Pa.
J. O BENTLEY, Vice-President, . 812 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Few Words from Miss Craddock.

I feel sorry that our good friend, Lucy N. Colman, whose words of praise and encouragement to me at Portsmouth I hav treasured with gratitude, should feel called upon to criticise me as she has done in last week's TRUTH SEEKER. But realizing as I do her unswerving fidelity to truth, I feel sure that she will thank me for correcting one or two misapprehensions on her part.

Mrs. Colman seems to think that "the president and secretary, at the congress at Portsmouth, showed . . . a determination to ignore as directors Messrs. T. B. Wakeman and Dr. Foote." If we did this by word or deed, it is news to both of us, I think. I feel certain that even Mr. Wakeman will bear me out in saying that we assured him, over and over again, that no slight was intended, either to him or Dr. Foote, and that he had no cause to feel aggrieved. Had the president wished to slight Mr. Wakeman as a director, is it reasonable to suppose he would hav called him to the chair? Had I wished to slight Mr. Wakeman as a director, is it likely that I would so strenuously hav insisted that Mrs. Colman's unauthorized and unparliamentary method of electing Mr. Wakeman should be set aside, and the motion to elect him put by the chair, in due parliamentary form, so that there should be no hitch afterward about his election? Had I wished to "ignore" Mr. Wakeman "as a "director," here would hav been a splendid chance for me. I could hav allowed matters to proceed, unchecked by a call for order; and at the close of the congress, Mr. Wakeman could hav been coolly informed that he was not legally elected, and hav been "ignored" then! Instead of that, and out of an honest desire to save future embarrassments on this score to Mr. Wakeman, I insisted that Mrs. Colman's action in the matter be set aside, and the motion to elect Mr. Wakeman be formally "put" by the chair, and not by a member on the floor of the house. Neither in this, nor in any other action of mine at Portsmouth or elsewhere, has Mr. Wakeman or Dr. Foote the slightest cause to feel aggrieved by hostility on my part.

Mrs. Colman seems to think that the corresponding secretary has been remiss in her duty, in that she has not been "going out, appointing meetings, and lecturing" to any extent. I would respectfully call Mrs. Colman's attention to the following from article ix of our constitution:

> The corresponding secretary's duty shall be to keep the records and complete lists of life and annual members, and also full minutes of the board of directors and of the executiv committee; prepare and transmit to the newspapers of the country items of interest relating to the work of state Secularization; keep a full list of auxiliary societies, and conduct such correspondence, under the direction of the president, as usually pertains to such office, and to make a condensed annual report to the society of the business of the year.

It will be observed that there is not a word in the above relativ to the duty of the corresponding secretary as a lecturer. Nevertheless, in addition to her address at Portsmouth, she has three times spoken before the Friendship Liberal League of Philadelphia, and once before the Newark Liberal League of Newark, N. J. She also has a standing invitation to address the adult class of the Philadelphia Unitarian church of which she is a member—an invitation which would hav been accepted long since, but for the cropping up of this field secretary difficulty, with its attendant correspondence, which has taken up much of her outside time. But, however willing the corresponding secretary may be to help along matters by extra work as a lecturer, it is unwise for her to attempt it. No one person can attend properly to the office duties of a corresponding secretary and do field work too; one or the other must be slighted. I am happy to say that the interests reached by my correspondence are more and more widespread each month. We need some one in the field, and we need that some one badly; but whoever is assigned to that work ought to be in the field all the time, devoting his whole energy to the American Secular Union interests.

The field-secretary agitation has been surprisingly beneficial in one direction, at any rate. It has stirred up in one or two of the Liberal lecturers a fear that our appointment of a field secretary may leave them out in the cold as regards audiences (a groundless fear, as I hav shown in previous articles). It has also caused them to remember suddenly that such a society as the American Secular Union exists, and to hint that, for a consideration, they might be willing to renew their allegiance to us. This is eminently proper on their part, and we devoutly pray that our little leaven may work until it has leavened the whole lump of the lecture field, and the lecturers shall one and all be brought back to the true fold, where they may grow in grace eternally.

I cannot understand why Freethinkers should think it such a heinous offense for one of their number to treat a churchman in public with consideration. The cause of Freethought is so certain of ultimate success—the cause of orthodoxy is so certainly doomed and is losing ground every day so unmistakably—that it would seem only charity to let the poor fellows down easily, and not wound their self-respect any more than one can help. Don't you suppose that, down in the heart of the majority who fight for orthodoxy, there cannot help being a vague perception of the silliness or the fraud of the superstition which they hav been taught at their mothers' knees to cherish as their life? In some few cases, I know, they believe through and through the orthodox principles for which they contend; but I am fain to think, from my own experience, that these cases are rare. Moreover, these are not the people whom any of us are trying to interest in state Secularization. It is the great majority to whom I refer above whom we hope to reach, and who would gladly walk with us into our clearer light, if we did not frighten them away at the outset by our rude jeers at their silly little superstitions—superstitions which we can trust them to throw away for themselvs, as soon as they look at them in the open sunshine. "Speaking the truth in love"—do you not agree with me, dear friends, that this is really the better way?

I cannot do better than close this article with a brief extract from a letter written me by an outsider who has seen something of our platform methods. As the letter is a confidential one, I do not feel at liberty to giv the name, but will say that it comes from a speaker of large experience:

> Could your lecturers confine themselvs to this one point [state Secularization], and permit their Agnosticism, if it appear at all in their public lectures, to do so only as a secondary affair, I think that they could accomplish more with church people than at the present time; and these are the ones who ought to be reached, for they are the persons who are in the dark on this subject. All Freethinkers agree that church and state should be kept separate. Hence there is very little satisfaction in lecturing to such people alone; and, unless we shall meet the church people in such a way as to obtain their confidence, we cannot hope to benefit them as we should like to.

IDA C. CRADDOCK, Corr. Sec. A. S. U.
Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 9, 1891.

Copy of Letter from Mr. T. B. Wakeman to Dr. R. B. Westbrook.

No. 93 NASSAU ST., N. Y., Dec. 31, 290 E.M.

My Dear Doctor: I hav your notice for a board meeting next Sunday at 2 P.M. The inclosed card will show you that I must speak at that time in Brooklyn and cannot be present.

So, I will tell you in short what I think ought to be done.

1. The clause I sent you should go into the pamphlet in substance, so that the federativ character of the Union and the autonomy of the local and auxiliary societies should be made known. I hav, I think, obtained the assent of the Newark Union to the change of their charter on this basis. This is essential to the future coöperation of societies having different objects and views, and, therefore, vital if we are to hav a future.

2. I think the motion I made as to Mr. Charlesworth should be passed. If the $500 is subscribed, and he left to hustle about the country to get the rest of his support by organizing local unions, he will do it. If other field secretaries are appointed it should be on a similar basis. That is, enough should be given them to earn more by their success in lecturing and organizing.

3. These secretaries or lecturers might be selected by the votes of subscribers to the lecture fund, as Dr. Foote has proposed. This would take the responsibility from the board and leave it with the subscribers. If there are several lecturers they could hav a separate section or state assigned for their work.

4. Where the cause might require several lecturers for special work, as now in Wisconsin, these could be specially selected and sent there to agitate, lecture, and organize.

Thus, if every lecturer knew that he would get a certain sum, and so much more for every local union he organized, or lecture delivered, from the board, or from the audience, he would hav the strongest motiv to work; and those interested in the cause would like to help nominate such lecturers and contribute to the fund to keep them, and as many as possible of them, in the field. I think this plan will obviate more objections, and get us free from more difficulties, than any other. Hoping for harmony and success from your deliberations, and wishing you and our diligent secretary the happiest New Year, I am,

Yours sincerely, T. B. WAKEMAN.

MR. EDITOR: Here is my letter to President Westbrook, which he has, at my request, returned to me for publication. It is the only utterance I hav made on the subject, and it only inferentially refers to Mr. Watts, whose name has never been named or come up before the board at all, unless there may hav been a meeting at which I was not present. The president was, therefore, entirely off of the truth in printing that there was a "strenuous opposition" to the appointment of Mr. Watts on my part. I am a friend and admirer of Watts, if he has one anywhere, and if he is to leave his Canada work (which I should greatly regret) I favor putting him on the same basis as our most favored and popular lecturers in the United States.

More than that would not be fair, and I do not believe he would ask it. My letter points out how that could be done, either with or without the appointment of Mr. Charlesworth.

Of this latter gentleman I am no special advocate. But as he was recommended by the congress I think he should be appointed, but on a plan that could be extended to others, who hav stood the brunt of the battle in the States for many a year. As to the objections to Mr. Charlesworth made by the president before the board, and, therefore, included in my resolution for his appointment as matters to be obviated, I believe they would disappear on a fair examination.

As to his not being competent, he has spoken before our best audiences at Newark, New York, and Boston with great success, and evidently has his heart in the cause, and a head that will keep on learning. He has told me that he is in harmony with and heartily supports our American Secular Union constitution as construed in the first section of my letter, and which our secretary Miss Craddock has promulgated in a very able letter inviting other societies to federate with us in our next congress. He believes it to be the best form of union for America, although different from the English method. If there is no money for him, there is none for anyone else, until it is raised.

There seem to be no good reasons, therefore, why we should overrule the recommendation of the congress.

Of course the majority of the board can do so, and can appoint anyone they choose in any way they choose, or they can do nothing; but they ought not to complain of Dr. Foote and myself, who cannot see our way clear to share the responsibility. I still think that Mr. Charlesworth and Mr. Watts and others should be appointed on the plan stated in my letter; but I am willing to follow in any better way, and deprecate the unnecessary feeling that has been shown in trying to find out that way. Let us settle this as a plain matter of business, and go on with our work. Yours sincerely, T. B. WAKEMAN.

New York, Feb. 4, 291.

The American Secular Union.

The great blowing before and since the last congress, held at Portsmouth, O. (equaled by nothing on earth but Barnum's show), is subsiding and hence allowing the dust to settle, and at the same time permitting the real value of said congress to be taken. It is painfully evident in summing up its results that it is in demonstration of the truth of the criticism which I made on the congress of 1889. The attempt which was made there and then to run the Secular movement through Christian aid and coöperation found by enforced sequence the supreme weakness of such a method. All efforts made by true Secularists, such as those who indorse the Nine Demands in the sense in which they hav been interpreted until recently, must ever result in rousing the bitter antagonism of the Christian; but even under its new compromising method it fails to receive any sanction from the Christian church. When I say Christian church, it must be understood that I do not include either the Unitarians or the Universalists. They antagonize all that is fundamental in the creeds of Christendom, hence a compromise with them may be legitimately considered a questionable transaction. If they are to come on our platform with the stolen dignity of an accredited clergyman of the Christian church, and as a result of that compromise hav the advocates of the Nine Demands of Liberalism gagged out of deference to these assumed clerical dignitaries lest they should be disturbed in the feelings of their sacredness, it is high time to protest against any such compromise which renders it necessary to impose the gag rule, for in doing so we would be on a level with the immaculate dignity of the national congress. A Jew, a rabbi, becoming interested in our Secular movement, is not strange, because it is evident to such that we are necessarily, in the enforcement of our demands, antagonizing Christianity, and so is the Jew. That our platform is ready to hear the speech of those who hav something to say and know how to say it, whether it is in harmony or out of harmony with the Nine Demands, has formerly been considered consistent, without being insulted by the chair. And that our rostrum should remain thus free is what every man and woman in our ranks will maintain, and they will not consent to be gagged. It is also equally true that all speeches made on our platform, when emancipated men and women meet, come within the province of criticism, and must run the gauntlet of the same, and no one shall be allowed to say, Not so, out of deference to some one masquerading in priestly gown or miter, lest the sensitiv ear of such should be pained.

The true method which our platform has recognized in years past is as we hav stated—freedom of speech courted, all tolerated, with equal freedom to use criticism on views spoken, but not on the speaker. We said a year ago that there is no compromise possible with Christianity. We cannot succeed in the realization of our Nine Demands without crossing every chosen line of Christian work and endeavor. Christianity cannot survive a victory won on the line of our Demands. These two forces cannot both be crowned with success. One cannot be taught without denying the other. The presence of the supernaturalism in the one and the rights which that presence enforces, show how utterly false it is to suppose that Christianity could be so stupid as to tolerate or wink at the success of Secularism. Any one of the Nine Demands can win recognition only at the expense of Christianity. The enforcement of all of these Demands would annihilate the Christian religion. What, then, is more presumptuous than the idea that we can in any sense of the word look for, hope for, ask for the coöperation of anyone believing the truth of Christianity? Anyone having gone so far astray from the fold of the church as to offer aid in our cause we gladly take by the hand, but if in the presence of this one among us the gag rule is to be enforced for fear that the tender feelings of this new-comer may be hurt, we only hav to say that the acquisition does not pay the expenditure. There should be no tricks in our trade, no concealed, masked doctrin. The church must know, and no doubt in fact it does know, that our success will be its death-knell. It can render us no help, knowing that our success is the extinction of priestly rule and the dissolving of a hundred thousand of their priestly powers. In the admission of this fact we are to consider the method which has hope for our cause. Since the close of the last congress this question has been somewhat under discussion. But the facts stare us in the face; the history of years lies before us and demands recognition.

And what is the proposition that has a promis of victory, prompted by the wisdom of those having charge of the movement? It is, Send out two paid advocates—and thus, by a reasonable implication, ruin the work which the workers in the field are now doing. Is this not the inevitable result of the witless scheme? Their already paid advocates would hav the chance, by financial necessity, of making all of the engagements, having been paid in advance.

There are many who would willingly engage these paid agents, but who will engage those already in the field. Who will want them when a free lecturer is ready at hand to work for them? They are not inclined to make engagements with lecturers when they hav to foot the bills, when the same results can be had for the asking. But a still more serious objection lies in the fact that free lectures can never raise a people up to the point of independence and self-reliance. A hundred free lectures in Grand Rapids or any other city will never organize a self-supporting society. Any method which tends to lift the responsibility from off the shoulders of the laity is a destructiv method. Their union in sacrificing coöperation with the lecturer is a necessary factor in winning success. If the American Secular Union can raise $5,000, it might be rendered useful in one way—divide it among twenty lecturers in as many states for the purpose of paying the traveling expenses of these several advocates. In this way many places could be reached and societies organized which are not accessible now. With this relief these societies could pay the lecturer for his lectures, and in most cases this would be done, seeing that they do not hav to pay the traveling expenses of the lecturer. But even this, and all other tried methods, without effectiv organization cannot secure the results so much desired. All are convinced of the need of an organization which will secure unity of action. This want has been felt all the way through the history of Freethought in our modern civilization.

I cannot see the promis of success upon any other line than that of effectiv organization, but I know of no organization which secures unity of action, outside of heaven and hell, as the foundation, aside from political organization. I am fully convinced that on this line only can we secure unity of action and hope for ultimate success. The reasons for this conviction force recognition in the following terms. In the first place, all history lends its aid in support of this conviction. Ecclesiastical and political organizations hav persisted through all historical times, and they are the only ones which bid fair to continue. And when Secularism will seek support such as is only found in political organization it will then find itself in position to play the winning card. A political organization founded upon the Nine Demands of Liberalism, to be modified by a national convention as in its wisdom it may deem necessary—a movement like this would tend at once to place us before the public in such an attitude as would giv us existence, recognition, and significance, such as we hav never reached. Political organization means something, and above all things tends very largely to secure unity of action, which we hav never had, and hence through this we become a factor in national politics.

It is a fact which does not admit of a doubt, that in our present isolated individuality we are not worthy of mention seriously by the church. It knows full well that isolated shooting is usually harmless, and is as likely as not to strike within the ranks of the shooters. It is in the unity of force and action that we can hope to command attention and provoke discussion. It is the union of our forces alone which will inspire hope and confidence.

The absence of effectiv organization which is so conspicuous among us, places our cause at such a discount that it can command nothing. The brightest days with the most enchanting outlook, gave way to a succeeding dreadful, gloomy night. View the hope which former years inspired going out in the blackness of a starless sky. Remember Chautauqua, Hornellsville, Rochester, Watkins Glen—twenty or thirty speakers on the platform—many hundreds of attentiv listeners—hall, music, and speakers' expenses all paid cheerfully. What has become of these interested hundreds, these scores of speakers? Why are these splendid gatherings no more? This banner of Freethought which had attractions for thousands and was cheering the hopes of these devotees, is now trailing in the dust not that our cause is not in the heart and life of emancipated men and women, but because we hav not cohesiv organization to hold together the emancipated thousands. The life which throbs in the heart and brain in the presence of treason against liberty, is still our hope, but this is doomed to die without that unity which organization can hold in conservation. The history of the world shows that success in all ages has come through organization. It is true that organization means good or ill, and goes down sometimes amid the rush of multitudes, but when order comes out of ruin it must come through organization. No one need fail in seeing the importance, in the light of all history, of placing ourselvs before the people of this nation in such a light as to force recognition, in that way which will command attention. The mercy which petitioners plead for is not our method. One cheek being smitten, we turn not the other. We demand our rights, and by the eternal fitness of things, and organization, we shall hav them.

Under an organization which was political, we could determin our strength—a strength which does not come of mercy, but a strength which commands. And I am fully of the opinion that under a political banner we could marshal a hundred to one as we now stand. And we may reasonably entertain the hope that those under this organization would hav much less trouble with fear. In our present position we hav many cowards, but with this political organization there will be much less reason for the existence of this very uncommendable trait. And in still another respect we would hav a decided advantage—in the raising of funds. Then we will be able to raise a hundred dollars as easily as one now.

But it will be asked, Will our people be willing to leave their political affiliations and come into such an organization? I think there is no question upon this point. The present unstable condition of political parties is most favorable to such a movement as we hav suggested, and I am of the opinion that many thousands would be only too willing to train under these terms if they only had the chance. I hav talked with many who share our opinions, and all are in favor of such a movement and I hav not met with a single objector. We hav among us as good material in our ranks as there is in the nation, and if the throng could find support among our leaders, and a convention be called in 1892 and a national ticket placed in the field, all would be surprised at the support and strength it would command. I see no other line which has a promis of permanent success. J. H. BURNHAM.

The California Liberal Union.

The third annual congress of the California State Liberal Union was opened in Irving Hall, San Francisco, January 29th. Delegates from all parts of the state were in attendance, the number increasing until during the afternoon session fully one hundred members were present. The morning session was occupied with the address of the president, Samuel P. Putnam. It comprehended a characterization and discussion of the forces now arrayed against political Secularism and an exposition of the deep, underlying principles of philosophical Secularism which govern and move the practical elements of Liberalism and constitute the logical theory of life, morals, and economics.

Upon reassembling for the afternoon session the regular business was begun.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year: President, S. P. Putnam; secretary, Emil S. Lemme; treasurer, W. H. Eastman; executiv committee, Ranford Worthing, of San Diego; Philip Cowan, of Petaluma; W. S. Rogers, of Boulder Creek; S. Littlefield, W. F. Freeman, of Stockton; William Schroeder, of San Francisco; John Robinet, of Nipomo; J. E. Clark, of Los Angeles, and R. H. Schwartz, of San Jose; committee on special Sunday law legislation, G. E. Macdonald, W. H. Eastman, and F. B. Perkins, of San Francisco; A. Schell, of Knight's Ferry; W. F. Freeman, of Stockton, and R. Butterfield and N. D. Goodell, of Sacramento. The list of vice-presidents included the names of a hundred people distinguished in the movement in the various cities and towns in the state.

W. S. Bell on behalf of the proper committee submitted the following resolutions:

1. Resolved, That the Liberals of California, in convention assembled, advocate, as the basic principle of this organization, the total separation of church and state; and as necessary to this end we demand:

1. The equitable taxation of church property in common with other property.

2. The total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in public schools, especially the reading of the Bible.

3. The cessation of all appropriations of public funds for institutions of a sectarian or religious nature.

4. The abolition of chaplaincies in Congress and state legislatures.

5. The discontinuance of the practice of appointment, by the president or governors, of religious festivals, fasts, or Thanksgiving days.

6. The abolition of the religious oath in our courts and all other public places.

Resolved, That we condemn the efforts of the National Reform Association, the Women's Christian Temperance Union, the American Sabbath Union, the churches generally, and all other organizations whatsoever, to secure the passage of a Sunday law in the state of California; and that we pledge ourselvs to oppose all such efforts to the extent of our power and ability.

Resolved, That we also oppose and condemn the attempt now being made to induce the committee having the matter in charge to close the World's Columbian Exposition on Sunday; that we should regard such a course as unjust to exhibitors and visitors alike; as inimical to the best success of the Fair and public good; as an unconstitutional recognition of the claims of the church by the state; as in every respect narrow and puritanical, and calculated to expose America and her people to the just ridicule and contempt of the civilized world.

Resolved, That we recommend that the World's Columbian Exposition to be held in Chicago in 1893 be kept open on every Sunday during its continuance.

Resolved, That we sympathize with all movements of an economic nature calculated to improve the condition of the laboring people—the farmer, the artisan, or the professional man.

Resolved, That in discountenancing a union of church and state we base our opinion not alone upon the unconstitutionality of such a union, but also upon the conviction which we hold that the main dogmas of religion taught by the churches, and which they are endeavoring to incorporate into the organic law of the country, are unproved, unprovable, and demonstrably false; that religions are essentially tyrannical, and as inimical to mental freedom as to civil liberty; that superstition is as mischievous in the mind of the individual as in the statute-books of the nation; and that therefore we are as strongly pledged to aggressiv warfare upon this evil wherever found as when its tenets are enforced upon us in the form of legal enactments.

Resolved, That with reference to the prevailing discussion of the attitude of the American Secular Union toward the dogmas of the church, we regard the Secularization of the people generally as not second in importance to the Secularization of the state. We are of the opinion that avowed neutrality to that which is false is equivalent to tacit indorsement of it, and that in assuming its present position our national organization has surrendered a full half of its power for good. We recommend that the California state Liberal Union defer affiliation with the American Secular Union until the limits to the scope of that organization are enlarged.

A long discussion took place over a resolution sanctioning Nationalism, the Stanford loan bill, and single tax, and it was rejected.

Resolutions of regret were adopted at the death of Vice-Presidents J. W. North, Mrs. R. H. Schwartz, Colonel H. L. Knight, and Mrs. Kate Parke. The Union also deplores the death of J. P. Mendum, and the serious illness of Charles Bradlaugh.

The closing address of the afternoon was delivered by Prof. W. S. Bell. "Where May Justice Be Found?" was the title of his essay. "Justice," he said, "is not made in legislatures or tribunals; it is discovered in the strata of society. Calvinism and its horrors of infinit justice and glory, when viewed by man's reason, is insanity. Is it just for God to tell us to forgiv our enemies while he roasts his in everlasting fire? Is it just to compel men to believe that which they cannot think, to obey in blind credulity where they do not know? Can we love a God whom we never saw? The child asks: 'Who made God?' The mother or father answers: 'Shut up!' Is it just?

The evening session was not strictly under the direction of the Liberal Union, but under that of the Freethought society. The members of both organizations filled the hall to honor the memory of Thomas Paine, the anniversary of whose birth was celebrated. A number of ladies and gentlemen rendered several heartily applauded vocal and instrumental selections and recitations. Dancing followed and continued until a late hour. The speaker of the evening, N. R. Ravlin, paid an eloquent tribute to Paine, reviewing the events of his checkered career, and denouncing in vigorous words the prejudice, bigotry, and intolerance that had prevailed against the "distinguished patriot."—Chronicle.

Resolutions of Sympathy.

At memorial services held by the Chicago Secular Union, February 1st, in honor of the late Josiah P. Mendum and Charles Bradlaugh, the following resolutions were presented by George Schilling, and adopted by the society:

Resolved, That in the death of J. P. Mendum, of Boston, and Charles Bradlaugh, of England, the Liberal world mourns the loss of two of its most pronounced champions of the intellectual progress of mankind.

Resolved, That the Secular Union of Chicago acknowledges their great services to mankind and commends their courage and fidelity to the cause of mental freedom the world over.

Communications.

Christianity and Evolution.

THE APOCRYPHAL GOSPELS AND TRADITION CONCERNING JESUS.

It should never be forgotten by those who wish to form a just estimate concerning Jesus Christ and his teachings that, for the first three centuries after his alleged death, the gospels most frequently referred to, or quoted, were those which are now admitted to be spurious, and which now form part of what are called the Apocryphal Gospels.

In Hone's edition of the Apocryphal New Testament, we hav the Gospel of the Birth of Mary, which, in primitiv ages, was attributed to St. Matthew, and regarded as genuin by many of the ancient Christian sects.

This gospel is to be found in the works of St. Jerome, a father of the church, who died 420 A.D.

"The Gospel of the Protevangelion, or an historical account of the birth of Christ, and the perpetual Virgin Mary, his mother, by James the Lesser, cousin and brother of the Lord Jesus, chief apostle and the bishop of the Christians in Jerusalem." This gospel was generally credited by the early Christians.

Then we hav that remarkable book called the Gospel of the Infancy, which is crammed full of the grossest absurdities and incredibilities, but which writings were regarded as authentic by such eminent fathers of the church as Eusebius, Athanasius, Epiphanius, Chrysostom, etc. In this gospel Jesus is represented to hav said to his mother, while in the cradle: "Mary, I am Jesus the son of God, that word which thou didst bring forth according to the declaration of the angel Gabriel to thee, and my father hath sent me for the salvation of the world."

Knowing baby! It is a pity that in the so-called authentic gospels this information is concealed, and Mary is represented to hav known nothing of the wonderful character of the infant to which she had given birth!

If the gospels be true Mary was the mother of God almighty, and yet she did not know it. She actually had the good sense to think that a child who was born could not hav been eternal; that a child who was less than twenty inches long could not logically be regarded as infinit; that a helpless child that had to be suckled at the breast could not be accurately described as almighty.

So Mary regarded Jesus in the same light as she did the other members of her numerous family.

In the Gospel of the Infancy the swaddling clothes of Jesus healed a boy who was possessed of devils, which flew away in the shape of crows and serpents. Poor devils! or poor crows!

Young Jesus went to school like other good boys, but the first thing he did was to attempt to teach his schoolmaster Greek, and when the master remonstrated by holding up the cane wherewith to punish the audacious boy Jesus coolly afflicted him with palsy so that the weapon fell to the ground. After school hours Jesus used to amuse himself by playing at games with his school companions.

One day he played with Judas at making clay figures and mud pies. Judas made some clay birds; then Jesus did likewise; and the only difference between the two was to be seen in this: that when Judas had completed his birds they lay flat upon the ground, whereas those made by Jesus when complete got up and flew away; which reminds me of the story of an American humorist who said that he painted a picture of a ginger beer bottle so naturally that the cork flew out before he had time to paint the string to hold it in with.

In this same gospel we get a glimpse of Joseph at work. It appears that Joseph was not a competent workman, and on one occasion he received an order from the king of Jerusalem to make a throne, and when Joseph had completed it the throne was found to be four spans short of the appointed measure, so that it was utterly impossible for the king to squeeze his large proportions into the seat thereof.

The king was naturally indignant. What was to be done?

Joseph thought of his boy—or rather Mary's boy. Jesus was called upon the scene and he immediately settled the difficulty by stretching the throne to the size required.

And Christians for centuries stretched their mouths wide enough to swallow this story, until some heretical priest came forward and pronounced it spurious.

Then follows the Gospel of Nicodemus, formerly called the Acts of Pontius Pilate. This book is supposed to hav been fabricated toward the end of the third century. It seems to hav been written for the purpose of vindicating the character of Pontius Pilate from the aspersions of the Jews. The most interesting chapter in the book is that which givs an account of the arrival of Jesus at hell gates and the quarrel between Satan and the prince of hell—most Christians fancy that Satan is the prince of the lower regions, but in that as in most other things they are wrong—as to what should be done with him; in point of fact whether he shall be consigned to the hottest corner, or treated leniently; and the story ends with Jesus seizing the prince of hell, trampling on Death, and taking Adam bodily with him to heaven.

Then follow several spurious Epistles of Paul; the Acts of Paul and Thecla; the Epistles of Clement, and of Barnabas; the Epistle of Ignatius to the Ephesians; and to the Magnesians and many others.

Most of these books were believed in during the first few centuries of the Christian era, and many of them were defended by the most eminent of the early fathers of the church.

The Jews who know Jesus and saw him day by day, believed so little in him that they crucified him. When, however, Jesus had been dead—assuming, of course, that a man of that name who went about proclaiming unpopular doctrins, and who, ultimately, was put to death for sedition, ever lived—when, I say, Jesus had been dead a few years, a number of ignorant and enthusiastic persons, led by Paul and others, went about proclaiming themselvs believers in Jesus, but saying nothing about his supernatural character, and by virtue of their earnestness and enthusiasm won over to them a large number of adherents.

Gibbon tells us that the early Christians were "an ignorant rabble;" and it was from this class that the early disciples of Jesus were won. As an organization, however, Christianity made, comparativly speaking, very little progress until Constantine took it under his protecting wing.

Then Christianity became a power in the state. It then gained a political significance.

But, practically, what did the Christians of the first three centuries succeeding the death of Jesus, know concerning the merits or demerits, the truth or falsehood, of Christian claims? Nothing.

They did not see Jesus perform his alleged wonders; they did not hear his Sermon on the Mount; they did not see him crucified; they did not see him rise from the dead. In fact, they had no more evidence than we hav concerning these things. They believed what they were told; they accepted the stories of tradition without question; they were too ignorant to inquire closely into the evidence, and consequently their belief only served to demonstrate their credulity and not their wisdom.

These stories about Jesus, to use the powerful language of Colonel Ingersoll, "for centuries lived in the open mouth of credulity." The ignorant people were fed on nothing else. It is no wonder, therefore, that in time they became exceedingly enthusiastic about them, and were prepared to go to any length in their support of what appeared to them in their uncultivated condition to be palpable truths.

ARTHUR B. MOSS.

To the Brotherhood of Moralists.

I hav received several invitations from you to join the Brotherhood, and here I wish to giv some of my principal reasons for not complying with these requests.

I am not an Anarchist, Communist, superstitionist, religionist, immoralist, or Spiritualist.

This looks as though I would make an acceptable member, yet I am more obnoxious to this Brotherhood than any of these, for one good reason—that is, I know too much. I know that people liv after they go through so-called death, as well as I know they liv here. And I also know that every honest person with ordinary sense, by using the necessary means, can know this as well as I do.

This knowledge of life after so-called death is a scientific fact—a fact demonstrable beyond the least shadow of a doubt. And there is no more religion about it than there is about eating your dinner or digging a ditch.

Spiritualism is a religion, a belief (see Webster), and Spiritualists attempt to prove their religion true by spirit phenomena. They present these facts, natural phenomena, to prove their pious fraud, religion, to be a truth; and with as much reason and truth as the Christians claim that geology proves that the creation as recorded in their holy Bible is true. But the facts of geology, the records of the rocks, completely destroy this creation record. So the facts of spiritology, spirit phenomena, will destroy not only Christianity, with its many creeds—and Spiritualism is one of these—but all religions. The sciences, geography, geology, astronomy, etc., hav greatly weakened the hold of religion on the human mind. Now the science, spiritology, has been discovered, and is struggling for recognition by the truth seekers, struggling in the hands of its enemies, the religious Spiritualists, who are making great efforts to twist these natural facts into evidence that their religion is true.

This new-discovered science strikes the last and deadly blow at this inhuman monster called religion, which, according to the historical record of past ages, has been the man-eating tiger that has terrorized the world.

Every science has its peculiar and distinct mode of investigation, and spiritology is no exception. Its conditions are as exact and definit as those of chemistry. It is governed by the same law that the universe is governed, and everything that is in it—the law of cause and effect; the same cause always producing the same effect, and as the cause changes the effect also changes.

This law of cause and effect is the only governing power that man has ever been able to discover.

Religiously speaking, I am an Atheist, I know all gods and all religions are frauds; scientifically speaking, I am a Naturalist, everything that is is natural; there is not anything outside nature.

Good and bad, true and false, pleasure and pain, are each the result of a definit and natural cause; this is a scientific fact, but religion has a god or gods that act in utter disregard to this law of cause and effect, working miracles, and so every strange occurrence with cause unknown is called by religious people a miracle.

During the past ages of recorded and traditional history, spirit phenomena of various kinds hav often occurred, but hav been misunderstood, or selfishly used to gain power over ignorant and superstitious people; this mental servitude and darkness are yielding to the power of light, of reason, thought, investigation, and the discovery of facts upon which modern science is built. Among all these facts there are none of more importance to man than spirit phenomena.

The discovery of these facts, nearly ten years ago, was to me the greatest and most important event in my past life; there was the turning-point in my life from mental torture to happiness, and from ignorance to knowledge. Now, before this event I did nothing for reform; since then, I hav been continually on the battlefield of progress and reform, and in the thickest of the fight.

And you, the "Brotherhood of Moralists," would hav me not only giv up this knowledge, but also aid in forcing it back from and out of the minds of mankind. You are working on the same line with the bigoted and persecuting Christians, aiding them to drive mediumship from the earth, which, if left to do its work, will destroy both your creed and theirs. The Christian creed is a relic of the dark ages. Its policy is and always has been, rule or ruin. It claims perfection and all knowledge worth knowing, forbids investigation, and persecutes, to the extent of its power, everybody who disbelieves its wicked and cruel creed. And you, the Brotherhood, hav pledged yourselvs to do the same—to not investigate spirit phenomena yourselvs, or allow if possible anyone else to do so, and to destroy, break up, and (you call it) expose mediums wherever and whenever you can. This is the obvious meaning of your obligation, and for you to use the word "brotherhood" and call yourselvs moralists and reformers, in this age of progress, and then take an obligation to close your eyes and minds against investigating certain natural phenomena, and prevent others from doing so, if you can, places you side by side with religion. Your obligation in this particular is also a relic of the dark and misty past, when religion reigned supreme, when the pious attempted to destroy all knowledge but so-called godly knowledge, and only desiring a very limited supply of that, and prevent all investigation of natural phenomena, lest nature should prove the Christian religion to be untrue.

My object in writing this article is to present facts and ideas to thinking people, and induce, if possible, antireligious men and women to form circles for investigation of spirit phenomena (not Spiritualism). I appeal to people who are honest and reasonable enough not to condemn, like religious people, without investigation, which can be made by following the concise directions here given.

I will giv these instructions for forming circles to investigate spirit phenomena.

Persons to compose the circle should be absolute unbelievers in spirit phenomena, God, religion, or life after death; in number from two to six or more as convenient, half male and half female if possible—mixed circles are better than all of either sex.

Sit around a common, clean dining-table without any cloth on it (a solid top is best), as if you were going to eat, flat-footed and hands flat, palms down on the table; hav the room perfectly dark; sit quiet and as negativ as possible, that is, without activ or wandering thoughts, but with the mind on the business of the occasion. Let the sitting be from 8 to 9 o'clock at night, two evenings a week, say Sunday and Thursday, sit regular on these nights only; sit if possible with no two of the same sex next to each other; let each hav his or her regular place to sit. If there is a strong medium at the table, you may get some demonstration the first or second sitting. This may be physical, such as raps, tipping of the table, or the involuntary moving of some one's hand; this means writing, and the person whose hand is so moved should hold a pencil on a slate each sitting thereafter with the hand that was moved.

Some one may become clairvoyant and see what the others cannot, or clairaudient and hear what the others cannot, or some one may be entranced or controled. When entranced, persons are unconscious of what they say or do; when controled, they know all that they say or do, but cannot prevent it or do otherwise.

If you get raps, make arrangement with the rapper that one rap means no; two raps, do not know; three raps, yes; and five raps, a call by the rapper for the alphabet.

Appoint one person to do the talking, and to avoid confusion hav that person to repeat every question at that sitting to the rapper.

To use the alphabet either on call or by consent of the rapper, and thereby get names and sentences spelled out to you, begin a, b, c, until the letter is called that is wanted, which will be indicated by a single rap. Write this letter down and proceed as before until the communication is complete.

The sitters, before beginning, should agree to hav at least twelve regular sittings, the same persons only and no one else, on the same evenings, twice a week, and at the same hour; then if no result, let the tired or disgusted ones stay away, and if you can, reform the circle with some new members and proceed as before.

Some circles may make a failure from various causes too tedious to mention here, but very seldom for lack of mediumship in a circle of six or more.

A tingling sensation beginning in the fingers, extending to the hands and arms, points out the medium; this sensation sometimes extends to the whole body, which indicates entrancement or control; the person feeling this sensation should remain quiet, not move or get excited, or mentally resist. The whole circle should keep quiet. No danger whatever may take place. Do not allow any ruffianism, such as sticking pins in entranced persons. In the first place, do not go into a circle when you hav not got the most implicit confidence in the honesty of every person in it, then you will not accuse each other of playing the fraud; hav no one in the room except those in the circle, and quiet outside.

Talk to this invisible worker exactly as you would to a human being, without regard to what you may believe or think as to the cause of what is taking place, and whatever the communications may be do not giv up the investigation. The important fact is, not so much what you get, as that some one can talk back across the dead line, for whether you think it or not you are communing with human beings who are living outside of their earth body, and if you push your investigation you will be convinced of this beyond the least shadow of a doubt; but do not believe anything these people tell you, unless you hav to; do not do anything foolish or against your judgment by their advice; remember, so-called death takes no more effect on an individual than stepping from one room into another.

As steam is the moving power of the engin, so magnetism is the element used by spirits to produce these phenomena, and the will-power of the spirits is used to control and direct this magnetism.

If the antireligious people will investigate spirit phenomena, separate it from religion, and place it where it belongs among the sciences, they will find they can banish religion and its gods, saviors, angels, devils, heavens, and hells from the minds of mankind far easier than by all other means combined without it.

This science, spiritology, generally known and demonstrated will stop the flow of people into the church, and cause its most intelligent members to leave it until only a few pious fanatics are left, and when these pass out religion will cease to exist.

Fear, mystery, and ignorance of what so-called death really is, and what there is after, is the greatest stock in trade of all religions. The knowledge of spirit phenomena removes these completely, and leaves the advocates of religion without their scarecrow argument, even with the most ignorant people. I hav found it a most powerful weapon, and with it religion can be struck a harder blow than with any other argument, for it is religion's last and most powerful enemy.

W. L. WILLIS.

Kokomo, Ind.

Gems Culled From the Religious Press.

The Independent publishes an article from the pen of Samuel T. Spear, D.D., LL.D. (and we will not add with Doctor Pangloss, an A.S.S.). It is a ponderous outburst and is called the "Judicial Power of Christ." It quotes the Bible continuously, among the first of which is, "The God of the Bible is in that book and in human forms of thought and modes of statement represented as possessing and exercising judicial power." "His throne is in the heavens and justice and judgment are the habitation thereof." "From his decisions there is no appeal, no review, no correction." "The entire Bible is pervaded with this view of God." "The second advent of Christ and the immediately ensuing judgment day are revealed facts." Of course, this imaginary God is a judge, jury, and executioner all in one. We hav always understood him to be so, and also that he is going to take vengeance on those who hav not been properly introduced to him and take but little stock in his fiery threats, but this particular D.D. and LL.D. is the first man that has asserted that something which has not yet taken place is a revealed fact. If I say that Jones's election to Congress at the next election is a revealed fact some one who regards truth more than courtesy might quite naturally call me a liar, and if I was sober I should say he was right. But "respect for the cloth" compels me to modify my judgment on this highly educated and titleized exhibit by merely remarking that his introduction to truth has as yet been deferred.

The massing together of words like messianic, Pauline, judgment, mediatorial, reign, proclamation, supreme court of the universe, etc., no doubt has the desired effect upon religious dupes, and we let them go, but when facts and truth are quoted we call for the proofs and never get them. Please confine yourselvs, gentlemen of the clergy, to mythological mysteries, for you will certainly be shipwrecked if ou attempt to land upon the shore of truth.

The Observer editorially speaks of "Critical Propaganda," and incidentally publishes a commendatory letter in which a theological student thanks the editor for condemning the "advanced criticism" indulged in by theological seminaries.

The editor of the Observer is quite right; any kind of criticism, be it "advanced" or primary, is equally fatal in the manufacturing of an all-around orthodox theologian. We are astonished to hear that a theological student is capable of criticising. We hav been informed that due care is always taken to secure students whose mental faculties are sufficiently benumbed by allopathic doses of superstition administered from the cradle up, to withstand all invitations to question "the truth of the word of God." We would suggest for the benefit of the editor of the Observer, the organization of an examining board of phrenological experts whose duty it shall be to reject candidates for the ministry whose bump of inquisitivness reaches up to the average. This must be done. No theology in the world will bear questioning. It is not made for that purpose—it is made to be accepted, and if not accepted, you may be damned.

The Christian Union reproduces a sermon of Dr. Abbott in which he contrasts the activity and growth of Roman Catholicism in Brooklyn with the apathy of Protestantism, and reads a lesson to his church on the value of unity. He thanks God that the Roman Catholics hav increased from twenty thousands to more than a quarter of a million, the churches from eighteen to one hundred and fifty, twenty asylums and hospitals established, and twenty-eight thousand children gathered in the parochial schools. Dr. Abbott is thankful for this, even if it is Roman Catholic prosperity.

It will be observed that beggary and Christianity go hand in hand, and it is the especial delight of the church to be considered charitable. It importunes the man that is struggling to keep the wolf from his own door to assist in driving the animal out of an unfortunate neighbor's house. Did it ever occur to Dr. Abbott or Bishop Loughlin that it would be a good idea to unify their forces, sound the bugle call, and make a concerted attack upon that gaunt and hungry wolf who exists by virtue of injustice, rout him, kill him, and forever bury him, that the stain and ignominy of pauperism may become but a relic of civilized barbarism? The deep blush of shame should diffuse itself over the clerical face of every minister of the gospel at this debasement of members of his own race reduced to the pitiful attitude of beggars! Millions of acres of land untilled, unused, of no use to humanity, to whom it belongs, held out of use by owners whose titles are all illegal, no man ever having lived who has an unimpeachable right to exclusiv ownership in land. It is for the living not for the dead, and yet the edicts of the dead assist in its monopolization. "Ye lovers of men," why do you not seek the cause of poverty, and having found it extirpate it at all hazards? This doleful charity is debasing to its recipients, a burden to contributors, and inflating to its distributors. Is it not disgraceful that under the universal beneficence of nature man should be a beggar? It is not charity that the world needs to regenerate it and make men come closer together as partakers of one common destiny, it is simply justice, which, however, will not advance one single step until bigoted superstition has been replaced by the acceptance of the simple truth of the omnipotence of nature and the consequent perfect mental liberty of man.

The Christian Herald, the mouthpiece of the athletic clerical clown whose gyrations hav convulsed the universe, givs expression to the following Talmagian fable: "Intelligence, art, eloquence, without the Christian religion is defamation, ruin, disaster, woe."

Let the pantaloon stop the clown for a moment, and ask: Is not intelligence, art, eloquence, with the Christian religion, defamation, ruin, disaster, woe?

Do not these curses at present overtop the "blessings" of the Christian religion?

Defamation is common enough, and ruin, disaster, and woe are the common heritage of the millions of the earth.

And yet Christianity claims predominance, and everything else within reach. The present unjust conditions, the prevalent mockery of human rights, are a sufficient answer to the impotency of religion as a remedial agent in human affairs. It claims to know something of a future life. As a matter of fact it knows absolutely nothing, and has never advanced a shadow of proof that it does.

But like the veiled prophet of Mokanna, whose brow was covered with the silver veil "to hide from mortal sight his dazzling brow till man could bear its light," this ancient bugaboo, this mythologica horror, a man-God-creator, is being revealed, his ugliness exposed, his absurd claims denied, and his personality relegated back from whence it came to the ancient sepulcher of discarded gods.

The Evangelist heads an obituary of a no doubt worthy old lady, "An Elect Lady." There may be no doubt of her election, but we question the good taste of calling her an elect lady and omitting the same title over the heads of other obituaries.

It is enough to make the Presbyterian spine of a lamenting husband chill to the freezing-point to notice such an omission in his wife's obituary. If the Evangelist has in its possession a revised list of the elect, it might be well to advertise the fact, so that prospectiv widows or widowers might make arrangements to hav their expected defuncts enrolled before they collapse. This would secure the title "elect" and avoid collision with the editor.

The Christian Advocate has been requested to advise the Methodist churches whether or not they should receive the money bequeathed to them by Emma Abbott. The reply comes with a crisp business ring, "Certainly." "The gift of all money which the owner has a legal and moral right to dispose of should be received by churches." The church prohibits its members from attending theaters, holding that they are evil and immoral places. The exalted principle which actuates the Christian church in its business dealings with the world can best be set forth by following to its logical sequence its action in this particular case.

A bank fails, fraud is suspected and proved, hundreds lose their money, a trial is had, no legal claim can be sustained against the robbers, and a compromise is effected which leaves the thieves quite wealthy. They are immoral men, but they hav a legal right to dispose of the fruits of their thievery and they giv it to the church. Of course the church accepts it. Now, says the deacon, if you can steal and prove that you did not steal bring us the money and we will take it. We will receive the income of immorality, but we are obliged to knock it silly in the pulpit.

The Churchman, in a lengthy article on General Booth's scheme to rescue one-tenth of London from pauperism and crime, finds two points of weakness, which it believes are fatal to its success. One is the petty jealousies of the churches, the other the non-arrest of the economic causes which hav created the problem itself.

The first of these points, that of the jealousies of the various denominations, might be cured by the disbandment of the churches as such, and a reunion of the members for the practical solution of the economic causes which hav produced the condition, and their abolishment.

Then would be the commencement of the transition which must cause the granting of the long-withheld right of the people to the use of the land. Justice demands it; the solution of the problem demands it; hunger, misery, and woe cry out for it, and they must not cry in vain.

WILLIAM ALLEN SMITH.

Increase of Freethinkers and Indifferentists.

I hav made up the following table, the figures being taken from Whittaker's:

ENGLISH-SPEAKING RELIGIOUS COMMUNITIES OF THE WORLD.

	1888	1890	Increase
Episcopalians,	22,500,000	23,000,000	500,000
Methodists,	16,550,000	16,950,000	400,000
Roman Catholics,	15,000,000	15,200,000	200,000
Presbyterians,	11,000,000	11,000,000	no inc'se
Baptists,	8,450,000	8,600,000	150,000
Freethinkers,	2,000,000	3,500,000	1,500,000
Of no particular religion,	11,500,000	13,500,000	2,000,000

The foregoing show for themselvs—"figures do not lie"—and an excellent move has been made to such an extent that it will not be many years, at this rate of increase, before we are "atop of the heap."

BARKER.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - FEBRUARY 14, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE

By MISS ADA CAMPBELL,

ENTITLED

Side Lights on South Sea Missions.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

An Open Letter to the Postmaster-General.

To JOHN WANAMAKER, POSTMASTER-GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES:

Dear Sir: In your report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, which you hav kindly forwarded to me, I find in explanation of your act excluding from the mails "a translation of a questionable book," these paragraphs:

"An act of Congress passed March 3, 1873 (R. S., section 3893), provided, 'That no obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, print, . . . shall be carried in the mail;' and further, that any person who should knowingly mail or cause to be mailed, or who should knowingly receive or cause to be received, from the mails articles before declared to be non-mailable should be deemed to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and liable to a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $5,000, or to imprisonment at hard labor for not less than one year or more than ten years. It was soon found that it was not enough merely to provide for the exclusion of 'obscene, lewd, and lascivious' publications, but that publications that were simply 'indecent' had also better be excluded; and accordingly Congress, by the act of July 12, 1876 (19 Stat., p. 90), extended the prohibitions by adding thereto the words, 'or other publications of an indecent character,' and by forbidding not only the carriage of such matter in the mails, but 'the delivery of it from any post-office or by any letter-carrier;' so that the statute was amended to read as follows:

"'Every obscene, lewd, or lascivious book, pamphlet, picture, paper, writing, print, or other publication of an indecent character . . . is hereby declared to be non-mailable matter, and shall not be conveyed in the mails, nor delivered from any post-office, nor by any letter-carrier.'

"The statute was thus broadened by prohibiting the transmission of any matter offensiv to modesty, or tending to subvert respect for decency and morality, first by constituting the postmaster-general the judge of the character of such matter to forbid its carriage in the mails (which could only be prevented by executiv order), and second by leaving to judicial action the duty of imposing penalties.

"It does not matter whether or not a given publication presented for mailing appears, by complaint or otherwise, to a postmaster to be 'obscene, lewd, or lascivious,' if it does appear to be 'indecent.' He is obliged, in order not to become a law-breaker, to refer the questionable point to the proper department official. It does not matter, when the referee considers the question, whether the given publication is merely 'obscene, lewd, or lascivious.' If it is simply indecent, he must exclude it or break the law. A translation of a questionable book was, as a matter of fact, presented some months since at the post-office in a Western city for transmission in the mails. It was held and referred to this department. The assistant attorney-general, finding it indecent under any definition of the word, issued an order excluding it. To exclude the book was the simple duty of the department. For myself I never discuss the policy or wisdom of breaking the law, and the officials of the post-office department do not.

"Some hav said that the exclusion of a book only draws attention to it and makes the damage caused by its sale the greater. That, as I conceive, is no affair of a sworn public official. Moreover, the 'advertising' which it is held the department gave the objectionable publication was entirely due to the thrifty bluster of the publisher who, however much he complained of the injustice of the decision of the department, never appealed to the postmaster-general to hav it reversed. The question is not pertinent, either, why the department does not exclude certain other publications from the mails which are admitted to be indecent. It treats these cases only as they are brought to its attention; and one complaint is considered as carefully as another. To try to pursue any other policy—to try to find publications which on one pretext or another might be excluded—would be to try to establish a real censorship of the mails, which is entirely foreign to what I conceive to be the duty of the postmaster-general."

In a marginal title to the subject you are discussing, you say also that the "postmaster-general is obliged to act when applied to," and in the case of the book alluded to that to exclude "any matter offensiv to modesty, or tending to subvert respect for decency and morality," is "the simple duty of the department."

I now respectfully apply to you for a decision on a book published in this city and other places, and which can be found in nearly every bookstore in the country, and is sent through the mails daily. The title of the book is as follows:

THE
HOLY BIBLE,
CONTAINING THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS:
TRANSLATED OUT OF
THE ORIGINAL TONGUES;
AND WITH
THE FORMER TRANSLATIONS DILIGENTLY COMPARED AND REVISED.
NEW YORK:
AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY,
INSTITUTED IN THE YEAR MDCCCXVI.
1890.

The volume appears to be made up of little books bound together. To facilitate your examination of the work—which, for fear you may never hav seen it, I forward with this letter by express, charges prepaid—I would respectfully refer you to chapters iv, xvi, xvii, xviii, xix, xx, xxi, xxix, xxxiv, xxxviii, xxxix, and others of the book called Genesis; chapters iv, xiii, xxii, xxxiii, xxxiv, and others of the book called Exodus; chapters xv, xviii, xx, xxi, and others of the book called Leviticus; chapters v, xxxi, and others of the book called Numbers; chapters xxi, xxii, xxiii, and others of the book called Deuteronomy; chapters ii, vi, and others of the book called Joshua; chapters xvi, xix, xx, xxi, of the book called Judges; chapter iii and others of the book called Ruth; chapters i, ii, xix, and others of the book called 1 Samuel; chapters iii, vi, xvi, and others of the book called 2 Samuel; chapters i, xi, xvi, and others of the book called 1 Kings; chapter ix of the book called 2 Kings; chapters xxxi, xl, and others of the book called Job; chapters v, xxiii, and others of the collection called Proverbs; chapters i, ii, v, vii, viii, and others of the book called Solomon's Song; chapters lvii and others of the book called Isaiah; chapters i, ii, iii, xlix, and others of the book called Jeremiah; chapters iv, xvi, xxiii, and others of the book called Ezekiel; chapters i, ii, iii, iv, and others of the book called Hosea; chapter i of the book called Micah; chapter i of the book called St. Matthew; chapter vii of the book called St. Mark; chapters i and ii of the book called St. Luke; chapter viii of the book called St. John; chapters i and iv of the book called an epistle to the Romans; chapters v, vi, vii, and others of the book called an epistle to the Corinthians; chapter xvii of the book called Revelation, and such other passages as Mr. Tyner may find, if indeed he find these, to be obnoxious to the statutes cited by you in justification of the exclusion from the mails of the book alluded to.

I am also told—but this, it seems to me, is incredible—that this volume is read in a great many public schools every morning by the scholars, boys and girls indiscriminately, and that it is even claimed to be a source of that decency and morality for which you and I hav such deep respect. If this be true, it is a great aggravation of the original offense of translating it out of the original tongues—though to my certain knowledge no one knows where the original manuscripts are. It is also alleged that it is used as a text-book by our clergy, though I cannot believe such a fact to be possible; and some people claim that it is a history of ancient barbarian tribes. This of course is manifestly absurd, for no people, however degraded in savagery, would perform the acts and liv the lives recorded in the book. And I was told only this morning by the clerk from whom it was purchased that it is the book upon which two great religions are founded, but in saying this, it seemed to me that the salesman was trying to impose upon me.

I am not ignorant of the fact that there is a great difference of opinion as to what constitutes a book which would come under the law of March 3, 1873 (R. S. § 3893), but since Congress in its great wisdom has added the clause italicized by you in the act of July 12, 1876 (19 Stat., page 90), and you hav given your definition of such works as "any matter offensiv to modesty, or tending to subvert respect for decency and morality," the classification of literature has become easier; and I submit to you, in all humility, whether the book under consideration does not come within your definition of publications which are of an indecent character. If it should be so, the public has your word for it that the "postmaster-general is obliged to act when applied to," and that the exclusion of such works is but "the simple duty of the department." The facts that the book has had a large sale, is read by the best of people, and is to be found in the home of nearly every citizen of the United States, will of course hav no influence with you, for we know that you "never discuss the policy or wisdom of breaking the law, and that the officials of the post-office department do not." And also, that calling attention to the work in this public way, by which its circulation may be greatly increased, will not deter you from doing your duty we also know from your own words, as such is no affair of a sworn public official. Whatever advertising your department may giv the book will be due of course to the thrifty bluster of the publishers, and not to you or me who are but doing our duty as citizens—I in calling your attention to the work (as your department "can treat cases only as brought to your attention"), and you as a sworn public official who never discusses the policy or wisdom of breaking the law.

I do not know that the publication is offensiv to modesty or that it has a tendency to subvert respect for decency and morality; a great many people hold, I believe, the opposit view; but, so I am informed, and am led to think it true by reading the journals of the country, a great many so hold of the book which your department did exclude from the mails. If this latter statement be true, it shows that the people cannot possibly be right when placing their views in opposition to the wisdom and greater experience of the postmaster-general; and as I desire only truth, and to be exactly right in selecting my literature, I hav no other recourse than to apply to you, confident that you will act regardless of the thrifty bluster in which the publishers of pernicious literature may indulge.

In conclusion, if you shall promptly decide in this matter, I will, with your permission, submit for your intelligent examination other works which I may find on sale. Some time ago, the Methodist Book Concern, the largest denominational publishing house in this country, printed a large volume in which meretricious pictures of African inhabitants appeared; and though I believe the objectionable pictures were removed in the second edition, I may perhaps find one of the first edition advertised to be sent postpaid on receipt of price, to the great damage by breakage of the law, and if so I will submit it. I allow no one, not even Mr. Comstock, to surpass me in zeal for purity and respect for decency and morality.

Yours very respectfully,

EDITOR OF THE TRUTH SEEKER.

"Godless" Schools.

The Chicago organ of the Unitarians uses the expression "blatant Freethinker." Why "blatant?" The term might be applied to a shouting, howling Methodist, but bellowing Infidels are scarce, much scarcer than conceited namby-pambyists who imagin they are good Christian oxen because their green circumferences are distended with vanity and wind, as the Psalmist hath it. Like the mongrel Samaritans who feared the Lord but served their own gods, the Unitarians in professing to be in favor of freedom yet at the same time abusing those who hav won them the privilege of existence, seem to be lineal descendants of these Samaritans.

But it is with another point in the same note that we should deal. Unity says:

"A recent writer to one of our religious exchanges on the use of the Bible in the public schools says there is a demand that these schools should be 'godless.' This is rank nonsense. Probably not the most blatant Freethinker in the land ever expressed such a wish or intention. It is time even orthodox writers on this subject learned to distinguish between a non-religious and an irreligious attitude, whether in an individual or the government; between the principles of pure Secularism, which would make no discrimination between the multiform sects and creeds represented in the public schools, and a spirit of anti-religion. The distinction is wide and fundamental, and there is no excuse for an intelligent mind longer ignoring it."

But there are people who desire to hav "godless" schools. Freethinkers generally desire it. There is no more reason for teaching Theism in our schools than for teaching trinitarianism. God, from the savage's fetich to the Unitarian's made-over image of the Christian deity, is an unknown quantity, an indescribable, unprovable, and unfindable concept of ignorance. The public schools should teach only the known, and to teach "God" is as great an outrage upon the Atheist as instruction in trinitarian dogma would be upon the Unitarian. We want our schools free from all religion, leaving that to be taught in the home or not at all.

In Pennsylvania.

It seems not a little amusing, when we remember that this is pretty near the twentieth and is not the sixteenth century, to hear a grave and really serious discussion by a body of legislators as to the wisdom or wickedness of repealing so much of a statute of A.D. 1794 as will permit the sale on Sundays of soda water, cigars, newspapers, and to permit a barber to shave his customers on that day. But this is the burning question now before the Pennsylvania legislature, and the Pittsburgh Leader takes to itself much credit for being enterprising in having obtained an expression of opinion, pro or con, on the proposed measure from the solons at Harrisburg.

With the exception of Delaware and one or two Southern states, Pennsylvania is in Sabbatarian and religious measures the most bigoted, backward, and unreasonable state in the Union. When the American Secular Union met in Pittsburgh the Law and Order League, led by "Captain" Wishart, asked the police to suppress its meetings because there might be blasphemy uttered at them. Only a few weeks ago a Pennsylvanian was sentenced to jail for a long period for swearing a few "oaths" on the street. And the present bill to repeal the Blue laws of 1794 limits its scope to making legal the sale of a few articles so commonly used that it is supposed that no one can object. The framers of the bill dare not ask for real liberty; they must be satisfied with the shadowy privileges allowed by the clergy, and no doubt they will feel real grateful if permitted to buy a cigar on Sunday without thereby becoming criminals. Some of the lawmakers even do not dare to favor this two-for-a-cent bill until they ask their minister about it; Senator Green, of Berks, frankly saying, "I will see the clergy of my district and get their views."

Another lawmaker, Representativ Hartley, of Greene county, had to consult his Bible. "As far as the sale on Sunday of the necessities of life is concerned," he said, "I will go as far as the Bible goes. I believe our savior has given us an example of that." The other opponents of the repeal bill were either afraid of the religious people in their districts or afraid of their religion itself. However, a majority favored the bill, or are not ready to oppose it, and it is probable that Pennsylvanians will be able soon to indulge in soda water and cigars on Sunday. The Leader says: "The city representativs, notably those from Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Allegheny, are almost unanimous in the determination to vote for repeal. The methods of Captain Wishart and his Philadelphia colleague, Mr. Vail, and the inconvenience resulting to the public from the application of these methods, are too well known to the representativs of the constituencies which suffer from the exactions of those alleged reformers to call for defense or confirmation. If the rural representativs were familiar with the actual state of affairs it is hardly probable that so many of them would array themselvs against a movement which is clearly intended as a measure of relief, and in no sense as a hardship to any class of citizens."

So modest and humble a petition as this surely demands tolerant consideration from the Christian ministers who run the state of Pennsylvania. The Leader adds, waxing brave as it considers the hardship of not having soda water and cigars on Sunday: "Unless there is an unexpected change in the attitude of the legislators on this important question, there is, however, practically no doubt that rural opposition will not avail to prevent the passage of one or other of the reasonable and public-spirited bills presented by Messrs. Neeb and Fow in the senate and house respectivly. The Leader has done all in its power to further this end, for the reason that we believe that the wishes of the people at large and not of extremists in religious matters should be consulted in the matter of framing new Sunday laws or suffering old ones to stand. The laws which we hav to-day are undoubtedly oppressiv, and the very favorable prospect of the abrogation of the worst of them which is now offered should prove gratifying to every citizen who values the right of exercising his natural liberty, in so far as it does not conflict with the well-being of his fellows."

"Natural liberty," according to this bill, is limited to soda water and cigars! The Pennsylvania heretics are certainly a most reasonable body of people and kept well in subjection by their mentors, the Christian clergy. A man who is content with soda water and cigars on Sunday cannot possibly be dangerous, and one who regards the privilege of purchasing them on that day as a grant of freedom will never be very dangerous to the power that holds his pious nose to the Sabbatarian grindstone.

But, by the way, what is the Secular Union doing to assist in obtaining this slight relief from the Blue laws? A little work by it, and the writing of letters to their representativs and senators at Harrisburg by the Freethinkers of the state, might help the bill, and possibly brace some lawmaker up to ask an amendment to it whereby a little real liberty could be secured to the church and religion-ridden Pennsylvanians.

The Churches Pay Taxes in California—On the Land!

On the question of church taxation in California a correspondent of the Christian Statesman offers some information gathered at first hand from a pastor of a Methodist church. The correspondent is greatly disgusted at the fact that the minister had to hustle a little, but thinks it could not be otherwise in a state where the Secular theory of government is so generally accepted, where there is no "Sabbath" law, very little "Sabbath" observance, and no Bible in the public schools of its greatest city—"how could you expect anything but the triumph of Secularism in California?" he sorrowfully asks.

But here is the letter of his downtrodden ministerial friend, the Rev. Dr. Dille:

"Taxation of churches is quite a vivid fact in my mind just now, as I raised about a month ago $680 to pay state, city, and county taxes upon the property of the First Methodist Episcopal church in this city. Churches are certainly taxed here precisely like any other property. A movement was made to secure the passage of an act by the legislature of 1887 to exempt church, college, and similar holdings from taxation. Dr. Stratton lobbied for it, and almost all the church organizations favored it. But it did not carry, some of the legislators assigning as the ground of their opposition that the movement was really in the interest of the Roman Catholic church, which is enormously wealthy in real estate in California. I confess that consideration does much to reconcile me to California's anomalous attitude on this question. The matter is usually brought up in our churches annually; I mean a special appeal for money wherewith to pay taxes."

The correspondent adds that the Roman Catholic possession of so much real estate raises two sides to the question of taxation; evidently, without this, in his opinion there would be but one, and that of course in favor of exempting the property of his sect. He never thinks that the principle involved is broader than one or two city lots.

But it would be interesting to know if this $680 was a tax on the buildings of the Methodist congregation or only upon the land? It has been bruited about that as the pious tax assessors cannot exempt the churches they are in the habit of assessing only the land and allowing the building thereon to go scot-free. Do the churches pay all their taxes?

A BILL providing for the taxation of church property is before the Oregon legislature. The Liberals of that state are making a strong fight for justice, and all sympathizers with the movement should write their representativs at Salem in favor of the bill. The Hon. J. D. Garfield, of the House of Representativs, will be heard from on the question when it comes up for debate.

A STRICT Sunday law is now before the legislature in Arkansas, and has already, by clerical influence, been forced through the senate. J. O. Corliss, secretary of the Seventh-Day Adventist organization, left February 1st, for Little Rock, to see what could be done to arrest its passage in the house.

A FRIEND of the American Secular Union, one who has steadily given more of his time and money to it, as well as to all other Liberal and reform work, than almost any other man in the country, writes of THE TRUTH SEEKER editorial concerning the Union: "Your editorial settles in my mind the true practical policy for the Union. I hav had glimpses of it before, but never saw it so big and shapely, so sufficient to the needs of the case."

THE offices of lord chancellor of England and the viceroy of Ireland are not allowed by the laws of England to be filled by Catholics. Mr. Gladstone tried last week to get the House of Commons to remove this religious limitation, but the motion was defeated. So England disgraces herself still further with her established church notions of putting none but Protestants on guard over Ireland and the English exchequer. The Catholics should hav fair play as well as the Jews or Freethinkers.

CHIEF-JUSTICE GILFILLAN of the Minnesota supreme court has handed down a decision in the appeal of the Church of the Good Shepherd affirming the lower court's decision that it must pay taxes on its parsonage. The judge said: "In the clause of section 3, article 9, of the constitution, providing that 'all churches, church property used for religious purposes and houses of worship shall by general laws be exempt from taxation,' the words 'church property used for religious purposes,' if they refer to land and buildings, do not intend any except those whose primary use is for religious purposes. A rectory or parsonage belonging to a church society, its primary use being for a secular purpose, to wit, the residence of the priest or minister, is not exempt because of some part of it being also used for religious services."

THE Independent asks: "Shall we obey God's commandment? or shall we open the Columbian Exposition on Sunday?" And a Seventh Day Advent paper ridicules the evangelical Christian for its lack of biblical knowledge, or dishonesty, in this way: "After struggling awhile to catch our breath at such a question, we venture to ask where God's commandment is which says that the Columbian Exposition should not be open on Sunday. When and where was it given? and how does it read? If this is thought a little too definit, we are willing to submit the question in the following sufficiently general form: Where has God given any command or instruction, or the apostles any example respecting Sunday, which would indicate any impropriety in opening the Exposition on that day, or which would debar his servants from attending it, if open on that day?"

THE Liberals of Massachusetts, led by the Investigator, will this winter make an effort to hav repealed the statute exempting church property from taxation. A petition to that effect has been prepared as follows:

"To the Honorable Senate and House of Representativs, of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in General Court assembled:

"The undersigned petitioners, citizens of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, respectfully represent: That the seventh clause of section 5 of the eleventh chapter of the public statutes of the commonwealth exempts from taxation 'houses of religious worship owned by a religious society, or held in trust for the use of religious organizations, and the pews and furniture (except for parochial use);' and that such exemption is an indirect taxation for the support of denominational places of worship, and is a dangerous discrimination, contrary to reason and morality, as well as to the spirit, if not the letter, of Article X of the Bill of Rights, by which each individual is bound to contribute his share of the expense of protecting his property, life, and liberty. And property is specified as the proper object of taxation. Therefore your petitioners pray that said clause, together with all special acts of like purpose, may be repealed."

Residents of Massachusetts can procure copies of this petition at the Investigator office, Boston.

ACCORDING to the Road, a Denver priest has made "a gilt-edged ass of himself" by saying: "There is not a more unjust or tyrannical system of laws in the world to-day than our present school laws. It is an iniquity, a shame, and a national scandal. In all honesty and conscience I cannot send my child to a public school. In spite of all the opposition urged against Catholic education in Europe, in no case has the law gone so far as to tax the minority for the sake of the majority. I charge each and every Catholic parent who listens to me, do not send your child to a public school. They are godless. They are legally such and they cannot be otherwise. We must obey the majority, they say. Oh, yes; we discovered your country, we fought its battles, we civilized your savages, we gave you all you hav, and now you say pay your money to educate our children. Yes, pay those who would support the public school and let them bear the responsibility before God. This is the condition under the vaunted system of American majority. What can we do in the matter? Complain? No! If our country kicked me I would love it still. Pay your money to educate their brats, but never for one moment send your child to a public school, but send him to a Catholic school, where he may hav kept before him morality and right, and, above all, first, last, and all the time, the holy Roman Catholic church." Certainly in his last sentence the priest has revealed the purpose of his church with unusual frankness

Letters from Friends.

NIPOMO, CAL., Jan. 20, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $3 to pay for THE TRUTH SEEKER and $1 for the picture fund. Long liv THE TRUTH SEEKER, Watson Heston, and John Peck.

Yours for truth, JOHN ROBINETT.

LITCHFIELD, ILL., Jan. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav read THE TRUTH SEEKER for fifteen years and I am well satisfied with it. Keep the pictures booming. Success to Heston and the Truth Seeker Company. I close wishing you all a Happy New Year.

ALEXANDER ROBSON.

LONG HILL, CONN., Jan. 12, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find lubricator for the machinery for the year 1891. Some of my good friends think that in expending a few dollars in this way I am virtually purchasing a first-class ticket for a brimstone roast, but I prefer it to paying pew-rent. JOHN L. BEARDSLEY.

HAMBURG, IA., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Fred W. Toedt will build a fine large Freethought hall here in the spring. This shows that we are making some progress at least. Liberalism is steadily increasing here, and we hope soon to make this city a Freethought center for southwest Iowa. E. T. DALBEY.

ABERDEEN, S. D., Jan. 29, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for nearly a year, and am well pleased with it. I hav been an outspoken Freethinker for years. The churches are well represented here, eight different denominations holding services every Sunday. Wishing you success, I am,

Yours truly, O. W. ROYLEY.

BOONVILLE, IND., Jan. 28, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I want THE TRUTH SEEKER and the ANNUAL. This from John A. Reynolds, the old Atheist and well-wisher of THE TRUTH SEEKER and humanity in general. Let us try to keep God out of the Constitution, for if the churches get their wishes you and I will hav to keep still or lose our heads. JOHN A. REYNOLDS.

SAGINAW, MICH., Jan. 27, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am happy to congratulate you on the very commendable and praiseworthy paper that you send out every week from your sanctum. The grand old TRUTH SEEKER ever holds its own, and indeed is on the up grade—grows better and better all the time. Success to it for a hundred years. Ever your true friend, J. H. BURNHAM.

CHERRY TREE, PA., Jan. 24, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Grandpa Buxton is eighty-four and still is able to read your paper without the use of spectacles. We thought we would send for it for another year and that might be as long as he would need it, but we hope he may liv many years to enjoy it. He spends a great many hours reading and is greatly interested in the progress of Freethought. Very respectfully, HENRY BUXTON, JR.

FOSTORIA, O., Jan. 23, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am well pleased with the paper. I find more good argument and common sense in its literature than in any other paper that I hav read; and as long as your paper maintains its present standing and purity, and boldly combats the follies and errors of the present forms of superstition in our country, I shall continue to be a subscriber and supporter. Heston's conception of the ancient Jew is excellent. His cartoons on the first page hit the bull's-eye every time. Yours for truth, WHIT. STEVENSON.

MARQUETTE, KAN., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Having noticed several communications with reference to a secret organization or organizations of Liberals, I hope the idea will prevail and that all who favor it will speak their sentiments. Provision should be made for such persons as are alone in a religious community, that they may join any nearest organization. An insurance department something like, or on the same basis as, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, would also be a good feature of the organization. I sincerely hope something may be done, and will be glad to join a society of the kind.

Respectfully, etc., C. PUTNAM.

DENVER, IA., Jan. 29, 291.

MR. EDITOR: What inconsistent creatures the professed followers of Christ are! According to his pretended biographers, Christ never instituted a "Sabbath," and never observed one, and was put to death by just such sabbatic bigots as Christians are to-day, and the pre-Christ Christians' charge against him, at his execution, was, "He keepeth not the Sabbath day." Neither Christ nor any of his apostles or disciples instituted, suggested, or recommended the institution of a Sabbath-day. And yet nineteenth-century Christians howl and rave for the "observance of the Christian Sabbath," and want the gates of the Columbian Fair bolted and locked on Sunday. Christian consistency is indeed a jewel! and it must be on exhibition at the Fair and take the first premium. Though twenty thousand poor people in Chicago, who must work six days every week in order to support their families, and can only visit the Fair on Sunday, must be bolted out, what care the "disciples of the meek and lowly Jesus?" Though fifty thousand strangers in the city, excluded from the Fair, fill the saloons, brothels, and gambling-dens of the city on each "holy Sabbath day," what care the Young Men's Christian Association or the Women's Christian Temperance Union? Oh, how beautifully consistent is pretended tenderness in a tiger! M. FARRINGTON.

DIANA, TEX., Jan. 17, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I intend to take the paper so long as I am able to pay for it. The editorials are always good, and your contributors are men and women far above the average in intellect. I would feel small in their presence. I would like to be in possession of the wisdom and learning of some of the eminent men and women who write for THE TRUTH SEEKER. Some people are born great, while others hav greatness thrust upon them; I belong to neither class, and therefore am one of the unfortunate. The way things now go I can scarcely make a living. I am a farmer by occupation, and my condition and surroundings are such that I can not lay anything by for old age. We hav here one disaster after another, which serves to keep our noses on the grindstone. Yours truly, J. M. WOODS.

PITTSBURGH, PA., Jan. 20, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I take pleasure in sending you a post-office order once more to renew my subscription for your valuable paper and for the purchase of one TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL for 1891 and one copy of the "Freethinkers' Text-Book" in cloth. I appreciate your valuable paper very much. The more I read it the more I like it. The only thing that goes against it here is that the common run, and indeed many of the educated class, cannot understand it thoroughly, as I hav tried it often. The people hav to be educated so that they can get pleasure in perusing it. I was the same myself once, but practice has made me to a great extent master of the situation now. Wishing you and all in THE TRUTH SEEKER office the compliments of the season, and a year of great prosperity for THE TRUTH SEEKER paper and all concerned,

J. JOSEPHS.

PORT ANGELES, Jan. 9, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: After searching Port Angeles I did not locate in the town. I bought a farm a few miles from the town. I hav been very busy. I hav not when in town had time to renew my subscription to the dear TRUTH SEEKER. I hav not even had the time to visit the Secular Union of Port Angeles and get acquainted with the legion of Freethinkers of the town. In my neighborhood people do not belong to any Secular club, but they are all Infidels, Spiritualists, or Materialists. I am well pleased with my neighborhood, and the other day I heard two boys discoursing on God. One said to the other, "I trust in no God. I trust in myself." Here I hav also met an Atheist woman. So as for the people of Port Angeles and surrounding country, I am pleased. Inclosed please find $5 for subscription to the dear TRUTH SEEKER and the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book."

Truly yours, ACHILLES LAMBOTH.

BUTLER, PA., Jan. 24, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Sixteen dauntless defenders of Universal Mental Liberty, including Mr. Simeon Nixon as chairman, and Mr. Wm. J. Rodgers as secretary, hav organized a Freethought society in this place, and propose doing all in their power to place the flag of liberty above the cross of revenge. And if space in your valuable paper will permit, I might also say that it is a great pleasure to all who wish to retain what little liberty they hav to know that so many intelligent people hav joined the great army of Freethinkers who see the tyrants of theology standing at the cradle with the dagger of Superstition ready to plunge it into the brain of Science and compel the child of Progress to kneel under the black flag and the cross of ingratitude and revenge until the cold perspiration of hatred chills the heart to that degree that it would forsake father, mother, sister, and brother in order to save its soul, which would be of little value even to a god of revenge. J. O. FULLERTON.

ESTHERVILLE, IA., Feb. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I received the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" a few days ago. I hav looked it over carefully. I think it is the best book that I ever saw for the purpose for which it was intended. I hav sent it on a mission, and when it returns it will find a place on the center-table for the inspection of visitors. There is a revival meeting in this place at the present time carried on by a preacher by the name of Redling, from Kansas City, Mo. He said that Thomas Paine's tombstone was sold for taxes. If there is a shadow of truth in the statement I should like to know it. If it is not true I would be glad to tell him so. Please answer in THE TRUTH SEEKER and oblige a constant reader.

I will send for the other picture book as soon as it is in print. A. R. COATS.

[The report touching Thomas Paine's tombstone has as much foundation as most preachers' stories about Infidels—which is, none at all.—ED. T. S.]

NEW CAMBRIA, KAN., Feb. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: As I am a member of the Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, and since I hav said what I hav in former articles, I will tell you what I think about joining it. I think it best for all that are eligible to join it. The labor movement is an offspring of Liberalism, and in order to be able to hav any effect on shaping the policy of a movement and to hav an influence on the same it is best to belong. By this means you are enabled to learn the names of the members, and also by this same means you will be enabled to place such literature in their hands as will cause them not to demand more than equal and exact justice. No Liberal can object to anything but the religious ceremonial part of the order. While there is no compulsion to induce you to join the new political party that is now being formed, of course all true Liberals will be undecided just how they are going to vote two years hence until they investigate its claims for existence as well as all others. From a financial standpoint it pays to belong. On one certain article I saved $14, and there is a continual saving on almost everything you buy. JOHN W. ABBOTT.

INDUSTRY, KAN., Jan. 24, 1891.

MR. EDITOR. Again I find it my duty to renew my subscription to the invaluable paper THE TRUTH SEEKER. I also send you four new subscribers so you may know that I hav been doing a little missionary work for Universal Mental Liberty. And also I hav been circulating the petition as to the World's Fair and so far hav succeeded in getting one hundred names. And furthermore, I must tell you a little anecdote that one of our storekeepers told me the other day. His little boy goes to Sunday-school, and Mrs. Gibbs, his Sunday-school teacher, told her class what a blessed thing it is to call on the Lord in everything we do. Even if they stuck in the mud, if they called on the Lord he would pull them out. And the storekeeper's little boy went home and told his pa what his Sunday-school teacher said, and his pa told his little boy that it is not so, and that the next time she tells such lies he should tell her that he doesn't believe it.

I would further state that I received the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" over two months ago, and it has been on the go ever since. Everybody pronounces it the best thing they ever saw to show up the foolishness of Christianity. J. B. WISE.

DALLAS, TEX., Feb. 2, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: This is my plan for the suppression of alcohol. First remove the incentiv to its creation; free it from taxation and license of every description; make it free; destroy all possible profit arising from revenue or license; make it so free that a living off the sales would be next to impossible for the vendor. The first result would be, the poor, unfortunate, and perhaps irredeemable inebriate would indulge and still hav something left for bread for his family. The money in it is what established this demon vile that is menacing our very existence. Under such a system no gilded dens could exist; fashionable tippling of the upper class would be unpopular, because if they were obliged to indulge with the rabble the tone would be lost; hence the disgust, then reform from natural force of circumstances. Result second would be that with one-half of the people sober the vendors of the vile stuff could be made responsible for all damage done the victims. Profits thus reduced, the incentiv is lost. Parallel—money, still the incentiv for grasping Peter's pence, established and sustained the tyrant church with its priestcraft that robbed mankind for ages of all that is noble, good, and true. Error has a money value; truth is independent, free, and above price, and is a moral fountain. To be intemperate costs money and entails a woful and sad destruction, and, I fear, total oblivion; while temperance, like truth, requires no money values for sustenance, and clears the way to the grand ideal and possible real. J. V. MULKS.

STRASBURG, ILL., Jan. 24, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Last night J. E. Remsburg lectured in Kircher's Hall; subject, "Some Facts about the Bible." The hall was crowded. Some were pleased, while others said that the Christian and apostolic fathers he referred to were now rejected by the Christian church. We kindly invited two ministers to be with us and lecture on the same subject, so we could see the argument from each side. Rev. Mr. Harshman did not think it would be beneficial, and said, "I accept the apostle's injunction, 'If any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.'" I suppose he has thrown up the sponge and quit preaching, or teaching, as it is sometimes termed. The Rev. Mr. Spainour, of the Baptist church, said he was sorry that he could not stay and speak; that he was holding a series of meetings, and by attending to them might save some souls. One young man said the lecture did not amount to anything; that he did not know any more after hearing it than before. Some people expect entirely too much of a lecturer. "They think that after furnishing the argument the lecturer should furnish them the brains to understand it." Our collection was good. We giv the people a chance to vote whether we will hav another lecture or not, and then pass the hat; and we always hav it by a large majority. We are in favor of a small "surplus." Now, will you be kind enough to send me four TRUTH SEEKER ANNUALS for 1891 for the inclosed dollar?

Yours for Universal Mental Liberty, A. YORK.

GIBSON, GA., Jan. 23, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I wish to continue to read the good and valuable journal as long as I liv to read anything. I hav never been able to get you any new subscribers in my settlement. Some say they would like to read it but are not able to pay that price for the paper, and some will say they are already taking more papers than they can read, and others say they do not like the paper on account of its Infidelity to the Christian orthodoxy, and there are some no doubt who do not want to read it and would not allow others to read it if they could avoid it. A large majority of the people in this portion of Georgia are professors in some Christian church, and very few of them ever read, except a little in the local political papers. Even the church-members do not read their Bible. They almost always employ a parson to read it for them and tell them what it means. And the good parson reads the good book for them and tells them what is the meaning of it and they are satisfied with what the parson said about it. And they pay the parson for his trouble and he goes on his way rejoicing. The wealthy hav plenty to pay their preachers, and they are willing to pay them because the preachers can show them that God can make a camel go through the eye of a needle and a rich man can go to heaven, provided he does not glory in his riches and loves God better than his riches. The rich man must giv freely, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver; and he that givs to the poor lends to the Lord, and they giv to the poor parson and think they hav great treasures laid up in heaven and that their gifts will be like bread cast upon the waters to be gathered many days hence, and they are happy over the affair. And the parsons warn them against Infidelity, which they say is on the increase. And there certainly is some truth in that, because I know of my own observation in the last five years there has been a falling off of fidelity to the Christian teaching. SEABORN KITCHENS.

MILAN, MO., Jan. 31, 1890.

MR. EDITOR: Why is it that there is no effort made by Liberal lecturers to do some work in Missouri? There is no place where missionary work is more needed. I think a lecturer could work up a few towns in this vicinity and help out darkest America. The church people hav had their way long enough. I am anxious to rub their hair the wrong way again. We had the great Underwood here for two courses, also Mrs. Perry, Leo Miller, and others some years ago, but the Liberals quit on that, and some went back to the beggarly elements. One of the most outspoken is now deacon in the Methodist brimstone mill. The Spiritualists hav kept up circles and made some accessions to their ranks. The Liberals are too timid. If they would on all occasions speak their sentiments, there would be a very perceptible weakening of the church power; besides, by their showing their colors more would take courage, read our papers, investigate, and shake off the nightmare of superstition that envelops them. I wish arrangements could be made at Kirksville and Milan to hav Remsburg stop off and stir up the advocates of sacred mistakes. If Liberals would giv one-half for lectures they do for churches, we might hav speakers during the winter months, and if the pious Christians were refused a few times they would cease to beg of Liberals. Not long ago a Methodist preacher came into my office asking aid to pay a debt on his church. I told him I would giv him $15 on condition that he devote one Sunday to scriptural reading and myself choose the passages. He did not want my ducats, but any money made by selling rum to the slaves of passion would be legal tender. It is awfully tiresome to hav a man who is a Liberal offer to giv twenty-five cents toward a lecture (as was offered me recently), and then giv $5 to help keep theology in the saddle. I hope all Liberals will awake to a full sense of the work that needs be done, take THE TRUTH SEEKER, and work to advance our lines nearer the messiah camp than was ever done before. H. T. KNIGHT.

WAYLAND, MICH., Jan. 29, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: In THE TRUTH SEEKER of Jan. 17, 1891, in the "Letters from Friends," I saw a letter from Mango, Ind., signed Sol Spirow. It commences: "To the so-called Truth Seeker Company: That you may know that this is a Christian nation and the church will and must rule in spite of all your false teachings, Liberals and Freethinkers are leaving your Infidel ranks by hundreds in this state and joining our order, the Patrons of Industry, and signing our by-laws." Now, one hundred rods from where I liv the Patrons of Industry hav a lodge in the school-house, and almost all my neighbors too belong to that lodge, but I know of only one Freethinker in that lodge, and he is only a half one; and according to Sol Spirow Freethinkers must be a good deal thicker in Indiana than in Michigan. Sol Spirow says, "Liberals and Freethinkers are joining by hundreds our order, the Patrons of Industry, and signing our by-laws." Now, there is not a word in the constitution or by-laws enjoining any member of the order to sign anything. Then Sol Spirow says, "The heading of our by-laws reads as follows: 'We, the citizens, farmers, and employees of North America,'" and so forth. Now, there is no such thing in the by-laws. The above is in the preamble of the constitution, and not in the by-laws. When a new member comes for the president, the president says to the new member, "You will not be required to take an oath or affirmation, but you shall promis upon your honor as a citizen that you will observe the constitution and laws." And last, Sol Spirow says in his letter, "Now, what will you do about it? The amendment to the Constitution will come." Sol Spirow would better wait till the amendment to the Constitution comes and gets the majority of electors. Then Spirow can say this is a Christian nation. I know some Patrons of Industry Christians who will not vote for the amendment. I advise Sol Spirow to take them right in, Liberals and Freethinkers, to the Patrons of Industry order, and when the amendment to the Constitution comes take a club and make everyone vote for the amendment. JOSEPH WENZEL.

GARDEAN, PA., Jan. 9, 291.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find $6 to apply on the grand old TRUTH SEEKER, our indispensable family Bible. Should anything prevent its forthcoming I should fear the consequence would be great. I am sure it is kind in you to send your paper after expiration of subscription. Perhaps you think as I once heard an agent for goods say—he first learned a man's religion, and if an Agnostic he feared not to trust, if Christian he wished security. He assured me that all true Freethinkers were honest; if found to be tricky, they were tainted with Christianity.

Please allow me to insert here a circumstance showing self-confidence in the man of God. Gardean is a little lumber town full of bigots, but not enough to furnish a church, neither a saloon. Just before Christmas the ladies thought to surprise the children with a Christmas tree. Money was raised by the inhabitants for presents and expenses. When every preparation was made, children drilled in their exercises, and in the mean time great care was taken that everything should be said and done in accordance with the occasion. In fact, much skill was exhibited in behalf of the lady committee. If you could call a Christian entertainment nice, that one was. But just as all were interested, who should enter but the meek and lowly man of God, or sky-pilot? At once the sisters evacuated the stage, leaving all to his charge. He informed us he learned of the entertainment, and knowing the lack of material to work with he came. And then taking a view of everything and everyone around him, he said: "An entertainment of this kind on such a sacred occasion cannot be conducted properly without the material in the form of a pastor. You hav done as well as can be expected without the material. The material must be in the form of a pastor, and without, it is not complete." His remarks were very disagreeable, and many were disgusted with him. Since, I hav learned it was the material in the form of an envelope containing $30 he expected to see on the Christmas tree, which the women smuggled out of the amount given for the children. A little candy or popcorn was sufficient for the children, the proceeds to be given to those able-bodied sky-pilots for teaching them to lie.

MRS. E. N. FAIRCHILD.

HAVANA, ILL., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Having read the article in last week's paper by Mr. Wettstein, in reply to W. W. Walker, I feel disposed to make a short reply to his so-called mathematical disposition of souls, or spirits.

In the first place, he sets out to giv us a mathematical demonstration, but fails entirely in his effort, and simply givs us an exceedingly conglomerate dose of bald assertions, which hav no foundation in fact. He seems to lose sight of the undisputed fact that there is no accumulation of matter in the universe, and, if it were a fact that every human being on earth at its demise evolves a soul or spirit into space, and that soul occupies the same amount of space as did the mortal form, there would be no more space occupied than before, and though countless millions of spirits hav thus been evolved into space we still hav plenty of breathing-room and room to "flap our wings." And right here I will call the gentleman to order, while making a statement which is agreed to by every believer in the spiritual idea, viz.: 1. Spirits do not hav wings, therefore they require no space in which to flap, the wing business being an effete orthodox idea too heathenish for consideration; 2. With spirits, as we understand it, time and space are annihilated, and their movements are similar to our thoughts, and they move through space with equal celerity and with as little obstruction from matter.

I will further state to our friend Wettstein that I hav in my hands a mathematical problem which was worked and demonstrated, and the exact result given, by some unseen power which I am pleased to call spirit, through a medium in my presence alone. The problem had been sent through the mail from a party two hundred miles away, and was lying in the post-office in this city when the answer was given me. Neither I nor the medium had any knowledge of what the problem was, nor had the party in St. Louis any knowledge or even the remotest idea that such an experiment was to be tried. Neither was it known to me or the medium that the problem had yet arrived at the office in this city, only as it was asserted by the controling spirit at the time.

Now, if Mr. Wettstein or anyone else can demonstrate to me that the answer to the problem was given in any other way or by any other means than spirit power, I am willing to admit Materialism and acknowledge ourselvs all mushrooms. H. H. PHILBRICK.

HURON, S. D., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: With your permission, I will speak with our Materialistic friends. I hav been a constant reader of THE TRUTH SEEKER for, I think, twelve years or more. I enjoy the perusal of its pages with great pleasure, and when it is read send it forth among friends and neighbors to do missionary work. I hav many a hearty laugh at the sayings of, and arguments advanced by, our Materialistic friends. Yes, a hearty laugh, and do you know why? Their railings against Spiritualists sound just like my railings against them about thirty years ago, with this difference, I think I abused the Spiritualists even worse than the Materialists do now. Well, against my will I visited a medium and received such a test as to what was at that moment passing in my home sixty miles away that I saw that some intelligence separate and apart from ourselvs must hav traversed the sixty miles and hav conveyed the knowledge. Returning home, I found the statement correct in every particular. I quietly began an investigation of the subject which ended in after years in the acceptance of the fact that mankind does not cease to liv and love after the change called death. Space will not admit a history of my experiments in this field of investigation. Suffice it to state that I found truth and falsehood side by side, just as we do in all transactions of life. I kept steadily on my course, not caring for the jeers of my friends, until such time as I was convinced that the philosophy (not religion, for it is not a religion) of Spiritualism was true, when I came out boldly and said so. I derive great pleasure and happiness from the continued investigation of the phenomena. To our friends who say it is not so: Suppose you one and all establish at your own fireside (if it is a harmonious one, if not harmonious your attempts will prove failures) a home circle. Sit quietly with hands joined on a table without castors or spread. Continue this six months if necessary, once or twice a week if you can spare the time. But let it be at a fixed hour and for the hour you sit do not let anyone come in or go out of the room. Let the desire to obtain the truth be the only incentiv. If the railers at mediums will pursue this course the result in a large number of cases will be wonderful. If you want to invite in a medium do so; but it is not necessary. You can develop a medium in your own circle if you will be patient and persevering, desiring to obtain the truth only as to a future state of existence. Is it worth your while to try it? It will cost you but little. Or hav you all reached that pinnacle of knowledge that you know it all? To say I accept all the theories that are advanced by so-called Spiritualists would be false, for I do not. I believe a person livs after he ceases to breathe, in a place fitted to his needs just as much as this world is fitted to his needs when he is born into this life. I believe that under certain conditions, governed by laws to us unknown, the so-called dead can communicate with the living. This is the sum and substance of the belief of seven out of ten of Spiritualists. Friend Wettstein need not fear he will be crowded in the future life. He will find that a person who livs wholly for self in this life has lived in vain. He will hav plenty of room in the next world. VERITAS.

MEMPHIS, TENN., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: A clerical hornets' nest has lately been stirred up in this city. The cause of the buzzing by the reverend hornets, is the granting of permission by the city council to giv Sunday-night concerts at one of the theaters. No sooner had the consent of the council been obtained, than the Protestant clergy of the city protested under the plea of Sabbath-breaking, and formed a league for the purpose of influencing their Christian followers against such worldly amusements, and, if need be, invoking the aid of the law to put a stop to such unholy "desecration" of the Sabbath:

A meeting of ministers was held at the First Presbyterian church yesterday evening to take some action in regard to the granting of the Sunday concert privilege by the council last Thursday. A special committee on Sabbath observance was appointed and they will report Monday morning. In the mean time the following letter, signed by about one hundred people, was sent to Vice-President Pettit:

"Your fellow-citizens whose names you find subscribed beg to thank you, in open letter, for your advocacy of their most sacred rights in claiming for them a Sabbath devoted to rest and religious exercises, exclusiv of the desecration of the Lord's day by operatic concerts on Sabbath night. Be assured that herein you represent the sacred sentiment of the best and purest men and women in this city. With high esteem, in the name of many whose devotion to the Sabbath will soon be attested by organized effort, we are gratefully yours."

It is always a good thing to hav a civil law to fall back on when their Christian persuasion fails. Where the "desecration" of the Sabbath comes in, when playing music on Sunday, is more than any person can find out, unless one is versed in the theological methods of reasoning. For instance, if a concert is given Sunday night at any of the theaters, it is called "Sabbath desecration," even if "sacred" music is rendered, but if the same music is played in any of the churches it will alter the circumstances, so that it at once becomes acceptable to the auricular functions of the Christians' God. The music, however, in spite of its "unholy" and "desecrating" tendencies when played in a theater on a Sunday, forms a very important factor in aiding the pastor in the filling of the pews with people; for without the aid of good music, the church attendance would soon dwindle into a sorry display of empty benches, and even the most faithful church-members would soon get tired of listening to the dry, antiquated theological harangs dished up every Sunday, and perhaps stay away from the church, were it not for the drawing power of the sweet strains from some musical instrument in harmony with the human voice. Knowing this fact, the different churches vie with each other in procuring the sweetest singers, the greatest organs, and the best performers.

I hav often wondered why some enterprising pastor does not engage a first-class orchestra to interpret classical composers to his congregation, in place of his explaining, for the two-thousand-and-second time, that, for instance, Moses was the meekest man that ever lived, that David was a man after God's own heart, that Jonah did not swallow the whale but the whale swallowed Jonah, and that if we do not believe that Jesus Christ was born of a virgin and came to suffer punishment for sins that neither he nor we ever committed, we shall be eternally damned.

Not long ago I read in the papers about a preacher who declared that the devil shall not monopolize all the best music, and consequently went and hired an orchestra to play in his church. Perhaps before long we shall see in Sunday morning papers the program of music to be played in Rev. Mr. Blackcoat's church, side by side with Bible texts to be expatiated upon by the Very Rev. Dr. Hellblaze, in St. McCorkle's cathedral; we may be invited to come and listen to Rev. Prof. Batonswing's orchestra in the Second Hardshell Baptist church, at the same time we are cordially invited to come and hear Dr. Howling's discourse on original sin and human depravity in the First Trinitarian-Methodist-Episcopal-Anglomaniac church.

The theaters with their "immoral" shows must be crushed, the opera houses with their "desecrating" music must be shut on the "holy Sabbath," even if the strong arm of the law must be applied. People who want to listen to music on Sunday must come to church. Sunday is the business day of the church. No competition tolerated.

A curtain in one of the theaters of this city is also under the ban of the clergy. The picture on this curtain, representing Antony's reception of Cleopatra, is "immoral," because the artist forgot to put a wrapper on Cleopatra and bathing suits on the nymphs swimming around her vessel. Why cannot a preacher look upon a picture of human forms, even if the clothes should not be represented as heavy as those worn every day, without impure thoughts flashing through his soiled brains? Why cannot a preacher look upon a picture or painting of this kind as a work of art and not as one of immorality?

If the ministers of the gospel will confine their warfare against indecent advertising pictures, profusely displayed on every thoroughfare, and against the numerous demoralizing dens of iniquity and gambling-hells of the city, they deserve and ought to hav the hearty support of every good and order-loving citizen, but when they insist on condemning works of art, when not immoral, and innocent amusements on the first day of the week, under the plea of Sabbath-desecration, they should be looked upon with contempt and treated as enemies of humanity. J. WILTON.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

Origin of Yankee Doodle.

[The origin of the tune of "Yankee Doodle," the inspiring notes of which hav cheered many a man in the hour of battle, was as follows. The British who composed it in derision, were doubtless brought to "laugh at the other side of their mouths" before they heard the last of it.

In the summer of 1775, the British army under command of Abercrombie lay encamped on the east bank of the Hudson river a little south of the city of Albany, awaiting reinforcements of the militia from the Eastern states previous to marching upon Ticonderoga. During the month of June, these raw levies poured into camp, company after company, each man differently armed, equipped, and accoutered from his neighbor, and the whole presenting such a spectacle as was never equaled, unless by the celebrated regiment of merry Jack Falstaff.

Their outre appearance furnished great amusement to the British officers. One Dr. Shackburg, an English surgeon, composed the tune of Yankee Doodle, and arranged it to words which were gravely dedicated to the recruits. The joke took, and the tune has come down to this day. The original words are taken from "Farmer and Moore's Historical Collections," published in 1824.]

Father and I went down to camp,
Along with Captain Goodwin,
Where we seen the men and boys
As thick as hasty-pudding.

There was Captain Washington
Upon a slapping stallion,
A-giving orders to his men—
I guess there was a million.

And then the feathers on his hat,
They looked so tarnal fina,
I wanted peskily to get
To giv to my Jemima.

And here they had a swampin' gun
As large as a log of maple,
On a deuced little cart—
A load for father's cattle;

And every time they fired it off,
It took a horn of powder;
It made a noise like father's gun,
Only a nation louder.

I went as near to it myself
As Jacob's underpinnin',
And father went as near again,—
I thought the deuce was in him.

And there I see a little keg,
Its heads were made of leather—
They knocked upon't with little sticks,
To call the folks together.

And there they'd fife away like fun,
And play on cornstalk fiddles,
And some had ribbons red as blood
All bound about their middles.

The troopers, too, would gallop up
And fire right in our faces;
It scar'd me almost half to death
To see them run such races.

Old Uncle Sam came there to change
Some pancakes and some onions,
For 'lasses cakes to carry home,
To giv his wife and young ones.

But I can't tell you half I seen,
They kept up such a smother,
So I took my hat off—made a bow,
And scampered home to mother.

A Few Days in Boston.

Boston in a wet day! It is slippy, sloppy, mizzly, muddy. Men are to be envied in such weather.

You see, a man can turn down the rim of his slouch hat, deposit his hands in the pockets of his mackintosh, and stride gracefully along in brave defiance of wind and weather. But a woman, with a satchel, a bag, a parcel, and shawl tightly grasped in one hand, and an umbrella in the other, has to gather up an armful of skirts and pick her way as best she can over the sloshy pave. A man has pockets, lots of 'em, in his garments. A woman has a watch-pocket, and one more, and that last, in these days of queer fashions, is hidden in the most outlandish and uncomeatable place in her gown. A lady trying to find her pocket nowadays goes through such gyrations, such twisting, turning, and diving, as would astonish an acrobatic performer. It is generally believed that if a man was hampered and fettered by his clothes as women are by theirs, he wouldn't be long for this world. He would soon shuffle off this mortal coil along with the coil of clothing, in sheer despair, if he didn't lose his mind as well as temper in the adjustment of his robes.

It was on one such misty, measly, miserable day, when the snow melted as soon as it touched the ground, that the editor of the Children's Corner found her way into one of the twenty-four kindergartens in this city. The little toddlers, from three and a half to five years, were on hand promptly, and if you hav never visited one of these schools, never was a member of one, you hav missed something out of your life that you may be sorry for. The dear little faces were aglow with health, and the stirring of new thought. Of all schools for young children the kindergarten takes precedence. Here you can see how thought grows, quickens, and expands; how it is turned into bright, hopeful, healthy channels.

A narrow-minded person called a "lady" once said to the writer, "We don't want public kindergartens. We want a little private one for our children, but for the poorer classes the primaries are good enough!" So they are good enough for any child. But if there is anything better, let us hav it in addition, and let it be for all, without distinction of class or condition. That which is good for one child is good for every other without reference to caste or race. In the Boston kindergartens, which are public, side by side sit the children of rich and poor, black and white, and your editor noted that the little colored children were at times quicker-witted than some of their whiter neighbors.

From the kindergarten it was but a step to a kitchen school, of which there are five in activ operation under the public school management of this city.

If you could hav seen the eager, earnest faces of the little girl cooks, could hav noted the amount of information conveyed in the lesson that morning, you would hav been deeply impressed with the importance of this useful branch of domestic science.

We may liv without poetry, music, and art,
We may liv without conscience and liv without heart;
We may liv without friends, we may liv without books,
But civilized man cannot liv without cooks.

The tendency of modern education is toward the useful and the practical. We can all realize the force of this saying of Michelet, "The education which puts notions into the head but no skill into the hand is a curse." From that which I witnessed in the kitchen school, added to the opinions of those who hav watched its operations for five years, the desirability of its introduction at an early date into all schools of grammar and higher grade may plainly be seen. Scientific cooking means a knowledge of grains, meats, vegetables, herbs, milk, fruits, etc., and how to make them palatable and inviting. The school kitchen teaches not only how to prepare wholesome food, but it conveys instruction in cleanliness, teaches watchfulness, care, good judgment, quick application, accuracy, thrift, economy, industry, and independence.

The kitchen visited by your editor is in the basement of the Starr King school. That day the class was instructed in invalid cooking, i.e., cooking for the sick. There were fifteen in the class, and the little cooks wore white caps and white kitchen aprons. Under the direction of the teacher they learned that day to make Irish moss, blanc mange, two kinds of jelly, oatmeal gruel, ice-cream, three kinds of toast, lemonade, appleade, and orangeade. Three little maids acted as housekeepers. They attended to the larder and looked out for the sugar, salt, flour, etc., besides washing dishes, and writing out recipes of the articles cooked.

All the time the teacher was giving instruction in the preparation of the articles, she also gave advice relativ to the uses and qualities of the same, and threw out many hints about the care of the sick, kindness to invalids, proper nursing, and the like. Twenty lessons complete the course in this branch, and include baking, broiling, stewing, roasting, and all kinds of plain, ordinary cooking. From this the girls learn enough to conduct the cooking of a family.

One mother said, "I never had a vacation in all my married life till my Mary went to cooking-school and learned to cook." What a help to tired mothers! I thought of our girls of the Corner, and wondered if they know as much about cooking as these in the Starr King school. Some of them do, I know, and are of great assistance to their mothers. I remember my first service in the kitchen. I stood on a cricket and washed my own little cup and plate. How proud I was that I was able to do something for myself and to help my mamma!

The progressiv women begin celebrating to-day the fortieth anniversary of the first national woman's rights convention, held in Worcester, this state, in 1850. The audiences are large and enthusiastic. Looking over the refined, intellectual, and decidedly interesting gathering, any man might blush to think such women are denied the right of representation in a professedly free country! The addresses and papers were exceptionally fine, especially that of Mary A. Greene, a member of the Boston bar. Her subject was, "Women and the Law."

In the state house this morning I felt, as always when under the gilded dome (the dome of our state house is gilded, and shines in the sun like gold), the shame of it that women are forbidden the privilege of the franchise, for no reason except that they are women. Trades, professions, causes of different kinds, hav representation here, all but the cause of women. Men correctly represent women, some say. Oh, no! That is not true. How would it seem if only women came up here to the state house, to participate in business and to frame laws? Would you be properly represented, gentlemen?

A letter from a distinguished official gave me ready entrance to the executiv chamber and a pleasant chat with his excellency, Governor Russell. The governor may look like a "beardless boy," but he has all the dignity, grace, courtliness, sympathy, and kindness belonging to one occupying the honorable position of chief magistrate of a noble commonwealth like Massachusetts.

In the room occupied by the lower part of the state legislature, called house of representativs, directly across from the speaker's desk there is a representativ codfish. It is not everyone that knows why it is there. One of the members of the house was once asked why it was there, and he replied: "I dunno—guess 'tis more for ornament than anything else." But that is not exactly true. It has a history which I may relate briefly. The fish made its original appearance in the first state house of Massachusetts, the old one, nearly a hundred years ago.

Mr. John Rowe was the one who first suggested the throwing overboard of the tea in Boston harbor, that you read of in your histories. And it was at his instigation that the codfish was placed in the room where the representativs of the people sit, as a memorial of the great importance of the cod fishery to the welfare of the commonwealth. In the old time much more depended upon this nativ industry than in the present with its diversified interests and wide commercial business. In the formativ influences of the grand old commonwealth the codfish bore conspicuous prominence.

The anniversary of Thomas Paine's birthday was celebrated in Boston, at Paine Memorial, on Sunday the 25th, a little in advance of the actual natal day. The weather was very disagreeable, but the company was splendid. It was pleasant to renew old acquaintances, and also to meet new ones. But the tears would come as we all thought of those we had met in that place so many times in former years, whose words were always brave, helpful, cheerful. We missed their familiar faces, but their memories will remain fragrant and fresh as the rose as long as we liv.

S. H. W.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 27, 1891.

Correspondence.

BROCKTON, MASS., Jan. 18, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This being the Christian rest-day, and as it is raining so hard that we cannot go driving, I thought I would write a line to the Corner. We are all Freethinkers dyed in the wool. We take THE TRUTH SEEKER, the Investigator; also we hav a good supply of Freethinkers' books; among them are "Mistakes of Moses," "The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book," "Apples of Gold," and many others. In our parlor we hav the pictures of Thomas Paine, Robert G. Ingersoll, and other great men. But some of our neighbors think it awful. But we liv as we preach, every-day Freethinkers. I shall be thirteen the 20th of this month. My weight is one hundred and twenty pounds. Your friend, KATIE C. PAGE.

[Glad to hear from you, Katie. Write again.—ED. C. C.]

NEWLON, MONT., Jan. 10, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write to you once more to let you know how I am getting along. I am well at the present time, and hope you are the same. Our school was out the 2d day of January. We are going to hav another school the 15th, I guess. There are not many Freethinkers in this part of the state; the people are mostly Catholics. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for a long time, and thinks there is not so good a paper in the world. I am thirteen years old. I study arithmetic, reading, spelling, history, physiology, geography, grammar, drawing, and writing. My teacher's name is Miss Lizzie Hurst. We milk four cows; I milk two and my brother Charley two. Well, I will close, as my letter is getting rather long. Hoping to see this in print, I remain, as ever,

Your Liberal friend,

NORAH A. LOVERING.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 29, 1890.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I think it is about time for me to write for the Corner again.

I hav not written for the Corner since I left Wheeling, W. Va. We moved here the 20th of June last.

I like here much better than I did in Wheeling.

This is a much larger place than Wheeling, but I would rather liv in the country than in the city.

I could feed the horses, cows, sheep, pigs, etc.

We used to liv in the country when I was smaller.

Columbus has about one hundred thousand inhabitants.

There is a big shop called the Columbus Buggy Co., which employs about one thousand workmen, and there is another called the Buckeye Shop. It employs about six hundred men. Pa is in the picture business. He solicits orders for pictures, then sends them to Altoona, Pa., to be enlarged.

I help him some about collecting Saturdays and days when there is no school.

I go to the Twenty-third street school. I am in the Fourth Reader. I study geography, arithmetic, language, reading, spelling, and drawing. I am going to the Garfield school next Monday, January 5th. I like to go to school very well. I hav about five hundred schoolmates to play with. Don't you think that is enough? My little sister goes to the Garfield school now. She is in the Second Reader. My oldest sister doesn't go to school. She had seventeen flowers, but some of them froze; but she has ten left. We hav a bird. He has two pieces which he sings. I guess he can't learn any more.

We just had over a foot of snow, which is melting off fast. I like deep snow when it is not cold. I hav only three correspondents now; I did hav seven. My father is away now. My sister is writing to some of her correspondents. I received Christmas an engin which runs by itself, handkerchiefs, candy, and nuts. We don't celebrate Christmas, because it is a Christian's day. We will celebrate New Year's day.

I read an essay on Thomas Paine's birthday when I was in Wheeling. Pa sent my sister's and my picture to be enlarged. I will be glad when they come. It is about time for them to come. I used to get lots of papers sent to me when I was in Wheeling. Pa is going to join the Patriotic Order of Sons of America. This order is opposed to the union of church and state. It is time for us to organize, so as to work against an established religion.

Liberals are not working as hard as the Catholics are. They are working hard, and even boasting that we will soon hav an established religion—one that will be the Catholic religion.

I think when they make such declarations it is time for Liberals to wake up, and unless we do we will come under the Romish church. I will ask some Liberal boys and girls to write to me.

Well, I guess my letter is long enough, so I will close. Good-bye.

ORLO INGERSOLL NOE.

Increase of a Nickel.

Some time ago the Ladies' Aid Society of this city agreed to invest a nickel in some kind of article and sell it at a profit, and reinvest in something else, and so on, to speculate on this capital for two weeks and see how much each one could make.

One lady on the same evening of the meeting bought a cabbage with her nickel. She carried it home and sold half of it to her neighbor for a nickel. She invested that in vinegar and pickled the remaining half and sold the pickle for twenty-five cents. She then bought twenty cents' worth of cloth and a spool of thread and made it up into three aprons, which she sold for twenty-five cents each, and took the seventy-five cents and bought molasses and gave a candy-pulling to the children, making them pay ten cents a plate for the candy. The molasses made twenty-one plates of candy, so she made $2.10 on one nickel in two weeks' time. How money will grow if properly used.

THE
CHAMPIONS OF THE CHURCH:
THEIR
Crimes and Persecutions.
8vo, 1,119pp. Cloth, $3; leather, $4; morocco, gilt edges, $4.50.
BY D. M. BENNETT.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Col. Kelso's Works.
The Bible Analyzed. "For Sledge-hammer Logic unsurpassed." 8vo, 833pp., silk cloth, $3.
Spiritualism Sustained. This work goes not so far to sustain Spiritualism as to show that Christians are inconsistent in denying the alleged truths of that philosophy. Cloth, 12mo, 245pp., $1.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs by Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, but the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Outcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitution Guerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Republic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected under Religious Rule.
What Uncle Sam Should Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Churches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportunity.
As the Clergy Desire Sunday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Our Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Church Institutions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Products of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religious Trap.
Sunday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitude to Freedom.
Encouragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Church's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Church.
The Church's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot.
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denounced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Church.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Question for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolution.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Numerous Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Duty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Triumphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Drouth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Our Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janus-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Our Country, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conquest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Church of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Result of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Put their Sins.
Jesus Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for True Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxious Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occurrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Churchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossus of New York.
The Political Caliban and the Religious Rogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Question.
The Churches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Trouble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Church, "Don't Hurt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Church True to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Church and State.

Some Allegories.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Outside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via. Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Surprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occupation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolution to Orthodoxy.
The Evolution of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crusade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams, D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths, A. Bierbower, M. Babcock, Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway, Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought, Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A. Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe, Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach, Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages, Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll, President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, PercyBysshe Shelley, Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills, Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster. Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Self-Contradictions of the Bible.

144 MORAL, THEOLOGICAL, HISTORICAL, AND SPECULATIVE PROPOSITIONS.
Price, 15 cents.

SEPHER TOLDOTH JESHU.
Book of the Generation of Jesus. First Trans. from the Hebrew Original Story of Jesus.
Price, 15 cents.

SHELLEY AS A PHILOSOPHER AND REFORMER.
By C. SOTHERAN.
Paper, 8vo, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

SHORT LESSON IN HISTORY FOR CHRISTIANS.
A CARTOON
From The Truth Seeker, July 11, 1885.
17x24 in. 6 for 30c., 12 for 50c., 25 for $1, 100 for $3.

JOHN'S WAY. Radical Domestic Story. 15 cents. By Mrs. E. D. Slenker.

LITTLE LESSONS FOR LITTLE FOLKS.
By MRS. E. D. SLENKER.
Boards, 40 cents.

SOUL PROBLEMS.
WITH THEOLOGICAL AMENDMENT AND STATE PERSONALITY.
By Joseph E. Peck.
Pap., 25c.

SPIRITUALISM
FROM A MATERIALISTIC STANDPOINT.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, 10 cents.

Religion Not History.

Examination of the Morals and History of the New Testament.
By PROF. F. W. NEWMAN.
Price, 25 cents.

RELIGION of COMMON SENSE.
By Professor L. Uhlich.
Price, 35 cents.

PAINE VINDICATED.

Reply to N. Y. Observer.
By R. G. INGERSOLL.
With "ROMAN CATHOLIC CANARD."
Price, 15 cents.

Scientific Materialism:

ITS MEANING and TENDENCY.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
Price, . . . 10 cents.

TRUTH SEEKER TRACTS.

(Bound.)
Vols. I, II, III, IV, V, 18mo, 525 pages in each vol.
Per vol, pap., 60c.

TWELVE TRACTS.

Bible Worship.
Darwinism.
Design Argument.
Evolution.
Jesus Not Perfect.
Underwood's Prayer.
By B. F. UNDERWOOD.
25 cents.

TWO HUNDRED POETICAL RIDDLES.
For the Instruction and Amusement of Youth.
By E. D. Blakeman.
25 cents.

TWO LITTLE RED MITTENS.
A Story of the Rightway Almshouse. By Jennie Butler Browne. 5 cents.

UNDERWOOD-MARPLES DEBATE

ON THE EXISTENCE OF A PERSONAL GOD AND INSPIRATION OF SCRIPTURES.
Between B. F. UNDERWOOD and Rev. J. Marples.
Paper, 35 cents; cloth, 60.

VOLTAIRE IN EXILE.

Memoirs.
His Life and Works in France and Abroad.
And Unpublished Correspondence With Mme. du Chatelet.
By E. GASTINEAU.
Price, paper, 75 cents; cloth, $1.

WAIFS AND WANDERINGS.
A Liberal Novel.
By SAMUEL P. PUTNAM.
Pap., 50c.; clo., $1.

BIBLE IDOLATRY.

By R. G. INGERSOLL.
Price, 8 cents; per dozen, 80 cents; per 100, $2.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

EVOLUTION:

A SUMMARY OF EVIDENCE.
BY CAPT. R. C. ADAMS.
"One of the cheapest and best books on the subject."
Paper, 15 cents.

Advancement of Science

The Belfast Address.
BY PROF. JOHN TYNDALL.
With Portrait, Biographical Sketch, and Articles on Prayer.
Paper, 12mo, 105 pp., 25 cents.
Address and Portrait only, 69pp., 10 cents.

AGE OF REASON.

INVESTIGATION OF
TRUE AND FABULOUS THEOLOGY.
By THOMAS PAINE.
Paper, 8vo, 152 pages, 25 cents; 6 copies, $1.
With EXAMINATION OF THE PROPHECIES, pap. 40c.

ALAMONTADA,
THE GALLEY SLAVE.
By J. H. D. ZSCHOKKE.
"A philosophical romance."
Paper, 25 cents.

LIFE OF JESUS.

HIS CHARACTER AND DOCTRIN.
Being a chapter from "Analysis of Religious Belief."
By VISCOUNT AMBERLEY.
Paper, 8vo, 170pp., 25 cents.

Answers to Christian Questions and Arguments.

By D. M. BENNETT.
Paper, 146pp., 25 cents.

AWFUL DISCLOSURES OF MARIA MONK.

CONVENT MYSTERIES.
Paper, 50 cents; cloth, 75.

GHOST OF ST. JOHNS.
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, 15 cents.

RELIGION OF HUMANITY

better than
ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.

By M. BABCOCK.
Price, 10 cents.

ROARING LION ON THE TRACK.

By M. BABCOCK.
Price, 10 cents.

SUPERSTITION:
RELIGION OF
"BELIEVE OR BE DAMNED."
By M. BABCOCK.
Price, 15 cents.

Why Don't God Kill the Devil?

By M. BABCOCK.
Price, 25 cents.

THE CLERGYMAN'S VICTIMS.
A LIBERAL STORY. By Mrs. J. E. Ball.
Price, 25 cents.

JESUS CHRIST:
His LIFE,
TEACHINGS, and IMPERFECTIONS.
By W. S. BELL.
Price, 25 cents.

RESURRECTION of JESUS:

CONTRADICTIONS Involved In.
By W. S. BELL.
Price, 10 cents.

FIRST EPISTLE of
BENNETT, Apostle, to TRUTH SEEKERS.
By D. M. BENNETT.
Price, 10 cents.

GODS OF SUPERSTITION.
By D. M. BENNETT.
Price, 8 cents.

For all of the above books address
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

The Humboldt Library of Science.

In this series are well represented the writings of DARWIN, SPENCER, HUXLEY, TYNDALL, PROCTOR, CLIFFORD and other leaders of thought in our time, at 50 to 75 per cent. lower than usual prices.

We have the Library bound in Complete Sets, as follows:

OLD STYLE.—In this style the volumes average 640 pages 8vo, and are arranged thus:

Vol. I.	Nos. 1-12.	Vol. VI.	Nos. 60-70.
" II.	" 13-24	" VII.	" 71-80.
" III.	" 25-36.	" VIII.	" 81-91.
" IV.	" 37-48.	" IX.	" 92-103.
" V.	" 49-59.	" X.	" 104-111.

Cloth, plain edges, $2 vol. (Separately or in sets.)
Half seal, marble edges, $2.75 vol. (In sets only.)

NEW STYLE.—Nos. 1 to 111 inclusive, are bound in 18 vols., averaging 492 pages each, 8vo, thus:

Cloth, extra, red edges, $1.75 per vol.		$22.75 per set.
Half seal, plain edges, 2.25	"	29 25 "
Half seal, marble edges, 2 50	"	32.50 "
Hlf Mor., marble edges, 2.75	"	33.75 "

In sets only.

All of the following are octavo, cloth:

WORKS BY PROFESSOR HUXLEY.

Man's Place in Nature. Numerous ill.; &
The Origin of Species. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Physical Basis of Life & other Essays.
Lectures on Evolution. Illustrated.
2 books in 1 vol. 75
Animal Automatism, and other Essays.
Technical Education, and other Essays.
2 books in 1 vol. 75

WORKS BY CHARLES DARWIN.

Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection; or, the Preservation of Favored Races in the Struggle for Life. New edition from the latest Eng. edition, with additions and corrections. 1.25
Descent of Man, and Selection in Relation to Sex. With illustrations. New edition revised and augmented. . . . 1.50
Formation of Vegetable Mold Through the Action of Worms, with Observations on their Habits. With illustrations. .75

Charles Darwin: His Life and Work. By Grant Allen. 75

SELECT WORKS BY GRANT ALLEN.

The Evolutionist at Large;
Vignettes from Nature; and
Force and Energy: A Theory of Dynamics. 3 books in 1 vol. . . . 1.00

WATER, ELECTRICITY, AND LIGHT. BY PROFESSOR TYNDALL.

Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. 19 illustrations.
Lessons in Electricity. 60 illustrations.
Six Lectures on Light. Illustrated.
3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

WORKS BY HERBERT SPENCER.

The Data of Ethics. 60
Education: Intellectual, Moral, and Physical; and Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other Disquisitions. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Genesis of Science.
The Factors of Organic Evolution.
2 books in 1 vol. 75

SELECT WORKS OF RICHARD A. PROCTOR, F.R.A.S.

Light Science for Leisure Hours.
Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects.
Hereditary Traits, and other Essays.
Miscellaneous Essays.
Illusions of the Senses, and other Essays.
Notes on Earthquakes, with 14 miscellaneous Essays.
6 books in 1 vol. 1.50

SELECT WORKS OF WM. KINGDON CLIFFORD, F.R.A.S.

Seeing and Thinking.
The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays.
Conditions of Mental Development, and other Essays.
The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences.
Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science.
5 books in 1 vol. 1.25

SELECT WORKS OF EDW. CLODD, F.R.A.S.

The Childhood of Religion.
The Birth and Growth of Myth.
The Childhood of the World.
3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

SELECT WORKS OF TH. RIBOT,

Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

The Diseases of Memory.
The Diseases of the Will.
The Diseases of Personality.
3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

THE MILKY WAY.

The Wonders of the Heavens. 32 Illus. By Camille Flammarion.
The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.
The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Nathan T. Carr, LL.D.
3 books in 1 vol. 1.00

POLITICAL SCIENCE.

Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The Eng. Constitution," and
History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock. 2 books in 1 vol. .75

THE LAND QUESTION.

The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.; and Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birbeck, M.A. 2 books in 1 vol. .75

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Mystery of Matter, and The Philosophy of Ignorance; and
The Essential Nature of Religion. By J. Allanson Picton. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
Science and Crime; and
Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.
2 books in 1 vol. 75

[Continued in next column.]

HUMBOLDT LIBRARY (Continued).

Current Discussions in Science; and Scientific Aspect of Some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S.
2 books in 1 vol. 75
The Black Death. An Account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century; and
The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker, M.D. 2 books in 1 vol. .75
The Naturalist on the River Amazon. A Record of Adventures, Habits of Animals, Sketches of Brazilian and Indian Life and Aspects of Nature Under the Equator, during Eleven Years of Travel, by Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S., Assis. Sec. to the Royal Geographical Society of England. 75
The Rise and Early Constitution of Universities, with a Survey of Medieval Education. By S. S. Laurie, L.L.D., Professor of the Institutes and History of Education in the University of Edinburgh. .75
The Religions of the Ancient World, including Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia, Persia, India, Phœnicia, Etruria, Greece, Rome. By George Rawlinson, M.A., Camden Professor of Ancient History, Oxford, and Canon of Canterbury, author of "The Origin of Nations," "The Five Great Monarchies," etc. 75
Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze. Translated from the German by J. Fitzgerald, M.A. 75
Money and the Mechanism of Exchange. By W. Stanley Jevons, M.A., F.R.S., Professor of Logic and Political Economy in the Owens College, Manchester. . . .75
On the Study of Words. By Richard Chenevix Trench, D.D., Archbishop of Dublin. 75
The Dawn of History: An Introduction to Pre-Historic Study. Edited by C. F. Keary, M.A., of the British Museum. .75
Geological Sketches at Home and Abroad. By Archibald Geikie, LL.D., F.R.S., Director-General of the Geological Surveys of Great Britain and Ireland. . .75
Illusions: A Psychological Study. By James Sully, Author of "Sensation and Intuition," "Pessimism," etc. 75
The Pleasures of Life. (Parts I. and II.) By Sir John Lubbock, Bart. 2 parts in 1. .75
English Past and Present. (Parts I. and II.) By Richard Chenevix Trench. 2 parts in 1, Complete. 75
The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S. Over 80 Illus. 75

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit, on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Samples FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N.Y.

IRON-CLAD AND MANNA SERIES

IRON-CLAD SERIES.

1 Atonement. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
2 Secular Responsibility. G. J. Holyoake.. 5
4 Influence of Christianity on Civilization. Underwood..... 25
7 Buddhist Nihilism. Prof. Max Mueller... 10
8 Religion of Inhumanity. F. Harrison..... 15
9 Relation of Witchcraft to Religion. Lyall. 10
10 Epidemic Delusions. Marvin..... 10
11 Philosophy of Spiritualism. Marvin..... 50
12 Tyndall's Belfast Inaugural, and Portrait... 25
13 Essay on Miracles. David Hume..... 10
14 Land Question. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
15 Were Adam and Eve our First Parents? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
16 Why do Men Starve? Chas. Bradlaugh.. 5
17 Logic of Life, Deduced from the Principle of Freethought. George J. Holyoake. 10
18 A Plea for Atheism. Chas. Bradlaugh.... 10
19 Large or Small Families? A. Holyoake.. 5
20 Superstition Displayed, with a Letter of Wm. Pitt. Austin Holyoake..... 5
21 Defence of Secular Principles. C. Watts.. 5
22 Is the Bible Reliable? Charles Watts.... 5
23 The Christian Deity. Charles Watts..... 5
24 Moral Value of the Bible. Chas. Watts.. 5
25 Freethought and Mod. Progress. Watts. 5
26 Christianity: Its Nature, and Influence on Civilization. Chas. Watts..... 5
28 Thoughts on Atheism. Austin Holyoake. 5
29 Is there a Moral Governor of the Universe? Austin Holyoake..... 5
30 Philosophy of Secularism. Chas. Watts... 5
31 Has Man a Soul? Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
38 Is There a God? Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
39 Labor's Prayer. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
40 Poverty: Its Cause and Cure. M. G. H.. 10
42 Science and Bible Antagonistic. Watts... 5
43 Christian Scheme of Redemption. Watts. 5
44 Logic of Death; or, Why Should the Atheist Fear to Die? G. J. Holyoake. 10
47 Poverty: Its Effects on the Political Condition of the People. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5

MANNA SERIES.

1 Original Manna for "God's chosen."..... 5
3 New Life of David. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
4 Why I was Excommunicated. Barnard... 20
5 200 Questions Without Answers..... 5
6 Dialogue between a Christian Missionary and a Chinese Mandarin..... 10
7 Queries Submitted to the Bench of Bishops by a Weak but Zealous Christian..... 10
8 Search After Heaven and Hell. A. Holyoake..... 5
9 New Life of Jonah. Chas. Bradlaugh..... 5
10 A Few Words about the Devil..... 5
11 New Life of Jacob..... 5
12 Daniel, the Dreamer. Austin Holyoake... 10
13 Specimen of the Bible: Esther. Holyoake 10
14 Acts of the Apostles: A Farce. A. H.... 10
15 Ludicrous Aspects of Christianity. A. H. 10
16 Twelve Apostles. Charles Bradlaugh..... 5
17 Who Was Jesus Christ? C. Bradlaugh... 5
18 What Did Jesus Teach? C. Bradlaugh.... 5
19 New Life of Abraham. Chas. Bradlaugh. 5
20 New Life of Moses. Charles Bradlaugh... 5
21 A Secular Prayer. Holyoake. Per doz... 10

On orders for Iron Clad and Manna we will send $1.10 worth for $1; $2.50 worth for $2; $5 worth for $3, and $10 worth for $5.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No. 2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Biblo-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 2
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American, Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 2
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
124 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
13 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

☞ See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1891 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
B. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

Science in Plain Language.

I. EVOLUTION, ANTIQUITY, BACTERIA, ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S E.

II. ASTRONOMY, SUN, MOON, STARS, ETC. By William Durham, F.R S.E.

These handy series of volumes on science—of which the above works form the first two numbers, others to follow—are written in a way that cannot fail to make them interesting to even the most casual reader. They supply a popular need. The price of each is 50 cents in cloth.

Address this office, THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes ho'd of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

(Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WETTSTEIN'S
WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17.50; 15 jewels, $18.50; do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $ 5. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

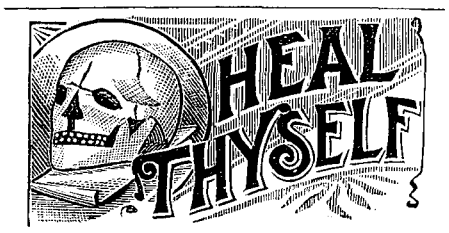
ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN. Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.



With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can have their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.

Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League

Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.

124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7 30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association

Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257

meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,

Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union

Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union

Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club

Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,

Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J.F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union

Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.

FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society

Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union

Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union

Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club

Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union

Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER, 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photographs of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents.

Please Don't Forget It.

That Dr. H. James' Cannabis Indica is prepared in Calcutta, India, from the purest and best Native Hemp, and is the only remedy either in that country or this that will positively and permanently cure Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma, Nasal Catarrh and Nervous Debility or break up a fresh cold in twenty-four hours. $2.50 a bottle, three bottles for $6.50. Craddock & Co., Proprietors, 1032 Race Street, Philadelphia.

News of the Week.

JENNIE BARTH, who was made crazy by the meetings of Revivalist McIntosh at Spring Lake, Mich., two weeks ago, was so violent in the asylum as to require strapping, and in this condition was scalded to death on the 31 by neglect of an attendant giving her a bath.

BOOMERS on the Cherokee Strip are about to be ejected.

REPUBLICANS in Spain and Portugal speak of a union of the two countries in one republic.

NORTH DAKOTA Prohibitionists hav secured a court decision and will try to enforce the law.

THE number of persons frozen to death by the extraordinary cold through Europe reaches hundreds.

THE czar has given no reply to the appeal of the pope against persecution of Roman Catholics in Russia and Poland.

REV. HENRY SIMMONS, of Springfield, O., has been formally accused by Mrs. Haynes of attempting improper liberties at a pastoral call.

MR. EVANS, of Tennessee, has introduced in the House of Representativs a bill to establish postal savings-banks and encourage small savings.

REV. FREDK. LERCHE, a Roman Catholic priest of Syracuse, has been sent to the penitentiary for three months for taking indecent liberties with an eight-year-old girl.

No authentic cures of consumption by Koch's lymph hav been produced. Professor Virchow, the German scientist, says the lymph sometimes causes dangerous inflammations of the lungs.

IT is rumored that the czar has been checked in persecution of the Jews by fear of financial difficulties that the wealthy members of that race through Europe might bring on him.

SIGNOR CRISPI, on account of opposition, has resigned the premiership of Italy. It is to be hoped that his successor will prove as stout a Freethinker and defender against the pope.

A CANDIDATE of the republican party in Spain having been defeated, his supporters charge it to government tampering with the ballots, and threaten an uprising. Troops are held ready.

CONGRESSMAN AMOS CUMMINGS writes: "The Democrats maintain their fight in the House against the Force bill. Its ghost still lurks in the Senate, and is liable at any moment to materialize."

MRS. MARTHA BURNHAM, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was injured by being run over on the 30th ult., tried faith cure, in which she and her friends believed, till the owner of her residence interfered and sent for a doctor.

MRS. WARREN CROSBY, of Warren City, Ia., was taken with epilepsy on the 30th ult. She procured the attendance of Christian Science faith healers, but grew worse, and at the end of five days a physician was called, but came too late to save her.

FATHER YODYZSUS, of St. George's Roman Catholic church, Williamsburgh, N. Y., is on trial for assaulting Mrs. Czesnewicz, the wife of a laborer. She says she went to mass, and entered the sacristry to buy a holy candle. Father Yodyzsus sold her the candle, and asked her to cross the road to his house that he might bless it. She went with him, and before he began to pray over the candle he gave her a glass of whisky. He then kissed her, despite her struggles. He next gave her a glass of beer, and she became unconscious till she awoke next morning in the priest's bedchamber. He denies guilt.

THE Farmers' Alliance members in the lower house of the Kansas legislature do not attempt any radical labor legislation, as the senate and governor would block its passage. The election of Peffer, the Alliance man, was possible only because the two houses sat together. So banks, money-lenders, and railroads are not in imminent peril. Peffer is enthusiastic, and is talked of as Alliance candidate for president. The convention for organizing a political third party may not meet till May. The Knights of Labor wish to join, but the Federation of Labor will not. Some would restrict candidacy for president to farmers, while others would admit trades-union men.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Givs a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

Gems of Thought.

PRACTICALLY the faith of man never had but one object if you press to the root of the matter. This was to form a conception of the order under which man livs, with the view of determining our relation generally to that order. Man might ascribe that order to fictitious [theological] causes, or he might study its real [scientific] laws; in either case his object was to estimate that order which was independent of him, with the view of submitting to it better or of attaining a greater power of modifying it.—Comte.

NATURE is not conquered except by obedience.—Bacon.

EDUCATION must consist less in the study of dead languages and dying theologies, and more in research into nature's operations and the endeavor to conform our lives to those beneficent principles that underlie her methods.—Robt. C. Adams.

How sick one is of all sermons such as they are! Why will men go on threshing over and over again the old withered straw that was threshed out centuries ago, when every field is waving with fresh, quite other crops, craving for their hand?—Froude.

AGNOSTICS consider it demoralizing to teach the young to do good in hope of reward.—Dr. Hardwicke.

RELIGION has often been the enemy of morality.—Ingersoll.

MORAL principles hav undergone many changes for the better since the days of the carpenter of Nazareth.—Arthur B. Moss.

THE Bible was produced by cruel people, and in its turn it has produced people like its authors.—Ingersoll.

PAINTERS hav painted their swarming groups and the center-figure of all,
From the head of the center-figure spreading
a nimbus of gold-colored light,
But I paint myriads of heads, but paint no head without its nimbus of gold-colored light,
From my hand from the brain of every man and woman it streams, effulgently flowing forever. —Walt Whitman.

MAN alone can
Reward the good,
Punish the bad,
Heal and save;
All the erring, straying,
Usefully combine.—Goethe.

IT would appear that there could be only one reply to the question, What is the use of theology?—viz., None at all.—J. Wilson.

NOTHING can by any possibility be more useless than a priest.—Ingersoll.

RELIGIONS are like fireflies: they require darkness in order to shine.—Schopenhauer.

TRYING TO GET DAVID WARM.

Now King David was old and stricken in years; and they covered him with clothes, but he gat no heat.—1 Kings i, 1.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

EGGS FANCY POULTRY IO VARIETIES. Ten years experience. Price List Free. No catalogue. Pigeons—Blue, Fans and Red Jackobins. J.L. MOCK, 1247 S. HIGH ST., COLUMBUS O.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 8. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, February 21, 1891.} 28 LAFAYETTE PL.} $3.00 per year.

THE UPAS TREE.

Notes and Clippings.

SAM JONES says there are but few pious people on the secular press. The Galveston News says Sam doesn't know what he is talking about. There are so many pious people on the press that they are in the way.

AN exciting religious feud exists at Dubois, Pa., between the Catholics and Protestants. The Protestant church and school-house at that place were recently burnt, and the Catholics are accused of setting fire to them.

COMMISSIONER MORGAN reports nine denominations laboring among the Indians, and while all are to be commended it is quite likely there is small harvest for some. It must be uphill work, says the World, indoctrinating an Ogalalla in foreordination, getting a Cheyenne to intone the creed, or teaching a Bannock to wear a broad-brim and say thee.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND has issued the following order: "Public sentiment has become so pronounced, and rightly so, against lotteries and chance games, that we deem it our duty to prohibit altogether, as we now do, the raising of money for religious or charitable purposes by the sale of chances, the use of wheels of fortune, or by any method savoring of lottery or gambling." This is the old story of the world reforming the church.

WHEN Bradlaugh lectured on Cromwell in Cooper Institute, New York, years ago, he had occasion, says the Tribune, to describe the warrior statesman as drawing his sword and throwing away the scabbard. Bradlaugh put his hand to his side and drew the imaginary sword. It was a perfect piece of acting. You could almost see the flashing blade. An old army officer who attended the lecture exclaimed, "Great Cæsar! That man has been in the cavalry!" Which was true, although several years had elapsed since Bradlaugh had secured his discharge after three years' service.

ON the possibility that Signor Crispi may not be recalled to the cabinet of Italy, the Sun says: "The Vatican would hav much to gain by the permanent removal of Signor Crispi from the stage. With him no compromise was possible. On the other hand, the fact that one who seemed invincible could be so suddenly and completely beaten, will giv immense encouragement to those friends of the papacy who hav been urging Leo XIII. to permit Catholic electors to go to the ballot-box. Had they been allowed to do this at the last general election, they might now be strong enough in conjunction with the rebels against Crispi to construct a stable cabinet."

THE polling at Northampton in the contest for the seat made vacant by the death of Mr. Charles Bradlaugh progressed quietly and uneventfully. There was no excitement manifested, and the day being clear and the sun shining brightly, the conservativs hoped to poll a large vote. At the last election the late Mr. Bradlaugh (Gladstonian) polled 4,353 votes to 3,656 polled by his opponent, Mr. Thomas Orde H. Lees, who represented the conservativ interest, a majority of 697 for Mr. Bradlaugh. At the same time, in the second district of Northampton, that borough having two seats in Parliament, Mr. Henry Labouchere (Gladstonian) defeated Mr. Richard Turner (Unionist) by 4,570 to 3,850, a majority of 720 for Mr. Labouchere. The election resulted as follows: Mansfield (Gladstonian), 5,436; Germaine (conservativ), 3,723.

A LOGAN, Pa., dispatch says: "The belief in witchcraft, developed about three years ago in the isolated hamlet of Bobtown, in Logan township, Mifflin county, has spread until now there is hardly a dozen families in the entire region free from its influence. The village of Bobtown is the headquarters of this superstitious sect. They frequently congregate at the home of some congenial spirit and talk over matters pertaining to their strange belief. There are two witches in this part of the globe, one a resident of Milroy and the other of Bobtown. Logan has a 'doctor,' or one who has the power to remove the 'spell' from the victims after the unholy eye of the witch has 'looked upon' them. Many are the stories related of the machinations of the witches and the power of the 'doctor' to cure the magic spell. About three months ago a little child lay sick for several weeks, and the child's parents believed that it was a victim of a witch's bane. The suspected witch was believed to be a resident of Logan. One dreary night in November the witch-doctor of this place was sent for, and after a long pow-wow the spell which the witch and her colleague, the prince of darkness, had wrought yielded to the secret power of the 'doctor.' This particular case was heralded broadcast and made a host of believers. Perhaps the most serious case resulting from this strange hallucination in this neighborhood is that of a young married woman whose reason has been dethroned."

A RECENT press dispatch says: "The effect of the Kean bank failure is severely felt by the slave-trading chiefs in the Congo country, and has temporarily put a stop to peculiar transactions in which Methodist mission funds played an important part. This was developed to-day in the county court, when in the course of the hearing of Bishop Taylor's fund case some interesting statements were gleaned of the methods of converting the heathen in Africa. One of the bishop's methods, it was testified, is to buy outright young girls from the nativ kings and chiefs. The Rev. Isaac Linebarger, a Methodist preacher of thirty years' standing, and his wife, made the statements. Mrs. Linebarger said that after duly prospecting among the various people in the neighborhood, the bishop would buy young girls from chiefs and place them in the mission schools. Technically this process is called "redeeming." Boys need not cost anything. Girls, however, are worth about $30 apiece. 'Last October,' continued Mrs. Linebarger, 'I went to Kean's bank and gave Miss Higgins $30 to redeem a child. She was to be named Minnie Louise Waukegan.' Miss Waukegan was evidently not of the upper-ten class, for Mrs. Linebarger testified that she had to pay $100 for three more. Miss Higgins refused to take the redemption money until Mrs. Linebarger named the children. 'One,' she continued, 'I called Sahara Wentworth Estes —that was for my mother. The others were named respectivly Miss Lewis and Miss Estes.' Mr. Linebarger said that a large fund had been subscribed for this redemption process, and that it was the intention of the missionaries to bring the purchased children under Christian influence."

Communications.

President Harrison's Religion; and That of His Postmaster-General.

I remember that last year, the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER hauled over the coals, and they were very hot coals too, the Rev. Dr. McAllister, a Covenanter clergyman of Pittsburg, for a sermon he preached on "The Washington Calamity," in which he told his hearers that the fearful destruction by fire of some members of Secretary Tracy's family, and his own narrow escape, was "a warning" given to this nation by an angry God, of more direful calamities yet to come, in case it did not repent of its sins, and recognize Jesus Christ to be its lord and king, and the Bible as its divine statute-book. The public became indebted to Dr. McAllister for the information that, before issuing his Thanksgiving proclamation, a committee of his fellow-Christians called in person on President Harrison, and earnestly solicited him to insert into the forthcoming document, the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, in his high character as ruler de jure, of all nations, and not omit it, as his pagan predecessors in office had done; but that, when the paper was published to the world, the sacred name of Christ could not be found in it! In order to show the facilis decensus of the president, the Christian Statesman of a late date calls attention to the fact that, in the last Thanksgiving proclamation, Mr. Harrison not only omitted the name of Christ from the body of his state paper, but even in the date, avoids using the phrase, anno domini—in the year of our Lord; whereupon that journal, in its holy indignation, calls the proclamation, not only an *un*christian, but an *anti*christian document; and Secretary Wylie caps the climax of his scorn for the president, by saying that he was "profoundly ignorant of the Christian religion."

Now, Mr. Editor, after expressing our surprise, if not sorrow, that a clergyman should forget the divine injunctions "not to speak evil of dignities," let us calmly, and without prejudice, look at this case, and see whether the severe judgment pronounced upon President Harrison is not nearer right than wrong.

For the first time since this government was founded, and after a century of agonizing prayers that hav ascended to heaven from the lips of his covenanted people, the Lord, to prove himself to be a prayer-answering God, raised up and gave to this nation as its president a truly religious man, in the person of Benjamin Harrison, a ruling elder in good and regular standing of the orthodox Presbyterian church. He was a superintendent of the Sunday-school in his church at Indianapolis, a devout man, and one that feared God with all his house, and prayed to God always. Mr. Harrison, in an interview with a United States Senator, soon after the election, claimed that it was the Lord who had made him president, and not Quay, Dudley, Clarkson, and Governor Hill, as his unsanctified political opponents charged. This delighted the Covenanters and strengthened their faith and hope; because in this claim he plainly expressed the very doctrin they and their fathers had contended for so long and which they got from the scriptures, that the civil magistrate is a minister of God, deriving all his authority to rule, not from the people over whom he ruled, but from God; and that he, whether king, kaiser, czar, or president, was accountable to that source of power for his official acts, and to no other.

Let us now see what the nation got, when, in the person of Mr. Harrison as its chief magistrate, it got a professor of religion.

A professor, say of music, is a person who is an adept, well skilled, and comparativly perfect in the art which he professes to practice and to teach. Thousands of the common people love music, and sing, and play upon poor instruments, and in poorer style, in obscure neighborhoods. But a professor of music is master of his art. He is a model. He is an authority. He is to be imitated by all learners in order to be proficient. In religion and the church a professer is a person who, abjuring the maxims of the world, comes out openly as a follower of Christ, and walks in the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal. Although living in this world, he is not of the world, but is a pilgrim and stranger here. He lives for the sole purpose of serving and honoring Christ as his redeemer. In the harvest-field of this world he claims to be of the wheat; all the rest being tares, whose fate, at the end of the harvest, is to be raked up and burnt. It is remarkable, and highly creditable to the character of Christ, that, when on earth, he did not proselyte, and deceive men by false promises into following him. He was fair and candid in laying down the terms of discipleship. Knowing that to recognize him as master and Lord meant personal danger and constant self-denial, he required of a follower a public pledge of loyalty to him and his cause as the condition of salvation. Here are the words he used: "Whosoever shall confess me before men, him will I also confess before my father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my father which is in heaven."

But both he and his cause were then suffering public obloquy, and knowing that shame was one of the most powerful sentiments of human nature and the besetting sin of those who felt themselvs to be in a small minority; and having seen, moreover, how Nicodemus came to him to practice the duties of discipleship by night because he was ashamed to do so in the daytime, he strengthened the courage of his followers, and emphasized the condition of salvation, by declaring that "Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his father, with the holy angels." In one short sentence it meant: No cross, no crown.

The reader will easily see from this that the relationship set up between a professor of religion and his God is strictly of the nature of a covenant, or agreement, between two or more parties—in this case two—in which it is solemnly agreed that if God, the party of the first part, will freely and eternally forgiv all the sins of the party of the second part, by imputing to him in the settlement the righteousness of Christ for justification, and bind himself to bring him safely to heaven after death, then he, the party of the second part, binds himself to confess Christ before the unbelieving world, to accept all the dangers and difficulties which such a confession implies, and devote himself, without reservation, to the promotion of Christ's cause and honor, by making all his acts and all his influence through life conduciv to that sole end. Then the party of the second part takes the oath of dedication and consecration, by sitting down to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and thus becomes a professor.

Now, be it remembered that, when Mr. Harrison made this solemn dedication of himself and all he had to Jesus Christ, in consideration of his escape from the damnation of hell, he did it voluntarily and deliberately. He was not compelled to burden his soul with these vows and make this public profession of the Christian religion, as the Jews and Moriscoes in Spain were by the Catholics, on the alternativ of suffering death by the tortures and fire of the Holy Inquisition. He did it freely, and would not hav lowered himself in the estimation of the world, if, like his predecessors in office, he had not done so at all. Besides, it never occurred to him, away out there in Indiana, when he publicly entered into this covenant with God, to hav inserted such a clause as this: "That, the said Benjamin Harrison, the party of the second part, being a natural-born, male citizen of the United States, and therefore liable to be called on, like other citizens, some time or other to administer the government as president, and take the required oath of office under a purely secular Constitution which ignores the existence of all the persons in the godhead and every form of religion, he be allowed to take the said oath with the private understanding that it will not be binding upon his conscience during the period of his public service." Mr. Harrison made no such proviso. He did not stipulate, as Naaman the Syrian did, on the occasion of his being converted to the faith of Israel, that, when his idolatrous master, leaning upon his arm, went into the house of Rimmon to worship, and he himself bowed down too, the Lord would pardon him in this thing. He had the grandest opportunity ever presented to an American Christian to put his name with Daniel, the prophet, and his brethren in the lion's den, upon the list of the immortals who were true to themselvs and to God under the most trying circumstances. His postmaster-general, the head of the department that comes nearer to the people than any other, was also a professor of the same Christian religion, known all over the country for being a Sunday-school superintendent and a man of remarkable piety. He was probably selected as a cabinet officer and postmaster-general for the very reason that he would use his best efforts to make the post-offices and the railroads Sabbath-keeping institutions. The whole Christian public had a right to expect, and they did expect, that under such a godly administration religious professorship would no longer rest under the contumely of being a mere matter of dress parade and a mask for pretentious cowards.

When Oliver Cromwell, after the decapitation of King Charles, was called to be protector of the English commonwealth, did he put the candle of his religion under a bushel, instead of setting it upon a candle-stick? When he came to London to administer the government, did he leave the sacred vows of his dedication and consecration to the service of Christ his leader, at home, with his old, worn-out, and cast-off clothes? Not a bit of it. He was a Christian before he became protector; and when invested with almost supreme political power he used it, first and foremost, to glorify God, as the chief end of man. Had he, and his Admiral Blake, who was a chip from the same Puritan block, lived twenty years longer than they did, English history would not now be blotted with the infamous reigns of Charles II. and James II. Ireland would hav been Protestantized, instead of being left as an incurable ulcer in the side of the British monarchy, filling, not only the House of Commons, but the whole English-speaking world, with its odious stench. Knowing that popery was the cause of Ireland's degradation, Cromwell would hav packed the Catholic hierarchy back to Rome, and knocked them in the head if they refused to go. He never would hav attempted the impossible job of converting into a free state, a nation whose people allowed themselvs to be bridled, saddled, and, like so many donkeys, ridden by the priests.

Behold the contrast between the English Christian protector and our Christian president!

In imitation of the Roman soldiers, who, before going to war, took the sacramentum, or oath of allegiance to their country and its generals, Elder Harrison, not only in the little prayer-meeting at Indianapolis, but in the great congregation of the saints, on sacramental occasions, could join his comrades in singing, with tearful eyes, and souls full of determination, the Christian battle-hymn:

> Am I a soldier of the cross?
> A follower of the lamb?
> And shall I fear to own his cause,
> Or blush to speak his name? etc.

But when he came to Washington, as president of the United States, and the Lord, by a special providence, had opened up the way for him to do something effectual toward fulfilling his sacred vows to confess Christ before the world, both he, and the flatulent Wanamaker, who had sworn the same oath of allegiance a hundred times, struck their colors, and surrendered to the God of this world! Was there no need to bear witness for Christ, and his words, in the capital of the nation, on the plea that there were no sinful and adulterous practices committed there? Why, Washington society has the reputation of reeking with corruption. To be sure, there is an immense amount of professionalism in that city; but the saints are all samaritans—"they fear the Lord, but serve their own gods." There are, however, the members of the Senate and House of Representativs, which, of themselvs, are a large field for the missionary labors of a godly president and postmaster-general. How many of them put in the hours of the holy Sabbath in profanely talking politics and playing poker, instead of devoutly attending church? And although each House, professedly for its own special and spiritual benefit, employs, and pays out of the people's money, a "chaplain" to open the daily sessions with prayer, how shamefully they treat him, and the God he represents, when they so generally absent themselvs at the time he performs his sacred duty! Has the president ever sent a message of rebuke to them for their outrageous contempt of divine things? These two professors of religion at home were total abstainers from intoxicating liquors, we are told. Was there no need to testify against the debasement of drunkenness in Washington, when, according to the uncontradicted statement of Mr. St. John, there are two thousand saloons in that city; and when, in the inaugural procession of March 4th, a whole thousand of the keepers marched in honor of the president? After being sworn into office, our Christian president and representativ of Christ attended the ball in the pension office, where four hundred gallons of Roman punch were consumed by the dancers! He not only drinks intoxicating liquors himself, says Mr. St. John, but serves his guests at the White House with four or five different brands of the same article!

And what, pray, has Wanamaker ever done to redeem his pledge as a professor of religion during the two years he has been at Washington? Has he ever testified for the Lord's holy Sabbath? Has he asked Congress to authorize him to close the post-offices, and stop the carrying of the mails on that day, so that his officials, after their wearisome labors of the week, may rest and go to church? Not one step has he taken toward the accomplishment of that object. The sum total of his Christian endeavor, thus far, to "confess Christ before man," is the order he issued to his official subordinates to forbid the "Kreutzer Sonata" from being carried in the mails! He still continues, however, in the professing business, and struts before his admiring pupils in his Sunday-school at Philadelphia, and goes through the solemn mockery of confessing Christ on sacramental occasions, as if the public were blind and could not think. But, if Christianity be not a mere swindle upon the credulity of mankind, kept up by its professors to benefit themselvs, both Wanamaker and his chief must be set down as religious cowards and apostates, who, after a while, must experience a fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation when Christ, surrounded by his assessors, the angels, shall come to judge the world and separate the sheep from the goats.

Some readers of this communication may perhaps feel that my condemnation of the two religious characters I am criticising is too severe. But the parties themselvs would not dare to say so, for they know in their hearts that I am only drawing a contrast between their religious pretensions and their religious practices. I am weighing them in their own scales, even the scales of the sanctuary. I say nothing against their private characters on the score of morals, for in that respect they are probably as good as the rest of us. They are not private citizens, even if they did not hold political office. They stand before the public as professors of the way in which, it is claimed, that it is religion which exalts and glorifies the human character; and their conduct in that respect is a silent, but audacious, reproach on all who make no such profession. When they thus set themselvs up as models and exemplars, and assume a superiority in goodness to the common run of mortals, they not only invite, but challenge, criticism; and we who are of this world, worldly, hav a right to inquire whether that which glistens in their character as gold, and givs them their high reputation in the church, is the real metal, or only mere tinsel. They profess to be soldiers of the cross, enlisted for life; and their high calling is to make an aggressiv fight for the crown rights of Jesus Christ as king, against a world of rebels in arms; and we hav a right to examin their military record, and see if they hav performed on the field of battle any deeds of courage for the cause, or any act of devotion to their great leader. And if we find proof, as we do in these cases, that all the wounds received hav left their scars behind and not before, indicating cowardice and treason, we hav a right, and it is our duty, to hold them up in their true characters before all Israel and the sun. LEX, Attorney-at-law for Dr. McAllister and the Covenanters.

Our London Letter.

In the Freethinker of January 4th appears a concise and excellent article by the indefatigable Mr. A. B. Moss, on "Stocktaking." He givs a statement of his own work for Freethought during the past year, and in comparing the past and the present state of the movement shows that there are still as good men in the cause as there ever hav been, and he sees no reason to believe that there is any sign of decay, notwithstanding Mr. Stead's opinion that Secularism is fast dying out. The correspondence in the Echo on this question very soon subsided when the replies of prominent Freethinkers appeared and showed that Mr. Stead's case could not be maintained. Our enemies seemed to think that because the National Secular Society could not show an annual increase of members equal to that of 1883, Secularism was collapsing. It is very certain that any religious society that could show such an increase of membership as even in the year when the smallest number joined the Secular Society, would be exceedingly rejoiced, and announce the figures in large type in all the religious journals. If the National Secular Society included all the Secularists in Great Britain, there might be some cause shown that the cause was not making such headway as might be expected, but this is a very different matter from absolutely losing ground.

The National Secular Society numbers only a small proportion of those who hav left or never joined the religious part of the community, and it appears to be ignored that the little salt has leavened the whole camp, and society generally is fast being Secularized. Very few religious teachers of the present day hold by the good old fashioned orthodox views of Mr. Spurgeon, for instance, who stands almost alone in his doctrinal opinions, and the rising generation would not be persuaded to attend either church or chapel if such crude ideas were now promulgated. Even in the churches where more liberal opinions are preached it is difficult to get a congregation together, as exhortations do not nowadays find much favor, the chief attraction being of a musical nature. Concerts and other entertainments hav also to be given during the week, admission being free, or only a small sum is levied, so that it is found running a church with any hope of success is a much more costly matter than it was formerly, as these week-night diversions and Sunday organ performances are somewhat expensiv, the performers not always possessing enough religion to induce them to giv their services gratuitously. The funds for keeping these things going come from those whose object is "how to make the best of both worlds," successful exploiters of labor who square their rascalities, and compensate for their crimes to humanity, by giving freely and liberally to the "ministers of the Lord."

The death of Chas. Bradlaugh will be felt very keenly by all Freethinkers, as well as by many who had no sympathy for his opinions on religious matters but who admired him for his indomitable will, energy, and his persistence in fighting for the oppressed. In India his death will be mourned by thousands of the nativ population who greatly revered him, and placed in him all their hopes for the remedy of grievances under which they labored. His has been a long and arduous struggle against odds that would hav overwhelmed almost any other man. He lived long enough to gain the respect of those who, in the House of Commons, were at one time his bitterest enemies. Only on Tuesday an object for which he had long fought was attained, and the House ordered the resolution declaring him unable to swear or affirm to be expunged from its records. The borough of Northampton will not easily find a man to take his place. He was admittedly one of the most hard-working and painstaking men in Parliament, and he will be greatly missed there. Ten years ago his death would hav been hailed as a national blessing, now it will be looked upon as a national calamity. Such men only appear at long intervals of time, and it is pretty certain that no such one will be seen or heard by anyone now living. It seems hard that, having borne the heat and burden of the day, now that there seemed a prospect of some reward for all his toil, he has entered into his everlasting rest. J. D.

The Power of Prayer.

"Oh, save me, God!" we raise the cry,
And prayers for help like incense rise,
And, when the danger passes by,
We say that God has heard our cries.

Who saves the tiny, startled fish,
Pursued by his relentless foe?
Who heeds his finny, prayerful wish?
No one; the fish for food must go.

Who hears the prayer of harmless bird
When swallowed by the larger hawk?
Who intervenes, by deed or word,
The murderous design to balk?

In nature is the lesson shown,
Where stronger ones survive the weak,
That God helps him, and him alone,
Who, of himself, his help can seek.

Attleboro, Mass. ALICE M. SINCLAIR.

Justice, Not Charity.

All hail the dawn of a new day breaking,
When a strong armed nation shall take away
The weary burdens from backs that are aching,
With maximum work and minimum pay.

When no man is honored who hoards his millions;
When no man feasts on another's toil,
And God's poor suffering, striving billions
Shall share his riches of sun and soil.

There is gold for all in the earth's broad bosom,
There is food for all in the earth's great store,
Enough is provided if rightly divided.
Let each man take what he needs—no more.

Shame on the miser with unused riches,
Who robs the toiler to swell his hoard,
Who beats down the wages of digger of ditches,
And steals the bread from the poor man's board;

Shame on the owner of mines whose cruel
And selfish measures hav brought him wealth,
While the ragged wretches who dig his fuel
Are robbed of comfort and hope and health.

Shame on the ruler who rides in his carriage;
Bought with the labor of half-paid men—
Men who are shut out of home and marriage,
And are herded like sheep in a hovel pen.

Let the clarion voice of the nation wake him
To broader visions and fairer play,
Or let the hand of a just law shake him
'Til his ill-gotten dollars shall roll away.

Let no man dwell under a mountain of plunder,
Let no man suffer with want and cold;
We want right living, not mere alms-giving,
We want dividing of labor and gold.

—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

St. Peter's Soliloquy.

(AT THE GATE.)

"Heu pietas! Heu prisca fides!"

In spite of all our gospel and revivals,
The bus'ness here is getting rather slow.
We don't get ten per cent of the arrivals,
The most of them are stopping down below.

The chap who owns that system of caloric
And runs the basement, he is pretty sharp.
He doesn't giv 'em problems hyperbolic,
Nor say a word about the wings and harp.

He fixes 'em on earth; that's what's the matter,
And we don't fix 'em till they get all through.
Our plan is good, but then his plan is better,
For he don't bother 'em; Lord knows we do.

Salvation Army! Bosh! That doesn't fetch 'em,
And missionaries; well, that scheme's too thin.
That chap downstairs, he manages to catch 'em,
Because what we scare off he gathers in.

We once could get 'em, on the deluge story,
And do 'em up about the rib and ark,
Or knock 'em with the picture of our glory;
That's busted, also Jonah and the shark.

You see, down on earth they're always mix'd up,
And each sect sends the other ones to h—ll.
We always fail'd to get the matter fix'd up,
And what to do is pretty hard to tell.

A miracle might work, but who could do it?
There's no one here to do the thing up brown.
Suppose we tried one, we'd be sure to rue it;
No; nary miracle; it won't go down.

I think I'll go and put the case to Moses,
He might perhaps get up a scheme or two.
He caught 'em once, but no one now supposes
That his old Pentateuch was ever true.

Here, Gabe, you watch the gate a minute;
Don't be particular with those who call.
This thing's played out, there's really nothing in it,
They've tumbled to our racket, that is all.

—Juxta in Boston Investigator.

Progress of the Cause in Washington.

The Archipelago de Haro, East sound, is the most lovely garden-spot in the straits of Fuca. Tourists fail to realize any correct idea of the beauty and fertility of the Puget sound country, who fail to visit the islands from Skagit Head to Nanaimo. For the thousand and one charms and surprises of an ever-shifting scene, and for startling effects, as well as for ease of access from all sound cities, the islands which lie in the waters of the Archipelago de Haro, known as the San Juan country, are unsurpassed. Orcas island is the largest of the group, and is made up of bold and high mountain ranges. As the little steamer makes the run up the beautiful bay called East sound, the picturesque village of the same name looms up in wondrous beauty. Situated amidst mountains and inland seas, its location, romantic scenery, facilities for boating, hunting, and all outdoor sports, render it the most delightful and desirable place for a rural home, a retreat from the bustle and worry of city life. But not alone is East Sound a most desirable place of residence for the enjoyment of wealth acquired, but it offers great attraction to those who desire to earn a competency by fruit-raising—an easy and pleasing task, for the locality is just one great, lovely fruit-garden. Orchards and strawberry plots abound in every direction. All around, save at the water front, the stately forest is rapidly receding before the march of progress and fruit culture. Despite the prominence of the Emanuel church (Episcopalian), God is not with them, or at least not with the pastor enough to induce him to defend his faith. And the same is the case with a Methodist church, whose method is to denounce, instead of hearing, and offering evidence that Infidels are wrong. Freethought is making rapid growth. Ashton Thomas, of Waldron, a handsome, stalwart young Liberal, possessing courage, energy, and devotion to the cause, took the responsibility and aroused the Liberals to making an effort to establish a local Liberal Union. I delivered three lectures at the school-house, and was astonished that despite darkness and rain there was each night a large attendance and great interest manifest. Our last night's lecture was followed by a dance, kept up till full dawn. I succeeded in obtaining twenty-one members to the Washington Secular Union. They elected that earnest, outspoken Infidel, A. K. Jackson, as vice-president, and executiv officer of the state society for East Sound. I had a most pleasant visit, and expect that when the delegation attend our annual meeting Sunday, February 22d, they will come authorized to engage me for another course of lectures.

Blaine, Whatcom county, since my previous visit has made almost magic progress. It has miles of handsome, broad, well graded, good sidewalked streets—about seven miles of streets, and twelve miles of really good sidewalk, at a cost of $75 000. The electric light company hav put in one of the finest systems on the coast, at a cost of $50,000. And there are a number of brick blocks costing from $13,000 to $20,000, and, better than all, a grand large brick school-house costing $18 000. An electric motor line, a telephone system, and an immense cannery are under way. The fisheries and coal fields are being developed. No place on the coast offers better inducement to the settler to invest capital and make a home. And the march of progress is sustained, for Liberalism keeps pace with the once little, now big, city's wondrous growth and advancement. The Opera House was crowded each of the three nights I lectured. Fourteen good and true Liberals were added to the roll of the Washington Secular Union, and that popular citizen and energetic young business man, J. M. G. Merritt, was unanimously elected vice-president. There is a loud call for Mrs. F. C. Reynolds, and doubtless immediately after the annual meeting, Sunday, February 22d, she will visit Blaine, and win the activ coöperation of the good women to our cause, all that is needed to make Blaine the nearest possible approach to an earthly paradise.

The annual meeting of the Washington Secular Union will be held at G. A. R Hall, Hinckley Block, corner of Second and Columbia streets, Seattle, on Sunday, Feb. 22, 1891. Morning session at 10—address of welcome; reports of secretary, treasurer, and board of directors; short speeches by delegates and members on "Methods to promote our aims and objects." Afternoon session at 2—election of officers; short speeches by delegates and members on "Ways and means;" address by Mrs. F. C. Reynolds. Evening at 7:50—lecture by Rev. H. Hangurud, the able and eloquent exponent of Liberalism, on "The Lives of Great Thinkers, and the Treatment They Hav Received at the Hands of the Church."

C. B. REYNOLDS,
Sec. Washington Secular Union.

TRUE freedom of speech will not be attained until men can be permitted to express their ideas about God as freely as their notions about geology. The First Cause is as legitimate an object of research as is electricity.—Robt. C. Adams.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President. . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE, JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. W STAUFFER, Vice-President, 1516 Montgomery ave., Phila., Pa.
J. O. BENTLEY, Vice-President, . 812 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Westbrook on Wakeman.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 7th, T. B. Wakeman, Esq., says, in regard to the "strenuous opposition" I alleged had been made by himself and Dr. Foote to the appointment of Mr. Charles Watts as field secretary: "I hav made no opposition, strenuous or other, to the appointment of Mr. Watts, nor has Dr. Foote to my knowledge or belief. We hav been trying to feel our way to that result without unfairness to others." My statement is pronounced by Mr. Wakeman "quite the reverse of the truth." Then, in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 14th, he grows bolder and affirms that "the president was, therefore, entirely off of the truth in printing that there was a 'strenuous opposition' to the appointment of Mr. Watts on my part. I am a friend and admirer of Mr. Watts," etc. Now, since my truthfulness is called in question, I must print what is necessary for my vindication whoever may suffer from it. In a letter from Dr. Foote dated Dec. 25, 1890, he writes: "Now, as to Watts individually. To practically import him and put him to the front will be to affront all the Americans in the field, and I think there would be such a wail from them as would make it impossible to collect the funds to pay him. Jealousies, especially race preferences, are not 'Liberal,' but they are human and natural, or, at least, common and inevitable." This letter, Dr. Foote says in a postscript, was shown to Mr. Wakeman, who said, "Send it on." In another letter from Dr. Foote, under date of December 31st, he writes: "But the more I remember the past experience of the American Secular Union with him (Mr. Watts), the more I am certain it cannot be done, unless you are prepared to find contributions from new sources rather than the old stand-bys. Mr. Watts once left the Union in debt and in hard straits to square itself with gentlemen from whom his pay [had been got], by loans on notes of the Union—in no dishonorable way, to be sure, but with a sort of reckless disposition to make himself comfortable whatever might happen to the American Secular Union. . . . If you are bent on carrying out the plan with Mr. Watts, and my action has made it difficult, I am glad of it, and some day you may be glad, too, as I think you may discover that it must hav led to disaster, to your discomfiture and discredit as a leader. . . . Please let these letters be presented (to the board) and filed as my views and Mr. Wakeman's, who fully agrees with me as he says to-day." Now, I leave your readers to decide whether I am "entirely off the truth," and my statements "the reverse of the truth." I do not characterize Mr. Wakeman's allegations as they deserve, but leave others to determin whether he has not at least "cracked" the commandment which forbids the bearing of false witness against one's neighbor. The strange course of Mr. Wakeman at the Portsmouth congress and since, may hav been prompted by the "new philosophy" of which he is the exponent, but it seems to me more like Joab's philosophy with Amasa, when he took him by the beard and kissed him, saying, "Art thou in health, my brother?" and then thrust his dagger under his fifth rib until his bowels gushed out and fell upon the ground (2 Sam. xx, 9, 10). Allow me just space enough here to say that I think Dr. Foote and Lawyer Wakeman make a great mistake in seeming to regard the American Secular Union as a sort of soup society to which certain persons may come with their little pails and occasionally get a ladle full of the delectable compound! I believe that our Liberal lecturers are not as mean and jealous as some persons seem to think them, and are not like one of old who said: "Put me, I pray thee, into one of the priest's offices that I may eat a piece of bread" (1 Sam. ii, 36).

R. B. WESTBROOK.

February 14, 1891.

The Field Secretary.

From the first moment that the action of the board of directors of the American Secular Union upon the above subject was made known, I had mentally resolved to abstain from expressing any opinion whatever concerning it. But as I hav received so many letters from my friends upon this subject, I beg to ask indulgence for giving a general reply to the equivocations of certain interested persons. In fact, from the treatment that I hav recently experienced at the hands of those who hav assumed a fictitious leadership of our principles—and a course of treatment which they seem inclined to keep up—I feel myself compelled to take this step. I hav no desire to create ill feeling, or even division, in our ranks, but that such will inevitably ensue unless the present administration is deposed is absolutely certain, and as I am actuated by the principles of justice to all, and inspired with a love of universal freedom, I am only desirous of preventing such a catastrophe and establishing firmly in our midst an organization Infidel in character, name, and policy, and one whose power and influence shall be both heard and felt from the Atlantic coast to the slopes of the Pacific.

As is now pretty well known, the majority of the board of directors are utterly opposed to my appointment as the field secretary, and, for some reason, best known to themselvs, they positivly refuse to ratify the recommendation of the late congress, an action on their part which has been characterized by one of the best and truest members of the Union (and one whose presence at the late congress renders his opinion also of great value), as "a truly delightful instance of popular government when the sovereign people point emphatically one way and its trusted representativs go duly in the opposit direction." I cannot say that I ever expected to be put into the field as a Freethought missionary while Westbrook and Co. maintained an absolute control of the situation. I even intimated this at the Portsmouth congress, after my election, to those of my friends who were present, and who were so sanguin of the good work that I could accomplish were the opportunity given me. Therefore I fully anticipated what the result of the meeting of the board would be, knowing the antipathy shown toward me, and the prejudice existing in the minds of the president and secretary against me. Not only hav the majority of the present board (or at least some of them) been content with their proved opposition to myself, but they hav been guilty of using the most contemptible means that only the most constructiv malice could invent, in order to defeat justice and serve their own selfish ends. They hav vilified my name; attempted to blast my reputation, to damage my character, and to prejudice my own friends against me. They hav even questioned the very existence of the society to which I belong, and which I successfully organized on September last, and now that they find the society too strong for them to break up, they in the most abject manner possible threaten to revoke the charter of the said society unless it carries out certain conditions which they hav assumed a fictitious right to dictate. This distinctly proves what I said at the last congress, viz., "affiliation" means subordination to Westbrook, hence his assumed right to dictate by what name a society shall be known. But the Newark branch is not disposed to change its name, and if Mr. Westbrook is still inclined to revoke the charter, I can only say, Let him try. I can easily understand why he seeks to revoke this charter. In fact, the wish is father to the thought, because I should then no longer be a member of the Secular Union, and the board could not consistently appoint a non-member. Thus the way would be clear for him to appoint his own candidate.

This, again, brings another question to the front—was Charles Watts the man they originally intended to nominate against me? In a recent issue of this paper was published a letter from one of the "two responsible" directors, T. B. Wakeman, in which he expressly states that at the meeting of the board of directors the name of this personage was "withheld" from them. Now, why was the name "withheld?" Why did the president prefer that two out of the seven directors should take a step in the dark? Did he expect that he could so impose upon their intelligence as to get them to vote for a man whom they did not know, and whose name could not be given them? If Charles Watts was the man they first had in view, what possible reason could they hav for withholding his name then, and publishing it to the world now? But the truth is that Charles Watts was not the man, but another one whose name they did not want to giv, in case they could not bulldoze the rest of the directors, and one whom Miss Craddock herself has very inadvertently stated to be a "prominent Philadelphian." If proof of this is required, it can be supplied upon application.

Besides this, they hav stooped so low as to say what is not true in order to gain their object. They hav tried to influence my own friends against me by saying that the person who nominated me at the late congress tried afterward to get the nomination withdrawn, as he had regretted what he had done. Now, this statement I deny, and declare to be positivly and absolutely untrue, a statement willfully false and uttered with malicious intent. I hav taken the liberty of writing to my nominator, and he denies the above imputation, and even intimates that, so far from desiring to withdraw his motion to appoint me, when overtures were made to him, and when my enemies attempted to place obstructions in the way of my appointment, "I took the ground that such in this case was unnecessary, and that I would oppose any such arrangement." And he concludes with the following expression of opinion: "I am satisfied that you can do good work if given the opportunity. If the members of the Union convened in congress hav no voice in matters pertaining to their own interests, why not avoid the expense of such congress by leaving all and everything to the executiv board?"

Is not this instance sufficient to show what the present administration will resort to, to gain their selfish object? "If false in one thing, false in all things." Let every star that dots the firmament look down upon their inconsistency. Let the sun, that brilliant orb of day, shine down upon their selfishness. Let the whole of nature in loud and unmistakable language speak out against their prevarication.

It was a singular coincidence that in the very same issue of THE TRUTH SEEKER in which Miss Craddock appeals for the friends of Charles Watts to speak out in his behalf, there should be three letters from my friends speaking out in my behalf, and all of them tried and trusted friends of the Union, and this in addition to an editorial condemning the action and policy of the present administration. But as the appeal has been made as well as publication of extracts from letters, it will not be out of place for me to giv a few extracts from some letters that hav been written to me. In addition to the one already quoted (my nominator's), I hav received another, from one of the best supporters and subscribers of the Union, in which he says: "My impression was that the congress appointed you, and that the board of directors had nothing to do but put you out as soon as there was money enough to pay your expenses;" and further: "When I sent my contribution to the Guarantee Fund it was with the intention of getting some cash there to start you out." Another friend of the Union, firm and true, writes: "I know of no one better qualified than yourself, and I should like to see you at work. We want no half-hearted policy undertaken, but an earnest movement against the frauds, falsehoods, and foolishness of Christianity." And still another writes, advising me not to accept the office under the present administration, because, says he, "they would handicap you, and by placing obstacles in your path injure your future prospects;" and he adds: "I am in your favor, and if you still desire to accept, knowing the disadvantages you would labor under, I shall still vote for you." I could still go on, but I will refrain from so doing because I do not wish to trespass further upon the space of the paper.

But I venture to think that the assumed head of our national organization has run us against a rock, a huge black rock, towering over the prospects of our cause, and that unless he tacks and puts about, or givs up the rudder of the ship to more capable hands, this rock may be the means of either splitting the vessel or causing it to founder altogether.

The administration has doubted my capability to fulfill the duties of such an office; but I here state unhesitatingly that, with the sum of $1,000 at my disposal, I can do more work, and work that shall be of value to the organization, in one year than the whole of the present administration has accomplished during its existence in power. This is an opinion not confined to myself, but one that has been expressed by many influential members and friends of the Union. Therefore I appeal to all Freethinkers to strive to rescue our society from the labyrinth religioso in which it is now entangled, and let us hav a Union that is prepared to fight that system of religion which is based upon law, not upon love; upon bayonets even more than Bibles—a Union whose sole object is to free mankind from all phases of supernaturalism, that hav hitherto been so injurious to its well-being.

I hate personalities as much as any man, but I submit that I hav not been more personal than the circumstances of the case demanded, and a defense of my own personal honor would justify. The statements I hav made are facts, not impressions, of things done and opinions expressed, of professions made and promises violated. I sincerely thank those kind friends who hav written me their sympathy and support. No wonder you were surprised at my silence; but in conclusion let me say that it is with great reluctance that I pen these words, for I had decided not to speak at all, and should not hav done so now only the occasion demanded it. I would state here that I hav nothing against Charles Watts. It is indeed a matter of deep regret that Mr. Westbrook has by his own imprudence brought us to such a position.

JOHN R. CHARLESWORTH.

"Let Us Hav Peace."

On page 64 of the last TRUTH SEEKER we had quite an article under the above heading, and as I am a peace man, as well as a life-member of the American Secular Union, I at once gave this article a close looking over, and that more than once. I apprehend that the writer is honest in the course he has taken and in what he has said. But as for a peace measure, from my mental standpoint it is otherwise. But it has opened the way for other members of the American Secular Union to expose the sophistry of their presiding officer, in trying to make it appear that it is out of order to criticise the Christian church or its holy Bible in the congress. This church and Bible are the very things that brought about the need for the existence of the National Liberal League, that was organized at the Centennial in 1876, and at the annual congress held at Cassadaga in 1884 by a vote was changed in name to the American Secular Union.

And now, Mr. Editor, in the last TRUTH SEEKER, page 88, under the heading, "The American Secular Union," you gave your readers something to think about—as many of them, at least, as are members of the American Secular Union. I carefully read, and re-read, and considered this article of yours, when I felt like saying, That friend spoke my mind. That was the way that we used to do in the business meetings of the Quaker church when some subject of importance was before the meeting, and some member with a superior quality of brain, well stored with good sense, and with the control of good language to impart that sense to the meeting, would get the subject so plain before the minds of the members present that an ordinary quality of brain could see the matter in its true light. Then the hearer would rise from his seat and say, "That Friend spoke my mind;" and so I hav said of you and your article, and I may include the Boston Investigator, "These friends hav spoken my mind."

And this is the way to bring about a lasting peace. Be open and honest to yourself, and clothe your thoughts with as much intelligence as you are master of; and there stop, and be ready to hear what can be said on the other side. It will not do for us to waste much of our time and ammunition shooting at one another, when we hav such a bold, aggressiv enemy in our midst, ready to take any advantage of our weak side. and who would be glad to see the American Secular Union, with its predecessor, the National Liberal League (which name I think was the better one of the two), blotted out of sight and hearing, and more of these Radical thinkers shut up in prison, or burnt at the stake, as their predecessors used to be treated by them when the churchmen had the political power in their hands—which they are now trying to again get under their control.

Adrian, Mich., Feb. 12 EM 291. S. D. MOORE.

Secularism.

From the Ironclad Age.

Secularism is worldly-mindedness. There is no system of ethics or morality that can be formulated out of "secularism," or be based upon it. Secularism belongs to the domain of politics. Only political agencies can honestly be employed to promote Secularism. They who go about calling themselvs Secularists, holding up the white flag of peace to the clergy in the left hand while stabbing the Bible and the church with the right, deceive no clergyman. The church sets them down as Atheists, hypocritically sailing under false colors. No honest, square "Secularist" will open his mouth about the Bible or the Christian religion.

The way to build up organizations is to begin at the bottom, not the top. If Infidels want to organize—if they want to put workers in the field—let them begin in school districts. Let them encourage local workers and speakers to form home societies. It is childishness and driveling puerility to talk of putting one or two authorized field secretaries in the field in this great country to canvass for gudgeons and contributions to an organization that declares it is not opposed to the church. Who but the clergy wants to put God in the Constitution? Who but the clergy wants the Bible in the public schools? Who but the church, that is to say, the clergy, opposes the Secularization of the government? Who is there for "Secularists" to fight but the clergy? Let honest Infidels hav nothing to do with hypocritical fraud and false pretense.

Winning Lines for the Union.

From the San Francisco Freethought.

The presentation of the name of Charles Watts as candidate for field secretary of the American Secular Union should hav a tendency to settle the discussion as to men if not as to method, because Mr. Watts will fill the position to everybody's satisfaction. The same is true of many others also, but so long as he is a candidate, why object? If I were a member of the American Secular Union I would vote for him, and I would vote for Washburn, Putnam, Bell, Remsburg, Reynolds, or Jamieson, singly or severally, if nominated. Were I wealthy I would pay the secretary's salary. Were I a lecturer I would be a field secretary without salary, as most of the lecturers now are, and rustle for myself, as all of the lecturers now do.

It is true that Mr. Watts is editor of a paper, of which he would no doubt be traveling correspondent, so that it would become in a measure the official organ of the Union. His paper is published in Canada, but an American organization with an official organ in Canada must serve to cement the relations of the two countries and perhaps lead finally to the annexation of the United States to the dominion.

I received a private letter from Judge Westbrook, the other day, and although it is written in the kindliest spirit, and although he says he had a hearty laugh over my writings, still I could read plainly enough between the lines that my chances of getting the appointment are very slim, and would be, even if I were an orator and had studied the Delsarte system of expression.

On January 12th I wrote to Mr. L. K. Washburn an anxious inquiry, which he has published in the Investigator, as follows:

Dear Washburn: Who is to be field secretary, you or I?

Mr. Washburn's reply is embraced succinctly in the three words:

Giv it up.

I am undecided whether to parse this reply in the imperativ or declarativ mood; that is, I do not know whether it advises me to stop looking for the position, or indicates that Mr. Washburn is unable to answer my question. I hoped for something more explicit.

Nearly all the lecturers are now heard from. Mr. Remsburg favors Dr. Foote's plan; so do Bell and Jamieson. Dr. York favors neither, but local organization. All these opinions are worthy of respect. The Hon. A. Schell speaks this week with no uncertain voice, and he has great influence with me, because he knows more without effort than I do by exerting myself. Otherwise he would be conducting a Freethought journal and I should be enjoying myself on a ranch, paying off other people's mortgages, and making the world better by living in it.

I am also in receipt of an expression from Mr. Charles Watts himself. He writes:

My Dear Boy: How are you anyway? Let me congratulate you on the acquisition of a son. When I see him I will recite the "Progress of Madness" for his benefit.

Yours cordially, CHAS. WATTS.

The direct bearing of Mr. Watts's letter upon the subject under discussion may not be apparent to all, but it will be seen at once that he addresses himself to one in a parental manner.

I hav sounded Putnam on the subject of a field secretary, and he is rather non-committal; thinks any lecturer would exhaust the subject of the Nine Demands in less than a year; believes a lecturer whose expenses were paid in advance would get most of the appointments; instead of raising money themselvs the people of a community would wait for the field secretary; prefers to look out for himself and to be responsible to no one but his audiences; desires to be at liberty to attack the orthodox fraud wherever found, on legal or religious ground; would wave the Freethought standard still, and casually demand, of those who claim so much for God, "Why don't he lend a hand?"

On the whole it may be best to conduct the Secular Union along the lines laid down by President Westbrook. Invite Christians to coöperate, and then at the end of a year let the secretary report how many religious organizations hav joined the Union; also how much money or encouragement has been subscribed by members of such organizations.

Tax Them to the Top of the Steeple.

From the Phelps county Herald, Bertrand, Neb.

A circular reaches us from a far Eastern state, with this heading, "Shall Church Property be Taxed?" We answer emphatically, Yes! It should be taxed equally with all other property. Either all property should be taxed or none should be. The church has no rightful claim to special favors from the state, but is an institution that can and should bear an equitable share of the burden of taxation. It is not the business of the state to look after the church, further than to giv it the same protection extended to all other institutions—no more, no less. If the church cannot exist without the aid of the state, that is entirely its own affair, and no concern of the state's. The church is, or ought to be, purely a religious institution, voluntarily supported by those who accept its tenets or beliefs or not at all. The state is, or ought to be, purely a secular institution, existing solely to preserve civil and national rights, liberty, equity, and justice, and extending equal protection to all, but favors to none.

In so far as a portion of the property in a community is exempted from taxation, by just that much is the taxation of the remainder increased, and this is neither right nor just. The circular mentioned states:

The exemption of church property from taxation virtually compels taxpayers to support all places of worship so exempt. The taxpayer is compelled by direct legislation to contribute to church support just so much as his own tax is increased in consequence of the exemption of church property from taxation. Our present exemption laws impose a tax on the many for the benefit of the few, and practically, in some instances, on the poor for the benefit of the rich.

This is true. All over this country there are wealthy religious associations whose vast property is safe from the touch of the taxgatherer. All over this country are humble homes ready to be sold for taxes. In New York city there are churches whose property is worth $1,000,000, yet it pays no taxes. The bronze doors of Trinity, presented to it by William Waldorf Astor, are alone worth $100.000. Another church edifice has one window worth $50,000. These associations are able to pay their preachers from $5,000 to $25,000 a year, yet their property bears no share of the tax burden. Not far away are the homes of hundreds of workingmen and poor people, whose humble property is taxed to the full limit, and whose share of the public expense is proportionately greater because the magnificent possessions of favored institutions go free. Surely there are few who cannot see the injustice of this.

Items of Foreign Freethought News.

The Freethinkers of Belgium propose to erect a monument in honor of César de Paepe, and a considerable sum has already been subscribed.

Mr. Leon Furnemont, advocate in the Belgian supreme court, editor of La Raison, and more or less activly connected with every Liberal movement in Belgium, has been elected president of the board of directors of the Belgian Freethought Association.

The time seems not far away when there will be a realization of the proposal of C. Cilwa, editor of La Verité Philosophique, to adopt the pansy as a universal Freethought symbol. Dr. Voelkel has advocated it, and Dr. Specht, secretary of the German Freethought Association, devotes nearly a column to the same purpose.

In Spain, as everywhere else, the Freethinkers are conspicuous as advocates and defenders not alone of religious but also of political liberty. We see that, among other Freethinkers, our friend and contemporary D. Ramon Chies, editor of Las Dominicales, an excellent Spanish Freethought weekly paper, is one of the honorary presidents of the republican party in poor king-ridden and priest-ridden Spain.

In our last "Items" we mentioned that a debate between Mr. Lennstrand and Rev. Meijer had taken place, and that we supposed the former to hav been victorious. Since then we hav received further information which confirms the correctness of the prophecy given by us. While a debate between a Freethinker and a minister does not create great stir here in America, it is otherwise in Sweden. And we suppose the faithful send one prayerful message after another to their father above to assist the champion of the faith. But, as usual, Jehovah was busy with something else, and the result was, as the Swedish telegraph union flashed across the wires, "that while Mr. Meijer talked about everything imaginable, Mr. Lennstrand confined himself to the subject to be discussed, and hence the victory was Lennstrand's, since his opponent's arguments were but scraps of sermons." We congratulate Mr. Lennstrand, and hope that the next time he takes up a debate he will engage a hall accommodating more than eight hundred persons, since several hundred had to be turned away.

A late number of the Grashdanin, a Russian orthodox semi-official paper, contains, among other highly interesting reflections, the following: "Compulsory education is a foolishness, a lie, an Anarchistic invention. What do we use educated people for, anyway? There is more confidence shown to the analphabets, who know nothing but are pious, than to those maltreated young people who hav passed through God knows how many institutions of learning. The so-called fool that is a natural man has a credit of ten thousand rubles where the educated person has but one hundred rubles credit, for no sane man will trust such dangerous people who can not alone read everything but also write. It is the same in the artisan world, in stores and mills. In none of these places do we hav room for ladies and gentlemen with diplomas, for we know that ignorant people are more trustworthy. Why cultivate and enlighten? What good are schools and academies? Away with the stuff! Let us return to a natural state!" Can we wonder that conditions in Russia are so bad as they are, when such opinions are promulgated?

Lectures and Meetings.

J. E. REMSBURG's appointments for Ohio were as follows: Dayton, February 13th; Shepard, 14th; Columbus, 15th; Bloomdale, 16th; Clyde, 17th; Shreve, 18th, 19th, 20th; Andover, 23d.

AT the Brooklyn Philosophical Association, Bedford avenue and South Second street, E. D., on Sunday, the 22d instant, Dr. M. L. Holbrook will tell what he thinks is "The True and the False in Mind Cure."

J. E. REMSBURG's appointments after leaving Ohio are as follows: Linesville, Pa., February 21st, 22d; Russell, Pa., 24th, 25th, 26th; Newark, N. Y., 27th; Prattsburgh, N. Y., 28th, March 1st; Dundee, N. Y., 2d; Canoga, N. Y., 3d; Bouckville, N. Y., 4 h; Gloversville, N. Y., 5th; Hudson, N. Y., 6th; Glen Falls, N. Y., 7th, 8th; New Haven, Conn., 9th; Orange, N. J., 10th.

To accommodate Mr. Charlesworth, Dr. E. B. Foote occupied the platform of the Manhattan Liberal Club last Friday, and Mr. Charlesworth will discourse on the "Rational Treatment of Criminals" on the evening of February 20th. It is Mr. Charlesworth's intention to get up a lecture tour in the West about the beginning of March, and friends in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois who desire his services may address him at 505 East 83d street, New York city.

Communications.

Cardinal Fallacies of Gnosticism.

And Mr. Spencer concludes: "So that the personality of which each is conscious, and of which the existence is to each a fact beyond all others the most certain, is yet a thing which cannot truly be known at all: knowledge of it is forbidden by the very nature of thought." And following a demonstration of how the futility of other than relativ knowledge results, appear these remarks:

Deep down then in the very nature of life the relativity of our knowledge is discernible. The analysis of vital actions in general leads not only to the conclusion that things in themselvs cannot be known to us, but also to the conclusion that knowledge of them, were it possible, would be useless.

And he says of one who has sufficiently investigated the evolution and ultimate nature of things: "He more than any other truly knows that in its ultimate essence nothing can be known." (In which Mr. Spencer is reduced to using the verb of dual significance, so that his sentence seems a contradiction in spirit as well as in terms.)

Add now to the claim of the Gnostic professing absolute knowledge of existence but the qualification of place, and it may be refuted in our own exquisitly simple and original manner. For instance, suppose a man to aspire to the certainty that he is in this room. The human mind is subject to dreams more or less vivid. Suppose now that on occasion a dream may be fully as vivid as wakeful existence? If there be an Omnipotent, this is possible, and if there be no Omnipotence it is possible. For who can know that it is not within the bounds of possibility? Evidently no one: Therefore it is possible that it is possible; consequently it is possible. Simply because it is contrary to experience does not prove its impossibility. We are ineluctably forced to conclude that notwithstanding all adverse probabilities, it may be that an occasional dream may be quite as vivid as reality. And when this is admitted it follows that what to a man seems the most positiv realism may be but the fantasies of a dreaming mind. Or if it be possible for man to know that no human dreams can ever be as vivid as reality, how about the dreaming fancies in the canine world—how about the imagery of insanity, which is sometimes apparently as realistic as reality? What can man know of this in its different degrees? And if he does not know that it can never by any possibility be as vivid as reality, how can he know that even now he is not subject to it? If it be answered, "because the impressions of reality are persistent, ever pressing, while the fantasies of insanity are temporary and intermittent," the reply is that even if the impressions be but transient, nevertheless, while they last, if they be as vivid as reality, they must seem just as persistent as real consciousness and be indistinguishable therefrom. But further even than this, if the impressions of insanity be not as vivid as reality, still if they exclude, as we are compelled to think they do, at least in some cases, all intimations of a vivider state—if to the subject of insanity, as exactly similarly to the subject of reality, it appears that his is the real existence—how then can man know that he is beyond the pale? This interrogation is imperativ—satisfy it. To say that a subject of insanity may realize or hav even an evanescent intuition that he is non compos, is to express what in the present status of thought and language might casually be accepted as a verbally intelligible statement, but which really expresses nothing. For suppose it predicated that a subject of insanity may be conscious of his lunacy—the attending sophistry is: "If this be true (which it is not, except perhaps in his lucid intervals), then, so far as he realizes his insanity, he is really compos mentis, provided it be true that what he realizes is a fact, namely that he is unsound." Which is a multiplication of contradictions. And if a man cannot know that he is beyond the pale of insanity, which notoriously exhibits a thorough contempt for all restrictions of place, how then can a man know that he is in this room? He may believe it—a thousand times agreed. And believe it with as transcendingly powerful a conviction of which his very nature, of which his soul (if he has a nature or soul) is susceptible. But between the idea expressed by the word believe used in its intensest sense, and that symbolized by the word "know," what an abiding, what an absolute infinity of difference!

Enough! to those who from the constitution of their minds cannot, at least without farther reflection, be convinced, I can but say that deep in my secret mind of minds I am conscious of a slight but persistent intimation that for all I know to the contrary with absolute knowledge they may be right and I may be wrong. In other words, I believe in the fallibility on all points of all human minds except that of the anomaly who is the maximus in extremis of the Roman Catholic superstition throughout the world, but more especially in the fallibility of my own mind. Should it be asked, how I know that I am conscious of an intimation, the answer is: "I do not know it, I only know it."

An *un*certain degree of abasement of the human mind before a divine intellect is a point propounded by theology and insisted upon by religionists. But why not, if only for perspicuity, extend the theory to its legitimate limits, its ultimate boundary, unqualified fallibility, instead of leaving a factitious and arbitrary but unarbitrated quantity, vacillating as the variations of the different orders of minds under which it comes in contemplation? Between skepticism and positiv assurance there can be no intermediate ground. "Here endeth the third lesson."

REMARKS.

1. To suppose possible anything more than a relativ demonstration of the fallacy of human certainty, involves a contradiction, thus—were it demonstrable absolutely that nothing is certain, then the fact that nothing is certain would be one certain thing—the premis and conclusion cancel. The very consistency of Agnosticism depends upon its being accepted in its entirety, without reserve.

2. Is it necessary to explain that our first two fallacies, to be even consistent with the third, must be proven fallacies only relativly? That is, by the standard of limited reason coextensiv with Gnosticism they are inevitable fallacies, but according to Agnosticism, they are not necessarily absolute fallacies, for they are such only as demonstrated by the identical or similar modes already presented, and as Agnosticism repudiates the absolute ultimacy of human processes, believing there may be something as far transcending reason as reason excels automatonism (to which generalization Gnosticism can never attain, for the moment it does it becomes Agnosticism), it follows that the first two "fallacies" may not be fallacies, and as accepted religion depends on their not being fallacies, it results that religion is (unconsciously) dependent on Agnosticism. Verily! Verily! (to adopt the vernacular) I make no charge for this nut, presenting it as gratuitous refreshment for clerics and Gnostics. Let them crack it. Let them refute the reasoning and we, too, will join the great array and enthusiastically prate against Agnosticism. Agnostics are open to conviction. Gnostics, as their name implies, exhibit a cast-iron expression of absolute certainty designed to paralyze the relativ and reduce to idiocy the highest generalizations of Agnosticism.

3. Gnosticism presupposes the load of proof to rest eternally upon skepticism, which arrogantly says, "I do not know," and is required to prove how it does not know. Is it possible that a change is at last about to come over the spirit of the controversy and Gnosticism be compelled to display its credentials, to demonstrate, or at least present some intelligible intimation of, how it does know anything?

Gnosticism believes in, or rather knows that there is, a God, and a very capable one—capable of anything but making a Gnostic mistaken. As for believing that, "excuse" the Gnostic. Here he draws the line, and fences his God. One of them (of the Gnostics, I mean) has said, "no merum arbitrium can make more than one geometry, one scheme of pure physics, for all worlds," and the Omnipotent (the irony of the word) "could but follow the laws of curvature, measure, and proportion." And this "transcendent audacity," as Mr. Spencer says, standing behind the Power and noting the conditions to its action, passes current. "May we not, without hesitation, affirm that a sincere recognition that the truth that our own and all other existence [its relations, conditions, and possibilities] is a mystery absolutely and forever beyond our comprehension, contains more of true religion than all the dogmatic theology ever written?" The fact is, what the Gnostic would really accomplish, could he establish his pitiful postulates, would be. from the standpoint of the relativ to pry the absolute from its poise, and together with it "spin forever down the ringing grooves of change." Or, to borrow a little poetic confectionery and apply it not more grotesquely than the original was applied, the lines of Coleridge may be slightly changed to read:

> The owlet Gnosticism,
> Sailing on obscene wings athwart the noon,
> Drops his blue-fringed lids, and holds them close,
> And, looking at the glorious sun in heaven, the Absolute,
> Cries out, "Where is it?"*

4. Belief in the existence of sin is of universal acceptance. But deeper even (or as deep) than the belief in sin, is the eternal conviction that in all human actions or decisions involving right and wrong, are the mutually recalcitrant components, temptation and resistance. Indeed no man has yet perpetrated the suggestion that sin is possible apart from these; and the most that has been contended is that one predominates over the other. If then, human decisions, like everything else tangible or evanescent, take the direction of least resistance (in this case, are determined by the preponderance of temptation over resistance or vice versa), where then does responsibility, and consequently sin, come in? And if human actions are determined by the preponderance of temptation over resistance, or the reverse, where does responsibility, and consequently sin, obtain? Has this ever been adequately answered—if so, where, when, and how? Show me a thesis on theodicy and I will show you a theory beyond its depth.

5. Mr. Spencer speaks of the Agnosticism of "First Principles," which, he says, along with its denials, its everlasting no, "emphatically utters an everlasting yes." Now the Agnosticism of "Cardinal Fallacies of Gnosticism," so far from formulating an everlasting no, unburdens itself of what will be considered an incorrigible and idiosyncratic don't no or don't know. After all, between the everlasting no and the everlasting yes, is not the eternal don't know the conservativ middle, the rational corollary?

6. Last year's controversy between Professor Huxley and the Gnostics is so pertinent that I revert to it.

Discussion is infinit; nor can it establish the truth, for decisions of points of controversy are fallible, even from a Gnostic view. For while the Gnostics do not admit that all minds (their own for exception) are liable to universal error, they recognize that some minds may be ahead of the times. So, if the Agnostic be a century too soon for his to be the accepted views, and if those judging the controversy be not similarly afflicted, the decisions may be contrary to truth. Besides, Gnostics admit (I hav papers to sustain the statement) that in highly abstract questions the majority are generally wrong, and they correctly claim to constitute a quorum.

The Agnostic states his belief, and Mr. Mallock, springing an ipse dixit on that crucial point, says, You do not believe that "unless in some dim and remote sense" (consistency thou art a gem!), and he proceeds with consummate copiousness to illuminate us thus:

Agnosticism, then, expressed in the briefest terms, amounts to two articles, not of belief, but of disbelief. I do not believe in any God, personal, intelligent, or with a purpose; or, at least, with any purpose that has any concern with man. I do not believe in any immortal soul, or in any personality or consciousness surviving the dissolution of the body.

Now, I protest that this is not in the "briefest terms." In the name of perspicuity, what is the matter with, I do not believe in a God nor surviving soul?

Why is this not as brief? Besides, there is not the slightest disbelief expressed. Dr. Wace cites Dr. Johnson as saying that an unbeliever is an Infidel. Webster's Dictionary has it: "An unbeliever is not necessarily a disbeliever or Infidel." And this is the rational interpretation; for if a mere unbeliever be an Infidel, how much worse must be an actual disbeliever—but nothing worse is possible, the disbeliever is the Infidel! Moreover, most Agnostics do believe in a Supreme Something, a being or a principle analogous to, but (God forbid!) not identical with, the Christian's God; though why any obloquy should apply for not believing, or for even disbelieving in, a Presiding Intelligence, is to me one of the insolubles. Is there anything in this world more palpable than the pre-sumptiv notion that belief is either a kind of metaphysical exotism or else an indigenous product of the will? Is it not equally likely that the belief underlies and produces or constitutes the ego? The Bible says, The fool hath said there is no God, but men far removed from imbecility, especially, perhaps, the rank Materialists and those whose lives hav resembled a wholesale tincture of merry hell, hav gravitated to the conclusion, "There is no God." Mr. Mallock says Agnosticism tells us that the soul shall die. Agnosticism tells every man to decide such questions for himself or be wiser still and leave them in statu quo. He says the Agnostic principle "is that nothing is certainly true but such truths [mark the such!] as are demonstrated or demonstrable." Now, the idea of any truth being untrue is a Hibernicism that may obtain in the Gnostic process, but which nowhere appears in Agnosticism. It is because Agnosticism is so much deeper than this, so far deeper than is dreamed of in Gnostic sophistry, that it would appear a graceless task to radically enlighten the great majority. But Mr. Mallock himself ably defines the rock on which we split, so that not only a didactor but every intelligent man may determin where he stands provided he does not oscillate in indecision on the fence. He says religion "builds up its fabric of certainties." Now, Agnosticism regards that fabric-ation of which he speaks as being constructed of uncertainties. And Dr. Wace even disingenuously admits as much, for when driven to the wall by the impinging mallet of Agnosticism, he says: "The first word of the Christian is not 'I know,' but 'I believe.'" "The first word!" As an American gentleman of Ethiopian lineage would observe, "don't tell me a Susie." But on the contrary I leave it to the sacred conscience of any fair-minded man, Christian or Infidel, if it is not an evasion, for the question is not what is his "first word," but what is his ultimate position, and although the first two words of the Christian creed are, "I believe," still Dr. Wace implicitly admits the difference between "know" and "believe," and more than implies that the Christian does not "know," only "believes." Why then does he not admit that they hav doubts and are unconsciously Agnostics? Dr. Wace explains that this belief is belief in God the Father, God the Son, and God the Ghost. Now, were this the whole truth, then as to the first item there would scarce be a difference between the Christian and many Agnostics. But the part omitted is that "belief admits of all degrees from the slightest suspicion to the fullest assurance" (vide Webster's Dictionary). So at last we come to the cardinal difference between Gnostic Theism and Agnosticism; which is that while one believes in God to the limit of belief, without reserve, without at the same time realizing that his belief is fallible, the other while believing in a Supreme Unknowable is not oblivious to the equally deep and abiding belief in the relativity and fallibility of thought and belief itself. As for the second item, the half-God-half-man theory, this the Agnostic accepts cum magno grano. The Ghost theory he throws to omnivorous Spiritualism; while the blasphemous idea of the method of producing semi-divinity (Luke i, 34, 35), together with other ethical parts of the picture, he rejects as fit sustenance only for that highly enlightening, unbigoted, untinseled religion, Rotten Romanism.

*Professor Huxley, although an Agnostic concerning religion, repudiates (while other Agnostics maintain) the "absolute" of philosophy; and the recognition of this quasi-inconsistence among Agnostics, may impart an impulse to the reverberations of Theistic thunder already resounding throughout the land.

And speaking of this putrefying superstition reminds us that this mundane footstool, if you hav no objections, is indebted to Dr. Wace for perpetrating the original and elegant alliteration of "rotten ratiocination;" which might be used devotionally with telling effect. Involuntarily the reverend prebendary is mentally daguerreotyped as battering the walls of High Halleluiah with his "O thou Omnipotent! pity the rottenness of our ratiocination," or words of similar kidney.

7. In conclusion: To palliate any apparent deviations from the strict letter of orthodoxy of which I may be accused, I would remind that all transitions from comparativly concrete to relativly discrete beliefs, by violating established associations and apparently eradicating morality, naturally cause an appreciable amount of laceration. But to neutralize erroneous impressions that any captious spirit of disestablishmentarianism obtains, or that my tendencies are toward a delimitation of immortal hope, I suggest the too seldom realized fact, that the alternativ of oblivion opens to us an avenue of hope, rivaling or excelling in all hypostatic desiderata the conceptions of heaven itself; thus supplying two goals of hope in the place of one. In oblivion there can be no unhappiness, while in eternal life there may be wailing and gnashing. Life eternal may clog, oblivion never. To the question, Whom would you rather be? is the answer, He who is destined to the greatest amount of ultimate happiness, comparable to the answer—he who is destined to the least of aggregate misery. Pliny says, "There is no joy which can be weighed against the smallest degree of grief;" which, though an exaggeration, still suggests what is universally ignored, that even if heaven be attained, there is no indication that it will be eternally retained. What destruction from analogy is there indicativ of such retention? And conversely, does not the obscene book itself instance a precedent in which Halleluiah has been lost, or hav I the biblical and Miltonian versions "mixed?"

For oblivion, I quote one grand peroration of the great American theomachist, the apostle of the religion of love and charity, Mr. R. G. Ingersoll, who, in suggesting in place of the cherished hell theory the adequate hypostasis of oblivion, "the dreamless drapery of eternal peace," as he inimitably terms it, closes in the poetry of prose with these remarkable words: "Next to eternal life is eternal death. Upon the shadowy shore of death the sea of trouble casts no wave. Eyes that hav been curtained by the everlasting dark will never know again the touch of tears. Lips that hav been sealed by eternal silence will never utter another word of grief. Hearts of dust do not break. The dead do not weep. And I would rather think of those I hav loved, and those I hav lost, as having returned, as having become a part of the elemental wealth of the world. I would rather think of them as unconscious dust. I would rather think of them as gurgling in the stream, floating in the clouds, bursting in the foam of light upon the shores of worlds. I would rather think of them as the inanimate and eternally unconscious, than to hav even a suspicion that their naked souls had been clutched by an orthodox God."

Doubtless many bold, bad spirits may be found vicious enough to combat Agnosticism as herein inferentially exposited. But let me say: All that is known is known in consciousness (or its penumbra) only. Consciousness is relativ, finite, conditioned. How then can it transcend itself, grasp the unconditioned and possess absolute knowledge? An Agnostic says: Though consciousness reveals all we know, it conceals much more than it reveals; like its emblem, light, which, while revealing the landscape, vails the starry hosts. Night lifts the vail of light, but what shall lift the vail of consciousness?—death—perhaps.

W. W. CARRINGTON.

In Memoriam.

DIED.—At his home near Longmont, Col., Jan. 26, 1891, Col. John R. Kelso.

The immediate cause of death is believed to be a complication of stomachic troubles, involving chronic gastric inflammation, from a probable encysted rebel bullet in a tumorous growth of recent origin.

Deceased was born near Columbus, O., March 23, 1831. His parents were of Scotch descent, but with a Greek cognomen, the import of which was, I will rule, or conquer. This name seemed characteristic of the family, whose ruling traits were, pride, energy, bravery, integrity, and intelligence.

The deceased was, in his birthright, richly endowed, inheriting from his father his stalwart form, iron physique, intense love for the right, and courage to defend it; from his mother an almost unbounded love for the beautiful, a high degree of poetical talent, and an intensely religious nature, while from both parents he derived the indomitable energy, physical and mental, which marked his entire life.

His early advantages for education were exceedingly limited, but his thirst for knowledge so far overcame all difficulties as to make him the finished scholar that he was, with a college course of only seventeen weeks.

The dispatch and neatness with which he performed all tasks, made his labor, at the early age of seven years, a valuable acquisition to his parents, who at the time removed to southern Missouri. With this journey his childhood days ended, and the struggle for food, for mind and body, began.

At the age of twelve his religious nature had so developed that he was taken into church membership, but not until two years later did he "experience religion."

At seventeen he was a teacher in the public schools and a licensed exhorter in the Methodist church. This "calling" led to such an analytical and synthetical study of the Bible as to make him more familiar with that volume than any other person of my acquaintance. Such study provoked doubt. Doubt produced religious despair—a feeling that by these sacrilegious doubts he had committed the "unpardonable sin," had doomed his soul to eternal burning.

Only a powerful constitution, physical and mental, saved him from insanity or suicide.

The antidote for this terrible malady came through more study, and resulted, to him, seven years later, in the great peace of mind which characterized his life and death, and to the world in the writings which hav saved many other earnest souls from a similar ordeal.

In his twentieth year he decided to become an author, but resolved to study twenty years before committing anything to paper. In his fortieth year he took up the pen, so recently laid down, near the close of his sixtieth year. His writings, nine distinct works, are of a theological, scientific, and philanthropic character. Six of these hav already been brought before the world. His miscellaneous writings he left ready for the press, while his autobiography must, for the five past years, be continued as biography.

His last and best book, "Government Analyzed," about two-thirds written, he wished me to complete and bring out in time for the campaign of 1892. In this work, this labor of love, I here bespeak such aid and encouragement as would hav cheered the author in the consummation of his literary plans.

His domestic life, his long career as a teacher, his record in Congress, his thrilling war history, etc., appear in detail, and form important factors in his soon-to-be-published autobiography.

With a few words respecting his last years, I close. The profession of teaching, followed for thirty years, was abandoned in June, 1885.

Early in July he came to Colorado, where, in our country home, he settled down to a quiet life devoted to his literary work, and varied with such manual labor as he deemed essential to balance his excessiv intellectual effort.

These years he was wont to speak of as the happiest of his life, and fraught with the greatest good to the cause to which he was devoted, viz., human happiness. He used often to say, "I am doing the best thinking of my life." Nearly all of his composing was done while engaged in manual labor. Often he came to the house too full of his subject to admit of using his pen. At such times he would walk the floor, while I, with more rapid pen, could barely keep pace with his thought. So much had been accomplished that the work to which he had allotted two more years would hav been completed early in the present one.

His health, since coming to Colorado, has been unusually good, his only ailments being those incident to a born dyspeptic, aggravated by many serious injuries incurred during the war.

About six months ago his stomach trouble seemed to assume a new phase, occasionally causing great suffering. Two months ago he broke down entirely. By the constant but moderate use of opiates, these weeks were very comfortably passed.

During the entire time there was no demand for food, and the little nourishment taken was not assimilated. The highest medical practitioners were summoned, but humbly acknowledged their inability to help. I would here acknowledge the aid and comfort brought us during the last few days of the colonel's life by the frequent visits of a kind, intelligent woman who called herself a "natural healer," and who, though she could giv me "no promis of restoration to health," would "do what she could to relieve suffering." This she did to such an extent as to render natural sleep and rest possible, where rest had heretofore been only artificially induced. In my anxiety and weariness I could not well grasp the philosophy of the silent forces of this, to me, new remedial agency. Some time I would study this subject and giv to you the result of that study.

From the first the colonel did not expect to recover. He enjoyed, more than in health, if possible, the visits of his friends, so long as he was able to talk and listen. Later he wished "to take each one by the hand." He talked calmly, cheerfully, of business matters—of the last obsequies and of his present and final resting-place. He hoped that no badge of mourning would be worn, no demonstrations of grief be made. He wished the exercises to consist of remarks by the friends who had known him best and loved him most; the music for the occasion of a joyous rather than of a sad nature—one piece commemorativ of the regard his friends bore him—one to be a grand pæan of joy over his triumphant exit from the lower and entrance to the higher life. He had familiarized himself with the philosophy of life, but to him there was no death, consequently no philosophy of death. The change usually termed death he regarded as a natural one, and as much to be desired (at the proper time) as was life. The calm, brave manner in which he met this change elicited admiration from his Christian friends, and helped me, his wife, to calmly, bravely bear the inevitable—yes, to liv for the purpose of completing his incomplete work.

The day (Wednesday, the 28th) appointed for the last sad rites was too stormy to render it possible for any except the near neighbors to reach us. The snow had fallen to a great depth and still came down in blinding gusts. A few strong men with difficulty bore the casket containing all that was mortal of our loved one to the temporary receptacle, a little vault of solid masonry aboveground, beneath the trees which he himself had planted, there to rest until, together, we may go, he in the spirit, I in the body, or both in the spirit, to our chosen California home. At some future favorable time the deferred obsequies will be held in the now desolate home, over the domestic happiness of which not even the shadow of a passing cloud has heretofore fallen. To this home her beloved husband's friends will ever be cordially welcomed by his devoted wife.

ETTA D. KELSO.

The Death of Charles Bradlaugh.

At a meeting of the Secular Society of Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 31, 1891, the following resolutions were passed:

WHEREAS, By the death of Charles Bradlaugh the world has lost one of the foremost and most fearless champions of civil and religious liberty, who died a martyr to the cause he espoused. Therefore

Resolved, That in Charles Bradlaugh we recognize a man whose brilliant attainments were supported by an indomitable courage and unswerving persistency which enabled him to push to a successful issue, before his death, the great object for which he contended.

Resolved, That the members of the Pittsburgh Secular Society hereby desire to express their sense of grief at the loss of one of the most faithful and most gifted co-workers in the Freethought world, and to record the pleasure and profit they hav experienced in his brilliant intellectual attainments.

Resolved, That we hereby extend our deepest sympathy to the bereaved relatives and friends of the deceased, hoping that, even in the sadness of their affliction, they may yet find consolation in knowing that the worth of his private qualities and the value of his public services are properly appreciated.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be properly engrossed and sent to the family of the deceased, and that a copy be sent to the daily press of this city and the American and English Freethought papers.

Brotherhood of Moralists.

Report of the Propaganda Committee of the Brotherhood of Moralists, at Hannibal, Mo., for January, 1891.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

During the month fifty-five membership certificates were issued, making the whole number enrolled 1,322. The new members are from Arizona, Missouri, New York, Colorado, Alabama, Ohio, Washington, California, Michigan, Texas. Brother Maurice Pritchard, of Sierra Valley, Cal., enlisted eight new members; Mrs. H. W. Potter, Eaton Rapids, Mich., ten members; Frank Morse, Port Angeles, Wash., eight members. Brothers, work to exceed this report.

F. H. RAU, Secretary.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

Balance from last report	$66 65
Lauar Tonnek, Missouri	50
Samos Parsons, California	5 00
F. R. M., Arkansas, F. M. Washington, each ten cents, and H. W. P., Michigan, thirty cents, for constitutions	50
N. P. Jones, Colorado	1 00
Total	$73 65
Mailing constitutions, etc	5 95
Balance	$67 70

Hannibal, Mo. A. R. AYRES, Treasurer.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - FEBRUARY 21, 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00

Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE

"SHOUTIN' JOE,"

By WATSON HESTON.

WITH PICTURES BY HIMSELF.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

Just What Does the Sun Mean?

From the New York Sun.

It would seem as though the government and people of the United States were hardly in need of such violent and grotesque protection against the Roman Catholic church and other churches as that afforded in the cartoons supplied by Mr. Watson Heston to THE TRUTH SEEKER during the years 1886 to 1889, and now published in a volume, "The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book" (the Truth Seeker Company). Mr. Heston's pictures are so pessimistic in tone that, if there were nothing but tone to them, they would be very depressing indeed. But there exists, fortunately, in their material expression a humor which is not the less stupendous because it is unconsciously afforded. There really lies in Mr. Heston's pictures a great amount of cheer. They are comics, and being so we do not see why anybody should find fault with them, unless, indeed, their author, who may feel that the interference of fate with his intentions is impertinent and unjust.

Vile Literature.

Mr. Thomas H. Cree writes to the Christian Advocate complaining that Zola's novels and other "immoral literature" are carried in the United States mails at the rate of one cent a pound, while Bibles and Sunday-school literature must pay eight cents per pound. According to Mr. Cree all the one-cent-a-pound matter is immoral, for he cites Mr. Wanamaker's report that "'a million dollars in postal revenue were lost each year by reason of this favor to certain publishers of fiction, trash, blood-curdling tales, and French impurities. One publishing firm, with three millions capital, and a hundred or more smaller houses, are doing all they can to prevent action. They are heard in the committees of Congress, and their agents are in the lobbies to see that nothing is done, and while people quietly submit nothing will be done. Bills to remedy the evil are before the Senate and House post-office committee, but the people show so little interest in the matter that they quietly rest there."

The Advocate indorses Mr. Cree's complaint as worthy of careful consideration. "All Christian people and good citizens," says Mr. Buckley, "agree that the circulation of vile literature is a curse to the young and the country. The facility with which this kind of literature is disseminated is a disgrace to our government. That the laws under which the mails are carried should discriminate in favor of this pernicious matter is a shame. This fact has been pointed out frequently, but things remain as they are because those mercenary agents of Satan, whose financial interests are at stake, are activ in their opposition to all measures which promis to save the country from the blot, while good citizens are apathetic. These things ought not so to be. Until those who hate vice are as activ in its suppression as its abettors are in its promotion reforms will not move rapidly."

In this crusade against "vile literature" we are happy to be arrayed with Messrs. Cree and Buckley. It was only last week that we sent to Mr. Wanamaker, by express, charges prepaid, a copy of a book purchased at a big house which has, we presume, more than three millions capital. It has a big publishing house, occupying the whole block between Astor Place and Ninth street, and Third and Fourth avenues, and has recently enlarged its facilities by building another story or two.

The book we purchased is openly exposed for sale, and the clerks are unblushing in supplying it to customers over their counters. The firm occupies what is known as the "Bible House," and the book we bought and sent to Mr. Wanamaker bears a title-page as follows:

THE
HOLY BIBLE,
CONTAINING THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS:
TRANSLATED OUT OF
THE ORIGINAL TONGUES;
AND WITH
THE FORMER TRANSLATIONS DILIGENTLY COMPARED AND REVISED.
NEW YORK:
AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY,
INSTITUTED IN THE YEAR MDCCCXVI,
1890.

Mr. Cree says that Zola's novels are excluded from the railway news-stands of France on the ground of immorality, and that their sale is totally prohibited in England. If such be the fact, and if this country, or its post-office department, is to follow the example, we submit that the work to which Mr. Wanamaker's attention has been called—by express, charges prepaid, on account of the statutes cited by the postmaster-general—should likewise be prohibited from transmission in the mails. There is no consistency in making fish of one and flesh of the other, for the other is as fleshly as the one.

A Proposed New Tax Law for New York.

Assemblyman Dempsey, of Rome, Oneida county, has introduced in the lower house of New York's legislature "an act for the assessment and taxation of real and personal property, and for equalizing taxation thereon." The first section is as follows:

"All real estate and personal property in this state, whether owned by individuals or corporations, copartnerships, joint stock companies, or associations, and all moneys owned by the residents of this state, and all moneys owned by individuals, or in possession or under the control of a resident of this state, as trustee, guardian, executor, or administrator, and whether represented or secured by stocks, bonds, mortgages, promissory notes, or other evidences of debt, shall be listed and assessed as hereinafter provided by this act, except such as are hereinafter exempt."

The list of exemptions occupies a page of the bill, and among them are these:

"Every building used for a college, incorporated academy, public school, or other seminary of learning over which the state exercises supervision, every building used for public worship, the manse or parsonage belonging to an organized religious society and actually occupied by its minister or priest, to the amount of two thousand five hundred dollars.

"The personal and real property of every minister of the gospel or priest of any denomination, to the amount of fifteen hundred dollars."

The corresponding sections of the present statutes on the same subjects are:

"The following property shall be exempt from taxation: . . . 3. Every building erected for the use of a college, incorporated academy, or other seminary of learning and in actual use for either of such purposes, every building for public worship, every school-house, court-house and gaol used for either of such purposes; and the several lots whereon such buildings are situated and the furniture belonging to each of them.

"8. The personal property of every minister of the gospel, or priest of any denomination, or every such minister or priest who is permanently disabled by impaired health from performing the activ duties of the ministry, and every such minister or priest, who has reached the age of seventy-five years; and the real estate of such minister or priest or such disabled or aged minister or priest, when occupied by him, provided such real and personal estate does not exceed the value of one thousand five hundred dollars.

"Sec. 5. If the real and personal estate, or either of them, of any minister or priest, exceed the value of one thousand five hundred dollars, that sum shall be deducted from the valuation of his property, and the residue shall be liable to taxation."

The proposed exemptions, it will be seen, are somewhat less than at present, but are by no means so few as they should be. At present the property, real and personal, of the parochial schools maintained by Lutheran, Jewish, and Catholic bodies are exempt. The new bill would subject them to the tax-gatherer's visit. It will therefore, unless amended to suit them, be opposed by the churches. And it ought also to be made the subject of Freethought protests unless amended by striking out the exemption of churches and parsonages and the ministers' property. There is no decent reason why churches should not bear their share of the public burdens, nor why a minister should hav fifteen hundred dollars' worth of real estate exempt when the farmer must pay a tax on every rod of land he possesses, and the workingman on the full value of his home.

The bill is now in the hands of the assembly committee on taxation and retrenchment.

Mr. Gerald, of McLennan County.

Before it is too late we desire to wreathe with praise the action of the Honorable G. B. Gerald, of McLennan county, Texas, in protesting against the election of a chaplain for the legislature of which he is a member. When the house of representativs was about to do this unconstitutional act he spoke as follows:

"Mr. Speaker: I desire to be recorded as refusing to create the office of chaplain, and that I may not be misunderstood and thereby do an injustice to a candidate from my county, I ask two minutes to giv the reasons for my course.

"I will not vote to create the office of chaplain, because I do not believe that any prayers offered by him will hav the slightest effect upon the course of legislation here.

"The constitution of this state provides that: 'No man shall be compelled to attend, erect, or support any place of worship, or maintain any ministry against his consent. . . . And no preference shall ever be given by law to any religious society or mode of worship,' yet this house, by the selection of a chaplain, indirectly givs preference to whatever society and mode of worship he may advocate, and directly compels the taxpayers of this state, who may not desire to do so, to contribute toward his support.

"In my opinion we can only be justified in creating offices and paying salaries where they are necessary, for the enactment of laws for the benefit and government of all the people of this state, and the office of chaplain not coming within this category, I cannot, by vote, consent to appropriate either the time or the money that will be necessarily consumed by its creation."

Mr. Gerald did not expect his words would prevent the choosing of a chaplain, for he knew how determined the Christians are to override every principle of fairness, every law, every constitution, to obtain an advantage for their pet sectarianism. But, in the Waco Day, he followed up his protest with another, explaining the first. He said:

"Two minutes were allowed for nominating speeches, and by taking more time I could hav easily shown that the combining of the office of chaplain with legislativ bodies is a part of the church and state policy, which our whole theory of government condemns; and which every good citizen, no matter what his religious opinions be, I think should condemn, and especially so, if he is of the Baptist faith, for the history of that church is filled with protests against combining church and state, and demanding the right of individual religious opinion as the highest right of the citizen, and condemning the state in any attempt to influence or restrict it in favor of one faith against another.

"There is not an intelligent member of that body who can disapprove of my course, unless he is prepared to condemn the course of that grand old hero, Roger Williams, who, rather than surrender the right for which his co-religionists had contended in the face of a bigoted king, went forth amid the snows of winter to make his home among the savages, who were more kindly than his neighbors; unless he is prepared to condemn that grander hero, Thomas Jefferson, Deist and Freethinker that he was, whose statute of religious liberty pulled the foot of the established church from off the neck of the Baptist church in Virginia."

We do not know whether Mr. Gerald is a Freethinker, but that makes no difference. He has correct ideas and American principles; he is a brave man, and he is worthy of all honor for the stand he made. Three cheers for G. B. Gerald of McLennan county, Texas!

ALTHOUGH the members of his family are Roman Catholics, one of his sons being a Jesuit, General Sherman has long been known as a Freethinker. Once, not long ago, he wrote that he believed in a supreme power; that was as far, he said, as his religion went. A year or two ago, he wrote in the North American Review, "I am not a Catholic, and can not be." Yet when he lay unconscious on his deathbed, a Roman Catholic priest was brought to his bedside who administered to him "extreme unction." It was a sacrilegious thing to do, a vulture-like proceeding of which only that church and its members could be capable. It ought to win for the conspirators the contempt of the civilized world.

F. Q. STUART, who is the editor of the Individualist department of "Living Issues," regards municipalization as in perfect line with individualism. But who regards Stuart as an authority on individualism?—Liberty. Exactly. But who regards Mr. Tucker as an authority on authorities?

MR. W. S. ANDREWS, of Portsmouth, O., desires us to print a long article embodying a new constitution for the American Secular Union which he proposes to offer at the next congress of the Union. We must decline, at the present time, to use our valuable space in that way. The next congress of the Union is altogether too far in dim futurity. Besides, it hasn't yet recovered from the last.

A WRITER in a Kansas paper offers some subjects for discussion by the Alliance and lyceums. These are three of them:

"Resolved, That we morally approve what we religiously condemn.

"Resolved, That the scriptures should never be discussed except by the self-constituted, divinely-appointed, and then not in public.

"Resolved, That teachers and preachers should lead instead of follow in the march of progress."

HOFFMAN'S Catholic Directory says the Roman church has 8,778 priests, 7,631 churches, 3,277 parochial schools, attended by 665,328 children, and a total Catholic population of 8,579,966 in this country. The population is probably overestimated. New York is put down as holding 800,000 Roman Catholics, an overestimate of certainly 200,000. But that the church is spreading too fast for the good of the country there can be no doubt.

THE Christian Statesman concludes that it is useless to longer petition the Commission of the World's Fair to close that show on Sunday. The contest, it says, has been transferred to Washington, because the Ways and Means Committee of the Fair has decided to ask Congress for five millions of dollars, and Grandfather Hoar proposes to tie a Sunday-closing string to the appropriation. Very well; the Liberals and other opponents of Sabbatarianism can go to Washington too. Letters go to Washington as cheaply as to Chicago, and a great many railroads run into that legislativ town.

THIS is the way the Worcester daily Telegram treats the advent of Lent, with its diet of fish and eggs: "To-day is the time for people who are not worth saving, as well as for those who need to train down a bit that they may not be so strong in wickedness, to begin starving themselvs. But those who find no gratification in exhibiting fads to the world nor in unmercifully taxing their pockets or their bones to support those who liv by selling hollow humbugs to the vain or the gullible better keep right along with substantial food that they may gather strength to do something worth doing. There are enough fashionable hypocrits and religious heathen already, and all-the-year-round acts of the right kind are worth more to the public and to the individual than too stiff a reliance for a few weeks on poor eggs and a borrowed expression of the face."

THE Interior, a Christian paper published in Chicago, says: "Our great civil war began with a duel of artillery, the guns planted miles apart. It was at first a fight at long range, and not very deadly in its aim or effect. But any visitor to the field of Petersburg and Weldon Junction will find the rifle pits in which the conflict was finally fought out, within pistol shot of each other. That Christianity and Infidelity are approaching the final struggle is seen in the fact that the contest to-day is not for the conversion of the philosopher but for the possession of the child. Whoever gains possession of the cradle, be it Agnostic, Romanist, or evangelical Christian, gains and holds the field." In the fight between the two great sects of Catholicism and Protestantism there is an opportunity for the Agnostics to "gain possession of the cradle." It is, of course, on the American principle of total separation of church and state, and that other great principle that when thieves fall out honest men get their due.

EVERY Freethinker in Pennsylvania should at once write to his representativ at Harrisburg asking him to vote for the bills introduced by Representativ Ford, of Philadelphia, on the Sunday law. One of these bills provides that "on all appeals to the court of quarter sessions from any summary conviction for violation of the law of 1794 the evidence as to whether the work performed was a work of necessity or charity shall be a question to be determined by a jury." This will prevent a bigoted judge from taking a case of "Sabbath" breaking away from the jury and punishing a man off-hand on a technicality of law. The other of Mr. Ford's bills proposes amendments to the statute of 1794, declaring that it shall not be construed to prevent, among other matters, "the printing and sale of newspapers," shaving by barbers, and the running of street-cars and "other passenger vehicles." Members of the Pennsylvania legislature should be urged to vote for these bills and to add such other amendments secularizing the state as it is probable can be passed. Liberals of Pennsylvania, brace your legislators up!

THE Rev. Dr. Boardman, of Philadelphia, said in a recent sermon: "It is hard to reconcile the characters of some of the Old Testament heroes when we look into the Bible and see the heinous crimes which crop out in each of them. Noah, steeped with wine, lay in his tent unconscious of his nudity, and yet this was the man chosen to take charge of the ark on account of his goodness. Jacob deliberately lied to his own father, and yet we are told that he was highly favored of God. The muscular Samson, now puzzling the Egyptians with his enigmas, now engaging in the grotesque slaughter of one thousand Philistines, and then amorously frolicking with Delilah, is enshrined with such names as Moses and all the rest of that long retinue. David, the same who scribbled on the gates of Gath and seduced Bathsheba, was a deceiver, an adulterer, and a murderer, and yet was a man after God's own heart. . . . Don't go to the old covenant for your morality. I will not take drunken Noah as my model of sobriety, nor licentious Lot as my model of chastity. I will not take lying Jacob as my model of truthfulness, nor murderous David as my model of brotherly love."

MR. L. K. WASHBURN, editor of the Investigator, in transferring our recent editorial upon the American Secular Union to his columns, says: "The article in another part of this paper, from the Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER, expresses what the president and secretary of the American Secular Union ought to do so clearly, that the proposition to appoint a lecturer for the Union at additional expense to the Freethinkers of the country, seems like wishing to hire another person to do the work which one is already paid for doing. Evidently there is a lack of agreement between the officers of the American Secular Union and its supporters, and if the Union has nothing better to do than perpetuate this disagreement the sooner it dies the better. We hav expressed our opinion upon the affairs of the Union quite fully of late, and until some matter of new interest arises, do not feel that any further discussion of the American Secular Union is necessary." In another column he adds: "All the money you please for Secularism, not a cent for a field secretary, seems to be the decision of the Freethinkers."

THE Kansas Alliance legislature follows the old custom of opening its sessions with prayer, and the Concordia Blade uses the occasion to ask that "reform" house why it employs a preacher for three dollars to spend five minutes in prayer. "Do not these reformers know," queries the Blade, that the constitution forbids taxing the people for promulgating any religion? They ought to know this," goes on Mr. Hagaman, "and probably do know it, but don't care. Other legislatures hav done it and they follow the precedent. All of which satisfies the thoughtful person that all their howling for 'reform' is demagogery. Of what good is the praying? They had a morning prayer the day they stole $1,460 for stamps. Again, when they voted to cheat the senate revising committee out of its well-earned money, and again when they violated their oaths and turned two honestly elected members out of doors and put defeated men in their places. So the stealing, the rascality, the knavery and demagogery goes on just the same notwithstanding the prayers, and why tax the people for useless ceremony?" We know nothing about the Blade's charges of dishonesty, but its argument against employing chaplains is sound.

THE Catholic clergy of Canada desire neither annexation to nor trade reciprocity with the United States, because they fear the heretical influences of the civilized country. The archbishop of Halifax has written a letter to a newspaper which the Catholic Review calls "a guide to the real feeling in Canada toward the United States." In this letter the Halifax priest defends the right of the clergy to take part in politics, and declares that "the church, the mother of modern kingdoms, the shaper of European civilization, shall not be pushed aside to leave a free hand and a clear field to the ever-scheming Atheists, that for their own selfish ends they may wreck the work she initiated and guarded a thousand years." On the question of voting he says: "Should a candidate for Parliament advocate, say, unrestricted reciprocity, and should a prelate conscientiously believe it to be the first step toward annexation, and should he hav good reason to believe that its promoters had that result in view—viz., to destroy our fair Canadian nationality and to make of this country the fattening-ground of carpet-baggers and traitors—should not he advise, exhort, entreat, aye, command his people, who naturally could not see as far as he, to vote against such a candidate?"

BRAZILIANS, having learned a good lesson by their past experience of the paralyzing effect of Roman Catholicism upon all progress and any development toward national greatness, are determined, it seems, to shake off the terrible incubus. An exchange says: "We understand that the relations between the Brazilian government and the Roman Catholic clergy in Brazil are on the point of being placed on a footing of open hostility, all attempts to come to an agreement having failed. The correspondent of a contemporary, writing from Rome, says: 'The Brazilian episcopacy has published an energetic remonstrance against the religious reforms introduced by the actual government, and especially by Marshal Deodoro da Fonseca. In it the bishops begin by proclaiming their love for their country, declaring, however, that they will oppose all measures introduced against the church, and especially those regarding the liberty of conscience, civil marriage, the suppression of the cross in the national flag, the absolute abolition of all state religion, and the ineligibility, both political and administrativ, of priests. The suppression of the Brazilian legation to the holy see will be an inevitable consequence of the attitude taken by the Catholic clergy.'"

MR. CORLISS, who built the big engin for the Centennial Exposition, is alleged to hav been, "under divine providence," the means of closing that great fair on Sundays. The story is told by the president of Washburn College: "Mr. Corliss, as is well known, was appointed one of the commissioners to arrange for the Centennial. At an early stage of the proceedings he became convinced that a strong pressure would be brought to bear for keeping the Exposition open on the Sabbath as on other days. 'When requested to build the engin for the occasion,' Mr. Corliss remarked, 'I found that the necessary outlay of means and time would be such as to preclude me from undertaking it. The great consideration,' he continued, 'which finally induced me to comply, was the hope that, by so doing, I might aid in securing the proper observance of the Christian Sabbath in the sight of all the nations of the world.' And when, at last, the question directly confronted the commission, as to whether or not the Exposition should be open to the public on the Lord's day, the firm position which Mr. Corliss took in refusing the use of his engin in Mechanics' Hall on the Sabbath, virtually decided the question." Mr. Corliss is dead now, but it would be just as well to get commissioners and engin builders for the Chicago Fair who are not so everlastingly pious.

THE Christian Statesman is grieved. "THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes an almost full-page cartoon depicting a schoolmistress with a group of terrified children striving to shut a school-room door upon a raging wolf whose distended jaws and cruel fangs, together with one forefoot, are already within the room. The wolf has a collar around his neck inscribed 'Religion,' and the teacher is the American Secular Union. The United States Constitution hangs in the form of a shield upon the wall. One of the pupils holds a slate in one hand upon which he has inscribed the sentiment 'No Religion in Our Public Schools.' Thus the passions of all haters of God and of the Christian religion are appealed to to embitter the impending conflict." The Statesman, however, is more pious than just, for it adds in another note, of the rescission by the House of Commons of the resolution which excluded Charles Bradlaugh from that body, these bigoted sentiments: "It is no excess of jurisdiction for a national legislature to exclude from its membership one who denies the being of God and holds no allegiance to that higher law which, more than any written constitution, is fundamental to the state. If an earthly government will not admit to seats in its legislature those who refuse allegiance to its own authority, how can it welcome those who deny and refuse the corporate allegiance which the state owes to the king of kings?"

SOME Sabbatarian fanatics are trying to get a law in Alabama preventing the running of freight trains in that state on Sunday. Their fellows in Texas ask for a law preventing barbers from keeping their shops open on Sunday, and in the California legislature a bill has been introduced forbidding fishing on that day. The Indiana legislature has been asked to prohibit the use of tobacco in churches. The Boston police hav decided to enforce the law against Sunday trade in cigars and tobacco, which has been a dead letter ever since its enactment. Officers hav been instructed to arrest all violators of the law, and to use all means to obtain evidence against them. The Druggists' Alliance has voted to continue to disregard the law. In the county court of common pleas, Judge Lippincott has decided that the following New Jersey Blue law is still in operation and effectiv: "That no traveling, worldly employment, ordinary or servil labor or work, either upon land or water (works of necessity and charity excepted), nor shooting, fishing (not including fishing with a seine or net, which is hereafter provided for), sporting, hunting, gunning, racing, or frequenting of tippling-houses, or any interludes or plays, dancing, singing, fiddling, or other music for the sake of merriment, or any playing at football, fives, ninepins, bowls, long bullets or quoits, nor any other kind of playing, sports or pastimes or diversions, shall be done on the Christian Sabbath, or the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday; and that every person being of the age of fourteen years or upward offending in the premises shall, for every said offense, forfeit and pay to the law for the use of the poor of the township in which said offense shall be committed the sum of one dollar."

CYRUS ROMULUS ROMUS TEED, with whom Mr. Bennett once continued in these columns a controversy on theological matters so long as with the help of inspiration and clairvoyance he could make out what Mr. Teed was driving at, publishes a paper called the Flaming Sword. Mr. Teed himself is wandering over the wild and wooly West, but he has left an able representativ in the editorial chair, as witness this from the last number of the Sword: "When you find a man who persists in telling you that he is always 'open to conviction,' you can generally conclude him to be the poorest kind of material to work upon with progressiv ideas. There is an Atheistic paper published in New York called TRUTH SEEKER. Having existed for many years it has presumably been searching all this while for the truth. Every week it contains satirical sketches founded upon biblical quotations. Its general tone is that of unavailing blasphemy. The motto of another well-known Materialistic journal is, 'Hear both sides.' Still another periodical heads its columns thus: 'Truth wears no mask, bows at no human shrine, seeks neither place nor applause; she only asks a hearing.' Now, if you follow the course pursued by these various journals for a few years you will invariably find them at just about the same point from which they started, yet blatant in their clamoring for truth. A man who has been searching for truth for years and hasn't got any further than Materialism is truth-proof. If another starts out with Spiritualism and after years of truth-seeking is still lingering within the confines of its inadequateness, you can conclude him to be 'ghost-struck.' Or if, being 'open to conviction,' one pitches his tent in an orthodox camp and persistently clings to its poor means of shelter, you had better conclude him to be 'closed to conviction.'" See the gaping wounds the Sword leaves!

Letters from Friends.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Feb. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: We are delighted with the "Text-Book." Good luck to Watson Heston. May his shadow never grow less. I hope to be able to send you other subscribers soon. I will do my best for the cause. JANE H. MONTGOMERY.

LEON, N. Y., Feb. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am well satisfied with your paper, the picture book, and other literary matter that I hav received. I think the cartoons hav a tendency to excite a desire in those who look at them to diligently search the scriptures to see if those things are so. E. C. DURFEE.

ALLEGAN, MICH., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I send you my second volume of names. You can stick it to the eleven-feet one that I sent you last month. I may perhaps send volume three. I will if I can. I hope you will get a hundred miles of petitions, so as to let the orthodox know that there is some one on earth besides them. J. L. GARDINER.

ATLANTA, GA., Feb. 6, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: THE TRUTH SEEKER leads all publications of its class.

The very best paper in all this wide nation,
It laughs at the church and derides its salvation;
In science alone it finds man's true elevation,
And in churches and creeds finds schools of damnation.

Wishing you all success, I am,
Truly yours, THOMAS M. TAYLOR.

PARIS, ILL., Feb. 2, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: My TRUTH SEEKER came to hand this morning. I read your article on the Secular Union, and I am ready to indorse your recommendation. I heartily congratulate you upon the stand you hav taken. It is, I think, the only true one if we ever shall succeed in Secularizing the government. Do not turn aside either way to attack anybody's religion. But the Christian system will always be an obstruction that must be overcome and brought to respect civil government and its laws as supreme. You are right; go ahead. And I hope the trouble you deplore will soon subside. J A. WALTHALL.

RENFREW, PA., Feb. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: You can count on me for a life subscriber. I can never be happy if THE TRUTH SEEKER does not come once a week. Keep the good work progressing. I will do what I can for you from time to time. But my means are very limited. There is a fair sprinkling of Liberal men and women through the oil country. I am somewhat notorious, as everyone knows me as an Infidel. I never let an opportunity go by to hit the old hog, Superstition. If I was able I would take the field against her—I mean, if I was educated, I would giv my life to the cause of Freethought as against superstition. Please send me Miss Gardener's new book and the ANNUAL when ready. THOS. BOWSER.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., Feb. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Carry the news to Joseph Cook, and break it gently to Brother Wilber F. Crafts, that fully one thousand people assembled in Illinois Hall on January 29th to honor the memory of that great and immortal man, Thomas Paine. It was the first meeting of the kind ever held in this city; and though the venal and cowardly daily papers, with one exception, inserted a paid notice of the meeting where it could not be found or seen without a prolonged search, we filled the hall and astonished the nativs with the size of the audience. Inclosed is the program, which was fully carried out, and not till the hour of 10:45 did the ceremonies end. The Los Angeles admirers of Thomas Paine feel proud of their first effort to honor his name and natal day, and judging from their first attempt, it will not be their last.

Very truly yours, C. SEVERANCE.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., Jan. 30, 1891.

TRUTH SEEKER PUB. CO., Gentlemen: Please answer through your paper, or tell where the information may be obtained: When was the portrait of Thomas Paine placed in the Independence Hall, Philadelphia? By whom was it presented? Giv artist's name, and such other information as you hav upon the subject. I hav made every effort here to obtain the information without success.

Yours in Universal Mental Liberty, J. B. ELLIOTT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 5, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am unable to answer the above inquiries. I hav before me now three different engravings of the likeness of Thomas Paine, apparently made from the portrait that is now in Independence Hall. The last and by far the best one is imprinted on the title-page of my pamphlet, "Thomas Paine—Was he Junius?"

The two other engravings ascribe the portrait to Romney, who was born in Lancashire, Eng., in 1734. He was a distinguished artist, and painted portraits of the great Cowper, Warren Hastings, Lord Chatham, and William Pitt. In 1798 he was compelled by ill health to desist from work, and he died in 1802.

Whether the portrait in Independence Hall is an original or a copy I do not know; but in my judgment there is not a nobler countenance in the galaxy of Revolutionary fathers there exhibited than that of Thomas Paine. W. H. BURR.

THORNTON, R. I., Feb. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed please find $4 for subscription, the ANNUAL, and other books as named. Thornton is a new village, just started up with two factories. One is what is called the British Hosiery Company, and the other the Thornton Worsted Mill. The hosiery mill is worked and manned wholly by men and women from England, and doing a good business. As almost every village in America has a God-house in it, so has Thornton, but it does not run at present on account of war in the camp. The minister left, saying they were all Infidels. I wish it was so. When Englishmen come to this country it is a new birth to them. They had rather walk in the fields than attend church. I was out around trying to get a subscriber, but did not get one. They would say, "I do not believe in a church and don't attend one." Some would say, "Well, I don't know. I may subscribe for your paper; did not want to for fear of losing a job of work." Such Liberals are what Brother Peck calls web-footed Liberals. What a blessing to America it would be if all of the churches were turned into a good Secular schoolhouse, and priestly drones and Bibles, with the rest of their rot-stuff, not allowed in there to fill minds with superstition and ignorance. I am waiting for the time to come when churches, and popes, priests, and ministers, will not be known in the land. WILLIAM A. BENNETT.

EMMETSBURG, IA., Jan. 25, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Inclosed find draft for balance on the "Pictorial Text-Books" you hav sent me, and also draft for seven subscribers for 1891; also cash for one more "Text-Book." Two years ago only one person took your valuable paper in this, Palo Alto county, Ia. Now the above list, and many others, anxiously await its coming. The copy that I receive is read by at least a half-score, and I take a happy delight in leaving it on my table for all to see and read. When your first copies appeared, they were a "holy horror" to the "holy of holies." Catholics shuddered when they got a sight of it, and holy water was in great demand for a few days thereafter. Protestants who got a sight of them were kept busy saying, "Oh, Lord, make us truly thankful for what we are about to receive, pardon all our sins, especially for looking at THE TRUTH SEEKER, for Christ's sake, amen." But when the "Text-Book" came, heavens, what a commotion! Some said, "How do you expect to liv in this community with such a book on your table?" Others said, "Oh, Cohoon, you are lost! lost!" And one very dear friend of mine, and by the way a good Catholic, and ex-county attorney, will not stay in my office when the lids of the "Text-Book" are open. He seems to see the very devil in the book—and I half believe he is right, as I can see the Old Nick himself in almost every picture, and clothed in priestly robes too. And yet, dear TRUTH SEEKER, I hav sold every one of them—about fourteen in all, I believe—and still I must hav more. But don't you tell, for I might be excommunicated if Father ——— should find it out. How I wish I were a millionaire—wouldn't I giv it to the old dry-bones! I would gladly exchange my title to an orthodox heaven for money enough to keep myself, wife, and boy safe from a religious boycott, as we all know that means expulsion from all Christian society and being shunned by almost every religious crank. Yours truly, C. E. COHOON.

OLIVE BRANCH, MISS., Feb. 2, ERA OF SCIENCE 291.

MR. EDITOR: What will you do, my brother? A new year, with a new almanac, a new hope, and renewed ambition, is upon us. An old year is numbered with the misty past, is laid away as a vesture well worn. What will you do, my brother? is the question that I want to ask every reader of our noble banner of truth, a paper that is read and read till every leaf is worn away. What will you do? Not, what will you say in the columns of a Liberal paper? What will you do? See here, my brother, are you a Liberal? Hav you enjoyed the blessing of mental freedom? Do you love truth and right? Do you think Freethought will do to liv by and to die by? If you do not, join the orthodox church and do not be a hypocrit. But if you do, then do not be afraid to tell your orthodox friend that he is in darkness, and do not be afraid to tell him why you think so. Do not be afraid to declare that the Jewish records are not the words of God. Do not be afraid to show up the vile fraud, Christianity. Do not be afraid to show your paper to your friends and ask them and advise them to read it. Do not be afraid to show the Christian world that Infidels, Atheists, and Spiritualists can liv up to a higher moral standard than they. Do not be afraid to snatch the flames of hell from the innocent brain of helpless youth. Do not be afraid to buy a few tracts and mail them to your friends. I want this to be a great year for Freethought. What will you do, my brother? There is no man without influence. Cannot you, my brother, rescue one brain from the prison bars of superstition? If you will, I will, and the rest will, and, oh! but think of it, in one year we could thus double our ranks. Without system we can do nothing. How easy is this! Each one can surely rescue one. Pull down that file of Liberal papers, mail one to every little boy whose mind you know is being molded into clay. He will thank you for it some day. Come from behind the screen and then you will know your true friends, and your own real worth. What will you do, my brother? Will not each one bring home a friend, and then, oh, send a line here and let me rejoice with him and you. "GRAY."

LINCOLN, N. M., Jan. 31, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Last Sunday a parson preaching on the prophecies of the old Bible said that when Babylon was destroyed (which had been prophesied hundreds of years before) the country was cursed for miles around, and, although the soil was very rich and fertil with a large river running through it, it has not been inhabited by man to this day. Again, a pious lady told us the other day that the country around the spot where the Mountain Meadow massacre took place is and has been a barren waste since the Mormons committed that inhuman crime, while before, as the name implies, it was a beautiful, fertil spot. While I make allowances in these cases, I would like you to tell us through THE TRUTH SEEKER what you know about these two things.

Yours for truth, J. N. COE.

[A writer in THE TRUTH SEEKER a few years ago, after reciting evidence from Layard and others as to the present state of Babylon, concludes: "Thus we see that the city which was to be destroyed by a great army 'from the north country,' the city whose time was near at hand, whose days it was declared should not be prolonged, which was to be 'perpetual desolation,' after the Jewish captivity, and never to be inhabited nor dwelt in from generation to generation, where the Arab was never to pitch his tent even; the city which was to 'be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah'—was a large and important city after the prophecies were written and after the captivity of the Jews; that Alexander intended to make it the seat of his great empire; that afterward it declined gradually like other ancient cities, yet 'Jews still lingered among the ruins' in the time of Augustus; that in the second century of the Christian era, it still contained inhabitants and 'many great and beautiful edifices still standing;' that at a later date Hillah rose on the site of the ancient city; that the town has now a population of from eight thousand to nine thousand, and is peopled chiefly by Arabs; that other portions of the ground on which ancient Babylon stood are inhabited by Arabs whose settlements show 'the activity of a hive of bees,' while all around the green morass is spotted with flocks of the black buffalo; and that a British traveler actually saw Arabs with their tents retreating from the marshes, which form a part of the site of the old city." We know nothing of the condition of the scene of the Mountain Meadow massacre. Of course, any change there is due to natural causes. If all scenes of massacres committed by fellow-believers of your preacher had become steril, there would be little agriculture in Europe.—ED. T. S.]

LEXINGTON, KY., Feb. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Mr. Nelson nobly attempts to reduce emotional influence to a system. Rousseau and others make it plain that feeling is often a stronger factor in civilization than reason. Nature sometimes acts the tyrant, and to take her by the collar we must hav, or suppose we hav, a long line of well-disposed ancestors. Many influences conspire to draw us from the upward path. Many say, "I would do better if I had a chance; it is all compromise, after all." Germs of disease may infest the organization, mental and physical, but a strong will and constitution can conquer them. If we are sick we are half devoured by worms; when we are well we should command them to take a back seat.

It would seem that necessity, in the moral life of man, would giv a black eye to responsibility. Mentality and moral feeling are not governed by blind mechanical rules. You tell a wicked neighbor to do better; do you speak to a machine that way? The heart which beats with love and refinement is not a machine. "We are not such slaves," says Cardinal Gibbons. He remarks also that motivs need a stronger incentiv than the intrinsic excellence of virtue. We need a little push from God now and then—God, whose will is our sanctification. If we were entirely governed by surroundings, we might be glad of a push from God or the other one. Kant thinks that the principle of order is in us; but if it was not in nature as well as in our experience, what would become of us?

Plautus said, "Keep what you hav got. Do not kill yourself. Get all you can."

Men hav progressed in a certain direction; their inventions are useful and highly demonstrativ. But women declare that truth and goodness shall rule the world. On these points their development is intact, has not been arrested. They suppose that female folly, luxury, smoking, drinking, licentiousness, cause nations to sink. Does nature in heterogeneity place these mountains in the way which cannot be leveled? Well might Hamlet observe, "What a piece of work is man!" Erasmus comforts us a little. He said the heart was not black as ink.

Gladstone made, the other day, the assertion that barbarism and organized robbery were making full headway against us, as if free agency was "played out;" still, he was opposed to the antidote, submission. I think I should also demur to such a proposition.

But how has the world been treated? What a thirst for power the church has always manifested! Even the Presbyterians tried to force Charles I. to sign the Solemn League and Covenant. And the descendants of those very men are now feeling their way to our throats as a free nation.

Buddhism, combined with the notions of Jewish sects, gave the first impetus to what was called Christianity. It was an eclectic system, modified by Greek culture before Christ, who was steeped in the lore of the Essenes, according to Eusebius. All learned men are called Atheists. Even the divine Tillotson was stigmatized thus, with those who are in advance of the spirit of their age. The Greeks, slighting the god Necessity, defined Elohim as all power and force, in the abstract; while Plotinus diluted and sweetened the usual pill of fanaticism. The Druids, in convention thousands of years ago, decided not to worship the god of Light—he would benefit us anyway. From this followed the worship of devils, such as Seithern and Moloch. Iphigenia was held down by her young gentlemen acquaintances and stabbed, to secure the safety of the Greek army. Observe the gall poured into the human heart, which by nature is haunted by sweetness. The Jews remark that the "last finality of thought is knowledge of God," which ought to lead to great practical results. The ancestors of Io, the poor Indian, probably worshiped some great god, which has resulted in untutored minds, with total wreck of body and estate. Thus the craze goes on. Religionists hav not advanced the world, but courageous men, and often bad ones. Samuel, the prophet, meddled with everything. David was his own prophet, and Cromwell his own king. Henry VIII.

was his own pope. Louis XIV. dismissed his prime minister politely, being able to do his own thinking. He even had the daring to save the life of Moliere, the author of Tartuffe. Pericles, Leo X., Herod the Great, laid great stress upon the fine arts as civilizers. Were they slaves?

I am suffering miserably in poverty. Will anyone help me? If not, I will do all I can, and die the same. Mr. Macdonald and Miss Wixon are very kind. ALHAZA.

POUDA SPRINGS, COL., Feb. 1, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: As the weak things of the world are to confound the mighty and the great, I here assume the appearance of a critic, not for controversy's sake, but for the full development of truth.

In THE TRUTH SEEKER of January 24th appeared, in an article from the pen of T. E. Longshore, some strange expressions, viewed from an humble standpoint. We do not expect to confound the philosophy of so able a writer, but we may at least, perchance, through your indulgence, drop a word of truth, which may produce some good, independent of the Christian God. The Christian and Infidel world (says this writer) in its bewilderment has much to say about God. But the Infidels renew the quarrel. Displeased with the God the fathers in their great strait felt themselvs driven to define and interpret as best they could, they proceed to destroy him altogether. They are uninformed and fanatical, or they would not do so. "For man, either Infidel or Christian, by nature loves good." The natural conclusion agreeable to these words forces us to accept the word God as co existent and equivalent to good, having the same root, he declares, after many centuries of distinct common usage, in which a fact has been established and two distinct words evolved. By a technical fineness of logic he has made out a case, and indicted of ignorance and fanaticism other Infidels, as is obvious above. Infidels and Christians love good, and consequently all must love God, and all that is necessary in the premises is to prove that they were originally the same under older systems of theological interpretation. Then he turns his shot and shell loose upon his own fortress, and it is brushed away like chaff, as may be seen in his concluding remarks. Says he: "This chain of superstition that links us to the ages of rampant demonology is the silent point of warfare. While these demons stand unchallenged and unmasked, holding their grip on the human affections, our pueril efforts to destroy the great ecclesiastical superstructure and overturn the foundations of the hierarchy that sustain it, all under the patronage and invincible support of this prince and chief of demons men call God, this ruler of the world and monarch of the universe——" as it occurs to our mind, the gentleman has disposed of this God in such a way as to demolish him altogether, notwithstanding Infidels love good. After twenty years of strict Christian schooling and twenty-five years of serious Liberal reflection, we hav been forced to the conclusion that one of the most potent influences to establish truth and convince the people of the error of Christian teaching, is to knock their God out of time when an opportunity presents itself—not arrogantly, not with a spirit of fanaticism, but by deliberate, solid, straightforward reasoning, proving to them that God and good are not synonymous terms, and that moral virtue is not essential to Christian salvation.

The time has passed in the history of intellectual advancement and religious bigotry, when further pandering to the cause of the enemy of mental liberty should be the rule of action—coaxing favors by covering half the truth and conceding vital points of differences. Such as D. M. Bennett and Colonel Ingersoll, who strike solidly from the shoulder, hav wielded the most powerful influence in the cause of exposing pious frauds, notwithstanding they offered no compromise when a truth stood ready to enter where credulity had filled the place. THE TRUTH SEEKER caricatures are working a deep and lasting conviction of the truth of reason, and the false show of faith and dogmas. The letters from Mr. John Peck which were given through THE TRUTH SEEKER a short time ago, hav spread over our land like an intellectual wave. Superstition cannot be rooted out in a day, or an age. It must be effected by a steady application of rational logic, presented to the minds of coming generations, where every available fact should be placed before the youths of the country. To withhold the strongest points of argument for fear of offending the over-pious Christians, is, we think, a very grave mistake. You may as well pore into the solid granit for human reason as into the brain of the hidebound, over-zealous Christian. When a human being has so nourished his imagination that he becomes fanatical, he is impervious to reason; his eyes and ears are sealed to every emotion of religious reasoning. Looking neither to the right nor to the left, he continues to climb on in his aerial castle. At every succeeding imaginary lift he approaches nearer his ideal heaven, and becomes more and more confirmed in credulity and less capable of rational reflection. He has grown from a myth to a positiv assurance. The most scientific mind, who has a fact in nature figured out and scientifically demonstrated, is more liable to doubt his senses than the credulous Christian who has most pleasingly wound his imagination up to such a degree as to think he has a fact not to be shaken.

The idea, God, although passiv, is the grand monarch Superstition, and the parent of credulity—truly, as Mr. Longshore says, the monarch of the world. But why charge Infidels with bigotry because they would dispose of this hyena standing over and devouring the human family? Why should we not draw a distinct line between this God and that good? When we do work, do it effectually. Put facts and figures before the impressible minds. Superstition must fall before truth and reason. One thing only hinders, which is now drawing more closely around mental liberty. Church and state is their last and desperate effort. If they should gain the ascendency, farewell to liberty! All the poison serpent of the past wants is a chance to raise his head above the people. He lies, full of venom, in every town, in every state, and at the head of our nation. Keep up your aggressiv warfare. Continue Heston with his inspiring cartoons. H. MURRAY.

SOLDIERS' AND SAILORS' HOME,
QUINCY, ILL., Jan. 21, E.M. 291.

MR. EDITOR: This letter will be on the subject, What they say. No doubt the fear of what may be said has in all ages and at all times had a salutary influence upon human conduct, but that it has also been inimical to human progress is also true, and to call attention to this fact is the object of my communication.

How often do we hear persons remark, "How such and such things will look!" and, "What will people say?" without the least regard to duty, utility, or right, only considering if they can escape public calamity, which proves a want of courage. Now, what we want as a people is to eliminate fear of public opinion when duty is to be considered. Does history giv us an instance where any man has ever accomplished anything great without enduring rebuff, ridicule, and censure? I know it is claimed that while we gain the contempt of our contemporaries we cannot expect to benefit nor convince them, but this is not true. I speak from personal experience and observation. For I can call to mind that in early as well as in more advanced life, before and after I had assumed the doleful occupation of sky-pilot, I looked upon Infidels as the most contemptible of humanity; and as I hav changed, so I hav had many regard me with horror, and yet within a few weeks learn to honor and respect me, which is only the result of increase of knowledge. The world moves. We are born into the world—i.e., the most of us—with a vague innate feeling that antiquity is the sum of knowledge; that our habits and customs are sacred; that change is not only useless, but weak and erring, therefore criminal, but the nineteenth century has been crowned with so many inventions due to the environments growing out of our free institutions, which are the result of the revolutionary struggle, that what the old fogies may hav to say is growing fainter and fainter, because the church to a great extent has lost its power to do. And yet among the cowards, who seem to constitute a great number, the ostracism of church people—i.e., the devil's army—seems an impassable barrier. But what if they do sneer; what if they call me Bob, Robby, or even Ingersoll's disciple? Deep down in their hearts they envy me, and wish they could get there themselvs, and would rather trust me than any of their holy brethren whether Protestant or Catholic. It is only their jealousy that causes them to treat me with contempt, and any of them could easily be bribed. Then should we be deterred by what they may say, when we know that it is avarice, ignorance, superstition, and fear that prompt those who oppose progress, advancement, and reform? They really seem to think that investigation can change a fact; that they hav a patent-right on God, a deed to heaven, a seal to immortality, and a guarantee to all customs from the almighty. Yet they are afraid that some reformer will overpower their almighty God, and then they will be dispossessed. Are such persons worthy of our consideration? Should we fear them, be deterred by what they say? What did they say of Martin Luther and his reform, of Voltaire, of Paine, of Washington, of Webster, of William Lloyd Garrison; and in short, of every exponent of human rights and every advocate of individual judgment? It has long since been recognized as a virtue to maintain your rights when invaded by your neighbor or fellow-man, but to take one's part when God attempts to do a wrong is thought exceeding sinful. But for my life it seems to me the latter is the more praiseworthy, for the following reasons: 1. Because God, being all-powerful, can procure what he needs without wronging anyone, while our fellow may through fear of want be excused. 2. Man may err in his judgment and claim what does not belong to him, but a God cannot be excused, for mistakes do not belong to him, and consequently if attempts of wrong come from that quarter, it is only fiendishness that prompts him to act. 3. Finally, instead of being awed when our rights are invaded, it is our duty to resist, no matter from what source, men or gods, earth or heaven, no matter what they say. True, most of people are so selfish that they look more to what people say than to what may be the possible result. Such timid persons are the hunkers, the hold-backs who fail to see the advance of the world. They are afraid to admit that the world revolves, for fear the water would all spill out of their wells. They fear the doctrin of evolution, not so much on account of the fact of their ancestors being monkeys, but because they are monkeys themselvs. They despise demonstration and science, lest they learn that heaven will be proved a myth and hell an impossibility, and thereby they be robbed of their most sanguinary hopes. No one should fear what they may say; but, the more is said against you, be the more determined, if you are right. EX-REV. J. N. MAXEY.

TYNGSBORO, MASS., Feb. 8, 291.

MR. EDITOR: I pity, or should if I had any sympathy for it, a cause that has such an absurd advocate as the marvelous Leonard, of Michigan. The "Massachusetts Prohibition correspondent" has met heretofore with considerable heterogeneous argument designed to dignify the court of Alcohol and the halls of Gambrinus, and he has often sought, with considerable success, to make saloon solicitors hunt their holes; but never has he met the match, among all those who bolster booze, in giving away their own ground, found in the speaker for licensed liquor as discovered by his letter in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 7th. He says: "I see in your paper that some of the Liberals are advocating the course of the Prohibition church people, which seems to me inconsistent in all those who want to see the time come when the false doctrin of the fanatics has passed away never to return again."

Liberals advocating what course of Prohibition church people? No Liberal is advocating their God-in-the-Constitution-Sunday-Bible-and-blasphemy-laws course. We only advocate the principle of prohibition, to greater or less extent, of intoxicating liquor, or anything else alike harmful, if there be such—which we don't see—on the same ground that we justify any government and judiciary, namely, the good of the governed, justice to the judged, and, to that end, the security of liberty by law, the fortification of freedom against both invasion and insurrection; and we esteem as the greatest foe to freedom, the worst enemy of liberty, the cursedest of curses to civilized countries and barbarian wilds, the one that comes in by the mouth to steal away the brain, the wrecker of reason, the deluder of hope, the mocker of love, the aper of friendship, the seducer of manhood, the debaucher of womanhood, the soiler of childhood, the bane of all—

Whisky and wine, or beer and brandy,
'Tis one, 'tis gall,
Old Alcohol.

Leonard ludicates: "Alcohol is the only weapon that a Liberal has to defend himself from the sky-pilots and their followers." Oh, awful! What a miserable limbo Liberals, or at least such of them as the Michigan Leonard, must be in to be deprived of all defense against the worshiping church, except the wine-cup! Only a bottle to oppose to the Bible! Only beer to answer creed! Only the saloon to silence superstition! Only the bartender to combat the pulpiteer! Only a hell-fakir to pit against a sky-pilot! Alackaday! Sad to see! Well, well! What shall we say? Giv us a rest! Of two evils choose the least. Dismiss the hell-fakir and let the sky-pilot be.

But as for Liberals who hav more talent of reason than taste for rum, we will carry on the war against both church and saloon, with wit instead of wine, with brains instead of beer, with argument instead of whisky, with sentiment instead of sensuality, with conscientiousness instead of cussedness, with wisdom instead of wantonness, with knowledge instead of knavery, with school-houses instead of sample-rooms, with Secular societies, Brotherhoods of Moralists, clubs for ethical culture, literary and library associations, lecture courses and halls of learning, instead of liquor leagues, with Charles Watts and Robert G. Ingersoll and Thaddeus B. Wakeman and L. K. Washburn and the Brothers Macdonald, etc., instead of Louis Schiel, and trust we can pull through all right in time, with such a team, and such cohorts, and such guns and ammunition, without the aid of the Leonard of Port Huron and his huge pile of beer-barrel redoubts. We do not doubt but that we can.

But, proclaims this positiv Leonard: "Liquor never killed a man worthy to liv, and its ravages are strictly confined to those who claim to be the followers of the lowly Jesus." Would to Nature that this were so, but it is too good to be true, and anyone with half an eye to see or half open ear to hear (outside of Port Huron, which may be an anomalous place) knows it is false.

It may be that men with little brain can stand liquor like mullet-heads. It is those with the most sensitiv organizations that feel the fang of the poison serpent the sharpest. It is not the butchers, the sailors, the coal-heavers, the hod-carriers, the men of bone and brawn, but the poets, the lawyers, the doctors, the editors, even the judges and statesmen, the men of heart and head, which liquor plays worst havoc with. And if the Mike Maloneys, Henry Schneiders, and Romeo Macaronis regularly get their legs tangled up or their viscera discumfuddled and are lugged off on a hand-barrow and finally help fill a common bone-yard after a thousand sprees, the community does not condole that it is much matter. But when in their prime, in their youth, in the midst of their manhood, in the bloom of their hope, the Altamonts, the Condorcets, the Edgar Allen Poes, the Henry Kirke Whites, the Lord Gordon Byrons, the Robert Burnses, the wards of genius, hav been wrecked by gin, or the alcohol devil under some other alias, the world has cause to mourn as well as heaven to weep and hell to gape. Every man is worthy to liv. It is because liquor unmans a man that we mean it shall be banished.

"Liberals admit that the law of nature executes its penalty," but they do not all mind it. They are not all honest, wise, or even decent, and if they were, should they not sustain laws to keep the sinful church people in order? I do not want to kill off the church people; I want to convert them to sober reason, as I do the Liberals.

But what does Leonard mean by declaring Prohibition to be a church people's movement, and then claiming that they alone are the worse for using liquor? If they alone are over-fond of the bedeviling beverage, they should be the last to propose its prohibition. Who is inconsistent here?

Leonard also alleges that the liquor revenue which religious tipplers pay helps to liquidate the debt they owe Liberals on account of taxless God-houses. What of the portion paid for liquor that does not return in revenue? And what of the cost of courts and police, that far outruns such revenue, on account of liquor's doings?

If Leonard cannot tell better than that liquor has no more to do with crime than has beans, then he doesn't know liquor or else he doesn't know beans. If that will raise his angry passions he may cool off in a snow-bank.

JOHN PRESCOTT GUILD.

P. S.—Will D. W. Whitney inform us when "Prohibition had its origin in the Methodist church for the sole purpose of establishing a third political party on the basis of religion?" Who were the originators? It would be very interesting history. G.

Children's Corner.

Edited by MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, Fall River, Mass., to whom all Communications for this Corner should be sent.

"Between the dark and the daylight,
When the night is beginning to lower,
Comes a pause in the day's occupations
That is known as the Children's Hour."

A Tiny Bud.

A tiny bud burst from the ground
Upon a hillside fair;
Dead leaves and grass were strewn around,
While cold and keen the air.

A little girl came out to play
Upon the hillside there,
And spied the little bud that seemed
To her so cold and bare.

"O little bud, why are you out,
When it is, oh, so cold?
Why do you peep above the ground,
And all your leaves unfold?"

"It is my mission, little one;
Dame Nature sent me here;
To me it seemeth not so cold,
Though early in the year."

"What can you do, you little bud?
So frail you seem to me."
"I soon shall open, little girl,
A flower then I'll be.

"All flowers once were naught but buds;
As women once were girls;
Why are you here, my little one,
With your flaxen head of curls?"

"I must confess you're in the right,"
The little girl did cry;
"We all must bud before we bloom,
And liv before we die."

ADELAIDE RANDALL.

Mother is Sick.

He was fifteen hundred miles from home, and so situated that it was impossible for him to return at the time I am writing about. One day he received a telegram from home, of only three words, and yet those words were powerful enough to make the strong man turn pale, and every nerve and fiber of his body vibrate with a more energetic thrill than the pulsating wire which brought the message. That night he did not close his eyes in slumber, but tossed like a fever patient in his bed, and was constantly repeating the words of the telegram, "Mother is sick."

He knew well that it was no light or ordinary sickness, for had it been the wires would not hav been burdened with it. She was not very well when he left home, and the frequent letters he received bore the monotonous sentence, "Mother is as well as usual." But this telegram meant that mother's disease had reached a crisis, and that the worst was feared. It took no prophet to interpret its meaning.

The next day when he met with his fellow-workmen they said: "Why, G——, you look pale. Are you sick?" "Oh, no," he said as cheerfully as it was possible for him to say it—and he always spoke pleasantly—and he turned away with a choking sensation that he would gladly hide if possible. His fellows noticed that he talked but very little that day, for he was usually very chatty and talked of mental, moral, and scientific matters in a manner which was new to them, and they liked to hear him. And they liked him even when he talked against, and upset, their own pet theories, because he seemed so sincere and earnest, and so pleasant, as if he wanted to teach them some better way.

The second night was also a sleepless one, and when he met the workmen in the morning, they said: "Why, Mr. G——, you are sick. What is the matter?" He drew from his vest pocket a slip of paper and handed it to the foreman to read, while the strong man bowed his face in his hands and wept.

A silent sympathy was accorded him which was like balm to his lacerated feelings. Is it any wonder that he made mistakes in his work that day? And how grateful he felt when the foreman, usually harsh and crabbed, called his attention to them in a kindly manner.

That night he received a long, loving letter from home, telling how "mamma had been very sick, but was much better now." How like oil upon the troubled waters this message fell upon his distracted mind and body.

I doubt if there are three other words, great or small, in the whole language that hav the power of those three small ones, "Mother is sick." I never hear them without a shudder of apprehension, and I do not believe any decent husband and father can.

And what an epoch it becomes in the family for dates of things happening "before mother was sick," "when mother was sick," or "since mother was sick." And how the dear mother will remember every kindly act and token that she then received!

What a pity it is that the average young man does not properly appreciate his mother until he is twenty-five, or perhaps forty, years of age, when he may hav no mother to appreciate. And I fear some young ladies, too, do not estimate the dear mother at her full value.

Let me tell you, young men and young ladies, husbands and fathers, you do not, and cannot, repay the kind and constant care of her who would willingly die, if need be, to secure you a good name and position in society and in the world.

Let us all strive to repay the debt we owe our mothers, to the best of our ability. And not only to our own mothers, but to the mothers of our own children.

Fathers are well enough in their way, perhaps, but the love and influence of a mother is beyond the power of language to express.

St. Elmo, Tenn. L. L. GOODWIN.

"A Young People's Paper."

Some time in the future, we feel confident, some one who has means will come forward and advance the necessary funds to enlarge our Children's Corner to a young people's paper. We can then hav more space to express and impress our thoughts upon the rising generation. No one can doubt the good work that such a journal could be capable of doing. If we can save the children we save the nation.—Miss Wixon.

I sincerely hope that our friend and teacher's desire may some day be fulfilled, and that the young Liberal people may hav a journal of their own, with Miss Wixon for editor. What a grand opportunity this would be for us, to hav a paper of our own in which we could express our thoughts and through which we could receive the instruction of such an able and efficient teacher as Miss Wixon. I believe all the young Liberals and some of the older ones would be willing to contribute something toward the publication of such a journal. I know I would for one. Miss Ida A. Ballou, of Buffalo, N. Y., who is a writer for the Corner, and whose bright letters are always appreciated, in a letter to Miss Wixon thus expresses her opinion: "I sincerely wish your hopes may materialize and we shall hav a Liberal young people's paper. I will do all in my power to bring it about and help you all I can. I think it would be an excellent thing. 'As the twig is bent the tree is inclined.' I think every Liberal that is interested in the welfare of his children ought to contribute to its support."

There is no doubt but that such a journal would be valuable, for under the direction of Miss Wixon it could not fail to be otherwise. The project is one that is worthy of the attention of all true Liberals, and it is to be hoped that they will all take an interest in the matter and aid in establishing a "young people's paper." GEO. J. REMSBURG.

Oak Mills, Kan.

P. S.—Please excuse all mistakes, as I am writing very rapidly. Best wishes to Miss Wixon and the Cornerites. G. J. R.

[We thank our friend George for his kind wishes and commendation of our work. We hav to say that several private letters fully indorse the project of a Liberal paper expressly for the young. But it costs a great deal of money to publish such a paper as we would like to see. While the project is maturing slowly, we will do the best we can, with the aid of our very able correspondents, whose valuable contributions greatly help to make the Corner all it is.—ED. C. C.]

Correspondence.

GRAY, TENN., Jan. 15, 1891.

MISS SUSAN WIXON, Dear Friend: My papa takes THE TRUTH SEEKER, and I like to look at the pictures and read the Children's Corner. I am fourteen years old.

I hav a horse, bridle, and saddle of my own. I hav been going to school a little this winter. I am not going now. We hav three dogs, one a common hound and two English hounds. For fear of the waste-basket, I will close. Your friend, WILLIE DINGLER.

BENJAMIN, UTAH, Jan. 16, 1891.

DEAR MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: I thought I would write again, for my first letter was very short.

Father and mother were the first people that lived in this little place. It was twenty-one years ago they came here, and my oldest brother was the first child born in Benjamin; he is twenty years old. We had a little house with one room in it; now we hav a big one with seven rooms. It is a very little place.

Father is a bee-keeper. He has two hundred and twenty stands. There are apple-trees growing here, and in the summer it looks like a mass of blooms. It is all I hav to tell you to-day.

Please excuse mistakes and bad writing.

Yours truly, LOUIE HONE.

[When you write again, tell the readers of the Corner about the bees, and how honey is made.—ED. C. C.]

PLANTSVILLE, CONN., Jan. 25, 1891.

MISS SUSAN H. WIXON: I hav never seen any letters from this town. I never went to church or Sunday-school. There are six churches here, and plenty of people to go to them. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER as long as I can remember. I like to look at the pictures and read the Children's Corner. We think the picture on the front page of the last TRUTH SEEKER is a very nice one. It has been snowing all the forenoon, so that now the snow is deep. Hoping to see this letter in print, I am, your non-church-going friend, ERNEST N. WITHAM.

[Another bright, brave boy. We hope to hear from him often.—ED. C. C.]

GRAY, KY., Jan. 2, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: I thought I would write a letter to the Corner, for my first, as I see it is not filled out as it should be. My father has taken THE TRUTH SEEKER for twelve years, and also the Ironclad Age, and I read them both.

I hav an uncle that is a Freethinker, and also a cousin who is a Freethinker. My school-teacher to whom I went last fall was a Freethinker. It would take too much space to mention all the Freethinkers in this neighborhood. And I think there will be more in America than there are if Miss Wixon keeps on at business as she is now. She is raising them up in brightness instead of ignorance. I will close, and write more next time. Your thirteen-year-old Freethinker,

TILDEN GRAY.

BOND, KAN., Jan. 23, 1891.

DEAR MISS WIXON: This is my second letter to the Children's Corner. There is a church about half a mile from our house. There has been a revival for the last week, but it only succeeded in getting one convert, and that was a young girl. Some of my schoolmates call us Infidels and heathens, because we do not believe in God. Last year our teacher read the Bible every morning, and we Infidel girls either stayed out-doors or went in the house and took out our slates and pencils and made a noise. I like to read the nice stories and letters in the Corner. I will close. Your Freethinker friend,

THERESA HELLSTROM.

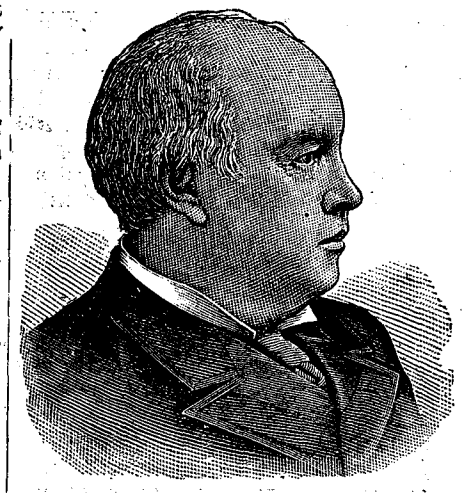
[I would not disturb others who desire to read the Bible. We should be tolerant of others if they are not of us. Will Theresa tell us in the Corner about the town she livs in, and her studies, pets, and how she spends her evenings?—ED. C. C.]

Sing a Song of Sixpence.

A hidden meaning is said to be concealed in the familiar rhyme of "Sing a Song of Sixpence," and the following pretty explanation of it is given:

"The four and twenty blackbirds represent twenty-four hours. The bottom of the pie is the world; the top crust is the sky that overarches it. The opening of the pie is day-dawn, when the birds begin to sing, and surely such a sight is 'a dainty dish to set before a king.'

"The king, who is represented as sitting in his parlor counting his money, is the sun; while the gold pieces that slip through his fingers are golden sunshine. The queen, who sits in the dark kitchen, is the moon, and the honey with which she regales herself is the moonlight.



"The industrious maid, who is in the garden at work before the king—the sun—has risen, is the day-dawn, and the clothes she hangs out are the clouds, while the bird which so tragically ends the song by 'nipping off her nose' is the hour of sunset. So we hav the whole day—in a pie."

Fun at the Table.

An Austin man read in the paper that the family should always be the scene of laughter and merriment, and that no meal should be passed in the moody silence that so often characterizes those occasions. The idea struck him so favorably that when his family was gathered around the table that evening, he said:

"Now, this sort o' thing of keeping so blamed mum at meals has got to stop. You hear me? You girls, put in an' tell stories, an' keep up agreeable sort o' talk like; an' you boys, laugh and be jolly, or I'll take and dust your jackets with a grapevine till you can't stand. Now begin!"

The glare that he sent around the table made the family as funny as a funeral.

CRIMES AGAINST CRIMINALS.

AN ADDRESS

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL,

DELIVERED BEFORE THE

New York State Bar Association, at Albany, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1890.

The only Complete and Authorized Edition.

PRICE, TEN CENTS.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Modern Science Essayist.

Ten Cents Each.

1. HERBERT SPENCER: His life, writings, and philosophy. By Mr. DANIEL GREENLEAF THOMPSON.
2. CHARLES ROBERT DARWIN: His life, works, and influence. By Rev. JOHN W. CHADWICK.
3. SOLAR AND PLANETARY EVOLUTION: How suns and worlds come into being. By Mr. GARRET P. SERVISS.
4. EVOLUTION OF THE EARTH: The story of geology. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
5. EVOLUTION OF VEGETAL LIFE: How life begins. By Mr. WILLIAM POTTS.
6. EVOLUTION OF ANIMAL LIFE: The order of zoological evolution. By Dr. ROSSITER RAYMOND.
7. THE DESCENT OF MAN: His origin, antiquity, growth. By Prof. E. D. COPE.
8. EVOLUTION OF MIND: Its nature and development. By Dr. ROBERT G. ECCLES.
9. EVOLUTION OF SOCIETY. By JAMES A. SKILTON.
10. EVOLUTION OF THEOLOGY. By Z. SIDNEY SAMPSON.
11. EVOLUTION OF MORALS. By Dr. LEWIS G. JANES.
12. PROOFS OF EVOLUTION. By NELSON C. PARSHALL.
13. EVOLUTION AS RELATED TO RELIGIOUS THOUGHT. By JOHN W. CHADWICK.
14. PHILOSOPHY OF EVOLUTION. By STARR HOYT NICHOLS.
15. THE EFFECTS OF EVOLUTION ON THE COMING CIVILIZATION. By MINOT J. SAVAGE.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Miss Wixon's Works.

All in a Lifetime. A Liberal Romance. 12mo, 300pp., $1.

Apples of Gold. And Other Stories for Boys and Girls. 12mo, 383pp., $1.25.

Story Hour. An Exceptionally Handsome and Interesting Book, Without Superstition, for Children and Youth. The Only Freethinkers' Children's Story-Book ever issued. 66 full-page illustrations and 25 smaller; large type, heavy, toned paper, broad margins, illustrated covers; 4to, 224pp., boards, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

L. K. Washburn's Works.

Sunday and the Sabbath. "A law regulating human conduct on the Sabbath is an impertinence." Price, 10 cents.

The False Teaching of the Christian Church. "The Thirty-nine Articles of the Christian church are thirty-nine poor, broken-down opinions." 10 cents.

The Foolishness of Prayer. "Think of a minister's praying God to kill grasshoppers, or trying to induce the Deity to undertake a crusade of one against the Colorado beetle!" Price, 10 cents.

Followers of Jesus. Price, 10 cents.

Spiritualism: Is It a Faith or a Fact? Price, 5 cents.

Religious Problems. Price, 10 cents

Was Jesus Insane? Price, 10 cents.

The Public Schools and the Catholic Church. Price, 5 cents.

ALEXANDER VON HUMBOLDT.

Steel engravings of this celebrated naturalist. 2x15 inches, suitable for framing, sent postpaid, for 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.
tf

SCIENCE VERSUS RELIGION,

OR, THE

Conflict between Reason and Superstition.

BY T. C. WIDDICOMBE,
Philadelphia, Pa.

Price, 10 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

NOW READY.--PRICE, $2 AND $2.50.

The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book.

SHOWING

THE ABSURDITY AND UNTRUTHFULNESS OF THE CHURCH'S CLAIM TO BE A DIVINE AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION, AND REVEALING THE ABUSES OF A UNION OF CHURCH AND STATE.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE FULL-PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS.

WITH COPIOUS CITATIONS OF FACT, HISTORY, STATISTICS, AND OPINIONS OF SCHOLARS TO MAINTAIN THE ARGUMENT OF THE ARTIST.

Designs bv Watson Heston, With Portrait of the Designer.

CONTENTS:

Uncle Sam and the Priests.
The Pests that Bother Uncle Sam.
Uncle Sam Sleeps, bnt the Priests do Not.
Romanism with Her Mask On.
The Mask Off.
"Submit to the Roman Pontiff as to God."
The Skeleton that Uncle Sam may Some Day find in his Closet.
A New Laocoon.
The Trail of the Serpent.
Some Undesirable Immigrants.
Lay Loyalty
"Where Liberty Reigns the Tyrant Seeks to Slay Her."—La Salle.
The Ontcome of Church and State Union.
The God-in-the-Constitntion Gnerillas.—Liberty in Peril.
Religious Treason the Ruin of the Repnblic.
A Transformation of the Bartholdi Statue which may be Expected nnder Religions Rule.
What Uncle Sam Shonld Do.

The Church Robbing the People.
New York City's Annual Gift to the Churches.
The Taxpayers and the Chnrches—I.
" " " " " —II

Thanksgiving.
Thanksgiving—I.
" —II.
" —III.

Sabbath Laws.
Sabbatarian Efforts in the National Senate.
Sunday in a Sabbatarian City.
The Clergy's Opportnnity.
As the Clergy Desire Snnday—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.

The Children and the Church.
Two Ways to Go.
Which Shall We Have?
A Teacher We Do Not Want.
The Shadow in Onr Schools.
A New Application of an Old Text.
The Reptiles in the Path.
Recruiting for Chnrch Institntions.
A Parochial School Lesson.
Prodncts of the Parochial Schools.
The Disguise Slips Off.
A Web for the Unwary.
The Religions Trap.
Snnday-School Scholars.
The Joys of the Sunday-School Boy.

Woman and the Church.
Woman's Path from Servitnde to Freedom.
Enconragement to Go Astray.
St. Paul as a Member of the School Board.
The Chnrch's Use for Woman.
A Contrast.
Fishing.
Woman the Supporter of Preacher and Pope.
Helping the Chnrch.
The Chnrch's Chief Support.
When Womanhood Awakes.

The Church and Thomas Paine.
Thomas Paine.
The Preacher and the Patriot
One Work by Paine Outweighs All the Preachers.
Why Paine Was Denonnced.
Paine's Services and His Reward from the Chnrch.
Once Upon a Time a Donkey Kicked a Lion.

Studies in Natural History.
A Qnestion for Theological Ethnologists.
Some Problems in Evolntion.
The Prototype of the Methodist Revival.
Religion in Man and Instinct in the Brute.

The Bible and Science.
The Bible and Geology.
The Bible and Geography.

The Clergy and their Flocks.
Shearing Time.
The Clergy's Hold Upon the People.
One of a Very Nnmerons Class.
The Physician and the Flock.
Dnty to the Clergy.
At Conference Time.
Work of a Methodist Conference in New York in 1876.
The Burden of the Cross.
The Theologian's Conception of Clerical Privileges.
The Ark of the Lord.
Sympathizing With their Pastor.
One Trinmphant Saint.
Appearance and Fact.
Chaplains in the Army and Navy.
A Desirable Bargain.

Piety in Our Penitentiaries.
A Religious Procession.

The Atonement Scheme.
The Atonement Doctrine.
Practical Application of the Atonement.
The Great Efficacy of Baptism.
How to Get a Halo and a Harp.
Divine Beneficence.
The Tabernacles of the Lord—I.
" " " " —II.
A Few Victims of Divine Beneficence.

Prayer.
A Dronth in Cambridge, Ill., in 1887.
Onr Father in Heaven.

The Creeds.
What Is Christianity?—I.
" " " —II.
" " " —III.
The Clamor of the Creeds.
Sustaining the Creeds.
The Creedal Fiddle.
The Creeds of the World.
Christianity's Holy Family.
Janns-faced Creedalists.
The Creedalists and the Government—"Our God, Onr Connlry, and an Appropriation."

The Christians and the Mohammedans.
Their Scientific Records Compared.

Two Samples of Christianity's Work.
Romans of the Past and Present.
Peruvians Before and Since the Conqnest.

Missionaries
Hypocrisy of Christian Missionary Effort—I.
" " " " " —II.
Christian Missionaries in India.
Missionary Methods in the Chnrch of England.
A Poor Rule That Doesn't Work Both Ways.

The Lord's Instruments.
Religious Rule.

Bible Doctrines and their Results.
Biblical Temperance Statements.
" " " Applied.
The Christian Scheme from Genesis to the Synoptical Gospels, and the Practical Results.
The Authority of the Footpad.
The Wisdom of Solomon.
The Law and the Gospel Not the Same.
Resnlt of Faith at Findlay, Ohio.
Which Statements Shall We Be Damned for Disbelieving?
Irresponsibility of Christians—Whence they Obtain and Where they Pnt their Sins.
Jesns Paid It All.
A Candidate for Glory—An Old Sinner, but a New Saint.
Some Tests for Trne Believers.
Following Christ.
An Earnest Christian.
A Trial of Faith.
The Faults in Christian Morality.—I.
" " " " " —II.
" " " " " —III.
" " " " " —IV.
" " " " " —V.
An Incident of a Snow-storm, January, 1889.
Another Incident of Another Snow-storm.
On the Anxions Seat.
Different Stories of an Alleged Occnrrence.

The Church and Slavery.
The Ghost in the Methodist Chnrchyard.

Priests in Politics.
The Colossns of New York.
The Political Caliban and the ReligionsRogues.

Ireland and the Church.
A Contribution to the Irish Qnestion.
The Chnrches in Ireland.
The Gospel of Peace in Ireland.
The Tronble With Pat.

The Church's Idea of Civilization.
The Gallows One of Christian Civilization's Adjuncts.
What Rome Would Use to Civilize People.

The Uses of the Cross.
Its Evolution.

Unkind Reflections Upon the Church.
Decline of the Papacy in Italy.
The Old Tiger and His Whelps.
The Cry of the Chnrch, "Don't Hnrt Our Feelings."
Shake, Old Man; We're on the Same Lay (Tammany ward worker to Methodist ministerial delegate).

Persecutions by the Church.
The Burning of Bruno.
The Only Thing on Which the Sects Agree.
An Unwelcome Pilgrimage.
When Christians Made the Laws.
Superstition the Same in All Places and Ages.
Banishment of Roger Williams.
Case of Dr. McGlynn—the Chnrch Trne to Her Record.
Casting Pearls Before Swine.
The Bigotry of Chnrch and State.

Some Allegories.
The Genii who Preside Over the Road to Knowledge.
The Three Graces of Infidelity.
A Clerical Move.
The Trinity that Ruled the World in the Dark Ages.
"Let the Ghosts Go."
The Race Between America's Infidel Orator and England's Christian Statesman.
The Enemy and the Friend of Liberty.
Roman Catholic Pandora's Box.
A New Rendering of an Old Rhyme.
An Error in Biblical Navigation.
The World Still Moves.

Heaven.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Ontside of the Gates of the New Jernsalem.
On the Probation Plan.—Scene Inside of the Gates of the New Jerusalem.
Into Heaven via Purgatory.

Hell.
How to Make the Road to Salvation Plain.
The Glory of Election.
The Amusement of the Saints in Heaven.
A Clerical Snrprise Party.
The Theologians and Skeptics.
The Devil's Occnpation Gone.

Miscellaneous.
Talmage's Petrified Blasphemer—A Religious Campaign Story of '86.
The Futility of Hitching Evolntion to Orthodoxy.
The Evolntion of a Sacrament.
A Hint to Talmage, Sam Jones, et al.
The Women's Christian Temperance Union's Crnsade.
Tools of the Clerical Trade.
The Modern Balaam.

AUTHORITIES QUOTED:

President John Adams, Robert C. Adams, D'Aubigne's History of the Reformation, Athanasian Creed, Prof. H. G. Atkinson, Matthew Arnold, Lord Amberley, Account of the Irish Massacre, Cardinal Baronius, Cardinal Bellarmine, Byron, Senator Henry W. Blair, D. M. Bennett, H. W. Beecher, Burnett's History of My Own Times, Annie Besant, Buck's Theological Dictionary, Buckle's History of Civilization, Brooks Adams's Emancipation of Massachusetts, Governor Brownlow of Tennessee, J. M. Buckley, D.D., Charles Bradlaugh, Professor Buchner, Beauchamp, Prof. James Bryce, M.P., Edward Beecher, Bible Myths, A. Bierbower, M. Babcock, Council of Constance, Christian Statesman, Dr. Thomas Cooper, Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Dr. Carpenter, Christian Advocate, Catholic Review, Catholic World, Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome, Rev. Moncure D. Conway, Thomas Carlyle, Presbyterian Confession of Faith, The Chronicle of Perth, Jesus Christ, Congregational Creed, Prof. W. K. Clifford, Archbishop Corrigan, William Cobbett on the English Church, Catholic Union and Times, Chambers's Cyclopedia, Cassius Clay, Prof. Theodore Dwight, Darwin, William Denton, Dana's Manual of Geology, Prof. Van Buren Denslow, Durham's Commentarie Upon the Book of Revelation, Dowling's History of Romanism, Diderot, Draper's Intellectual Development of Europe, Draper's Conflict Between Religion and Science, Chauncey M. Depew, Edward Everett, Emmons's Volume of Sermons, Jonathan Edwards, Benjamin Franklin, San Francisco Freethought, Jas. Anthony Froude, Garibaldi, Guizot (French Historian), Gregory VII., President J. A. Garfield, President U. S. Grant, A. J. Grover, Boston Globe, Gamble, Helen H. Gardener, Matilda Joslyn Gage, Gibbon, Genesis, Rev. E. E. Guild, Gillespie's Aaron's Rod Blossoming, Greg's Creed of Christendom, Goethe, Cardinal Gibbons, Patrick Henry, Alvah Hovey, D.D., President Newton Theological Institution; D'Holbach, Victor Hugo, Dexter A. Hawkins, Ernst Haeckel, Hecker's Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages, Professor Huxley, Hutchinson's Exposition of the Minor Prophets, Hobbes, Harper's Weekly, Hallam's History of the Middle Ages, Ingersoll, President Thomas Jefferson, C. H. Jones, ed. Chris. Paper of Chicago; O. D. Jones in Am. Nonconformist, Kingsley's Natural History, Abner Kneeland, Lecky's Rationalism in Europe, Leo XIII. (Pope), Loyola, Lafayette, Henry Luttrell, Martin Luther, Locke, Macaulay, President Madison, President Monroe, Dean Milman, Milton, W. H. H. Murray, Dr. McGlynn, Hon. Stanley Matthews, of the U. S. Supreme Court, Manu, Cardinal Manning, Maine's Ancient Law, Arthur B. Moss, Massachusetts Records, Morell's History of Philosophy, Michelet, Moore, Missionary Herald, Mohammedan Emir to Bishop Crowther, John Stuart Mill, Wm. McDonnell's Heathens of the Heath, Mackenzie's History of the XIX Century, New Haven Colony Records, Neander, Church Historian; Lord Neares, Nordau, Bishop O'Connor, Felix L. Oswald, Robert Dale Owen, Max O'Rell, People's Cyclopedia, Pius IX. (Pope), Pius X. (Pope), Archbishop Paley, Parker Pillsbury, St. Paul, Thomas Paine, Plymouth Colony Records, Life of the Rev. Alexander Peden, Prescott (History), John Peck, Prof. Richard A. Proctor, Josiah Quincy, Edgar Quinet, W. Stewart Ross (Saladin), Robertson, John E. Remsburg, Report of New York Catholic Protectory, Rutherford's Religious Letters, Reade's Martyrdom of Man, Report to House of Commons by Sheriff Allison of Glasgow, Renan, Archbishop Ryan, Robertson's Survey of the State of Europe, E. A. Stevens, T. W. Smith (American Missionary), Dr. Schaff, Prof. Church History in Union Theological Seminary, New York; Herbert Spencer, Dr. Josiah Strong, Schopenhauer, Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Shakspere, Charles Stephenson, Leslie Stephen, Elmina D. Slenker, PercyBysshe Shelley, Strauss, A. C. Swinburne, THE TRUTH SEEKER, New York Tablet (Roman Catholic), J. P. Thompson, Truth Seeker Annual, New York Times, The New Englander, Taylor, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, U. S. Senate Reports, U. S. Senate Sunday Bills, Upham's Salem Witchcraft, Voltaire, Volney, Gilbert Vale, Rev. Thomas Vincent, Cardinal Wiseman, President George Washington, Walt Whitman, J. M. Wheeler, Archbishop Whately, Daniel Webster, Rev. John Wesley, Prof. Andrew D. White, Wishart's Memoirs of the Marquis of Montrose, John Wilson, M.A., Elizur Wright, Lieutenant Wood, U. S. N., J. G. Whittier, E. C. Walker in Bible Temperance, Nathaniel Ramsay Waters, W. W. Walker.

NEARLY 400 PAGES, 12 INCHES BY 9 INCHES, BOUND IN BOARDS, WITH ILLUMINATED COVER, $2; IN CLOTH, GOLD STAMP, $2.50.

Sent by Mail on Receipt of Price by THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Agents for the Truth Seeker.

ALABAMA.
Star News Depot, 2,008 2d ave., Birmingham.
CALIFORNIA.
J. E. Clark, Los Angeles.
Ball & McCarter, 7 W. First st., Los Angeles.
Edwards & McKnight, 12 W. 1st st., Los Angeles.
Max News Stand, 1st & Main sts., LosAngeles.
J. C. Scott, 22 Third st., San Francisco, Cal.
Estate of S. C. Blake, 503 Kearny st., San Francisco.
Richardson Bros., 213 Grant ave., San Francisco.
CANADA.
T.C. Allen&Co.,124 Granville st.,Halifax,N.S.
Mrs. W. B. Cooke, 170 1-2 Yonge st., Toronto
James Foster, Welland, Ont.
Thos. Moffatt, Orillia, Ont.
R. W. Wheeler & Co., Hamilton, Ont.
COLORADO.
J. C. Richey, 207 Harrison ave., Leadville.
FLORIDA.
Jas. Douglas, 46 E. Bay st., Jacksonville.
IDAHO.
A. Erwin, Murray.
ILLINOIS.
Mrs. S. E. Ames, 169 Washington st., Chicago.
Post-office News Co., 103 Adams st., Chicago.
G. E. Wilson, 314 S. State st, and Brentano Bros., Chicago.
J. W. Howe, 48 S. Halstead st., Chicago.
INDIANA.
J. R. Monroe, Indianapolis.
Wm. E. Farr, South Bend.
KANSAS.
E. D. Sharpnack, Galena, Kan.
LOUISIANA.
Geo. Ellis, 11 Decatur st., New Orleans.
Al. J. Dwyer, 226 Baronne st., New Orleans.
MAINE.
N. G. Fessenden, 434 Congress st., Portland.
MASSACHUSETTS.
Colby & Rich, 9 Bosworth st., Boston.
Johnson Bro's 5 N. Main st., Fall River.
A. M. Driscoll, 78½ Front st., Worcester.
MICHIGAN.
S. D. Moore, Adrian. Box 465.
Chas. Sach, Woodbine Cottage, Coit ave., Grand Rapids.
C. Holton & Co., 87 Woodward ave., Detroit.
Herman Reif, 94 Gratiot ave., Detroit.
Horace Haynes, Leslie.
MISSOURI.
Phillip Roeder, 322 Olive st., St. Louis.
E. T. Jett, 802 Olive st., St. Louis.
NEW JERSEY.
C. Schmidt, 69 Pacific st., Newark.
J. G. Hunter, 66 Wickliff st., Newark.
John Hossack, Danforth and Ocean ave., Jersey City.
NEW YORK.
Brentano Bros., Union Square, New York.
Burnton & Co., 92 Fourth ave., New York.
H. Adler, cor. Essex & Grand sts., New York.
Mr. Kelly, 1243 Third ave., New York.
R. W. Turner, 349 4th ave., New York.
E. Friedman, 72 Canal st., New York.
H. Cohn, 320 West st., New York.
Morris Ash, 120 Broadway, New York.
George Gross, 1693 Broadway, New York.
L. Jonas, Astor House, New York.
J. H. Russell, Fulton & Nassau sts., "
J. Vanden Broeck, 397 Bleecker st., New York.
New York News Co., 20 Beekman st., "
S. J. King, 179 So. Pearl st., Albany.
E. C. Weidman, 126 State st., Rochester.
OHIO.
John Jacques, Akron.
N. Hexter, 303 Superior street, Cleveland.
J. R. Hawley, 164 Vine st., Cincinnati.
W. Smith, 329 Superior st., Cleveland.
Benj. Woods, 319 Chillicothe street, Portsmouth.
Larwood, Bartlett & Day, 259 Superior st., Cleveland.
OREGON.
B. F. Hyland, Corvallis.
C. H. Wilcox, Portland.
W. Wedeken, Portland, Ore.
PENNSYLVANIA.
Dr. J. H. Rhodes, 722 Spring Garden st., Phila.
George Longford, 1106 Leopard st., Phila.
J. A. Kirk. Du Bois.
H. Heyne, 10th and Market sts., Phila.
Roman Staley, cor. Wood and 4th ave., Pittsburgh.
RHODE ISLAND.
H. Carr, 947 High st., Providence.
J. H. J. Reilly, 413 High st., Providence.
TENNESSEE.
Wm. B. Fisher, 84 N. Cherry st., Nashville.
D. P. Henderson & Co., Chattanooga.
TEXAS.
L. Andruss, Denison.
T. Theo. Colwick, Norse.
J. Jackson, Dallas.
E. A. Andrea, 916 Main st., Dallas.
UTAH.
James Ashman, Salt Lake City.
John A. Jost, Ogden.
Henry Booth, Stockton.
J. W. Wilkinson, Logan.
WASHINGTON TERRITORY.
Stine Bros., Walla Walla.
Geo. Funk, 909 Pacific ave., Tacoma.
C. B. Reynolds, Lock Box 5 Freemont.
ENGLAND.
Watts & Co., 17 Johnson's Court, Fleet street, London.
C. Stocker, 29 Vauxhall Road, Liverpool.
AUSTRALIA.
Chas. H. Bamford, 190 Little Collins st., East Melbourne, Victoria.
W. Willis, 715 Haymarket, Sydney, N. S. W.
NEW ZEALAND.
A. D. Willis, Wanganui.

THE TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL.
Price, 25 Cents.

THE HUMBOLDT LIBRARY
—OF—
POPULAR SCIENCE.

No. 1. Light Science for Leisure Hours. A series of familiar essays on astronomical and other natural phenomena. By Richard A. Proctor, F.R.A.S.

No. 2. Forms of Water in Clouds and Rivers, Ice and Glaciers. (19 illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 3. Physics and Politics. An application of the principles of Natural Science to Political Society. By Walter Bagehot, author of "The English Constitution."

No. 4. Man's Place in Nature, (with numerous illustrations). By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 5. Education, Intellectual, Moral, and Physical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 6. Town Geology. With Appendix on Coral and Coral Reefs. By Rev. Charles Kingsley.

No, 7. The Conservation of Energy, (with numerous illustrations). By Balfour Stewart, LL.D.

No. 8. The Study of Languages, brought back to its true principles. By C. Marcel.

No. 9. The Data of Ethics. By Hebert Spencer.

No. 10. The Theory of Sound in its Relation to Music, (numerous illustrations). By Prof. Pietro Blaserna.

No. 11. } The Naturalist on the River Amazons. A record of 11 years of travel.
No. 12. } By Henry Walter Bates, F.L.S. (Not sold separately).

No. 13. Mind and Body. The theories of their relations. By Alex. Bain, LL.D.

No. 14. The Wonders of the Heavens, (thirty-two illustrations). By Camille Flammarion.

No. 15. Longevity. The means of prolonging life after middle age. By John Gardner, M.D.

No. 16. The Origin of Species. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 17. Progress: Its Law and Cause. With other disquisitions. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 18. Lessons in Electricity, (sixty illustrations). By John Tyndall, F.R.S.

No. 19. Familiar Essays on Scientific Subjects. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 20. The Romance of Astronomy. By R. Kalley Miller, M.A.

No. 21. The Physical Basis of Life, with other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 22. Seeing and Thinking. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 23. Scientific Sophisms. A review of current theories concerning Atoms, Apes and Men. By Samuel Wainwright, D.D.

No. 24. Popular Scientific Lectures, (illustrated). By Prof. H. Helmholtz.

No. 25. The Origin of Nations. By Prof. Geo. Rawlinson, Oxford University.

No. 26. The Evolutionist at Large. By Grant Allen.

No. 27. The History of Landholding in England. By Joseph Fisher, F.R.H.S.

No. 28. Fashion in Deformity, as illustrated in the customs of Barbarous and Civilized Races. (numerous illustrations). By William Henry Flower, F.R.S.

No. 29. Facts and Fictions of Zoology, (numerous illustrations). By Andrew Wilson, Ph.D.

No. 30. } The Study of Words.
No. 31. } By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 32. Hereditary Traits and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 33. Vignettes from Nature. By Grant Allen.

No. 34. The Philosophy of Style. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 35. Oriental Religions. By John Caird, Pres. Univ. Glasgow, and Others.

No. 36. Lectures on Evolution. (Illustrated). By Prof. T. H. Huxley.

No. 37. Six Lectures on Light. (Illustrated). By Prof. John Tyndall.

No. 38. } Geological Sketches. By Archibald
No. 39. } Geikie, F.R.S.

No. 40. The Evidence of Organic Evolution. By George J. Romanes, F.R.S.

No. 41. Current Discussions in Science. By W. M. Williams, F.C.S.

No. 42. History of the Science of Politics. By Frederick Pollock.

No. 43. Darwin and Humboldt. By Prof. Huxley, Prof. Agassiz, and others.

No. 44. } The Dawn of History. By C. F. Keary,
No. 45. } of the British Museum.

No. 46. The Diseases of Memory. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 47. The Childhood of Religion. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 48. Life in Nature. (Illustrated). By James Hinton.

No. 49. The Sun; its Constitution, its Phenomena, its Condition. By Judge Nathan T. Carr, Columbus, Ind.

No. 50. } Money and the Mechanism of Ex-
No. 51. } change. By Prof. W. Stanley Jevons, F.R.S.

No. 52. The Diseases of the Will. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald.

No. 53. Animal Automatism, and other Essays, By Prof. T. H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 54. The Birth and Growth of Myth. By Edward Clodd, F.R.A.S.

No. 55. The Scientific Basis of Morals, and other Essays. By William Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 56. } Illusions. By James Sully.
No. 57. }

No. 53. } The Origin of Species. } Two Double
No. 59. } By Charles Darwin. } Nos.

No. 60. The Childhood of the World. By Edward Clodd.

No. 61. Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 62. The Religions of the Ancient World. By Prof. Geo. Rawlinson, Univ. of Oxford. (Double number).

No. 63. Progressive Morality. By Thomas Fowler, LL.D., President of Corpus Christi Coll., Oxford.

No. 64. The Distribution of Animals and Plants. By A. Russell Wallace and W. T. Thiselton Dyer.

No. 65. Conditions of Mental Development: and other essays. By Wm. Kingdon Clifford.

No. 66. Technical Education: and other essays. By Thomas H. Huxley, F.R.S.

No. 67. The Black Death. An account of the Great Pestilence of the 14th Century. By J. F. C. Hecker, M. D.

No. 68. Three Essays. By Herbert Spencer. Special Number.

No. 69. Fetichism: A Contribution to Anthropology and the History of Religion. By Fritz Schultze, Ph.D. Double number.

No. 70. Essays Speculative and Practical. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 71. Anthropology. By Daniel Wilson, Ph. D. With Appendix on Archæology. By E. B. Tylor, F. R. S.

No. 72. The Dancing Mania of the Middle Ages. By J. F. C. Hecker, M.D.

No. 73. Evolution in History, Language and Science. Four Addresses delivered at the London Crystal Palace School of Art, Science and Literature.

No. 74. } The Descent of Man, and Selection in
No. 75. } Relation to Sex. (Numerous Illustrations)
No. 76. } By Charles Darwin. Nos. 74, 75, 76 are
No. 77. } single Nos.; No. 77. is a double No.

No. 78. Historical Sketch of the Distribution of Land in England. By William Lloyd Birkbeck, M.A.

No. 79. Scientific Aspect of some Familiar Things. By W. M. Williams.

No. 80. Charles Darwin. His Life and Work By Grant Allen. (Double number).

No. 81. The Mystery of Matter, and the Philosophy of Ignorance. Two Essays by J. Allanson Picton.

No. 82. Illusions of the Senses: and other Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 83. Profit-Sharing Between Capital and Labor. Six Essays. By Sedley Taylor, M.A.

No. 84. Studies of Animated Nature. Four Essays on Natural History. By W. S. Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 85. The Essential Nature of Religion. By J. Allanson Picton.

No. 86. The Unseen Universe, and the Philosophy of the Pure Sciences. By Prof. Wm. Kingdon Clifford, F.R.S.

No. 87. The Morphine Habit. By Dr. B. Ball, of the Paris Faculty of Medicine.

No. 88. Science and Crime and other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 89. The Genesis of Science. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 90. Notes on Earthquakes: with Fourteen Miscellaneous Essays. By Richard A. Proctor.

No. 91. The Rise of Universities. By S. S. Laurie, LL.D. (Double number).

No. 92. The Formation of Vegetable Mould through the Action of Earth Worms. By Charles Darwin, LL.D. F.R.S. (Double number).

No. 93. Scientific Methods of Capital Punishment. By J. Mount Bleyer, M.D. (Special number).

No. 94. The Factors of Organic Evolution. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 95. The Diseases of Personality. By Th. Ribot. Translated from the French by J. Fitzgerald, M.A.

No. 96. A Half-Century of Science. By Prof. Thomas H. Huxley, and Grant Allen.

No. 97. The Pleasures of Life. By Sir John Lubbock, Bart.

No. 98. Cosmic Emotion: Also the Teachings of Science. By William Kingdon Clifford. (Special number).

No. 99. Nature Studies. By Prof. F. R. Eaton Lowe; Dr. Robert Brown, F.L.S.; Geo. G. Chisholm, F.R.G.S., and James Dallas, F.L.S.

No. 100. Science and Poetry, with other Essays. By Andrew Wilson, F.R.S.E.

No. 101. Æsthetics; Dreams and Association of Ideas. By Jas. Sully and Geo. Croom Robertson.

No. 102. Ultimate Finance; A True Theory of Co-operation. By William Nelson Black.

No. 103. The Coming Slavery; The Sins of Legislators; The Great Political Superstition. By Herbert Spencer.

No. 104. Tropical Africa. By Henry Drummond, F.R.S.

No. 105. Freedom in Science and Teaching. By Ernst Haeckel, of the University of Jena. With a Prefatory Note by Prof. Huxley.

No. 106. Force and Energy. A Theory of Dynamics. By Grant Allen.

No. 107. Ultimate Finance. A True Theory of Wealth. By William Nelson Black.

No. 108. English, Past and Present. Part. I. By Richard Chenevix Trench, (Double number).

No, 109. English, Past and Present. Part II. By Richard Chenevix Trench.

No. 110. The Story of Creation. A Plain Account of Evolution. By Edward Clodd. (Double number).

Single Nos. 15 cents; Double Nos. 30 cents.
Nos. 1 to 111 inclusive, cloth, plain edges—separately or together—10 vols., $2 per vol
THE TRUTH SEEKER CO., 28 Lafayette Pl., New York.

RELIGION OF MAN
AND
ETHICS OF SCIENCE.
BY
HUDSON TUTTLE.

A Historical and Critical Review of the Religion of Man.

CONTENTS: What is Religion? Fetichism. Phallic Worship. Man's Moral Progress Dependent on His Intellectual Growth. The Great Theological Problem. Man's Fall, and the Christian Scheme for his Redemption. Man's Position, Fate, Free Will, Free Agency, Necessity. Responsibility of the Individual. Genesis and Evolution of Spirit. The Law of Moral Government. The Apostles. Selfish Propensities. Love. Wisdom. Charter of Rights. Duties and Obligations of the Individual. Duties and Obligations of Society. Rights of Government. Duties of Society to Criminals. Duty of Self Culture. Marriage. Cloth; price, $1.50.

LOOKING BACKWARD
By Edward Bellamy,
Author of "Dr. Heidenhoff's Process," etc.

It is a thought-breeding book, and all who are free to receive new light will find in it satisfaction and inspiration.—[New York Tribune.
The appeal is always made to a man's reason, and to his noblest sentiments: never to his selfishness.—[Boston Post.
A suggestion of a really practicable and feasible social state greatly in advance of the present. The romantic narrativ is rich in its forecast of actual possibilities.—[Boston Traveler.
12mo, cloth, $1.00; paper, 50c.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

THE
French Invasion of Ireland in '98.

Leaves of Unwritten History That Tell of a Heroic Endeavor and a Lost Opportunity to Throw Off England's Yoke.

By VALERIAN GRIBAYEDOFF.

With a map and numerous illustrations by well-known artists. Handsomely bound in silk cloth. Ink and gold side stamps. Price, $1.50.

The present volume is an effort to rescue from comparative oblivion one of the many extraordinary episodes of the great French revolutionary war. . . . It points a moral that amidst republican institutions like ours, will not fail to receive appreciation. It shows, on one hand, the elevating influence of newly acquired ambition, . . . and on the other the debasing effects of Religious and Political intolerance both on the tyrant and the victim. Contains a heretofore unpublished letter of Thomas Paine to the French Directory.

The Agnostic Annual
FOR 1891.
Edited by CHARLES A. WATTS.

CONTENTS.

An Agnostic View of the Bible.....Samuel Laing.
Fundamental Theses of Agnosticism.
R. Bithell, B.Sc., Ph.D.
Agnosticism and the Church of England.
Amos Waters.
Avatar, Come! A Poem.
Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Instability of Faiths. Hon. C. K. Tuckerman.
The Iron Hand Under the Velvet Glove.
G. J. Holyoake.
Practical Religion.....Charles Watts.
The Cinerary Urn. A Sonnet.
Author of "Cæsar in Egypt."
The New Anglicanism.....B. Russell.
Androgynous Gods.
H. J. Hardwicke, M.D., F.R.C.S.
Is Agnosticism Sound?.....Paul Carus.
"Is Agnosticism Sound?"
Saladin (W. Stewart Ross).
The Poems of Joseph Ellis.....Mirabeau Brown.

Price, 25 cents. For sale at this office.

LIFE OF
Joshua Davidson:
MODERN IMITATION OF CHRIST,
As to his Life on Earth and his Communism.
BY MRS. E. LYNN LINTON,
Author of "A Protest and a Plea," in Order of Creation.

Cloth, 12mo, 279 pp., - - 75 Cents.

☞ This book was suppressed by the first American publisher. ☜

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and Medicines. Samples FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 375 Broadway, N. Y.

THE UNIVERSE ANALYZED
By JOHN R. KELSO, A.M.,
Author of "Deity Analyzed," "The Bible Analyzed," "The Real Blasphemers," "Spiritualism Sustained," etc., etc.

The latest and best work of an analytic thinker, who is gifted with those rare powers that render the subtlest conceptions the easy property of the ordinary mind. The book contains many ideas that will be new to the world and productiv of good in furnishing food for thought. We trust it will hav the immense distribution it so richly merits.—[The American Idea.

Cloth, 12mo, $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

Truth Seeker Tracts.

NOTE.—These tracts are especially intended for distribution as Freethought missionary documents. When sending subscriptions for your Truth Seeker, or money for books, please add whatever you can for tracts, and, when received, hand them around among your neighbors, or leave them in hotels, places of public assembly, etc. To allow much to be done in this way with a little money the following discounts are made. On one dollar's worth 10 per cent. off; on two dollars' worth, 20 off; on five dollars' worth, 40 off; on ten dollars' worth, 50 off. This rate of discount is given on these tracts only. Please order by numbers. The numbers not mentioned are out of print.

23 Reply to Shelton's Letter. Bennett..... 3
29 Paine Hall Dedication. Underwood..... 5

35 Moving the Ark. Bennett..... 2
37 Short Sermon. Rev. Theologicus, D.D.... 2
38 Christianity not a Moral. X. Y. Z..... 2
39 The True Saint. S. P. Putnam..... 1
43 Christianity a Borrowed System. Bennett. 3
47 Cruelty & Credulity of the Human Race.... 3
49 Sensible Conclusions. E. E. Guild..... 5
52 Marples-Underwood Debate. Underwood. 3
53 Questions for Bible Worshipers..... 2
54 Open Letter to Jesus Christ. Bennett.... 5
58 Prophecies. Underwood..... 2
62 The Jews and their God..... 10
63 The Devil's Due Bills. Syphers..... 3
64 Ills we Endure—Cause and Cure. Bennett. 5
65 ShortSermon. No.2. Rev. Theologicus, D.D. 2
67 Sixteen Truth Seeker Leaflets. No. 2..... 5
70 Vicarious Atonement. J. S. Lyon..... 3
71 Paine's Anniversary. C. A. Codman..... 2
73 Foundations. John Syphers..... 2
74 Daniel in the Lion's Den. Bennett..... 2
75 An Hour with the Devil. Bennett..... 10
76 Reply to E. F. Brown. Bennett..... 3
77 The Fear of Death. D. M. Bennett..... 5

82 Christian Courtesy. D. M. Bennett..... 1
83 Revivalism Examined. Dr. A. G. Humphrey. 5
84 Moody on Hell. Rev. J. P. Hopps..... 2
89 Logic of Prayer. C. Stephenson..... 3
90 Bible-Mania. Otto Cordates..... 2
91 Our Ideas of God. B. F. Underwood..... 1
94 The New Raven. Will Cooper..... 5
96 Ichabod Crane Papers..... 10
97 Special Providences. W. S. Bell..... 2
98 Snakes. Mrs. E. D. Slenker..... 2
100 140th Anniversary of Paine's Birthday.... 5
102 The Old Religion and New. Bell..... 2
104 Evolution of Israel's God. Rawson..... 10
105 Decadence of Christianity. Capphro..... 2

107 The Safe Side. H. B. Brown..... 5
110 Invocation to the Universe. Bennett.... 1
111 Reply to Scientific American. Bennett.... 1
112 Sensible Sermon. Rev. M. J. Savage..... 2
113 Come to Jesus. Bennett..... 2
114 Where Was Jesus Born? S. H. Preston. 1
115 The Wonders of Prayer. Bennett..... 2
116 The Sunday Question. Bennett..... 2
117 Constantine the Great. Preston..... 3
119 The New Faith. Stoddard..... 3
120 The New Age. W. S. Bell..... 10

122 World's Great Religions. Bennett..... 10
123 Paine Vindicated. Ingersoll and "Observer"..... 10
524 Sinful Saints. Bennett..... 10
125 German Liberalism. Neymann..... 2
126 Crimes and Cruelties of Christianity. Underwood..... 10
130 The Ethics of Religion. Clifford..... 5
134 Talks with the Evangelists..... 5
137 Christian Love. C. L. James..... 3
138 Science of the Bible. John Jasper..... 2
140 Astro-Theology..... 5
141 Infidelity. H. W. Beecher..... 2
142 Synopsis of All Religions. Saxon..... 10
143 Chang Wau Ho. Eli Perkins..... 2
148 When Did Paul Live? Scholasticus..... 2
149 Age of Shams..... 3
145 If You Take Away my Religion? What Will You Give Me Instead. Martin.... 10
150 The Liberty of Printing. Hurlbut and Wakeman..... 10
151 What is the Bible? M. W. H..... 5
152 A Remarkable Book. Douglas..... 2
153 Liberty and Morality. Conway..... 5
155 Co-operation Society's Redeemer..... 2
156 Free Speech & Free Press. Shelley..... 2

159 Boston Bennett Indignation Meeting..... 5
160 Sabbath Observance. Coleman..... 3
161 Protestant Persecutions..... 3
162 Eighth and Last Letter from Ludlow Street Jail. Bennett..... 10
164 Bible Impeached. Chapman..... 2

SCIENTIFIC SERIES.

1 Hereditary Transmission. Prof. Elsburg, M.D..... 5
2 Evolution: Homogeneous to Heterogeneous. Underwood..... 3
4 Literature of the Insane. Marvin..... 5
5 Responsibility of Sex. Mrs. Chase, M.D... 3
6 Graduated Atmospheres. McCarroll..... 2
7 Death. Frederic R. Marvin, M.D..... 3
8 How Marsupial Animals Propagate..... 2
9 The Unseen World. Prof. J. Fiske..... 10
10 The Evolution Theory—Huxley's Three Lectures..... 10
11 Is America New World? Dawson..... 10
12 Evolution not Atheism nor Materialism. R. S. Brigham, M.D..... 5
18 Nibble at Professor Fiske's Crumb for the Modern Symposium..... 10

See note at head of column.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

LARGEST AND MOST POPULAR FREETHOUGHT JOURNAL IN THE WORLD.

Published every Saturday, at $3 per year, by the Truth Seeker Company, at 28 Lafayette Place,

NEW YORK CITY.

E. M. MACDONALD, EDITOR. . . C. P. SOMERBY, BUSINESS MANAGER.

DURING THE YEAR 1891 THE TRUTH SEEKER

Will Print the Most Varied and Entertaining Selection of Original Papers of any Liberal Journal.

Among those who have written and will write for its columns are these eminent men and women known all over the world as advocates of Liberty:

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.	HELEN H. GARDENER.
R. B. WESTBROOK, A.M.	ARTHUR B. MOSS.
PARKER PILLSBURY.	L. K. WASHBURN.
JOHN E. REMSBURG.	CHARLES B. REYNOLDS.
CHARLES WATTS.	LUCY N. COLMAN.
ROBERT C. ADAMS.	FREDERIC MAY HOLLAND.
J. H. BURNHAM.	JULIET H. SEVERANCE.
JOHN PECK.	MATTIE P. KREKEL.
THADDEUS B. WAKEMAN.	W. F. JAMIESON.
H. O. PENTECOST.	SUSAN H. WIXON.

And many others.

THE TRUTH SEEKER also reprints from reviews and magazines the latest papers of such eminent writers as CHARLES BRADLAUGH, PROFESSOR HUXLEY, FREDERIC HARRISON, and other English Liberal writers.

The Editor of THE TRUTH SEEKER'S "Children's Corner," MISS SUSAN H. WIXON, has been elected senior member of the School Board of Fall River, Mass.

The Truth Seeker Gives all the News of Freethought, and is Always on Guard Against the Encroachments of Ecclesiastics upon the People's Liberties.

If you have any Ideas or Reforms calculated to benefit humanity write to THE TRUTH SEEKER (sending your subscription) and let the world know of them. THE TRUTH SEEKER publishes each week more letters from the people than any other paper in the world.

THE TRUTH SEEKER is devoted to the defense of Mental Liberty, of American Institutions, and the Preservation of the United States Constitution, so far as regards religious tests, and the maintenance of human rights. It advocates the abolition of all laws based on religion or religious observances. It demands the taxation of church property. It is uncompromisingly opposed to anything tending toward a union of church and state, either in name or in fact.

Send $3 for a Year's Subscription, or $1 for Four Months' Trial.

THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY, 28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

INFIDEL DEATH-BEDS.

By G. W. FOOTE.

"IDLE TALES OF DYING HORRORS."

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

Contains a Sketch of the Life and Death of Bruno, Buckle, Comte, Helvetius, Hugo, Hume, Owen, Paine, Strauss, Volney, Voltaire, and nearly ninety other prominent Freethinkers.

Paper. Price, 25 cents. Address this office.

Science in Plain Language.

I. EVOLUTION, ANTIQUITY, BACTERIA, ETC. By William Durham, F.R.S E.

II. ASTRONOMY, SUN, MOON, STARS, ETC. By William Durham, F.R S.E.

These handy series of volumes on science—of which the above works form the first two numbers, others to follow—are written in a way that cannot fail to make them interesting to even the most casual reader. They supply a popular need. The price of each is 50 cents in cloth.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

My Medical Discovery seldom takes hold of two people alike! Why? Because no two people have the same weak spot. Beginning at the stomach it goes searching through the body for any hidden humor. Nine times out of ten, inward humor makes the weak spot. Perhaps it's only a little sediment left on a nerve or in a gland; the Medical Discovery slides it right along, and you find quick happiness from the first bottle. Perhaps it's a big sediment or open sore, well settled somewhere, ready to fight. The Medical Discovery begins the fight, and you think it pretty hard, but soon you thank me for making something that has reached your weak spot. Write me if you want to know more about it.

The Candle From Under the Bushel

Mark iv, 21); or,

1,306 Questions to the Clergy:

And for the Consideration of Others.

Instructive, Interesting, and Laughable.

BY WILLIAM HART.

Price, - - - 50 cents.
Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

WETTSTEIN'S
WORLD-RENOWNED WATCHES.

Best grades American Stem-winders: In silverine cases, 7 jewels, $7.50; 9 jewels, $8; 11 jewels, $9; 15 jewels, $10; do. adjusted, $16. In 3 ounce coin silver cases, $3.50 more; 4 ounce, $4.50, and 5 ounce, $6 more. In best filled gold cases, open face, dust proof, 7 jewels, $16; 9 jewels, $16 50; 11 jewels, $17 50; 15 jewels, $18.50; do. adjusted, $24.50. Hunting, $22; $22 50; $23; $24; $30. Ladies', same quality, 7 jewels, $17; 11 jewels, $18 50; 15 jewels, $25. 14 karat solid gold, $10 more. The famous,

New Model "Otto Wettstein" Watch,

16 jewels and all modern improvements, $3 more than above adjusted watches. No watch in the world competes with it. Finer watches up to $200. All such prepaid, guaranteed 1 year, and cash refunded if not satisfactory. All filled gold cases warranted by manufacturers 20 years. Beware of New York World's 10 karat and spurious cases. Watches cleaned, best work, $1; springs, $1, etc., and returned free.

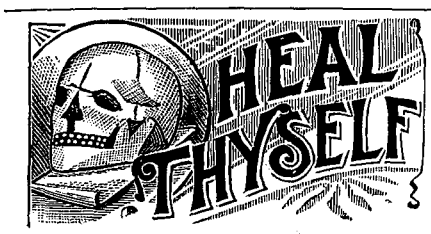
ESTABLISHED 1857.

OTTO WETTSTEIN, Rochelle, Ill.

COLONEL R. G. INGERSOLL'S

Memorial Address to Roscoe Conkling,

Before the Senate and Assembly of New York.



With Fine Steel Engraving of Senator Conkling.

Bound in black cloth, silver side stamp.

Price, 75 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

AGENTS WANTED by an old reliable firm; large profits, quick sales. SAMPLE FREE. A rare opportunity. Geo. A. Scott, 842 Broadway, N. Y.

AT THINE OWN HOME.

Send 10 cents to Dr. R. P. Fellows, the noted specialist, for his "Private Counselor"—a valuable book for young and middle-aged men, suffering from a Life-wasting Disease, as the result of youthful follies, indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years. It sets forth an External Application—A POSITIVE CURE, as it matters not how long standing, how hopeless or how many remedies you hav used. The book is worth many times its cost, and should be in the hands of those seeking a speedy and permanent cure. Address the doctor at Vineland, N. J, and say where you saw this advertisment.

A GOOD WORD.

Dr. Fellows is an outspoken Liberal, a humanitarian, and a generous patron of the Freethought press. He has many testimonials to the value of his progressive and successful method of treatment, and deserves patronage.—Freethought.

Liberal Meetings.

These notices are for the benefit of Liberals who may be visiting the places where these societies are located. Local Secular Unions and Freethought Societies meeting regularly can hav their gatherings advertised here free by forwarding the necessary information.

The Manhattan Liberal Club, N.Y.
Meets every Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, at German Masonic Temple, 220 East 15th street. Lectures and discussions. The public cordially invited.

The Newark Liberal League
Meets every Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Liberal League Hall, 177 Halsey st., cor. Market st., Newark, N. J. Lectures and discussions on religious and social questions. Seats free and everybody welcome.

American Secular Union, Newark Branch.
124 Market street. Assembles every Sunday evening at 7.30. Lectures, debates, and discussions on all important secular subjects. President, HENRY BIRD; Secretary, CORA BELLE FLAGG.

Brooklyn Philosophical Association
Meets at Fraternity rooms, Bedford avenue and South 2d street, Brooklyn, E. D., at 3 P.M., every Sunday. Lectures followed by discussion. Platform free. Charles Monholland, secretary, 248 Broadway, Brooklyn, E. D.

Philadelphia Liberal League 257
meets every Sunday in Industrial Hall, Broad and Wood sts., at 2:30 and 7:30 P.M. for lectures and free discussions on religious and social questions. Able speakers interest the audience. N.B.—Truth Seeker publications always on hand at cheap rates.

The Secular Society of Kent, O.,
Meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 2 P.M., at the town hall. All friends of human cultivation are invited. MARIUS HEIGHTON, Sec.

Elizur Wright Secular Union
Of Alliance, O., meets the first and fourth Sundays of each month at Independent Church, at 10:30 A.M. Free discussion on all Liberal subjects. Subscriptions to THE TRUTH SEEKER and Investigator are solicited. R. G. SMITH, Cor. Sec.

Chicago Secular Union
Meets every Sunday evening at 7:30 P.M., at Princess Opera House, 558 West Madison street. Lectures and debates. Strangers from abroad are welcome.

Milwaukee, Wis., Liberal Club
Holds meetings every Sunday evening at 216 Grand ave., (Fraternity Hall). Lecture followed by debates. The public cordially invited.

Brotherhood of Moralists, No. 903, Prairie City, Ia.,
Meets every Sunday in the Liberal reading-room hall at 2:30 P.M. All Liberals are cordially invited. F. V. DRAPER, Cor. Sec.

The Minneapolis Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M., at 412 Nicollet ave., Rooms 12 and 14, Eastman block, Minneapolis, Minn. J. F. MACOMBER, Pres.; LEROY BERRIER, Sec.

Des Moines Secular Union
Holds regular meetings at Good Templar Hall, Flynn Block, S.E. corner 7th and Locust streets. Lectures followed by discussion. Friends from abroad heartily welcome.
FRANKLIN STEINER, Pres.

San Francisco, Cal., Freethought Society
Meets every Sunday evening at Union Square Hall, 421 Post street, at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Seats free.

Port Angeles Secular Union
Meets every Sunday at 7:30 P.M. in the public school building in Port Angeles, Wash. Lectures, songs, and select reading. Discussion invited on all subjects. Liberal literature distributed free. FRANK MORSE, Cor. Sec.

The West End Progressive Liberal Union
Of Los Angeles, Cal., meets semi-monthly, first and third Sundays, at 8 o'clock, P.M., at Parr's Hall. Everybody invited. MRS. R. M. BERRA, Pres.; J. H. MCWILLIAMS, Rec. Sec.

The Walla Walla Liberal Club
Meets every Sunday at 2 P.M. in Grand Army hall, Main street, Walla Walla, Washington. Science Lectures.—Free Discussions.—Original and Selected Readings and Poems. A large valuable library is at the service of members and friends. C. B. REYNOLDS, Pres.; A. W. CALDER, Sec.

The Roeder Secular Union
Of Roeder, Wash., meets every first and third Sunday in the month, at the Roeder school-house. Lectures, discussions, reading, and poems. The greatest freedom accorded to all. Our motto, "Universal Mental Liberty." D. E. RICE, Pres.; J. W. BELL, Vice-Pres.; CHARLES SHEA, Sec.

New Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

MEN, WOMEN & GODS.

BY HELEN H. GARDENER,

Introduction by

ROBERT G. INGERSOLL.

Price, Cloth, 1.00; Paper, 50 cents.

The Trade Supplied at Special Discounts.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

Photographs of Miss Gardener are for sale at this office. Price, 50 cents.

SING, BROTHERS, SING.

USE THE

LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK

In your meetings, to make them lively and interesting. THE LIBERAL HYMN-BOOK contains songs by the best poets, adapted to well-known tunes. It is highly recommended by Messrs. Wakeman, Parton, Wright, Green, Underwood, Mrs. Slenker, and, indeed, by all who hav examined it. Price, 25 cents. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

News of the Week.

MRS. MARY HOLCOMB, of Augusta, Minn., applying for a divorce, testified that her husband is a God-fearing man, and they used to hav devotional exercises out of a large family Bible. But after the exercises he would use the massiv book as a weapon to maul the entire family with. Judge Hicks granted the divorce.

THE census quarrel continues.

THE Conservativ or Catholic party gained the elections in Spain.

GENERAL SHERMAN died on the 14th, of erysipelas, aged seventy-one.

BELGIUM, Spain, Portugal, and Old Servia hav had popular uprisings.

JAMES REDPATH died on the 10th, aged fifty-eight, from being run over by a street-car.

BRAZIL and the United States hav concluded a reciprocity treaty by which they will admit certain articles free.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND dignitaries are alarmed at the increase of civil marriages, and will work for amendment of marriage laws.

PROFESSOR HENOCH of the University of Berlin has given Koch's lymph to twenty-two children, of whom only one improved, while several grew worse.

THE Catholic University of America has failed to secure St. George Mivart, the opponent of evolution before whom, Catholics say, "Darwin and Huxley recoiled."

Two clergymen of the Swedish state church hav introduced in the Swedish parliament a bill to allow persons to leave the state church without entering another.

THE Missouri Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Atchison railways may unite, under Gould and others, aggregating 35,354 miles of road, or one-fifth of all in the Union.

BUENOS AYRES will erect a statue to Columbus, and the pope has addressed that city on the subject, failing, however, to mention the opposition of his church to that discoverer.

To protect the Greek Catholic church of Russia from proselyting by Mennonites, members of the latter sect hav been forbid to keep mills, inns, or any like places which they can use for propaganda.

HENRY STRAGER, a rich farmer near Flatwoods, Pa., says the Lord appeared to him a few days ago and commanded him to sell all he had and giv to the poor. He is disposing of his property at very low prices.

THE pope has got up gold medals for the surviving Papal Zouaves who in 1870 defended Rome and the papal power against the forces of the cause of Italian nationality. There are a dozen in New York, nearly all of Irish nativity.

ON the increase of Catholics in Australia from 450,000 in 1876 to 750,000, a leading member of their faith remarks: "If our holy religion continues to augment thus for thirty years half the population of the Southern continent will be Catholic."

IT is said that the Columbian Exposition will be attended with many pecuniary difficulties and in the end prove a financial failure, and that Chicago cannot even raise money to erect the buildings. Chicagoans, however, take an opposit view.

A SENSATION is being created in North Carolina by Alex. McCallum, a negro preacher. He seems to hav a memory as remarkable as Blind Tom's faculty for music. He can, it is said, repeat any part of the Bible, or the whole book, word for word. Nine years ago he declared on coming out of a trance at a camp-meeting that this power had been given him by inspiration. Preachers censured him, saying that he was possessed by devils.

THE ante-mortem statement of Lotta Townsend, of Fishkill, N. Y., whom Rev. Harry George seduced and then led to undergo aborticide, sets forth that he entered her room and knelt by her bed in prayer, and after calling on the Lord to help him in his domestic troubles, dishonored her. Stories of theft and suspected arson in the past life of the preacher now come out. He has always been aggressiv in missionary work against the unbelieving and impenitent, and has held high charges.

WORLD'S SAGES, THINKERS AND REFORMERS.

Biographies of 300 of the Leading Philosophers, Teachers, Skeptics, Innovators, Founders of New Schools of Thought, Eminent Scientists, etc. (who were not Christians), from the time of Menu to the present. 8vo, 1,075pp., cloth, $3; leather, $4; mor., g. e., $4.50.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, N. Y.

GODS AND RELIGIONS OF ANCIENT AND MODERN TIMES

Vol. I. Givs a Full Account of all the Gods, including Jehovah, Satan, the Holy Ghost, Jesus Christ, Virgin Mary, and the Bible. 8vo, 835pp. Vol. II. Describes Fully all the Religious Systems of the World. 8vo, 957pp. Cloth, $3 per vol.; the 2 vols., $5; leather, $7; morocco, gilt edges, $8.

BY D. M. BENNETT.

THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.

SOLOMON IS ANOINTED.

And Zadoc the priest took a horn of oil out of the tabernacle, and anointed Solomon. And they blew the trumpet; and all the people said, God save King Solomon. And all the people came up after him; and the people piped with pipes, and rejoiced with great joy, so that the earth rent with the sound of them.—1 Kings i, 39, 40.

IS THIS YOUR SON, MY LORD?

A NEW NOVEL,

By HELEN H. GARDENER.

"The shame itself doth call for instant remedy."

A Fascinating Story of Radical Truths on Religion and Social Matters.

Cloth, $1; paper, 50 cents.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New York.

What Would Follow THE Effacement of Christianity?

BY GEORGE JACOB HOLYOAKE.

Price, 10 cents a copy; twelve copies for $1.

Address THE TRUTH SEEKER CO.,
28 Lafayette Place, New Yo

Liberty in Literature.

By ROBT. G. INGERSOLL.

Address at the Testimonial to Walt Whitman.

Price, 25 cents; cloth, 50 cents. Published at this office.

GIRARD'S WILL AND Girard College Theology.

AN EXPOSÉ

Of the perversion of Stephen Girard's magnificent bequest to Philadelphia by the Christian churches and Young Men's Christian Association.

By RICH. B. WESTBROOK, D.D., LL.D.

Price $1. Address THE TRUTH SEEKER.

AGENTS make 100 PER CENT. profit, on my Corsets, Belts, Brushes, Curlers and novelties. Samples FREE. Write now. Dr. Bridgman, 373 Broadway, N.Y.

Gems of Thought.

WELCOME . . . the beauty of independence, departure, actions that rely on themselvs,
The American contempt for statutes and ceremonies, the boundless impatience of restraint.—Walt Whitman.

THERE is in the world at large an increasing inclination to stretch unduly the powers of society over the individual, both by the force of opinion and even by that of legislation; and as the tendency of all the changes taking place in the world is to strengthen society, and diminish the power of the individual, this encroachment is not one of the evils which tend spontaneously to disappear, but on the contrary to grow more and more formidable.—Mill.

UTILITY teaches that the general happiness is to be the aim of the individual.—Annie Besant.

THE standard of Utilitarianism is not the agent's own individual happiness, but the greatest amount of happiness altogether.—Mill.

THE current religion is indirectly adverse to morals because it is adverse to the freedom of the intellect. But it also directly adverse to morals by inventing spurious and bastard virtues.—Winwood Reade.

IT is hurtful for people to imagin that they can please God by any ceremony whatever. If there is any God, there is only one way to please him, and that is, by a conscientious discharge of your obligations to your fellow-men.—Ingersoll.

SUBMISSION to injustice is a vice instead of a virtue, and he who thinks it a merit to signalize his unworldliness by failing to assert his own rights encourages oppression and fraud and endangers the rights of his honest fellow-men.—Prof. Felix Oswald.

THE insolence of the aggressor is usually proportioned to the tameness of the sufferer.—Ames.

IN Protestant Europe, Canada, and the United States the whole Mosaic cosmogony, with its flat-earth theory, creation of man, etc., as taught in Genesis, has been destroyed by Copernicus, Newton, Laplace, and Darwin; slavery has been abolished; witches are no longer burnt at the stake; polygamy is discontinued; and human sacrifice, adultery, murder, rapin, theft, and personal assaults are no longer justified. Hence the people of these countries ought not to be called Christians, but skeptics.—Dr. Hardwicke.

THE general doctrins of Christianity hav undergone many changes, and in some cases and among some sects little except the name survives.—Arthur B. Moss.

To the World's Columbian Exposition Commission:

Learning that there is an organized movement among the more conservative church people—manipulated by a "Sabbath" organization—to induce your honorable body to close on Sundays the World's Fair, to be held in 1893 in Chicago, the undersigned respectfully put in this counter petition, and ask that the Fair may be open to the public on each Sunday of its continuance. We ask this for the following reasons:

1. That the American principle of separation of church and state may be maintained.

2. That public morality may be subserved by providing a substitute for the immoral places to which men may resort when no moral amusements are available.

3. As a matter of justice also to the people of Chicago who have given of their means to make the Fair possible, tens of thousands of whom can visit the Fair only on a general holiday; and as a matter of justice also to the visitors to the Fair, whose time or means may be limited, and who certainly are entitled to great consideration at your hands.

4. For the public good. The opening of the Fair on Sunday will be for the benefit not only of Chicago, but of the whole country. The rights of no one are infringed, the happiness of no one disturbed. Those who wish to attend can do so; those who do not can otherwise spend the day. This is a solely humanitarian question, a question of human relations and human welfare, and, therefore, the only standard by which you can decide is that of the public welfare.

5. It will benefit the Fair, attracting a much larger attendance, interesting more people in it, and increasing its receipts.

6. To the objection that Sunday opening of the Fair will destroy the day as a rest-day, we affirm that the tendency would be exactly the opposite. The more beautiful you make Sunday, the more attractive, the more noble and varied in its pleasures and instructions, the more difficult it will be to change its character, the less danger there is that employers will ever have the power to transfer it from its present position to the days of toil. With choice of Sunday occupation restricted to attending church or visiting a saloon, the average workingman would choose to keep on laboring.

7. Finally: Opening the World's Fair on Sunday will harm no one but the keepers of immoral places, while it will benefit the Fair itself, the people of Chicago, and the visitors to the Fair, thereby conducing to municipal prosperity, individual education, public morality, and the development and good of the whole country.

Name.	Town.	State.

THE TRUTH SEEKER

A JOURNAL OF FREETHOUGHT AND REFORM.

Entered at the Post-Office at New York, N. Y., as Second-class Matter.

Vol. 18. No. 9. {PUBLISHED WEEKLY.} New York, Saturday, February 28, 1891. {28 LAFAYETTE PL} $3.00 per year.

A BIT OF HISTORY.—IRELAND SOLD TO HENRY II. OF ENGLAND BY POPE ADRIAN IV.

Notes and Clippings.

THE cow-punchers of Oregon are swearing vehemently because a bill has been introduced in the legislature of the state to prohibit profane language.

SAYS Colonel Ingersoll in an interview in the Minneapolis Journal: "There are a lot of men in this world who think they are d——d important. But they aren't."

AT the Baltimore Baptist conference it was admitted by Rev. A. Rowland that as long as the Bible remains in the public schools the Catholics will hav just cause for com plaint.

WM. HUGHES, of New York, on receiving sentence for procuring fraudulent divorces addressed the court thus: "Our Lord and savior has promised that though our sins be as scarlet they shall be made whiter than snow."

A CORRESPONDENT of Our Day, writing of Pennsylvania, says: "In no other state hav I found so many post-offices that do not open on the Sabbath." Then in no other state, adds the American Sentinel, has he found so many postmasters violating the law which provides that post-offices shall be opened a portion of every day.

THE Bennett law repeal measure was signed by Governor Peck, of Wisconsin, on the 5th inst., in the presence of a number of leading men of the state. A brand-new gold pen, and green ink, were used. The pen has been placed in the vaults of the executiv mansion, there to be kept for all time as a souvenir of the event.

CONGRESS has gained a valuable addition in the person of Rev. Jas. Kyle, Senator from South Dakota, who in a speech on the last Fourth of July said: "Our nation cannot be divorced from religion. It is incorporated into all her institutions. It was an honor to the founder of the Christian religion that he demanded entire obedience to the powers that be."

"INDISCREET financiering" is the name given to the fault which resulted in the removal from his office and ministry of a bishop of the United Brethren in Kansas. Several able clergymen hav seriously impaired their usefulness and compromised their character by notorious conduct in money matters that is charitably indicated by the words "indiscreet financiering."—Observer.

THE pope will shortly issue an encyclical dealing with the Socialist upheaval and with its relations to Catholic Christendom. We are told that the pope's purpose is to break the union which now exists upon the continent between Socialism and Atheism, and to recall workingmen to the fold of the great Communist, whose views of wealth and of its proper distribution are set forth by the evangelists.

A DISPATCH from Philadelphia, February 16 h, says: "The state supreme court to-day affirmed the decision of the court of quarter sessions in the case of the commonwealth vs. Waldman, and thus upheld the law against barbers shaving on Sunday. Waldman had been fined by a magistrate and he appealed from the decision. The court intimated that while shaving on Sunday might be a necessity they had nothing to do but to interpret the law as they found it.

A BILL has been introduced into the Connecticut legislature, providing that every person who shall keep open any warehouse, or manufacturing or mechanical establishment, or any commercial establishment, other than a drug store, or engage in any public sport, on Sunday, between sunrise and sunset, shall be fined not more than $4, nor less than $1. The bill was referred to the committee on judiciary.

TWENTY converts to a Block Island, R. I., church were being baptized through a hole cut in the ice, when a well-known Newport lady, who was visiting the island, and who chanced to witness the ceremony, wanted to stop the baptism. She became quite excited, declaring that the converts would become the victims of pneumonia and die. She was informed that it was the ancient custom of the island and of the Baptist church, and that it made no difference how the mercury stood, the baptism always occurred when arranged for.

COL. ROBERT G. INGERSOLL has returned from his Western excursion, and explained the report sent from Minneapolis that he was to meet Ignatius Donnelly in joint debate, Donnelly to defend his Baconian cryptogram and the colonel to uphold the Shaksperean end of the controversy. "I was asked to meet Mr. Donnelly," said the colonel, "and debate this question, and I declined. I did so because Mr. Donnelly claims that he has discovered a cipher for Shakspere. Well, it is his duty to establish the truth of his cipher or theory, and not to precipitate a debate on it. I am in the world for facts and not for theories."

ARCHBISHOP JANSSEN, of the diocese embracing New Orleans, has issued a pastoral letter speaking thus of secret societies: "Some of these secret societies bear a close resemblance to the sect of the Masons; they claim a chaplain, who, without authority, ministers to the living and to the dead; they use rites and ceremonies which many consider a good enough substitute for religion; they prescribe oaths by which members abdicate their liberty and promis to obey all orders that may be given them from a supreme, a grand, or other lodge, and the members invoke upon themselvs all the anguish and torments possible for men to suffer if they fail in their obligations. Again, these societies are generally officered by men who belong to the Masons. Daily experience abundantly teaches that these secret and dangerous societies root up faith in positiv religion; they lead men to belittle the teachings of Christianity and to abandon the practice of their religious duties. As a rule, Catholics, when joining these societies, soon cease to hear mass on Sundays, cease to frequent the sacraments, and the spirit of evil infatuation takes such a hold on some that they would prefer leaving the church to God rather than to giv up such dangerous associations. In the confessional penitents should be urged to leave such societies. At the funeral of a member of such a society no rites or ceremonies peculiar to the society can be tolerated, and the priest is forbidden to attend the funeral whenever such ceremonies hav been performed before or are to be performed after the services of the church. The clergy are also forbidden to officiate whenever any of these societies attend the funeral in regalia."

Communications.

Is the Genealogy of Christ a True Record?

If Christ was celestially begotten, then why hav the gospel writers of the books of Matthew and Luke given us Joseph's pedigree, if they did not suppose that he was the father of Christ? For if Christ was not a son of Joseph, and had no natural father, he could not be a natural descendant from Joseph's ancestors, consequently he could not be of the lineage of David or of the tribe of Juda, especially if his mother was of the tribe of Levi, and his only earthly parent, and her name is not on either of the genealogical lists. But suppose he was the son of Joseph and a descendant from David, if so, what then becomes of his divinity?

Notwithstanding how these two writers hav each of them picked out the names which are inserted in the two different lists, they are nevertheless erroneous and untrue beyond all dispute. They contradict each other in every particular, which is an absolute proof of falsehood.

In the book of Matthew, chapter i, we hav on the list but twenty-seven names from David to Joseph; however, in that distance of time it would more likely amount to nearly twice that number. This writer has selected the names of the kings of Juda, except some left out by mistake, for in his list he says that Joram begat Ozia. But we are informed in several places in the Old Testament that Joram was dead and buried about sixty-one years before Ozia was born, and that Amazia was his father. So in that space of time between Joram and Ozia, the names of three successiv generations are left out of the genealogical list, besides others here and there omitted.

But it is no more difficult for a priest-ridden Christian to believe that Ozia was born sixty-one years after his father's death, than to believe a man could hav been born of two mothers, or that a man could build a city after he had been dead ten years, and that a man was born two years previous to the birth of his father, besides a great number of other absurd stories too numerous to mention. Yet the priest makes his dupes believe that God is the author of such nonsense. Why are the priests so terribly opposed to Bible investigation unless they are afraid of being detected in their skilful deception, and fear their income diminished?

However, we must consider that the book of Matthew was not written until more than one hundred and fifty years after the time Joseph is supposed to hav lived, and then some parts were translated from Joseph's dreams, and of course almost anyone knows how easy it is to giv a true account of what another man dreams, especially since so long a time had passed after Joseph, Christ, and all the apostles were dead. So it is no wonder if the book of Matthew is not in conformity to truth.

We will now see how Luke agrees with Matthew in regard to Joseph's genealogy, and then compare the two accounts together. Maybe the writer of Luke can be better relied upon, because his narrativs are not founded upon dreams. However, should anyone doubt his word, then as for proof read the three first verses of his gospel, where it will be seen that his motiv was to write a biography of Christ, not that he was an eye-witness, so that he could know anything about the character of Christ, and not that he was inspired to write it, but because he himself and many others believed the tales which were then in circulation. Such is the evidence given by the writer himself, yet it is about as good as that of a dream. Most likely the four gospels originated nearly in the same way, though they are now said to be the word of God.

In the first chapter of his book we are informed that a girl got to fooling with a ghost and brought a boy into the family. It is fortunate for the clergy that it did not turn out to be a girl, as it has proved very profitable to them.

Now, since the book of Luke is introduced with such assurance of its reliability, we will now see how accurately it is in harmony with that of Matthew in respect to Christ's or his father's pedigree.

Luke has on his list the names which from Joseph to David make forty-two generations, while Matthew has but twenty-seven names from Joseph to David on his list; besides, there are only two names of Joseph and David that are alike in the two lists.

Now, since these two writers so much disagree that they did not even agree upon who was the father of Joseph, how then can it be expected that they could know anything about the more remote ancestors, especially if they believed that Christ did not hav any ancestors in this world, and that he was of the same age as his father, and much older than his mother? However, that could be no reason for making such absolute contradictiv record of Joseph's pedigree, had they known their business. No doubt when these two pedigree-compilers first got the idea into their heads, there had so long a period of time passed away that all traces of Joseph's pedigree were lost, which in some degree may account for the errors in their registers.

Nevertheless it seems very strange that these two writers tell us that Christ was the son of God, begotten by a ghost, and yet they hav given us his genealogy through Joseph. If they did not believe that Joseph was his father, and again if they believed that Christ had no earthly father, why did they not giv us his mother's genealogy instead of that of Joseph? However, since they hav made such blunders of Joseph's genealogy, can we suppose they had any better knowledge of her descent?

Such is the harmony between the writers of the books of Matthew and Luke as represented in the commencement of their history of Jesus Christ; and now since we are convinced of their falsehood, and that they in the very beginning of their enterprise hav given us such glaring absurdities and contradictions as hardly can be found in any story upon record, if they cannot be believed in the very first thing they say, how can we believe what they hav said afterward? And since they hav lied about Christ in their account of his natural state, how then can we expect they could tell the truth about his heavenly mission, of which they could know nothing at all by any means? And according to their own testimony they knew no more about his earthly mission than what they had obtained from tales and doubtful reports, besides the fabrications invented by designing priests.

Now after you hav read this article in a critical manner, and also hav carefully read the four gospels, and can still firmly believe all that is there said and promised, then your faith must be as strong as any mustard seed ever produced, if not a trifle stronger, and if your faith is up to the standard pitch you are entitled to the miraculous power as promised in the gospels, and that is simply for you to believe that you can perform anything whatever (you really know to be absolutely impossible, for that which is possible for man to do is no miracle). However, if you are unable to remove mountains, or stand a full dose of poison, and cure all manner of diseases, then you are either not a true believer or else the promises are totally worthless. Take it either way you like.

Omaha, Neb. A. JACOBSON.

The Cause in Washington.

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Washington Secular Union will be held at G. A. R. Hall, Hinckley Block, corner of Second and Columbia streets, Seattle, on Sunday, Feb. 22, 1891.

Morning session at 10 o'clock—music; address of welcome; reports of secretary, treasurer, and board of directors, giving account of what has been accomplished by the organization during the past year; short speeches by delegates and members on "The best methods of effecting 'our aims and objects.'"

Afternoon session at 2 o'clock—election of officers; address by Mrs. F. C. Reynolds; five-minute speeches by delegates and members on "Ways and means."

Evening at 7:30—music; recitations by little Stella Langdon; lecture by Rev. H. Hangurud, the fearless and eloquent exponent of Freethought, subject, "The Lives of Great Thinkers, and the Treatment They Hav Received at the Hands of the Church."

The Washington Secular Union, despite many obstacles and discouragements, has done much good and effectiv work. The organization is an established fact, and its influence recognized and respected by press and politicians.

The Washington Secular Union is practical, aggressiv, sails under no false colors. It is an avowed organization of Infidels. While respecting the opinions and sentiments of all individuals, "it regards the Christian church as our organized enemy, and that it is through its teachings that the evils we are working to abolish hav been established. Emancipate the mind from religious superstition, and the entire Secular battle is won."

The general object of the Union is to prevent the union of church and state, to the end that equal rights may be established, protected, and perpetuated; and as a means to accomplish this general object the specific objects of the Washington Secular Union will be to continue to urge the adoption of such measures as are necessary to effect the complete Secularization of the government in all its departments, and secure to all the full liberty of their opinions on the subject of religion, whatever they may be, without molestation, disability, or deprivation of any political or civil rights; to advocate the taxation of church property; the total discontinuance of religious instruction and worship in the public schools; the repeal of all laws enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath; the cessation of all appropriations of public funds for religious institutions or purposes of any kind; the abolition of state-paid chaplaincies; the substitution of simple affirmation under the pains and penalties of perjury for the judicial oath; the non-appointment of religious fasts, festivals, and holidays by public authority; and the practical establishment of simple morality and intelligence as the basis of purely secular government; and to make the organization a real benefit and protection to every one of its members in every part of the state, so that in case of religious persecution or wrong, injury, or injustice done to any member of this organization on account of opinions held or expressed on the subject of religion, or for refusal to conform to any religious rite or ceremony, the whole force and power of the united Liberals of the entire state shall be brought to bear in defending, securing, and maintaining his or her legal rights. The Washington Secular Union insists that contributors to its funds hav the sole right of decision as to how such funds shall be expended; and that the opinions of its members expressed in convention overrule all wishes or opinions of the officers, who are the servants, not dictators, of the members; and that all resolutions and instructions of the conventions must be obeyed and carried out in good faith. Officers who are dissatisfied or unwilling to obey instructions, always hav privilege to resign.

Every Infidel in the state has a personal interest in the work of the Washington Secular Union. Church-members willingly giv of their means, and weeks of their time, to aid the cause of superstition. The Liberals of Washington, one and all, each and every one, are earnestly requested to attend the annual meeting to be held at Seattle, Feb. 22, 1891, one day for the cause. A large attendance at the morning session will hav great influence on press, public, and politicians, as well as upon our enemies. A small attendance will undo much that has been accomplished, bring discouragement to the faithful, self-sacrificing workers, and render the enemy jubilant. Liberals of Washington, man and woman alike, you cannot afford to injure the cause by your absence. Come and aid in the achievement of a glorious victory.

I hav made two lecture trips to Victoria, B. C., under the auspices of that most genial of Liberals, Wm. Jensen. Victoria is the unrivaled queen city of British Columbia, the peerless gem of Vancouver island. It is of a verity a most beautiful city, with superb scenery, magnificent park, delightsome drives, broad avenues and wide streets, stately mansions and cosy, picturesque dwelling-houses, and in the lower or business section stately edifices devoted to trade. Her twenty-two thousand inhabitants evince all the persistent determination and stick-to-it-ivness of the Briton that has become from association imbued with the push and energy of the American.

Victoria carries on trade with the United States, Great Britain, Australia, China, Peru, Chili, Sandwich islands, Japan, and Mexico, in coal, fish, hides, lumber, and furs. Among the leading resources of the town apart from its position as a government, social, and educational center and a manufacturing and commercial city, may be named the sealing interest, the fishing and Indian trade of the northwest coast, and the fur trade of the Hudson Bay Company.

Esquimalt harbor affords the most perfect shelter. The anchorage is very large, and the approach can be made blindfold, so wide is the channel and so regular are the soundings. The government navy yard is located here, with a dry dock that cost $900,000. Last year twenty-two British and eight foreign sealing schooners brought to this port 35,310 skins, valued at $247,170. Nearly seventy thousand tourists visited the city last summer. And now, to crown her many attractions, our two courses of lectures were so well attended and aroused so much enthusiasm that on my last evening with them I organized the Victoria Secular Union, with thirty-one names, with James Duck, late minister of finance for the Dominion, for president; Wm. Jensen for treasurer, and Mr. Hastings for secretary. The membership includes some of the most highly respected and influential citizens of Victoria. Standing-room was at a premium at the lectures. It is conceded even by our opponents that the Opera House would be crowded if a lecture was announced there. The executiv committee are engaged in securing a suitable hall for the society's meetings, and propose to secure the services of our better half, Mrs. F. C. Reynolds, immediately after the Washington Secular Union's annual meeting.

The Sunday fanatics are at work there, and are getting signatures to petitions to the government to enforce rigid Sunday observance. I secured a formidable list of names to a counter-petition, and was astonished on reading the heading of the petition prepared by our Liberal friends to find an extract from a proclamation of Queen Victoria to her subjects in 1858, in which the British queen puts to shame the goody-goody Sunday-school administration of the free and independent United States: "Firmly relying ourselvs on the truths of Christianity and acknowledging with gratitude the solace of religion, we disclaim alike the right and the desire to impose our convictions on any of our subjects. We declare it to be our royal will and pleasure that none be in any wise favored, none molested, or disquieted, by reason of their religious faith or observance, but that all shall alike enjoy the equal and impartial protection of the law; and we do strictly charge and enjoin all those who may be in authority under us, that they abstain from all interference with the religious belief or worship of any of our subjects on pain of our highest displeasure." This is genuin Liberalism—no matter what the views or opinions of the powers that be, there is no desire to impose their convictions on others. It is to be hoped that the Sunday fanatics of the United States will take pattern after her most Christian majesty and that they too will themselvs practice the Golden Rule and do as they would be done by.

May success attend the Victoria Secular Union.

C. B. REYNOLDS.

Lock Box 5, Freemont, Wash.

Recent Gems from the Religious Press.

The Christian at Work, referring to the discussion now going on in many Protestant religious journals in regard to the doctrin of papal infallibility being repudiated by the Catholic church thirty-five years ago, whereas now it is accepted, says:

As a rule, whatever the Roman church may be, it is nothing if not logical. The council was confronted by a dilemma. It must either make the infallibility dogma retroactiv or it must not. It decided wisely to fly in the face of its own history (although one of its own ecumenical councils had pronounced Pope Honorius a heretic), and held that all popes, past, present, and future, were, are, and will be infallible.

We cite the approval of the Christian at Work of this decision as an apt illustration of pious "logic" and clerical wisdom. The Catholic council were in the same position that the early Christians were when book after book was presented to be added to the "word of God" until finally they were all bunched together and canonized, and although for the most part they are mere copies of more ancient fabulous legends, yet the big, broad seal of the church stamps them with the monogram of a God "no fellow can find out."

The Christian at Work meant to say that it admired the politics of the Roman church in claiming infallibility for "all" the popes, just as the Christian politicians hav claimed a supernatural origin for all the books of the Bible. That's good politics—claim everything.

The Christian Inquirer reproduces from the Arena extracts from an article entitled, "The Rum Curse," in which is the following:

Rum is criminalizing the poverty-stricken world. The great deadly shadow which rests so heavily over the teeming, seething, struggling millions is the despair of the philanthropist.

What are we doing with a "poverty-stricken world?"

Hav the crops failed? No.

Is there not enough land to produce sufficient for the sustenance of all? Oh, yes, and to spare.

Then the earth is rich with fruitage, and man is poverty-stricken and fast becoming criminalized by rum?

"That is just about the size of it."

Curious anomaly, isn't it?

And this too in an age of Christian civilization, with its home and foreign missions, its shouting evangelists, its towering steeples, its magnificent cathedrals, its infallible pope, its thousands of very reverend gentlemen who draw big crowds and large salaries, and after all to be "a poverty-stricken world, criminalized by rum!" What does Christian civilization mean?

Must we find the answer in the condition of the "seething, struggling millions" who find temporary oblivion from these horrible environments in rum? That is the million-tongued answer—this is the "harvest of human souls" living under the benign "radiancy of the gospel." Eighteen hundred and ninety-one years of Christianity, and what a spectacle!

Has Christianity ever done anything for the general welfare of humanity?

Never.

Our friend of the Arena is wrong. "The clergy, lit by divine love," could not exterminate intemperance. Nor can all the prohibitory laws that were ever framed eliminate the drunkard from this country, nor abolish the sale of liquor, but if these effusiv Prohibitionists will stop battling an effect and attack the cause of intemperance, they will find it in the poverty of the millions. Abolish poverty by establishing justice, open up the vacant land for idle hands to plow, let the labor market for once seek laborers and find them scarce—then will intemperance cease as a colossal evil and "horrible examples" become a rarity.

The Christian Intelligencer takes Archdeacon Farrar to task for uttering these words, "No one has ventured to push the metaphor 'Abraham's bosom' into a tenth part of the extremes into which thousands hav pushed the equally metaphorical word 'Gehenna.'" Says the Intelligencer:

We entirely dissent. Abraham's bosom has universally been interpreted to mean a place of repose and honor and bliss, while Gehenna has justly been regarded as a place of penal suffering and final retribution, which is strictly correct. It is a very sad thing to see men of Dr. Farrar's position seeking to evaporate its significance under the plea that it is a metaphor. It is the most certain and fearful of all realities.

We are, then, to accept both Abraham's bosom and Gehenna as realities. I hav had the misfortune to know several Abrahams in my experience, and although I never rested on their malodorous shirt fronts, nor noticed any room there for the repose of quite a number of million of saints, yet, nevertheless, these particular Abrahams kept a "place" where property could "repose" at three per cent a month, and it is quite vivid in my recollections that, on my way thither, I could not possibly hav felt worse had I been going to Gehenna instead of to Abraham's.

Dr. Farrar wants to abolish both places, Abraham's bosom and Gehenna. He has my sympathy. He probably knows Abraham as well as the rest of us, but why the Intelligencer should feel so "very sad" about Gehenna's being turned into a mythical metaphor, I can account for only on the general supposition that it is the devil's territory, and therefore under the loving care of our mother church.

The Freeman's Journal exults over the rather extraordinary address of Dr. Charles A. Briggs at his recent installation as professor of biblical theology in the Presbyterian Union Theological Seminary in this city. It quotes from the address the following: "Superstition is no less superstition if it takes the form of bibliolatry. It may be all the worse if it concentrates itself upon this one thing." And also: "Another fault of Protestant theology is in its limitation of redemption to this world."

The Journal observes:

Dr. Briggs inclines, perhaps unconsciously, to Catholic views in his repudiation of what he calls bibliolatry, the peculiar vice of Protestantism, and also to his adoption of an intermediate state between heaven and hell.

Here's a how-do-you-do, a theologic muddle, a Catholic upholding a Presbyterian, and a Congregationalist yelling at them both for their apostasy. The Independent is shocked at Dr. Briggs's levity in making a joke at the expense of the Bible. "The Bible," says Dr. Briggs, "is no better than a mass book for stopping a bullet, and is not as good as holy water for putting out a fire." This coming from a newly made professor of theology just entering upon his duties as a teacher of its indeterminate elasticity, is simply horrible, and we do not wonder that the Independent is convulsed with inward throes of pious horror at such a spectacle. "Between reason and the Bible," says this saintly paper, "we will take the Bible and the Westminster Confession of Faith, as a supernatural revelation from God; if this be 'bibliolatry,' so be it." Dr. Briggs has his choice—the half-way house 'twixt heaven and hell, which the Catholic church offers, or a snap judgment at death, which settles the business for us poor shivering wretches. Yet stay, there is a way out of his dilemma. Instead of poking fun at parts of the Bible let him search and find it all a huge joke which humanity has long regarded in earnest.

The Christian Advocate publishes the fact of a Spiritual medium and his wife being sentenced to fifteen months' imprisonment for swindling an old widower out of several thousand dollars on the plea that his dead wife wanted it to use in heaven.

This is quite the proper thing to do, but why not imprison other swindlers who prey upon the credulity of mankind? Why is not the priest arrested who takes money from poor dupes for masses for the repose of the souls of the dead? He can be as easily convicted of fraud as the Spiritual mountebank. In fact, their cases are exactly analogous—one takes the money for the use of the dead, the other pays it for the repose of the dead. Both are incapable of proving before a court of inquiry the slightest iota of truth in their promises to their victims. And, to go still further in the line of equity and fair play, why are not the dispensers of "salvation," who are supported by money from "believers" in their Spiritual séances, made to stand up in a court of law and prove that they do save somebody from a locatable hell? If we are to imprison venders of one form of superstition, why not imprison the peddlers of all forms? Otherwise we protest against the prosecution of the Spiritualistic frauds, and stamp their imprisonment as an outrage upon the right of an individual to become a victim when it so pleases him.

The Christian Union, in an article by Lyman Abbott, D.D., entitled, "Elijah Taken to Heaven," says, "If anyone doubts or denies the truth of the story it is not worth while to argue it with him."

Of course not, for if the dissenter happened to be versed in Hebrew mythology or had read Goldzhier on that subject, he would know that this fable proceeded directly from the heathen Chinee, whose prophet Ushas ascended upward in a flaming red chariot as did Elijah—a clear case of downright plagiarism from the heathen by the Hebrews. But Dr. Abbott proceeds, "However incredible to the unbeliever this account may be, it ought not to seem incredible to the Christian." Of course not. Having swallowed the whole Christian scheme at one fell gulp, including a creator bringing suffering and crucifixion upon himself, making a devil to combat himself and his creations, providing a hell for the reception of the devil's victims, after digesting these things and pronouncing them good, a little matter like Elijah's ascension can be taken as a dessert and will assimilate in the stomach without trouble.

It is a pitiful sight to see a man of Lyman Abbott's ability the humble apologist of the ancient nightmares of biblical history, but we believe he is evoluting out of the role of an apologist, and will soon emerge into the effulgent sunlight of perfect mental liberty.

The Christian Alliance in an editorial almost makes the blood chill in our veins by the recital of a Christian lady's visit to a horse show and its terrible effect upon her. She was in doubt before she went as to whether it was a proper place for a consecrated Christian to be seen, so she took a seat in the back row, not wishing to be observed by her worldly friends; but she was soon seized with agonizing pains and had to leave the place, and the editor remarks, God made her understand that it was no safe place for a child of his—and right here the editor makes the startling assertion that "there are places and there are places." The reader will please bear this in mind. But he continues, "God says, 'I will make the places round my hill a blessing [he does not tell us where his hill is located], but there are other places which are pitched with the slime of the pit, blistered with its brimstone, it may be death to enter them.'" He further adds, "The writer would not dare to go to a worldly entertainment simply for pleasure, but only when he could save a soul; and once upon attempting to read Robert Ingersoll's books he had such a shower of brimstone over his flesh and soul that he was glad to close the book and leave God to answer the unwholesome blasphemies."

This editor is too utterly good for this world. It is a pity that he had not lived in Elijah's time; he might hav had a chance to steal a ride to heaven on that flaming chariot of fire. It is quite too bad to hav such saintly men die. They are a positiv help to sound philosophy as an exhibition of its living antithesis. But we are surprised to hear that Ingersoll's books hav been dipped in brimstone and shower it over their readers, and also that a horse show "is pitched with the slime of the pit." We advise Mr. Ingersoll to look into this brimstone business; and as to the horse show, why, the board of health shall be notified.

WM. ALLEN SMITH.

Thoughts.

Of public opinion,
Of a calm and cool flat sooner or later (how impassiv! how certain and final!),
Of the president with pale face asking secretly to himself, What will the people say at last?
Of the frivolous judge—of the corrupt congressman, governor, mayor—of such as these standing helpless and exposed,
Of the mumbling and screaming priest (soon, soon deserted),
Of the lessening year by year of venerableness, and of the dicta of officers, statutes, pulpits, schools,
Of the rising forever taller and stronger and broader of the intuitions of men and women, and of self-esteem and personality;
Of the true New World—of the democracies resplendent enmasse,
Of the conformity of politics, armies, navies, to them,
Of the shining sun by them—of the inherent light, greater than the rest,
Of the envelopment of all by them, and the effusion of all from them.

—Walt Whitman.

Facts.

From the Freethinker's Magazine.

Susan H. Wixon's "Children's Corner" in THE TRUTH SEEKER is not only interesting to children, but to adults as well. It adds very much to the value of that large, popular, well-known Freethought journal.

"The Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book," published by the Truth Seeker Company, is having a large sale. We would like to receive orders for it from many of our subscribers. The price is $2.

"HE that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark xvi, 16). No teaching that I hav any knowledge of has been so productiv of evil as this. By making belief a virtue and unbelief a vice, it has been the mainspring of persecution for hundreds of years. It has strangled science and thwarted progress. Christians who unfeignedly believe in this doctrin persecute wherever they hav the power.—Arthur B. Moss.

SEND for catalog of our publications. Sent free on application.

The American Secular Union.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

R. B. WESTBROOK, President. . 1707 Oxford street, Philadelphia.
E. B. FOOTE JR., Vice-President, 120 Lexington ave., New York city.
T. B. WAKEMAN, Vice-President, 93 Nassau street, New York city.
T. W STAUFFER, Vice-President, 1516 Montgomery ave., Phila., Pa.
J. O BENTLEY, Vice-President, . 812 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa.
IDA C. CRADDOCK, Secretary, ... Philadelphia, Pa.
F. C. MENDE, Treasurer. . . . . Philadelphia, Pa.
CORRESPONDING SECRETARY, Ida C. Craddock, Broad and Columbia ave., Philadelphia, Pa.
TREASURER, F. C. Mende, . 1814 Greene street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Open Letter to Mr. Westbrook—Unofficial.

Reading your letter in reply to Mr. Wakeman in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 21st, in which you try to make the worse appear the better reason, I feel impelled to enter the arena once more, for the purpose of showing both sides of the truth, or rather the whole truth. You hav confessedly attempted to vindicate yourself "whoever may suffer from it," and as you hav made me suffer by your reckless use of confidential letters I shall hav to hew to the line and let the chips fall where they may. You hav from the beginning of this discussion shown a willingness to disregard the opinions, feelings, and even rights of others, while yourself giving evidence of the possession of an extremely tender hide that will not bear any irritation without intense reflex action, which, however, sometimes seems to be action without due reflection. You gradually crowded Mr. Charlesworth into such an unpleasant situation that he was goaded to speak out plainly. I hav heretofore been respectful, at least in print, both out of consideration for your seniority and for the peace and prosperity of the American Secular Union, but you hav mistaken my forbearance for timidity, and hav tested the hickory quality of my patience too far.

When you informed me in your "private for the present" letter of December 25 h that Mr. Watts was your dark horse for general field secretary, you blandly asked me to "write frankly," and I hav done so, tempering my frankness according to the purpose and supposed destination of each letter. I hav written you three kinds of letters, and if they were not always properly labeled I depended on your judgment to guide you to a legitimate use of them. Of the first kind was my open (published) letter, proposing that surplus funds should be divided among several suitable secretaries or field agents, etc. That letter Mr. Wakeman gave his assent to. I wrote you another kind of letter to present my views, indorsed by Mr. Wakeman, to a board meeting when it was expected that one would be held when we could be present. Besides these, I wrote personal letters, some of which Mr. Wakeman knew nothing of, and in one of them I said: "I hav written more openly to you than I hav written or talked to anyone else," and again, "My original intent was to invite a confab, not a contest." With that object in view my first open letter did not expose any serious differences in the board, and was a discussion of policies only, not mentioning persons or comparing qualifications. You began indulging in objectionable personalities, which I hav wished to avoid till now. I think it was very inconsiderate to Mr. Watts to hav brought forward his name at all, and to hav involved him in this unpleasantness, but since you hav been so free to quote what I said as to his candidacy that served your purpose, being matter from a private letter, I will be more just with the contents of that letter, and quote from it a sentence that you preferred not to include in your otherwise free quotation. It is this: "Now as to Mr. Watts. I am free to say that I do not know of anyone more likely to fill the bill to the satisfaction of the officers of the American Secular Union, in the capacity of field secretary, but (there are buts) let me first call your attention to the open letter inclosed herewith, which I propose to offer to the Liberal papers for printing; as containing my views in general on the field secretary question—views which hav naturally or spontaneously cropped up since the meeting in Philadelphia, and which would hav been offered in this way without regard to Mr. Watts, or anyone else in particular." The above occurs in the letter in which you discovered other matter more suitable to your purpose of making things very uncomfortable for Mr. Wakeman and myself. If the letter was not marked confidential, its style, and the fact that it was in response to your request to "write frankly," ought to hav saved it from publicity, but when you take such liberties you might at least play fair by quoting all that bears on the question in dispute.

To help you to a full appreciation of the meaning of that sentence I must remind you that "the officers of the American Secular Union" include Wakeman and Foote as well as Westbrook and Co. A fair analysis of that and other letters about the same time will show that our protest was against putting Mr. Watts "to the front," as I said, at a large salary and expenses that would certainly eat up all that we could collect above present expenses. In short, our protest was against your plan rather than your man. I opposed appointing one big man at a big salary, and selecting for that plan one whom I feared could not enlist sufficient support from old-time friends. Mr. Wakeman distinctly said, in a letter which I first saw but lately in print, of Mr. Watts's appointment: "We hav been trying to feel our way to that result without unfairness to others," meaning that he would like to hav him enlisted in the work on a fair basis with others. We hav not made any "strenuous opposition" to him as a secretary, but I hav opposed his appointment on your plan, at $2,000 per year, and your haste to put him in the field the middle of February, saying, "I see no trouble about raising the money." I doubted that the money could be raised, and not wishing to see the American Secular Union founder and leave Mr. Watts stranded, I was ready to do anything except resort to public discussion of persons in order to block your plan, hoping that by a little delay you would learn (what you must now know) that many influential Liberals would take my view of the matter, that you would see that I had sized it up aright, and that then we might find some other course for smooth sailing.

I was anxious to bring methods up for discussion, but did not see the necessity for indulging in disagreeable personalities, nor could I till now. I disclaim all responsibility for what has happened in that line, and hold you responsible for it all.

I hav, in perfect frankness that has offended you, but for your own enlightenment, written to you what I would hav said to your face—things that I do not yet find it "necessary" to print. I much regret that you thought it necessary to vindicate yourself at the expense of others, and, alas, without success.

I supposed that some things might be properly written in private letters that would better not be said in letters to a board, that letters might be written for a board meeting that should not be printed openly, and I trusted that your age and experience had taught you the propriety of discriminating, but since you donned war paint and feathers you hav adopted the motto, "All is fair in war," and employed any weapon that would help you to hew down and walk over those in your path, and perhaps you hav been encouraged so to do by their disposition to let you play warrior alone. Even after you threatened to open your "budget" against me, I wrote my second thought on American Secular Union plans, wholly void of offense, not that I feared the venom of the arrows in your quiver, but to make for peace and some plan on which all might agree. I preferred to stop the quarreling and go to fighting for our principles. The matters in dispute ought to hav been settled without using the names of persons, at least in odious comparisons. As to jealousy, the dictionary will show that its meaning is not limited to an implication of meanness, as you would hav it; but that one may be nobly jealous of liberty, or properly jealous of any action that would be unjust to himself or others. The workers for Secularism who hav earned some support from the contributors to the movement, who can afford to put up a certain (yet uncertain) amount per year, hav a right to object to any plan that would divert a very large portion of a general fund to some one person.

You hav written to me on postal cards, in anything but a private way, slurs about my personal friends that would not look pretty (for you) in print, but it was consideration for you, rather than for my friends, that has led me to hold them back. We hav already trespassed too much on the space of Liberal papers that might be devoted to better objects, but now that so much has come out I would not veto a full publication of all letters, being confident that they would prove what I started out to say, that Mr. Wakeman and I hav only opposed giving the whole "delectable soup compound" to one worker, and that we hav not opposed giving anyone in particular a generous "ladleful" at the same time with others.

As you seem to think that Mr. Wakeman's mind has been guiding my hand, I close by saying distinctly that every letter has been prepared without previous consultation with him, and those that hav received his sanction were type-written before he saw them. I hav not your convenient familiarity with the scriptures, but I do know something of the "new philosophy," the scientific basis of Secularism—enough to say that one of its objects is to get the whole truth rather than any quibbling or partial statement of it, and that it does not teach that it is fair to vindicate oneself at whatever cost to the feelings and rights of others. It teaches that altruism should dominate egoism, and that makes it a difficult philosophy for some folks with big heads to comprehend. There seems to be pressing need for that coming book on morals for Secularists. Please expedite it. Yours "frankly," E. B. FOOTE, JR.

Wakeman on Westbrook.

MR. EDITOR: Dr. Westbrook has put "the worst," which I called for, in his last letter, and what does it amount to? It confirms every word I wrote, and proves that when he said that there had been "strenuous opposition" to Mr. Watts on my part, and I will now add, on the part of Dr. Foote, he was "off of the truth," and that his statement was "the reverse of the truth—unintentionally, of course."

The difficulty now is to giv the president the benefit of the excusing word "unintentionally."

For my letter of December 31st was, as I said, a plain feeler toward the appointment of Mr. Watts on proper terms. Dr. Foote expressly told him that his objection was not to the man but to the plan, and in the very letter of Dr. Foote from which the president quoted, these words, which he suppressed, stared him in the face: "Now, as to Mr. Watts, I am free to say that I do not know anyone more likely to fill the bill to the satisfaction of the officers of the American Secular Union in the capacity of field secretary; but (there are buts), let me first call your attention to the open letter inclosed herewith." And then Dr. Foote shows how to get the "buts" out of the way, and I wrote for the same purpose. Now, how could the president, with these words before him, talk about our "strenuous opposition" to Mr. Watts, and not see that he was not truthfully representing our position to the world?

The impression given was that I was in personal opposition to Mr. Watts and the president, when, on the contrary, there was no "strenuous" or other opposition to Mr. Watts, nor to his reasonable appointment, nor to the president, but only to the president's "plan with Mr. Watts." My motiv was, as I said, to feel the way to the appointment of Mr. Watts either with or without Mr. Charlesworth, but with justice to other Liberal lecturers and papers of the States I was willing, as my said letter shows, to put Mr. Watts on the most favored terms with any of them; and that certainly was not opposition to him or to his appointment. Dr. Foote, without any particular talk with me, took a similar view, as all his letters show. The further desire was, as Dr. Foote wrote, and the president quotes, "to prevent if possible your [the president's] discomfiture and discredit as a leader." To aid in this friendly desire Dr. Foote, it seems, privately and confidentially wrote to the president the past history of the League on this lecture business. I did not see those letters, for they were confidential, but the information was such as the president should know under the circumstances.

As things were, I agreed with Dr. Foote that it was unwise to ignore the wish of the congress, and the Liberal press, and our other lecturers, by the appointment of Mr. Watts, or any other man on the plan proposed, and my said letter proposed another plan concisely expressed.

The president could not be advised with; took every suggestion as a personal insult, "strenuous opposition" to Mr. Watts, etc. The unfortunate results are just those we predicted and advised against. The fact is, we had no interest nor motiv except to do the best for the Union and all concerned. But the president, instead of listening to the history of the League, went to reading his old Bible history, and imagined, without any reason whatever, that we were trying to knife him, and had put "a dagger under his fifth rib," and that "his bowels had all gushed out," etc. Now, if this is true, it is not our doings at all, but his own willful and frantic hari-kari, and there is no one in the world more willing or competent to lend him a hand or a truss than Dr. Foote. But the trouble is, evidently, not with his "bowels," which were all right to last accounts (as his anxious friends may be glad to learn), but with his head. Dr. Foote has been trying to reduce that section to normal size and activity by hard facts and cooling advice. But with only partial success so far. He still seems to think that the Union is his private property; that we, as other members of the board, hav no right to differ from him as to its affairs; that if we do, we are stabbing him or worrying him. Then, although a noted lawyer and divine, he seems to think I cannot mean what I say because I am a "lawyer." Then, at intervals, he complains of my "strange course" at Portsmouth, which must be simply because I then helped to extricate the congress and himself from the almost fatal results of his willfulness. Then, he thinks I hav some terrible "new philosophy;" well, it may be new to him, but it has been before the Liberals for a quarter of a century. It teaches that, although it is well to federate in congress with those who are in favor of church taxation, yet that the main support of Secularism, political, or other, must come from its friends rather than its enemies, whose respect can be won by good fighting and nothing else. Then the president, before he barely recovers from his fright at this "new philosophy," gets a scare at soup ladles. He seems to think that soup is a good thing, but that it won't do to dip it out, and so the whole bowl must go to Mr. Watts whether other workers get a drop or not.

Yes, Dr. Foote, these and similar wild fancies and babblings show that the head is the trouble; never mind the truss and bowels—wean him from "Samuel." Let him see that he occupies a representativ position, and that he must not mix up his personal feelings with it; that we, as members of that board, hav a right to be consulted, and to vote and suggest without incurring his rage or ridicule; that it is folly to sacrifice our Liberal friends to please our theological enemies; that personal antipathies hav no place in a representativ body, and that we hav to look and act only for the best interests of the Union and its cause. But as you work him off his Bible and our theological enemies, recall to him these lines of that old book, even if he forgets all the rest:

Faithful are the wounds of a friend,
But the kisses of the enemy are deceitful.

New York, Feb. 21, 291. T. B. WAKEMAN.

Charles Bradlaugh.

DIED JANUARY 30, 1891, AGED 57 YEARS.

From the National Reformer.

On Friday, January 30th, at half past 6 in the morning, my father died from uremia, following on Bright's disease.

All is said when that is said, for that is the end. It is a hard task to write of what passed in the days before, but I hav been so harassed by friend and foe alike to describe his "last moments" that I fear lest my silence should be mistaken; and it would ill become my father's daughter to shrink from any task, however hard, especially where it concerned him. Were it merely to gratify idle curiosity, I would not put pen upon paper; but for the friends who loved him, who worked with him, I would do much—even this, hard as it is.

After his illness of October-November, 1889, my father was never really well; but latterly, with the bitter winter, he began to feel ill—a general feeling of depression and ill health. He worried very much, and had to work very hard to meet his money liabilities as they fell due.

On Saturday, January 10th, he had occasion to go out, and, instead of taking a cab as was his custom, went by the underground railway, thinking that the little walk between here and the station would do him good. When I heard him come home I ran down to him as usual, and was struck with terror to see his face: he looked as bad as at any time during his last illness. After a little rest this passed away, but, not understanding the attack, he decided to see his physician on the Monday, and then we learned that he was suffering from hypertrophy of the heart, which, of course, as I subsequently found out, was merely a sequela to the terrible Bright's disease.

On Tuesday night (13th) came the alarming attack of cardiac asthma; but on Wednesday morning he got up at his usual early hour to work. He did not think himself so ill, and although he gave way to me, thought me over-careful when I asked to send for Dr. Ramskill. Dr. Ramskill told him that he would be better off in bed, but as this was not at the moment insisted on he did not take to his bed until Thursday, when, Mr. Bell having told me it was really a grave matter, I put it to him. Never was there a braver and more really patient man than my father; and although not at the moment feeling the necessity, he gave way.

On Friday evening (January 16th) came the next heart attack, and although I had powerful remedies at hand and used them as I had been instructed, if the doctor had been three minutes later in bringing a still more powerful stimulant he would hav been too late. On Saturday night an attack was averted by a timely use of remedies: on Sunday night and Monday morning there were two attacks, not so severe as that of Friday night, but lasting much longer. Then I had to call in a nurse from the Bond street institution. Tuesday and Wednesday were better days—no return of the spasms of the heart and altogether brighter.

Thursday (22d) was the best day of all; I wrote a few letters for him, he read his papers, did a little to his book on "Labor and Law," went over some of "General" Booth's accounts, talked over his own money and other matters with me, and generally passed a good day, quietly and without any excitement, putting his papers down immediately when I ventured to suggest that he had done enough. That was our last good day, and every moment is vividly impressed upon my memory. He had troubled very much about the possibilities of his motion not coming on on the 27th, and was delighted when I told him Dr. Hunter was to do it. "The very man I would hav chosen," he said. Then later on: "You think I can quite rely upon Hunter doing it?" "Quite," I answered, and then he ceased to trouble about it. "We shan't carry it this time," he said, "but if we only get a good vote I shall be satisfied." When it was rumored that Mr. Gladstone was to speak, he said: "Well, if Gladstone speaks that settles it: the government will be bound to take it up; and of course they hold the majority; but I shan't mind that."

The bad night of Thursday (22d) left him wearied and depressed on Friday. On Friday night there came the hemiplegia and its subsequent unconsciousness. On Saturday I had to get in the second nurse. On Saturday night the brain partially recovered, but never again was my father wholly conscious. He always knew me and always responded to my voice up till the evening of the last day; but his mind wandered: his "little book on 'Law and Labor'" was "just out"—he would find health in another trip to Bombay and back—he would go to Loch Long—he would fish some "back water"—or now and again he would check the figures in "General" Booth's accounts. With the exception of the last all were happy thoughts and happily said.

When Dr. Hunter's telegram telling of success reached me on Tuesday night it was anguish unspeakable to withhold the news from him. I dared not take the risk of rousing him on a subject so near his heart. I could rouse him, and did so inadvertently once or twice, on unimportant matters, but this was altogether different. On the Thursday I mentioned in his hearing that I had just been called to see a friend from Northampton. "What did you say?" he asked. "Some Northampton people hav come to inquire after you," I replied. "Poor fellows, poor fellows," he said; and thenceforward he had Northampton in his mind, and just before I left him to get a little lunch, he was anxious to "write to Campion to make an appointment for Monday." When I came back after a very short absence there was a marked change for the worse, and I sent for the doctor. In the evening his breathing became very labored and painful to listen to, but about 10 o'clock it grew a little easier and was never again so labored as in the early evening. The doctor's ominous words, "Any relativs or anyone who has a right to know should be apprised of his condition," struck a chill to my heart, although I already knew that he was dying and had warned those whom it nearly concerned in the afternoon.

Alas! I was his last child, and I chose to keep my terrible vigil by his side alone, save for the professional nurse. To moisten his lips and wipe the death damps from his brow was all that I could do now. He lay in a state of coma from the early evening until 6 30 on Friday morning, when just as the minute hand of his watch touched the half hour he drew his last breath.

It would seem needless to say that he died as he had lived, a consistent and conscientious Atheist, were it not that the infamous word "recantation" had already reached my ears, and before I had been fatherless for thirty hours I received written inquiries as to whether he had not changed his opinions on religious questions during his illness. Knowing as I well do by bitter experience that there are certain Christians who are utterly unscrupulous in what they say about an Atheist, I hav taken the precaution to procure signed testimony, from the independent and impartial witnesses who hav been in attendance upon him during this last few weeks, that he was never heard to utter one word "either directly or indirectly bearing upon religion or any religious subject."

The funeral—a silent one, as my father wished—took place at Brookwood on Tuesday, February 3d. Some account will appear in next week's National Reformer. HYPATIA BRADLAUGH BONNER.

Spiritology.

The confident and forcible article of W. L. Willis on this topic, in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 14th, to the Brotherhood of Moralists, is one likely to arrest the attention and possibly hav an undue influence on the minds of some readers.

There are other views of Spiritology that are quite as plausible, if not more demonstrably true, than his, which it would be well to hav examined and considered, that a too hasty and mystical judgment may not be formed on this psychical topic.

Brother Willis assures us that he knows what he affirms, and that it is not simply belief.

Even nearly ten years of attention and experience may be entirely too limited a period for one to acquire such positiv knowledge as he claims to enjoy. All the mysteries of the nervous system hav not been solved by centuries of study and investigation of experts and specialists. It has been abundantly proved and it is established as a historical scientific fact that not a few people hav known with great assurance things as realities, positiv existences, that never had any being. And these delusions hav had all the force and efficacy of absolute entities in working out their fatal consequences. Millions hav lived and died with the assurance of their verity, and that of their existence there was no possibility of deception.

Yet while Brother Willis is so confident of his own knowledge, he will not take the recorded testimony of this cloud of witnesses.

Men just as honest, just as sincere, and, judging from his statements, more intelligent and critical, hav had as strong an array of facts and evidences for their faith or knowledge as he has produced, or can produce, for his knowledge. Yet they hav all been deceived. Knowledge obtained without the use in acquiring it of all or the majority of the senses, or from those who hav used all their senses in acquiring it, combined with a well-grounded judgment, formed from varied and extensiv past experience, cannot be safely trusted. Such defectiv and empirical knowledge has done much mischief. It has led multitudes into extremes of conduct that proved their ruin and led to untimely death.

This ignorance of man's psychical nature, these false ideas of the nervous system and of the mysterious action and marvelous influence it exerts in the animal economy, over the intellectual function, the moral and religious sentiments, has led to many a delusion. Human beings hav seen witches, ghosts, angels, spirits, signs, and omens, the heavens and the earth hav furnished. They hav been environed with these weird, nondescript intruders from the unexplored realms, that hav haunted, harassed, and beleaguered them day and night. Yet these are but some of the wonders revealed to us through the marvelous powers, the undefined resources and susceptibilities, of the nervous system. Many examples are recorded in medical works by experts and experimenters in testing the extent and peculiarities of this nerve force over the diseased and the healthy human organism.

A vivid one is the case of a healthy culprit, condemned to death, who was given over to medical experts for experimentation and to ascertain the extent of nerve influence on the vital forces.

He was properly secured, his arm bared and fastened in position. He was told that his execution was to be effected by being bled to death. When, with all the silent solemnity of the death chamber, the vessel above the arm was so arranged that the warm water could be felt running from the supposed incision in the vein, which was pretended to hav been made by a mock instrument used, and he could hear the fluid dropping into another vessel on the floor, the culprit felt and "knew" his life was oozing away with the loss of his blood.

The test was continued, till he grew so weak that he really died, from hemorrhage, but without losing a drop of blood. His knowledge that he was to die this way was so real, so positiv, that it killed him. He received it from the action and authority of two of his senses, with the additional aid of that latent, mysterious sixth sense, his credulity. In this case the victim felt and heard the movement of the fluid in leaving his arm, and the knowledge obtained from this limited and narrow source produced a fatal result—a tendency all such knowledge is liable to produce and very, very often does produce.

What Spiritualist's knowledge could be more positiv and giv him greater assurance that he has intercourse with spirits?

Why should we be willing to be deceived by a clamorous testimony from one or two of the senses? And in all these mysterious and questionable cases about the existence of facts, why be so hasty, so easily satisfied?

Why not wait for that more indubitable evidence furnished by the concurrent testimony of all our senses, by which we can see, hear, touch, and scent the spirits if their perfume is perceptible to the olfactories; then our confidence and credulity in a misunderstood seductiv nervous influence cannot so readily mislead us, often to our chagrin and humiliation.

The healthy, normal action of all the senses is essential for the acquisition of real knowledge.

These spirit messages and evidences do not come or respond to the normal action of all the senses of a healthy, vigorous, critically observing man. The spirits need the dark, the absence of robust doubt, passiv submission to conditions, to that flabby, uncritical acquiescence which must be secured by eliminating from the company or circle those persons who do not wish to be deceived, and retaining those who hav the servility to sit in quiet, hopeful expectancy, patiently, till their credulity is gratified. Admitting that this attitude is requisite is to admit that the spirits can only pose, appear, or perform when shielded from the presence of the observing critic, and when they can gratify the passiv and harmonious company or circle composed of this negativ and docil material. If the visits of the spirits are confined to the people of this flimsy type they may answer for their amusement and instruction, but it is difficult to see of what practical use they can be in the sterner works and walks of life, and to what extent they can prove their own existence.

There is much said about the phenomena of Spiritualism. The phenomenon in the case of the culprit that was killed without the presence of spirits, and simply by the illusion of his senses, shows to what extent people can be deceived by the obsessing, deceptiv, and illusiv control of a disordered, or erratic, undisciplined nervous system. Science has not been able yet to remedy this misfortune.

Some people can see and feel and know things that are not cognizable to other more wide awake explorers, even with equal opportunities, lacking the proper, sensitiv, necessary nervous system. The world has long had its army of ghost seers, and the nervous disturbance produced by civilized habits will likely continue and increase this so-called spiritual intercourse. T. E. LONGSHORE.

DR. LEWIS G JANES, president of the Brooklyn Ethical Association, will lecture before the Newark Liberal League, No 177 Halsey street, corner of Market, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, on "Life as a Fine Art."

Communications.

"Sugar Will Catch More Flies than Vinegar."

It will occur to the reader that I hav chosen a very popular text, and it can hardly be questioned that its advocates can claim for it inspiration. I am willing, however, to concede that it has the same right to claim inspiration that other sacred texts hav. If anyone should be inspired to take advantage of my concession I would nevertheless call in question the advantage which this inspired text is intended to suggest. The real value of a victory is in proportion to the results secured by that victory. If the results are worthless, the value of the victory may be reasonably called in question. If it should be readily conceded that sugar would bring flies to terms more readily than would vinegar, it may still be an open question as to the value of the captured flies. It is thought by some that the true way to capture men and women so that their coöperation can be relied upon, is to make them think that what we represent is not quite as bad as they think it is. By making concessions we can bring them nearer to our terms—by losing sight of the intrinsic value which truth represents and at the same time calling policy to our aid and thereby enabling concealed trickery to play the winning card. And behold, the man is caught, the gentleman "walks into the parlor"—but as useless therein as is the fly caught by sugar. There is really but one honorable course to pursue in the presentation of truth, and that course excludes all attempts to please or displease. Truth keeps no pay-roll. It has neither debit nor credit. It comes self-reliant, resting on its intrinsic value, its merits, only. That it is the truth is all-sufficient. It has been disgraced and brought into discredit a thousand times by taking therefrom or adding thereto. It is not in need of going on dress-parade, as all attempts at dress deform it. It never encourages deformity, and hence has no dress. And it never will encourage or tolerate falsehood on the lips of those who worship at its shrine. It is the enemy of all deceit, and holds in immeasurable contempt all measures which recommend it on the ground of policy.

If anyone is offended at the truth, it is not the fault of that truth. If anyone is pleased at the truth, that only shows his good sense and impressibility. A man or woman won to our side through the truth, on account of the truth, is not an ever-shifting commodity or uncertain quantity, but is stable, and you can build hope upon such a one such as will not fail in the time of need. There is no discovery for such a one to make which will jeopardize his or her allegiance or render their adhesion to the cause doubtful. But if they hav been won through a half-knowledge of the truth, and the other half made up through the sugar policy, they will in the time of temptation be as useless as are the flies caught in the same way. It is the truth that should attract or repel, and we may take it for granted that those whom the truth does not attract are not needed in the ranks of honest conviction. An inspired or a semi-inspired advocate can perhaps afford to use deceit and prevaricate for the glory of God, but an advocate of uninspired truth cannot afford to lie for God's sake, nor yet for the sake of anyone else, in the interest of truth.

Honest conviction of what is true should never be on the retired list, neither should it be couched in the terms which designedly or undesignedly may mislead as to its real meaning concealed, even if thereby indorsement is secured. Conviction of truth half concealed in hopes that a favorable verdict may be rendered, is treason against honorable conviction. When an audience is at its wits' end to determin what the orator or writer means, and will go through the process of mental cat-drawing to find out whether the orator or writer has the truth at all, as honorable conviction, this is to hazard self-respect, to say the least. While an honorable advocate of the truth is ever bound to honor his conviction on all needed occasions, he is under equal obligation to respect the honest conviction of all others, despising them only when they through policy seek to deceive or mislead, and this we will indulge in only as we are willing to receive the same at the hands of others when we are in like condition, and thus admit the application of the old heathen rule, "Do unto others as you would that others would do unto you." Mr. Ingersoll in his dealings with the public has fully demonstrated this fact—that honest conviction of the truth and an honest presentation of that truth demands neither deceit nor policy as the ground of its recognition. No attempt is ever made by this advocate to please or displease; to do so is beneath the dignity of this honorable advocate. The advocate is of but little consequence in comparison with the truth which he utters.

Truth does not demand acceptance on the ground of either pleasure or pain, but only on the ground that it is true. Honest conviction is not a question of pleasure or displeasure, but one of fact. It also seeks expression in terms which exclude ambiguity. No one needs to be left in doubt or forced to guess what the truth means which the advocate presents. No sacrifice of conviction, no meeting you half-way, as error and truth hav no terms of reconciliation. The honest seeker for the truth will not turn aside from the truth on account of ill report, nor on account of the name or place from whence it came. He is anxious only about one thing, and that is, Is it truth? This question settled in the affirmativ, is all-sufficient. His allegiance thereto is not to be mistaken. If the story of the supernatural is true, it is folly in us to seek for truth in the natural, for the natural is an unstable quantity. The laws that are revealed in it may hav no such meaning or revelation to-morrow. For all nature is on the tilt, and must ever fluctuate as the supernatural moves. The discovered truth of to-day may be only error on to-morrow. The real conflict is on the line of the supernatural or the natural. Modern thought and researches lend their aid in support of the natural, while superstition, ignorance, and bigotry are on the side of the supernatural.

The thoughtful will not long hesitate in choosing sides, and hence we see that the entire trend of modern civilization is on the side of the natural, and while it may not deny the supernatural it lends its aid in support of the natural, seeing no chance, no need, for the supernatural in this universe. Hence the fixed allegiance of the scientist to the natural. There is, in fact, no half-way ground on which the natural and the supernatural can meet. It may be more agreeable to some people to think that there is at the head of the universe an infinit personality, man-like, who has a feeling for them, and who, imagination affirms, has created these human beings. We can readily see how this might eventuate in comfort to those thinking thus. But, as we hav said, it is not a question of pleasure, comfort, agreeableness, displeasure, discomfort, or disagreeableness; but a question of fact, of truth. None of these are factors in the determination of the truth. An honorable conviction may please or displease another. Truth may please or displease. But its function is to justify itself, and in the justification of itself it justifies everyone that accepts it. It does not plead for recognition on the ground of favor or disfavor, but upon the ground of what it is in itself. The truth should not be made offensiv, nor an honest conviction made such on account of an objectionable method in its presentation.

This is very true, but this differs very widely from the object of this criticism. It is true that the truth may be made attractiv or repulsiv by the way in which it is presented. Neither of these are worthy of a count, and in neither case ought they to hav any weighty influence as to the reception or the rejection of the truth. Truth is worthy on its own account. I am decidedly in favor of having the truth presented in the terms which will make it the most attractiv, but do not wish that the truth should be compromised by the attraction or dress in which it is made to appear. The merit of truth must alone recommend it, and not its dress. The eminent point ever to be guarded, is, in no way to compromise an honest conviction, or the truth, by any concession in gesture, word, or act which tends to make the conviction stand for less than it is, or make the truth less than it is. To induce another to step on our platform by the sugar treatment, or win an inquirer by making terms of surrender less than the honest conviction as truth demands, is a misdemeanor, hence we conclude that our text is no more trustworthy than are other inspired texts. I hold that the sugar treatment, in the field of science and truth as well as honest conviction, is not the kind of treatment that has a promis of victory, such as people now demand. The sugar treatment is good in a gospel that has a heaven to giv, "won through guile and a lie." But in the gospel of science the sugar treatment is not worth a ——— here or hereafter. Facts are the sole material out of which the structure is built.

J. H. BURNHAM.

A Communication the World Did Not Print.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE WORLD: The semi-weekly World has for some years past been paying its regular visits to my rural home, and in the issue of January 27th I read nearly four columns of matter giving the theories of a number of clergymen concerning the second coming of Jesus Christ to the earth, which event they think is very near at hand. Without meaning the least offense, the clergy are the employed attorneys for their respectiv sects and creeds. The people are the jurors in the box, whose function in the court of inquiry is, like that of the judge on the bench, not only to carefully hear, but impartially weigh, all the evidence in the case, and thus ascertain the truth, whatever it may be. Among the thousands of the World's readers are many honest and sincere men whose minds may be perplexed by these theological cipherings. Therefore, on the maxim, Audi alteram partem, will you allow me to say a few words in your columns which may lead this class of doubters to see the truth and be satisfied in their own minds?

There are three passages in the New Testament which clearly and authoritativly teach the doctrin of the second coming of Christ, because they are declared to hav been spoken by Christ himself instead of any of his followers. The first is in the gospel of Matthew (xvi, 27, 28), and is in these words: "For the son of man shall come in the glory of his father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works. Verily I say unto you, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death, till they see the son of man coming in his kingdom."

I hav put the emphatic words in the quotation in italics, as I will the rest, to show that the second coming was to take place in the generation then living. That those who saw him face to face here would see him with the same eyes after his death and return to the earth.

The second passage is in the gospel of Mark (viii, 38, 39): "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation:- of him shall the son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his father, with the holy angels. Verily I say unto you, that there be some of them that stand here which shall not taste of death till they hav seen the kingdom of God come with power."

The third passage is in Luke ix, 27: "But I tell you of a truth, there be some standing here which shall not taste of death till they see the kingdom of God."

Now for the argument based upon these passages. Christ either gave these promises and assurances as stated by the evangelists, or he did not. If he did, then it is evident that he was mistaken as to the matter of fact; for it is conceded by all that, after his death, he did not return to the earth in the generation then living. If he did not utter these words, so plain and unequivocal in their meaning, then the three evangelists who record that he did were also mistaken and our faith in them as trustworthy historians is consequently shaken. I think they were not mistaken, because the rest of the New Testament writings, except the fourth gospel, giv abundant evidence that the early Christian church were all daily, and even hourly, expecting the event to take place. Paul, although he had no personal acquaintance with Christ, as the other apostles had, was so sure of the event that he did not expect to die at all, but to meet the Lord in the air, when he came with the angels to gather his living and resurrected saints together, and to prepare the world by the cleansing process of fire, for the setting up of his visible kingdom, the seat of government being at Jerusalem. The extremely ascetic and self-denying inculcations in the apostolic writings were all based upon the universal expectation that the great day of the Lord was near at hand; and while in other times such things as marriage and business affairs of all kinds might be right and prudent, in the then existing state of things they were wrong and imprudent. It was Paul's belief in, and his constant expectation of, hearing at any moment of the night or day, the sound of the archangel's trump, announcing Christ's approach in the clouds of heaven, that led him to say to the Corinthian Christians those fatal words concerning marriage, which the laws of the Christian nations of Europe hav ever since used, to the dishonor and enslavement of woman: "So avoid fornication; let every man hav his own wife."

I said that the promis of Christ's return to the earth during the generation in which he lived and died, and recorded in the first three gospels, is not mentioned at all in the fourth gospel. This very striking fact is explained when we are told by the critics that this gospel was written in the second century, after all Christ's cotemporaries were dead, and when his failure to return to the earth was apparent to all the world; and since the deification of Christ as the omniscient God manifest in the flesh was the object in the writing of this gospel and was involved in extreme doubt by the fact recorded by Matthew, Mark, and Luke, it was not alluded to in the gospel of John.

The church remained comparativly quiet on the subject of the second coming of Christ for a thousand years, but in the tenth century the prophetical arithmeticians began their work, and found out that the end of the world, and the coming of Christ in person to set up his promised kingdom at Jerusalem, was to take place at the close of the period then expiring. But when the Christians saw that Jerusalem and all the holy places were in possession of the Infidel Mohammedan power, they began that wonderful movement called in history the Crusades, which consumed parts of three hundred years in fighting, in order to rescue Jerusalem and prepare the throne of David for the occupancy of David's son, when he would fulfill the promis of his second coming. But he never appeared; and Jerusalem, from that day to this, has been owned by the Moslem power. Passing over other movements of the same kind elsewhere, we come to our own day, when Mr. Miller, an American student of prophecy, seemingly ignoring the words of Christ recorded by the first three evangelists, that his second coming was to take place in the first century, and not the nineteenth, set the time for the year 1843. Some of our cotemporaries, rivaling the strong faith of the primitiv Christians, believed in the time appointed, and waited, in anxious hope to welcome their returning Lord, and witness the resurrection of the dead saints, and the burning up of the world, the creation of the new heavens and the new earth out of its ashes, and the glorious establishment of Christ's kingdom at Jerusalem. George Rapp, the founder of the Economist Society, in Beaver county, Penn., and one of the best and sincerest men who ever lived, was a convert to this faith, and expected to use the great wealth his society had accumulated to transport his followers to Jerusalem when Christ's arrival there would be announced. He waited in anxious expectation of the event till 1847, when he died. But he did not expect to die. In his last sickness he said to his attendant, who relates the fact, that if he did not feel sure that he was bound to present himself and his devoted disciples in person to Christ at Jerusalem he would believe that he was dying. But he did die, and his "people," as he lovingly called them, now reduced in numbers to between thirty and forty, are still on the lookout for the signs of Christ's second coming. Under the influence of the sentiment of religion what proposition is there in the whole world that a man cannot believe, and what deed is there that he will not undertake to perform?

Believing we hav no real interest that can ever be put in jeopardy by the truth, I respectfully submit the above to those who wish to satisfy their minds on the subject of discussion. A. B. B.

Enon Valley, Pa., Feb., 1891.

Letters to Workingmen.

Comrades, I hav endeavored to impress you with the belief that man has traveled down the ages with absolutely no guide but the dim twilight from the "lamp of experience," or what the duke in the play would call the "sweets of adversity." Countless lives were sacrificed to gain a single fact, while the nature of the fact was still unknown or grossly perverted. Many fingers were burned in learning the nature of fire, yet the pain of the burn was a mystery still. A something was conceived to be in the fire that could hurt. This something in the fire, in the flood, and the storms unseen but powerful for evil, became gods or devils, and men became the slaves of their own imaginations. Tyranny or slavery is ever the state of the animal. Giv power to the slave and he becomes a tyrant; deprive the tyrant of power and he is a slave, and this rule or serve was also the state of early man. The first governors had slaves for their subjects. The slave's loyalty would giv his life for the whim of his master, as the dog will lick the hand that beats him. The ruler prescribed the law, and the gospel and justice was the edict of the master. Thus the beginning—ignorance, credulity, and cringing obedience. Morality had no existence. Excess was the only virtue. I say all this to impress upon your mind the fact that man began wrong—that his belief, founded upon error, led him into credulity; excess and misery led him to establish institutions of slavery. I want you to feel that humanity is deserving of great credit for being as good as we find it. And while I want you to wage war on institutions, I would hav you entertain the kindest of feelings toward our brother man and sister woman. We are but the product of evolution. As George W. Cooke says, "No man has a passing fancy that did not come out of some adequate and natural cause. The beliefs of men of every sort hav been the result of causes in man and nature to be found. There is no guess, no speculation, no theory, but plain and simple demonstration from the facts of primitiv belief." The ideas of a future state of existence, of heaven, of hell, of gods and devils, were brought about by the very necessity of thought and logic working upon false data. Questions arose in the mind of ancient man, as in the mind of modern children. With none to instruct, they formed their own conclusions. Crude and nonsensical, they were accepted as "proofs of holy writ," and a study of heredity convinces us that belief, like "the trick of nostril and of lips, descends through generations," and becomes established as a type of men and races; and thus established it is clung to with all the tenacity of our nature.

> Faith, fanatic faith, once wedded fast
> To some dear falsehood, hugs it to the last.

But the light of scientific truth is slowly entering the domain of the intellect, and the monsters of belief are discovered to be but the illusiv forms of harmless phenomena. And yet, like "greatness going off," it "rives the soul in parting." And all manner of evil is predicted with the loss of our religious beliefs. And thousands now are giving their money to propagate belief which in their hearts they know to be false, yet think a religious training necessary to keep the young mind in virtue's ways. They somehow think religion necessary to morality. Think it out, friends: Does morality depend upon falsehood? Is it necessary in the rearing of our children to play the hypocrit, to teach them or allow them to be taught that which we do not believe to be true? No, friends, I am confident it is better to speak our thoughts to our children; tell them the truth as far as we know it. There is no such thing as truth corrupting the mind of a child, if told in simplicity and sincerity. But I want you to "catch on" to the idea that every reform has been met with the cry of "necessary institutions." The belief in a flat world and a solid firmament was necessary. And to those who would teach otherwise, "Let him be accursed." A never-ending hell was a great necessity, the whipping-post was necessary, and yet we find the more liberty the more rectitude, the less restraint and dictation the more expansion and growth. Education elevates; punishment degrades. "Thou shalt not" is ever answered with "I will." The "spirit of revolt" in man's nature is really the basis of his manhood. Religion has sought to abolish it, therefore religion has been a curse. Parents by their superior strength attempting to force upon their children their own narrow views and ideas would hav kept the world in darkness, but the "spirit of revolt," the ego of man, that religion has regarded as an imp of hell, is the true savior of the world.

Oh, comrades, encourage your children to think for themselvs; counsel and advise, but, as you value your child's advancement, never command.

Let me dwell upon this point. I believe it is of vital importance. If our wrongs are ever righted, if human equality and justice are ever established among men, it must come through the proper instruction of childhood. Do not think that because you may never hav had the advantages of school education you can teach your child nothing. The child's character is in your hands. Think a moment what a responsibility is upon you. Do not farm out your charge. There is nobody like the parent to teach the child. There is no precept like example. If you hav bad habits, prepare to drop them now. If you cannot do this you should, at least, improve every opportunity to impress upon the young and growing brain the evils of those habits. The physical and moral education should precede the intellectual. We workers, who leave our home before the little ones awake, are too much inclined to shift the responsibility upon the mothers, and while I believe that most children are more indebted to the mother than the father for any good that is in them, I believe the father has a wonderful influence in shaping the actions of the child. Children imbibe the popular error that the man is the real provider, and as such has a respect the mother is denied. Besides, the vexatious cares of a household keep the mother too often in that frame of mind which makes the prattle of children annoying. Oh! if she could only understand how important to the young mind this same prattle was, I am sure she would not so contemptuously throw it aside. And then, the father coming home at night is too apt to forget or ignore the demands of his child, but thinks his leisure should be devoted to his pipe and paper, and after that the saloon. I know, friends; I hav been there. But, let me tell you, it is all a matter of habit. Real enjoyment can be found at home "teaching the young idea how to shoot."

For many years the slave of the habit of tobacco, I thought enjoyment was only under its influence. But to-day, poor as I am, speaking from a purely selfish motiv for happiness, I affirm wealth would be no consideration in exchange for escape from the habit I once possessed.

Yet it is not absolutely necessary for you to forego these "luxuries of habit" to rear the tender thought. Devote a little of your leisure to your children. It may be a little irksome at first, but by and by an interest is awakened. You will pursue the subject with the keenest of pleasure. I say nothing of duty. I don't like the word. With charity, it should pass into oblivion. Your own pleasure should be your aim. Your own happiness will be your reward. You love your child; let your child understand it. Place confidence in your child, and your child will hav confidence in your smile, and a smile rewards you. Be cheerful, and happy faces welcome you. If your children do wrong, take them in your arms, tell them you hav often done the same yourself. Let them feel that "we are all but children of an older growth." Go to your wife and children for counsel and advice. Never engage in anything that affects their welfare without their consent. Make your home your grand council-chamber. The trouble with us male bipeds is, we hav inherited from "a long line of ancestors," reaching back to the monkey-man, an egregious conception of ourselvs. We think we know it all; that women and children are mere outfits taken on for man's enjoyment and man's advancement; that woman has but one mission in the world—as Tennyson's man has it,

> The bearing and the rearing of a child is woman's wisdom.

Let us outgrow this animal propensity, as well as the animal sense of possession, and greet our wives as co-mates and partners in life's journey. The time has come for woman to assert her rights as well as man. She has been the puppet of man's pleasure long enough. Let her assert the ego of womanhood on an equal plane with that of manhood.

> Woman is not undeveloped man,
> But diverse.

It is more than probable that

> Could we make her as the man,
> Sweet love were slain.

Fear not, her wondrous love, with independence, will establish an individuality to regenerate the world, and love and liberty shall reign.

Buffalo, N. Y. A. L. Ballou.

Unequal Taxation.

Watson Kinderline in Solebury, Pa., Club Journal.

As the proper adjustment of taxation is now occupying the minds of all taxpayers, the present is a fitting time to discuss the many points at issue; and as no class of men hav greater cause to complain than the farmers, it would be well for them to state their grievances.

It is claimed that all taxes are exacted by governments for the expenses of protecting said property from the encroachments of unprincipled men who might seek by force to dispossess rightful owners.

We hold the deeds to our farms through the aid and protection of laws, and these laws are enforced by officers of our own selection, and whenever these officers are unable to fully protect the rightful owner, then the sheriff is authorized to call on the governor, who has the power to direct military aid to insure justice to him who is being illegally dispossessed of his property. The same may be said of all property, be it personal or real, and it is for this protection that taxes are assessed and collected. Our local taxes are expended both for our comfort and protection. Our county taxes go to sustain our courts, maintain our poor, and to pay the expense of our elections. Our school tax is applied for the benefit of our children, having for its main object the equalization of the advantages of education among all classes alike. Our road taxes are expended for our safety, comfort, and convenience, and directly benefit the taxpayers most interested in the good condition of their roads.

Admitting, then, that taxation is as necessary as it is unavoidable, the chief point at issue is, how shall these taxes be assessed, so that impartial justice may be secured to all. While personal property of all kinds receives protection, and as the rights of ownership are maintained at public expense, why should it not be compelled to pay its full proportion of tax?

If we accept the statement of values as given in the public prints as true, we find farm real estate in Pennsylvania estimated at $1,180,000,000, while property, both real and personal, belonging to corporations, is valued at $2,342,000,000. The former pays nine mills tax, while the latter only pays three mills and yet has twice as much property protected.

It behooves us to inquire why this great inequality in the rate of taxation. Why should farm land pay three times as much tax on property as is paid by corporations, when both are alike protected?

There is but one way to equalize taxation, and that is to tax every species of property in proportion to its income and its ability to pay. As all receive the same protection in their ownership, why should they not pay proportionately for that protection?

The great loss in the destruction of railroad property that occurred in Pittsburgh during the riot in 1873 was paid for by the taxpayers of the county, and yet that county received but very little aid from taxes levied and collected from the corporations, whose losses they were obliged to make good. All property, except that which belongs to the state or nation, should be taxed, and until taxes are equalized, assessed justly, and collected impartially, all protection should be taken from those that shirk that duty.

Churches of all denominations should pay for the protection they receive in proportion to the value of property protected. As many take the precaution to insure against loss from incendiary fires and from thunderbolts, why should they ask to be exempt from paying for police protection and for public highways? When the Nativ American riots occurred in Philadelphia, in which two costly churches were destroyed, the city was obliged to pay the losses incurred, and yet these same properties had never before or since paid any taxes toward the support of the protection they received. Taxes came with civilization, and protection became necessary as mankind acquired private property. The farther man advances from barbarism his needs and his necessities multiply, and with this new life come an increased cost of living, better facilities for travel, and new ambitions to gratify. The nearer he approaches his destiny, which is independent manhood, the more he will insist on an equality of rights and louder will be his demands for just and impartial taxation.

W. K.

> You shall no longer take things at second or third hand, nor look through the eyes of the dead, nor feed on the specters in books,
> You shall not look through my eyes either, nor take things from me,
> You shall listen to all sides and filter them from yourself. —Walt Whitman.

THE TRUTH SEEKER.

FOUNDED BY D. M. BENNETT.

E. M. MACDONALD, - - - Editor.
C. P. SOMERBY, - - Business Manager.

PUBLISHED BY
THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY,
28 LAFAYETTE PLACE, NEW YORK.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY AT $3.00 PER YEAR.

Address all Communications to THE TRUTH SEEKER COMPANY. Make all Drafts, Checks, Post-office and Express Money Orders payable to CHARLES P. SOMERBY.

SATURDAY, - - FEBRUARY 28 1891.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

Single subscription in advance	$3 00
One subscription two years, in advance	5 00
Two new subscribers	5 00
One subscription with one new subscriber, in one remittance	5 00
One subscription with two new subscribers, in one remittance	7 00
One subscription with three new subscribers, in one remittance	8 50
One subscription with four new subscribers, in one remittance	10 00
Any number over five at the same rate, invariably with one remittance.

IN THE

Truth Seeker Annual for 1891

WILL BE AN ILLUSTRATED ARTICLE

By MISS ADA CAMPBELL,

ENTITLED

Side Lights on South Sea Missions.

In renewing your subscription to The Truth Seeker inclose 25 cents and the Annual will be forwarded as soon as issued.

A Bit of History.

Probably few Irish Catholics are aware of the fact that their country was brought under the English yoke by the cold-blooded avarice of one of their popes. Pope Adrian IV. in the year 1156 issued a bull in favor of Henry II., of England, in which he exhorts that monarch "to invade Ireland, in order to extirpate the vice and wickedness of the nativs, and oblige them to pay yearly from every house a penny to the see of Rome." (See Hume's England, vol. i, p. 346) Hume says the tribute was a penny from every house, but some historians, and also the Loyal American, say it was a penny per head. Hume also says that this act of ecclesiastical robbery was ordered by Adrian III., but as the first two popes of that name had passed over the river Styx before the time of Alfred the Great, and the third Adrian followed his predecessors during Alfred's reign, it is conclusiv that Hume is mistaken. Pope Adrian IV. was Nicholas Breakspeare, an Englishman, and it is quite likely that he was influenced both by a desire to aid England and to get boodle for himself. This act of papal treachery compelled the Irish slaves to annually pay the pope for the favor of being enslaved. Verily "he that giveth to the poor Irish, lendeth to the pope."

WATSON HESTON.

To a Washington Official.

To JOHN WANAMAKER, POSTMASTER GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES:

Dear Sir: In your annual report for the fiscal year ending June 30 1890, you say:

"The discussion of the anti-lottery bill and the exclusion of certain literature from the mails hav caused a good deal to be said during the past few months about a censorship of the mails, so called; and, lest people who believe in fair play and a just administration of the law should find themselvs still misunderstanding the course of the department with reference to these two questions, I beg to submit a few facts. It has been explained elsewhere that the intention is to enforce the spirit as well as the letter of the anti-lottery law. That is also the purpose with reference to the laws regulating the circulation of indecent literature."

After quoting the statute excluding indecent literature from the mails, you add, under the heading:

"THE POSTMASTER GENERAL OBLIGED TO ACT WHEN APPLIED TO.

"It does not matter whether or not a given publication presented for mailing appears, by complaint or otherwise, to a postmaster to be 'obscene, lewd, or lascivious,' if it does appear to be 'indecent.' He is obliged, in order not to become a law-breaker, to refer the questionable point to the proper department official. It does not matter, when the referee considers the question, whether the given publication is merely 'obscene, lewd, or lascivious." If it is simply indecent, he must exclude it or break the law. A translation of a questionable book was, as a matter of fact, presented some months since at the post-office in a Western city for transmission in the mails. It was held and referred to this department. The assistant attorney-general, finding it indecent under any definition of the word, issued an order excluding it. To exclude the book was the simple duty of the department. For myself I never discuss the policy or wisdom of breaking the law, and the officials of the post-office department do not."

Two weeks ago there was forwarded from this office, by express, a volume of which the following is a copy of the title-page:

THE
HOLY BIBLE,
CONTAINING THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS:
TRANSLATED OUT OF
THE ORIGINAL TONGUES;
AND WITH
THE FORMER TRANSLATIONS DILIGENTLY COMPARED AND REVISED.
NEW YORK:
AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY,
INSTITUTED IN THE YEAR MDCCCXVI,
1890.

Up to the present time no acknowledgment has been received from your office of the receipt of the volume, and this apparent neglect causes the following inquiries to be made:

Hav you received the book?

Hav you read the complaint?

Hav you referred the "questionable point to the proper department official?"

Has the referee considered the point whether the given publication is "merely obscene, lewd, or lascivious;" or,

Has he considered the point whether it is "simply indecent?"

Has he considered the book bearing in mind your definition of excludable matter, namely: "Any matter offensiv to modesty, or tending to subvert respect for decency and morality?"

Does he, or do you, think the passages to which your attention was called in the book sent for your examination fall under the terms of your definition?

If not, why not, as you pronounce the "Kreutzer Sonata" to be "indecent under any definition of the word?"

If you or your assistant should find this book to be as objectionable as the other, would you or the officials of the post-office department "discuss the policy or wisdom of breaking the law" cited in your report?

If you do not act in this case, either pronouncing the book mailable, or excluding it, of what worth are your words declaring that the postmaster-general is obliged to act when applied to? Is not a bookdealer in New York as much entitled to a decision on a book as a publisher of Chicago?

You need not be afraid of benefiting your complainant by drawing attention to this book, as he is not the publisher and does not sell the book, having respect for the laws enacted by so superlativly a wise body as Congress at the instance of so pure and honorable persons as Mr. A. Comstock and his clerical and business friends. We shall make no "thrifty bluster," to use your own words, if your decision should be adverse to the volume, being content to simply perform a public duty and to aid your department in keeping the mails pure and the mail bags from rotting out through contact with filth.

We solicit the favor of an early reply.

The Art Pharisees.

The trustees of the Metropolitan Museum of Art hav had exposed in a very effectual manner the hypocrisy of their plea for closing that institution on Sunday. An enterprising reporter of the World is their Nemesis, and he has found that the museum is open on Sundays—to the friends of the officers!

The reasons for Sunday closing given by the trustees hav been three—that Sunday is a holy day, that donations hav been made to the museum with the condition of Sunday closing imposed, and that such opening would be too great a strain upon the employees. All of these reasons are invalidated by the fact, admitted by the officers, that it is their custom to issue tickets of admission for Sundays, and supply them to their friends.

Two Sundays ago the World reporter seated himself near the doors of the museum and watched these friends visit the place, and then tried to get in himself. The result and the information he obtained are thus related:

"At 3:30 the World reporter, having carefully observed the method pursued by the ten people whom he had seen enter the Metropolitan Museum, mounted the steps and touched the button. As he did so a small boy standing by him said to him:

"'That ain't open.'

"He had hardly uttered the words when the obsequious servitor who had opened the door to previous visitors and refused others came out. He looked at the reporter through the glass storm door, which he then unlocked and opened about an inch and a quarter.

"'Is the museum open?' he was asked.

"'No, sir,' said the man in livery.

"'But I saw people go in.'

"'Oh, they had tickets. The public are not admitted on Sunday, only friends of the trustees or people they know. If you know Gen. De Cesnola or any of the trustees he may giv you a ticket.'

"'Do you hav many visitors of this kind here on Sunday?'

"'Not a great many. It is quiet here on Sunday, and those who hav cards like to visit the museum, when they can see the works of art better maybe than on a week-day. Sometimes people who are only in the city for a day or two, who know the trustees, come in on Sunday, when perhaps they could not come at any other time.'

"'What do you do here?'

"'Look after the door,' was the reply. 'I hav strict orders not to admit anybody not provided with a card or accompanied by one of the trustees.'

"'Do the trustees themselvs ever come on Sunday?'

"'Oh, yes. Sometimes they come with friends. General Cesnola was here this morning.'

"'What do the other men do whom I see in uniform?'

"'They are here,' was the reply, 'to look after the museum and help in the work.'

"This guardian of the portal could not explain when asked how the Metropolitan Museum of Art could be both closed and open on Sunday, or what difference it made whether one or a thousand people were admitted so far as the conscientious and religious scruples of the trustees were concerned. He appeared to think that his being on duty with several companions on Sunday at the public expense was 'an accommodation to the trustees,' but that to open the museum to the public might be 'a desecration of the Sabbath,' and much to be feared."

Turning away from the doorkeeper, the reporter sought the president of the museum, Mr. H. G. Marquand. Mr. Marquand was asked if the present system of cards and attendants did not completely remove the moral objections to Sunday opening.

"That is true," said Mr. Marquand. "You must remember that the trustees are in favor of opening the museum to the public on Sunday. The matter is even now under consideration, and I believe that before long something will be done. There are twenty-five or more trustees. We feel that there is a strong sentiment in favor of opening the museum to the public on the Sabbath, and, if we can make the necessary arrangements cautiously and properly, it will be so opened. But we do not like to throw it open like a meat market. I expect the matter to come up at the next meeting. There are a great many details to be arranged. I realize that there are more people who want to go into the museum on Sunday than there are others wishing to keep them out.

"As regards the cards issued by trustees permitting people to visit the Metropolitan Museum on Sunday I wish to say," concluded Mr. Marquand, "that when a stranger is passing through the city, somebody from Washington or the West or some one perhaps who is about to leave for Europe and who is anxious to see the works of art, that being their last and only chance, and they apply to go on Sunday, we issue the card. But it is not common, and it is a convenience to the people receiving the card."

A trustee to the museum who was seen later disposed of the remaining objections heretofore made to Sunday opening. He said: "From a Sabbatarian standpoint it makes no difference whether one person or a thousand go there on Sunday. It is a mistake to suppose that the museum enjoys any legacies given it on the understanding that it should not be opened on Sunday, as I hav seen stated. The trustees would not accept such a bequest."

It will be seen from these statements that the course of the trustees heretofore has been one of evasion, hypocrisy, and something closely akin to downright lying. They hav maintained their position by arguments and statements now admitted to be false, and they are in an unenviable position. They hav been enabled to keep the institution closed because the general public thought that it was bolted, barred, and locked on Sunday solely because of strict Sabbatarian views on the part of many of the trustees and friends of the institution who were putting their hands in their pockets annually and turning over to it large sums of money, on the distinct understanding that the Lord's day should not be desecrated by having the doors opened. Many people dissented from this view, but they respected the conscientious scruples of the trustees so long as they believed them to be faithfully observed. Now, however, this pretense is blown to the winds, and there is no longer a possibility of deceiving the public. It may be humiliating to the pharisaical Sabbatarians to be detected, but it is likely that the people will ere long be decided gainers by the exposure.

Sabbatarians in California and Pennsylvania

The American Sabbath Union is pushing its work in California and Pennsylvania, and brings a large amount of influence to bear upon the legislatures of these states. In the former state they ask for the enactment of a law as follows:

"Any person who, on Sunday, gets up, exhibits, opens, or maintains, or aids in getting up, exhibiting, opening, or maintaining any bull, bear, cock, or prize fight, horse race, circus, gambling-house, saloon, or any barbarous or noisy amusement, or who keeps, conducts, or exhibits any theater, melodeon, dance-house, or cellar, or other place of musical, theatrical, or operatic performance, spectacle, or representation where any wines, liquors, or any other intoxicating drink or drinks are bought, sold, used, drank, or given away, or who purchases any ticket of admission, or directly or indirectly pays any admission fee to or for the purpose of witnessing or attending any such place, amusement, spectacle, performance, or representation, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

"Every person who keeps open on Sunday any store, workshop, bar, saloon, banking-house, or other place of business, for the purpose of transacting business therein, is punishable by fine not more than $50 nor less than $5.

"The provisions of the last preceding section do not apply to persons who, on Sunday, keep open hotels, boarding-houses, barber shops, baths, markets, restaurants, livery stables, or retail drug stores, for the legitimate business of each; or to such manufacturing establishments as are necessarily and usually kept in continued operation; or, except as to keeping open a bar or saloon, to persons who, on account of conscientious scruples, observe and conform to the provision of said last preceding section on a day of the week other than Sunday."

At Sacramento, on the 11th instant, a hearing on the bill was given to its friends and opponents. The Rev. Mr. Thompson represented the Sabbath Union, and S. P. Putnam, president of the California Liberal Union, spoke for that organization. The churches were also represented, and the hearing was a lively one, Mr. Putnam being reinforced by officers of the Seventh Day Adventist organization and one or two liberal politicians. Mr. Thompson's speech was of the usual Sabbath Union variety, a plain perversion of the facts of the matter. The law should, he held, in the cause of religious liberty, secure to every man, however humble, the same privileges that are guaranteed to the president, the judiciary, and other branches of the government. People who want to enjoy religious liberty and equal rights should hav the protection of law, which many of them are not now permitted to do. The bill now before the legislature provides that all classes of business shall be placed on an equality, so far as Sunday observance is concerned—no discrimination was made against saloons or any other class of business.

In reply to this distorted view, Mr. Putnam said that a Sunday law was in conflict with the federal Constitution, which guaranteed perfect religious liberty to every man. A Sunday law was mandatory and compelled persons to do certain things against their will. If a man wished to go hunting or fishing on Sunday, it was his perfect right to do so, or pass his Sunday as he pleased. Sumptuary laws are repugnant to the Constitution. If a Sunday law can be enforced, so can baptism, and so can any other religious system. There must be a total separation of church and state. If newspaper offices are kept open on Sunday, or stationery or other stores, or if a man sees fit to go fishing or hunting on Sunday, that does not prevent other people from passing their Sunday just as they please. It is no interference with anybody. Talking of a Sunday law to protect people's health is absurd. People should be able to take care of their own health. As well pass a law to make a man take pills, whether he wanted to or not. The advocates of a Sunday law could present no proofs in support of the assertion that its observance is necessary to health. As to the morality of the thing—that which it is wrong to do on Sunday it would be wrong to do on any other day. All the arguments of the Sunday-law advocates were based on false premises entirely.

Senator Carpenter, who followed Mr. Putnam, made the legal point that the constitution of the state prohibits special legislation, while the bill in question specifies certain avocations which it is proposed to prohibit on Sunday. He would like to hav some of those interested in its passage explain, if they could, how it was proposed to harmonize the provisions of the bill with those of the constitution. There was no response to the senator's question.

There were several speeches on each side, and the committee was kept up to a late hour. As yet they hav made no report on the measure.

In Pennsylvania the hearing was on Representativ Fow's bill to relax the strictness of the Sunday law of 1794. The Sabbath Union was represented by two officers, but the Liberals had no one to speak for them. Mr. Fow defended his bill, and was assisted by other representativs. As in California, the result is not yet known.

It is plain, from the energy and fanaticism displayed by the Sunday law advocates, that the people of this country will be forced to exercise a little of that eternal vigilance which is the price of liberty if they do not want to be dominated one-seventh of their time by the churches.

General Sherman's Religion.

The Rev. P. T. Sherman, son of the late General Sherman, a Jesuit priest, has explained why "extreme unction," which is a Catholic rite, was administered to his father. His statement is in three sections, the first of which is:

"My father was baptized in the Catholic church, married in the Catholic church, and attended the Catholic church until the outbreak of the civil war. Since that time my father had not been a communicant."

That is, General Sherman has not been a Catholic, but has been an apostate, since 1860. That this is true is testified to by General Sherman, who wrote, "I am not, and cannot be, a Catholic."

The second section is:

"But he [General Sherman] always said to me that if there is any true religion, it is the Catholic religion!"

There is but one conclusion from these statements and that is that General Sherman did not believe there is any true religion. And his further statement that he believed in a supreme power, but that belief was as far as his religion went, bears out this inevitable conclusion. Moreover, the statement, "If there is any true religion it is the Catholic religion," is a common one among logical skeptics to Christianity; for if any part of that system of imposture were true, the Catholics hav got the logical and consistent part of it, just as the Calvinists hav got hold of the logical and consistent end of Protestantism. We hav heard General Sherman's statement made by avowed Infidels a hundred times.

The third section of the Rev. P. T. Sherman's statement is:

"A week ago to-day my father received absolution and extreme unction at the hands of Father Taylor. My father was unconscious at the time, but this fact has no important bearing, for the sacrament could be administered to any person whose mind could be interpreted as desirous of receiving it."

That is, when General Sherman was unconscious and could not object, the church hastened to his bedside with her rites, that she might in after years claim another great man as hers. The assertion that "the sacrament could be administered to any person whose mind could be interpreted as desirous of receiving it" is thoroughly and openly Jesuitic. General Sherman meant that no religion is true, and the church interprets his remark to mean that Catholicism is true! Tortuous are the sinuosities of theology, and skilful is the church in following them!

Had General Sherman been conscious when the rite was to be administered to him, he would, undoubtedly, hav said to the priest what he said to a pious woman who sought to entangle him with her theology, taking advantage of his good nature in standing godfather to a child named for himself. When the baptismal ceremony had been performed, the godmother said to the general: "Now, we hav promised to teach this child the Lord's prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments. We hav been arranging it so that the father shall teach him the Lord's prayer, I am to teach him the Creed, and the Ten Commandments fall to your lot."

"There are eleven Commandments, madam."

"What! Eleven Commandments? Why, what do you mean, general? There are only ten Commandments!"

"Yes, madam; there are eleven, and the eleventh is, Mind your own business."

The Roman Catholic church does not appear to advantage in her swooping down upon a dying man, and the explanation of the Rev. P. T. Sherman, Jesuit priest, does not add to her glory.

Editorial Notes.

WILLIAM HART, Kirksville, Mo., author of "The Candle from Under the Bushel," who with several members of his family was badly injured at a fire which consumed his store and stock of jewelry, writes us that through the generous patronage of the readers of THE TRUTH SEEKER, whose attention to the calamity we called at the time, he has received orders for a great many copies of his book, and his finances are agreeably easier. He still suffers from the accident, being unable to walk, but the bones in his broken leg are uniting slowly. He desires to thank the friends who hav ordered his book and those who hav spoken well of it in the press. "The Candle from Under the Bushel" sells for fifty cents.

THE Freeman's Journal and Catholic Register says: "It must be borne in mind that Protestant missions all over the world are proved and acknowledged humbugs. Bishop Taylor, of England, the head of such affairs in Africa, said as much when he intimated that they were failures, though his office prevented him from going to the root of the difficulty. The two German explorers, who hav a better knowledge of Africa than any other thousand men in the world, Baron Wismann and Emin Pasha, both Protestants, hav stated the same fact in plain language. Lord Macaulay states in his memoirs and letters that the Indian Protestant convert was usually a liar and a thief." And the Protestants speak similarly of the Catholic missions!

THE acting governor of Alaska is thus described in the Alaskan by a missionary writer: "We hav cause to rejoice in another fact, and that is, that we hav another most efficient laborer, commissioned by the Lord Jesus Christ and therefore eminently qualified by the gifts and graces of his spirit for mission work—I refer to our friend, Judge Peckinpaugh. The judge needs no one to lay hands on him, 'to stir up the gift that is in him;' for the fire always burns and he is a Boanerges. His trumpet givs no uncertain sound. You will always find him on the side of right, standing by his guns with his flag flying. I should try to say something in his praise, but he needs it not; for his face shines, and it is self-evident that his soul is pure gold, well refined. He conducts a Bible class for the nativs every Sabbath, using an interpreter. The school-room is filled to overflowing with adult nativs who hang on his words and drink the truth as the desert sands drink the dew. He is also activ in every good work in the little church for whites downtown. A sincere, loving, genial friend and neighbor; a gentleman in the true sense of that word—thank God and President Harrison for sending us Brother Peckinbaugh!"

THAT the Catholic church is ever and always a political as well as religious organization, scheming for its own pecuniary and political welfare is again clearly shown by two paragraphs in the Catholic Review. One relates to the reciprocity treaty with Brazil, and the Review concludes: "It is not too soon, therefore, for the Catholics of the United States to determin how far their influence shall be a factor in our new relations Catholics may rest assured that Protestant thought and Infidel opinion will exert their power to gain what footholds opportunity may present. It is our duty, therefore, as American Catholics to awaken within our ranks a mutual interest for South America in every way possible." The other is on the recent election in Spain: "The Conservativ or Catholic party has been triumphant in the elections of Spain, and for a time peace is assured to that oft-distracted nation. The character of the elections is such as to let Catholics clearly understand where the dangers of the future are likely to spring. The rural constituencies were overwhelmingly Conservativ; the city populations were more divided and cast their votes for Socialism and Republicanism. The Conservativ propaganda should therefore be carried on in the large cities with vigor." And still another in the same line is this on Italy from the Freeman's Journal: "The interesting dilemma in which Italy is now placed, naturally brings up a subject we hav already discussed. It is the possible influence Catholics might exercise in shaping the ministry if they decide to take part in the parliamentary elections. About half of those qualified to vote did not approach the polls in the last election; and it is fair to assume that the great majority of the abstainers were influenced by the commands of Pius IX, renewed by Leo XIII. Suppose that prohibition were now withdrawn, as the great majority of loyal Italian Catholics desire it to be. Suppose a new election were made necessary, and we believe that such will be the result of the present complication. A large part of the government votes at present consist of those who are directly or indirectly dependent upon a bureaucratic center. There are teeming thousands of petty officials in Italy, and they are not only supposed to vote as told themselvs, but also to influence their relativs. With a dissolved ministry this insidious power would be removed, and many thousands would recover the courage to vote according to their consciences rather than their pockets. Thus it would be possible to form a Catholic cabinet."

Letters from Friends.

GRAND COULEE, WASH., Feb. 9, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I received the "Pictorial Text-Book" and the "Humboldt Library" all right. The picture book is the best thing out. It will knock more superstition to the square inch than any book of printed matter, as any fool can read the pictures. I am well pleased with the "Humboldt Library" volume, and think it a valuable work.

J. H. LAFOLLETT.

HANNIBAL, MO., Feb. 15, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Often I hav been thinking seriously why our leading Liberal papers do not make it a rule to compel contributors and correspondents to sign their names in full to their articles for publication. Invariably I hav made it a rule, and I am not alone in this, to skip such communications. Brother Liberal, be bold, come out and do not hide your light under a bushel. Let us hav your name and address if you expect us to read what you write.

F. H. RAU.

LIBERAL, MO., Feb. 4, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Please find inclosed $1 for TRUTH SEEKER ANNUALS for 1891. I hav tried, and failed, to get subscribers for THE TRUTH SEEKER, and for the "Freethinkers' Pictorial Text-Book," but I did make out to get four subscribers for the ANNUAL. I hav taken THE TRUTH SEEKER ever since I first saw its grand old founder at the Woolcott convention, and hav bought a good many of the books, and I am now compelled to part company with you by my poverty. We are very sorry to part company with THE TRUTH SEEKER, but, Good-bye. JOSEPH FRITTS.

EUREKA, CAL., Feb. 7, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I hav just read "Vacant Land Ownership," by J. K. Ingalls. It almost made me sick at the stomach. When will theorists ever get sense enough to stop writing for newspapers until they know what they are writing about? Let Ingalls come on this coast, where millions of acres of good land are waiting for somebody to come and take them, and he will soon find that idle people do not want vacant land; it is cultivated farms they want. In other words, they want to reap the benefit of other people's labor.

ROBERT GUNTHER.

CHEHALIS, WASH., Feb. 3, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I find that my subscription for the dear old TRUTH SEEKER has about expired, and not wishing that you stop sending the same, I remit. I cannot do without it. It seems to be a necessity—so newsy, ever watchful for the liberties of the people generally and individually for their good, informing its readers of all the doings and actions of the sky-pilots to chain and enslave the people by enacting laws to force them from believing in common sense or reason but to believe with blind faith in that old heathen Bible as the word of God and they as his prophets, priests, and rulers.

N. BEERY COFFMAN.

BARRE, MASS., Feb. 18, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am surprised that W. L. Willis should say in THE TRUTH SEEKER of February 14th that the Brotherhood of Moralists hav pledged themselvs not to investigate spirit phenomena nor allow, if possible, anyone else to do so. It is a false statement. Why will anyone permit his prejudice to run away with his truthfulness!

His instructions how to form spirit circles are amusing. They are forty years old, and out of date. The victims then practiced these rules on "clean" tables and were caught, the same as he was caught only ten years ago, and poor Walser, of Liberal, Mo., was caught at a more recent period.

May truth and good sense save him, for I can't.

ELLA E. GIBSON.

BASTROP, LA., Feb. 11, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am in receipt of your last edition, and as a new subscriber for your estimable paper and comparativly a young member of the American Secular Union, I must say that I hav enjoyed reading the contents, and admired Watson Heston's pictures especially. Keep on with the good work in exposing the follies and humbugs of the so-called "Christian church" and in fighting for the separation of church and state, and I hope the days are not far off that every cathedral and every acre of church property shall be equally taxed with saloons and dives. Do not the churches produce as many ignoramuses and idiots as the saloons do drunkards? And as the one is as bad as the other to any community, why not tax the church as well as the saloons? Inclosed find twenty-five cents for the TRUTH SEEKER ANNUAL of 1891. Yours for church taxation,

IGNACE GLASER.

TANEY, IDA., Feb. 2, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I am a Freethinker, and firmly disbelieve in the dogmatism of Christianity, which some style as God's inspired word. Let me say right here that my writings are just as near God's inspired word as those we find in the scriptures, only more truthful and less injurious. We sometimes hear of an occasional Jesus being born in our time, who comes as near being the son of God as the one some eighteen hundred years ago, only born of a virgin who had been overshadowed by a preacher. And still they say we must believe that wonderful book called the Bible or forever be damned. Who wrote the scriptures? I would answer, men who were very ignorant and superstitious and ill informed in scientific knowledge. And its teachings do not harmonize with the facts and teachings of nature known to be true. I was talking with a Christian the other day. He said he believed the Bible to be God's inspired word. I asked him if he believed in a hell, a lake of fire and brimstone, where all sinners would go. His answer was, No, he did not believe in a hell at all. I asked him if he believed that Jesus took two thousand devils out of one crazy man, or enough to enter as many swine and cause them to rush over a precipice and plunge in the sea and drown. Well, he said, he didn't know. Poor fellow, that is just the way with thousands. They do not know what they are believing in. They hav been taught from childhood that the Bible is so and they think of course it must be so. If the world could only hav the millions of dollars that it uses to support its priests and preachers in keeping the world in darkness and ignorance, and this amount of money used for schools, every person might receive education enough so they would be raised from darkness, and know what they are believing in at any rate. But Christianity from its birth has fostered ignorance, superstition, and falsehood. It has retarded education and science in this world generally.

NELSON REQUA.

TERRELL, TEX., Feb. 2, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: We hav just had a four days' debate between Mr. O. A. Phelps, Liberal, and Rev. Mr. Riall, pastor of the Christian church of this place. It resulted in a sweeping victory for Liberalism. It caused many Liberals to come to light of whom we did not know. We had the best audience ever assembled in Terrell on any occasion, and many were turned away for want of room. The debate has done us more good than all the lectures we ever had by visiting lecturers. One reason is, the splendid audience seemed to arouse more enthusiasm. Mr. Phelps is a gem. He captured every unprejudiced person, and the church people think better of him than they thought they would. He is gentlemanly, full of zeal, and has the fire that is necessary to win. He has an appointment to debate on the 17th at Penton, Tex., with a Baptist preacher. Much interest is awakened, a thing so necessary in Liberalism. Mr. Riall defended his cause manfully, and has done himself much good for the courage he had. The loss is from the self-righteous who think their cause too good to be criticised, but cause others to think they are wanting in ability and courage to defend it. Respectfully, T. C. GLASS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 12, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: I send this obituary: Died at Washington, D. C., on Jan. 28, 1891, Jacob Wolfsteiner, of Bavaria, Germany, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. Deceased was born and brought up as a devout Catholic, but changed his belief entirely during the revolutionary period of 1848, and fled to this country the following year. He was a true friend of, and enthusiastic worker in, the cause of Freethought and reform. In 1872, after eleven years of government service, he retired to private life and took an activ interest in all the living issues of the day. The funeral services at the residence were simple but impressiv, commencing with Mozart's Prayer from "Cosi Fan Tutte," finely rendered on the organ. In place of the usual divine, one of the deceased's friends stepped to the side of the casket, enriched only with an emblem, "At Rest," a beautiful floral pillow, and a sheaf of wheat, and delivered the funeral address in the German language, first reviewing the life and character of the deceased, and closing with a short but able discourse on the Religion of Humanity. According to the last wishes of the deceased, the remains were taken to Baltimore, Md., and cremated in the Loudon park crematory in the presence of the relativs and a large number of friends, including several prominent physicians. O. L. WOLFSTEINER.

IPAVIA, ILL., Feb. 9, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Hon. John E. Remsburg, of Kansas, was with us on the 3d inst., and spoke to about one hundred persons. His subject, grand indeed, was Thomas Paine. Those present, even those tinctured with Christianity, were carried away with the masterly and scholarly manner in which he handled the subject. One gentleman said, "If our ministers knew as much of Christ as Mr. Remsburg does of Paine, and if they would or could use as beautiful language and avoid abuse as he did, they would convert the world"—just what Paine is doing through Ingersoll, Remsburg, and other disciples.

Some who heard Mr. Remsburg do not agree with him—because they hav not read as much history—but they admire him as a man, and a great many are sorry they did not attend the meeting. The papers here praised him for his beautiful tribute and manly sayings. Remsburg had no condemnation for any candid belief, and beautiful words of praise went out to those who hav different views, if honest. His comparisons of Paine and his maligners were unique and truthful. All who hav a chance to hear him should not fail to do so, for his brain is rich in thought, fertil and inviting in sentiment. Truth is what the people want, and what as their minds grow they will hav. The speakers of truth hav always been slandered and persecuted, but truth will shine like fixed stars long after the manly lips that spoke it are cold in death and the slanderer and persecutor hav sunk into insignificance. C. S. RANDOLPH.

NORTH AURELIUS, MICH., Jan. 27, 1891.

MR. EDITOR: Not seeing anyone has written anything from this part of the devil's heritage, I thought I would scratch a few lines to you. I think I can see in this section where I liv that the people are getting more Liberal than they were twelve years ago. I hav had a great many talks with my neighbors since that time on the subject of religion, and they hav got so that they will not say much about this religion. I made one of the preachers acknowledge in my house that the old Bible is a forgery, and also acknowledge that the written account of Moses's death must hav been written by some one else. We had a long talk. We did not differ much. He was quite Liberal in his talk. I liv about one mile and a half from the Baptist and Methodist church combined. Some of them think that I am a very bad man, and I presume I am, like the rest of Infidels. The preachers do not come to my house very often. Some of my neighbors try to get them to come and talk with me, but they will not come. They tell them that I will not abuse them in talking with them, but they do not come. I was invited not long ago to speak before the Patrons of Industry at the school-house. I told the committee if they wanted me to speak on the subject of equal taxation I would do so, and they said that was just what they wanted, but some did not think that I would go in for taxing all church property. I tell you that some of them were very uneasy in their seats, but they did not leave the house. I hav found out since that as a general thing I was well liked. I am not much afraid of them.

I want all the readers of your valuable paper that belong to the Farmers' Alliance to write what is going on, so we can all keep posted. I read very carefully that small article by Mr. John W. Abbott. I think I shall get before the Farmers' Alliance before long, and speak on equal taxation of all church property. JOSEPH LAKE.

CENTRALIA, KAN., Feb. 8, 1891.

